11598. What were you doing then?—I left my young lady and was going home, and as I was returning home I saw Andrews in custody with two constables.

11599. Did you know Andrews at the time or was he a stranger to you?—I cannot say he is a stranger, but he is a neighbour living in the same buildings.

11600. Are you intimate with him?—Not at all.

11601. Only because he lived in the same building you knew him?—Yes, just as a neighbour.

11602. What did you see?—I saw him in the custody of two constables, they had him arrested, and one of the constables was twisting his arm up his back, and, of course, I followed to the station.

11603. Did you see him plainly?—Yes, I saw him quite plainly.

11604. You went to the station with him?—Yes.

11605. Could you see him plainly in the light?—Yes.

11606. Could you see any marks on him at all?—None whatever.

11607. Would you have seen them if there had been any there?—Certainly.

11608. How far away were you walking?—I cannot exactly say.

11609. When you were closest to him how far were you away?—About a couple of yards I should think.

11610. Knowing him by sight I suppose you took some interest in the case?—Yes, when I say him in custody of two constables.

11611. Did you see him bailed out?—Yes.

11612. You saw him before he went into the station?—Yes.

11613. What was his condition when he came out of the station?—There was a cut over his eye, and his face was swollen, and there was a lump over the back of his head.

11614. Did he look as if he had had a rough time of it?—I should think so.

11615. Did you go with him to the hospital?—Yes.

11616. Did he make any statement to you at the time as to how he came by those knocks?—Yes.

11617. What did he say?—He said he had been ill-treated.

11618. By whom?—By the constables inside the station who were taking him down in the cellar.

11619. And knocked him about?—And knocked him about.

11620. You went to St. Bartholomew's, and he was there attended to?—Yes.

11621. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He told you they had taken him down to the cellar?—Yes.

11622. You say when you came out you saw a lump at the back of his head?—I did not see the lump at the back of his head. I felt it.

11623. Whereabout was it. Just point with your own finger?—At the back of his head. There is only one place. (Pointing.) That is the back of the head I should say.

11624. Whereabout on your head was it?—On the back of his head I felt the lump. This is the back of the head. (Pointing.)

11625. That is where the lump was?—Yes.

11626. Did you go with him to the surgeon?—Yes.

11627. Did either you or he tell the surgeon anything about the lump at the back of his head?—I was not inside the hospital with him. I waited outside.

11628. You do not know what took place inside?—I do not know what took place inside at all.

11629. Had he got his hat on when he came out?—I did not take notice.

11630. Had he got it on when you felt the lump at the back of his head?—No.

11631. Whereabout were you when you felt the lump at the back of his head?—Opposite the police station in Old Street.

11632. Directly after he came out?—Not exactly directly. He stood across the road for a few minutes.

11633. Did he take his hat off?—He did not have his hat on as far as I can remember. I did not take that particular notice.

11634. When he came out your powers of observation are such that you could not tell us whether he had a hat on or not?—I did not take that interest.

11635. Although you stood talking to him?—Yes. If I recollect he had a cap.

11636. Did he have anything on his head or not—not whether he had a cap or a hat?—I do not think he had anything on his head at all.

11637. You cannot tell us definitely whether he had anything on his head or not?—No.

11638. Although your powers of observation are such that you did not notice that, you are coming to tell us that he had not a scratch over his eye or a mark over his eye when he went in?—He had no mark over his eye.

11639. His hat is a much bigger thing than a mark over his eye?—Yes.

11640. You were much nearer to him after he came out than before he went in?—Yes, I was when he crossed the road.

11641. Had he got any black eye when he came out?—I did not notice any black eye when he came out.

11642. Which eye was cut?—It was the right eye.

11643. Are you sure?—No, not quite sure. I think it was the right eye.

11644. You do not seem to be very certain about that. Are you able to say whether it was the right or left eye?—I am not exact about it, but I think it was the right eye.

11645. You are not sure?—I am not going to be sure about anything that I am not sure of.

11646. You are not able to say whether it was the right eye or the left?—I think it was the right.

11647. According to your view he had not got a black eye at that time?—No, I did not notice a black eye.

11648. Was it bleeding when he came out of the station?—I did not notice the blood coming from his eye.

11649. Did you see any blood anywhere?—I saw the blood between his fingers and on his handkerchief.

11650. Was it dry then?—I cannot exactly say whether it was dry. I did not take that interest.

11651. Before he went in, just tell me where it was that you first saw him?—Where I first saw him was in Luke Street.

11652. Would that be some way from the station?—Close on 100 yards from the station.

11653. Were you coming up behind him or going to meet him, or where?—I was following him to the station, and I passed him.

11654. When you first saw him, was he between you and the station, or were you between him and the station?—As he was coming along I saw his face as I came to the top of the turning.

11655. He was in Luke Street and you were in Luke Street?—Yes.

11656. Which of the two was nearest the station when you first met him—you or he?—I was nearest the station.

11657. He would have to pass you to get to the station?—He would have to pass me to get to the station.

11658. Did he pass you on his way to the station?—He did not pass me, because I followed up.

11659. You were between him and the station?—Yes.

11660. Did you walk in front of him to the station?—I walked to the station a little way, and then I was in front of him.

11661. Was there a considerable crowd of people round?—Yes.

11662. Accompanying all round, in the way they do?—No, there was not. There was a crowd following when I saw him.

11663. Some alongside and some behind?—They were a little way behind, but not exactly all round him at all.

11664. And some at the side?—No, they were not round him at all.

11665. Some at the sides?—There might be one or two.

11666. You were either walking in front, with your back to him, or at the side?—I was walking in front, and I took special notice of him.

11667. You did not take special notice from the back of your head. You were looking in front of you?—I was looking at him while in front of him.

11668. But when you were in front of him——?—I was looking at him when I was in front of him.

11669. Were you walking backwards?—If I saw two constables taking a man along, would not I look at his face?

11670. I am asking you whether, when you were walking along in front of him, you could see what his face was like?—Yes.

11671. When you were walking in front of him?—Yes.

11672. Have you got eyes at the back of your head?—No, but anybody would notice anything like that—a policeman taking a man in charge; anybody would notice that.

11673. I am not saying you would not notice it. And then you would start to walk to the station?—Yes, the same as anybody might.

11674. And, so long as you were walking in front of him——?—I did not say I was walking all the way to the station in front of him.

11675. But while you were walking in front of him you would not see his face?—Why should I not see his face? Could not anybody look round?

11676. Do you understand my question—because if you understand it, and that is your answer to my question, I shall sit down. Do you suggest to these gentlemen that whilst you were walking in front of him you would at the same time see his face?—I was not walking exactly in front of him.

11677. But while you were walking in front of him, if you were walking in front of him at that time, would you see his face?—In the position I was in I would see his face. I was not exactly in front of him, but I was near enough to notice his face.

11678. (Mr. Schultess Young.) I suppose you see hats every day?—Yes.

11679. If you had seen a cut on this man's forehead it would be rather extraordinary—you do not see that every day?—I do not think so.

11680. You would have noticed it?—Certainly.

11681. About this walking in front of him, I suppose while you had absolutely your back to him you could not see him?—I did not have my back to him—not exactly.

11682. You did not have your eye on him all the time?—Very nearly.

11683. You occasionally looked at him and occasionally looked off?—Yes.

11684. Sometimes you saw him and sometimes you did not?—Yes.

11685. Are you quite sure when he went into the station he had no cuts on his forehead?—None whatever.

11686. When he came out you have described his condition, and you felt his head, I think?—Yes.

11687. He made a complaint to you that he had been knocked about?—Yes.

11688. And you took an interest in the matter from that moment?—Certainly.

AUGUSTUS OFFORD, sworn.

11689. (Mr. Schultess Young.) Are you an American desk maker, living at 17, Tuilerie Street, Hackney Road?—Yes.

11690. You did not give evidence before the Magistrate?—No.

11691. Do you know Andrews at all?—No.

11692. Can you remember this 29th July?—I do not know the date.

11693. Do you remember midnight one night about that time?—Yes.

11694. Did you see Andrews brought to the station?—I did.

11695. Will you tell the learned Commissioners what you saw on your way?

(Chairman.) Do not you think you might put the question to him as to the marks on the face? We have had a lot of evidence as to the origin of the arrest, and there has not been much cross-examination as to that.

A. Offord.

24 Oct. 1906.

11696. (Mr. Schultess Young.) No. Did you see any mark on his face?—None at all.

11697. Would you have seen it if it had been there?—I certainly should.

11698. How far were you from him?—As far as I am from you now (about two yards).

11699. Was there a good light or not?—There was a good light outside the police station on the steps.

11700. Did you see anybody else on the steps of the station?—Yes, a policeman—Charley Wood.

11701. Is that Manning?—I have found out now it was.

11702. Is that the man who is deposed to as being in bed at the time?—That is the man.

11703. You did not give evidence before the Magistrate?—No; I was there to be called on, but I was not called on.

11704. (Chairman.) Where do you say you saw Manning?—On the steps of the police station.

11705. (Mr. Schultess Young.) What time was that?—Between 12 and one.

11706. How long after that, or was it before that, that Andrews was taken into the station? Was Manning there when Andrews was taken into the station?—Yes, he was.

11707. At the same time?—Yes.

11708. Do you know Manning by sight?—I have known him for about two years.

11709. Are you quite sure it was Manning?—Quite sure.

11710. Did you see Andrews when he came out?—No, I went home.

11711. You do not know him?—No, he is nothing to do with me.

11712. I do not know how you come to give evidence now. You did not give evidence before the Magistrate?—He lives past where I work. I work about 10 doors away from where he lives.

11713. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is Manning here? (Police-constable Manning stood forward.) Is that the man you saw?—Yes—Charley Wood.

11714. That is the man you saw, on your oath?—Yes.

11715. Do you know the expression "Drysdale Street Boys"?—I do.

11716. Are you one of them?—No.

11717. Do any of your friends belong to them?—They do not belong to them. I go with a chap, a friend of mine, a working chap, who lives down there.

11718. Is he a Drysdale Street Boy?—He is not a Drysdale Street Boy. He lives in that street. He does not mix with any of them. I always stand and wait for him.

11719. The Drysdale Street Boys is the name for a lot of young roughs?—So they say. I do not think I should be a rough, because I have had a lot of trouble, and have been in St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

11720. This friend of yours lives in that street, and he is a person whom you associate with?—Yes, he is my friend, and he is here now.

11721. Did you happen to be at the station by accident, or how did you get there?—I always have my last drink in the King's Arms, at the corner of Shoreditch.

11722. I suppose that is a long time after the first one. There are a good many between the first and the last?—I do not drink much, because I have a great deal of pain. I have had appendicitis.

11723. But you always make a point of having the last one there?—Yes, and then I go straight down Hackney Road home.

11724. Why does that account for your being at the police station at this time?—There is a chap in our shop who knows him, and asked me to come up.

11725. Where did you go to? Did you go to the police station?—I was outside the police court, and when I got there it was all over, because I cannot leave at when I like, as I am on piece work.

11726. You are not talking of the same occasion that I am putting to you. I am talking about the occasion when Andrews was taken to the station. I asked you how you came to be there that night, and you were saying you were having your last drink in the King's Arms?—Yes, and it was turning-out time then.

11727. Is the King's Arms on your way home?—Yes.

11728. Where do you live?—In Hackney Road.

11729. Then you stayed there till you were turned out?—Yes.

11730. How far is the King's Arms from the police station?—About 30 yards, I should think.

11731. Why did you go to the police station when you were turned out of the King's Arms?—I saw a crowd coming along.

11732. You went and joined the crowd?—Yes.

11733. You were one of the crowd?—Yes.

11734. Were you outside the crowd?—I was on the outside of the pavement—quite near enough for me.

11735. You were always outside the crowd?—Not always outside the crowd, because I rushed up to see what was the matter.

11736. You saw that from outside the crowd?—No, not from the outside of the crowd. When I saw enough of what I wanted to see I stood in the background.

11737. You told me a moment ago you took care to keep outside the crowd?—When I saw what was the matter, certainly.

11738. At what point did you get near the man—opposite the King's Arms or not?—No, when I first saw him I rushed up outside the London Apprentice.

11739. You went to see what was going on?—Yes, I went to see who it was.

11740. Did you know the man?—No, I did not know the man.

11741. You rushed up to see whether it was one of your pals?—Not one of my pals. I have no pals. I have only one friend.

11742. You went to see whether it was a man or a woman?—I went to see who it was.

11743. Having seen who it was, you came back again?—Yes.

11744. That was all that concerned you to see, whether it was a man you knew or not?—That was all.

11745. You took no particular notice of him except to see whether it was a man you knew?—I saw a mark on his face over his right eye, and I thought he had been having a fight.

11746. You saw a mark over his eye?—Yes.

11747. Was that when he was going into the station?—No, before.

11748. Before he got to the station?—No, he never had any mark going in the station.

11749. You understood my question quite well. I was asking you about what you saw when you looked to see whether it was one of your friends, and you said he had a mark on his eye?—He never had a mark on his eye.

11750. Did you state that when you went up to see whether it was one of your friends or not he had a mark on his eye as if he had been having a fight?—No, not then.

11751. That is what you said?—That was the next morning when I saw him.

11752. Nobody had ever asked you about the next morning. Did you tell the solicitor of Andrews what you knew about this before the case came on at the police court?—Yes.

11753. And did you go to the police court?—I was too ill. It was all over when I got there.

11754. You said just now you went to the police court, but you were not called?—I was too ill to be called.

11755. Was the case all over?—The case was over then.

11756. Just think again. Is it not true what you said just now, that when you saw this man for the first time, when you went to see whether he was your friend or not, he had a mark on his eye as if he had been having a fight?—No, he never had any mark on his face then.

11757. Do you say that that was the next day when you saw him?—Yes.

11758. When did you see him the next day?—I saw him in Shoreditch.

11759. Where?—Somewhere in Shoreditch. I could not say where it was.

11760. And then, of course, he had his face strapped up?—He had a piece of sticking plaster.

11761. Do you suggest that that was what you were referring to when you said to these gentlemen that he looked as if he had been having a fight and had a mark on his eye?—When I saw him the next morning I thought he had been having a fight because I heard that they did it in there—that they had set about him in there.

11762. In where?—In the police station.

11763. That is what some of your friends down in this street told you?—No, some of my friends did not tell me that.

A Offord.

24 Oct. 1906.

11764. Who told you that?—My young brother told me.

11765. Was that after this matter?—No, that was before.

11766. Had your young brother ever been in the police station?—Only for being drunk, that is all.

11767. Have you ever been there yourself?—I have never been in a police court or a police station in my life, and I have always assisted the police.

11768. How many times has your young brother been there?—Once.

11769. How old is he?—Eighteen. I have always assisted the police when I can. There is a policeman in court now who I assisted one evening.

11770. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not know what this means about Drysdale Street. I suppose, like Greek Street, there are some respectable people living in it?—I suppose so—all hard-working men.

11771. Is this young man you associate with respectable as far as you know?—I think so; I am sure so. He is a hard-working chap the same as myself.

GEORGE REYNOLDS, sworn.

G. Reynolds.

11772. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) You live at 16, Sarah Street, Kingsland?—I do.

11773. You are described in the document before me as a machine minder?—I am a machinist.

11774. Do you remember this midnight of the 29th of July or thereabouts?—Yes, I remember a little of it.

11775. Tell the Commissioners what you do remember. Did you see Andrews brought to the station that day?—I did.

11776. Do you know Police-constable Manning?—I do not know him by that name.

11777. By what name do you know him?—Charley Wood.

11778. Is that his general nickname?—It is.

11779. Did you see Andrews close to on that occasion?—Yes.

11780. How far off?—About the same distance as I am from you now (about two yards).

11781. Where was he when you saw him?—Just as he was stepping on the kerb to go up the police station steps.

11782. Close to the police station?—Yes, very close to the electric lamp there.

11783. Had he any mark on him then?—None whatever to the best of my eyesight.

11784. Would you have seen it if he had a mark on his face?—I should think I should.

11785. Had he any blood about him?—None whatever. I could not see any.

11786. There was nothing about his face to attract your attention?—No.

11787. You say you knew the policeman by sight as Charley Wood?—Yes.

11788. Did you see him anywhere about?—He was standing on the bottom step as I came along.

11789. What time was that?—About midnight.

11790. You cannot be sure of the time, but about that time?—I had just come from Shoreditch. I had been to a playhouse, and I came down Old Street to my house.

11791. You have no interest in this case one way or the other?—No. I have left my work to come here. It has cost me two days up to now, and I do not know how I am going to be paid for it.

11792. Did you see Andrews the next day?—No, I have never seen him since till they came to me and gave me the paper.

11793. That was from the Secretary directing you to come here?—That is right.

11794. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you a friend of the last witness?—Yes.

11795. You do live in Drysdale Street?—I do not. I live in a turning out of Drysdale Street.

11796. Your young brother has been had up for drunkenness, has he not?—No. I have two younger brothers; one is a sailor and one is a very little chap.

(Chairman.) You are going rather far afield, are you not, in asking a question like that?

11797. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The reason was I thought Manning was connected with it. Have you an elder brother?—Yes; he works with me.

11798. Has that elder brother been arrested by this man Manning?—Yes, I believe so. I am not sure, but I believe so.

11799. You have no doubt about it have you?—I am not so sure, but I have an idea he has. I have never had any handling with him.

11800. Were you taking your last drink with the last witness that night?—Yes.

11801. How many drinks do you suppose you had had that evening?—I never count what I have. I am not a big drinker. I like a drink, but I always know when I have had enough, and know my way home.

11802. Had you had a dozen that evening?—I had not been with him this Saturday night I only picked him up when I came from the theatre.

11803. You wished to have your last drink at this same house?—Yes, we generally meet there if we do not go out together.

11804. Are there a number of you who meet there to have your last drink?—Only two of us.

11805. Do you think you had a dozen that night?—No, I had not. I do not know what he had.

11806. I am asking you to speak for yourself?—I cannot have a lot of drink when I am in a theatre.

11807. What time do you come out of the theatre?—All manner of times.

11808. They have three performances in the evening, do they not?—No, I went to a full house where they play a drama.

11809. There were no drinks there?—You can come out in the meantime between the acts.

11810. Whether it is six or ten or twelve, that is your idea?—I generally have a couple of drinks when I go to a playhouse, and I may have one before I go home.

11811. And you and he came out of the public-house together?—Yes, and we parted.

11812. At closing time?—Yes.

11813. And then you saw this crowd?—The crowd was behind, and I walked towards it. He ran away from me.

11814. Why?—Because we said good night. He must have seen the crowd coming, and I walked on towards where the crowd was. Andrews was putting his foot on the kerb as I got there.

11815. Putting his foot on the steps of the police station?—No, on the kerb against the gutter.

G. Reynolds.
24 Oct. 1906.

11816. Was he surrounded by a crowd?—I did not take any notice. I just cast a look at the chap and walked on.

11817. Had he got a hat on or not?—That I cannot say.

11818. You did not notice him sufficiently to see whether he had a hat on or not?—No, I noticed that they had hold of him like that, with his arms behind him.

11819. You cannot tell whether he had a hat on or not, and you just cast a look at him and went on?—Yes.

11820. I suppose the glance was to see whether you knew him?—Naturally enough.

11821. And seeing he was a man you did not know you paid no more attention?—Yes.

11822. I will ask you to be careful about Manning. Do you know Manning?—Yes, and he knows me. I live at the back of the police station at the present time, and we have lived there twenty-four years.

11823. Do you say that on that evening when Andrews was being taken up to the police station that Manning was standing there on the steps?—I should say it was him. I can believe my own eyesight, I think.

11823*. I want you to say positively yes or no on your oath. Will you say on your oath that Manning was standing on those steps when the man was being taken into the police station?—As I said just now I am almost sure that it was him. I looked that way. The door of the police station is that side and Andrews is coming on the kerb like this, and I looked down and walked on.

11824. Do you mean to say you did not pay sufficient attention to be able to say whether it was Manning or not?—I am not saying with regard to that. I thought it was him. I think it was him standing there on the bottom step.

11825. You are not prepared to say it was?—I should not swear on oath anything that I do not know anything about.

11826. But you have sworn on oath about something you do not know anything about, because you have said you saw Charley Wood there?—I should think it was him I say.

11827. That is all you can say?—That is all I can say.

11828. You are not prepared to say positively that it was?—Certainly not.

11829. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Was Andrews resisting at all when you saw him?—No, he was just taking his step on to the kerb as I said. He did not seem to be giving the police any trouble.

11830. You cast a glance at him?—Yes.

(Chairman.) You are not suggesting that the cut came while Andrews was resisting the police.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No, but it is part of the evidence that the police have given or are about to give.

11831-2. You saw nothing about him to attract your attention when you cast your glance at him?—No, nothing whatever.

11833. I do not want you to say anything about Manning that you are not sure of. You know Manning well?—Yes.

11835. You have lived there twenty-four years, I understand, at the back of the police station?—Twenty-three or twenty-four years.

11836. Has Manning been long in the force there?—Not that I am aware of. I have seen him several times.

11837. That is what you mean by knowing him?—That is all.

11838. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Have you ever spoken to him?—No, I have never had any conversation whatever with him.

11839. You have not shown any animosity or spite against him in any way as to your brother or anything else?—No.

11840. How was he dressed?—In ordinary civilian clothes.

11841. Not in a policeman's dress?—No.

11842. In plain clothes?—Yes.

11843. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Had you ever seen him in plain clothes before?—No, not to speak of. Never to see him walk about the streets.

11844. You had never seen him out of his uniform before?—No, I have seen him in uniform.

11845. This was the first time you had seen him in plain clothes?—Yes, to my recollection.

11846. You think he was the same man you had seen in uniform, but are not sure?—Yes.

11847. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) What was the colour of his clothes?—I cannot tell you. I only looked and walked on.

11848. What kind of a hat had he on?—I could not say.

11849. (Mr. Dickinson.) When were you first asked whether you had seen Manning on those steps?—The first time I ever heard anything of this was last Friday week as I came home from the hospital. I was just going out for a stroll.

11850. I want to get it accurately. Last Friday week was the first time that anything was said to you about Manning being on those steps?—A man came and asked me for my statement, because he found out about my friend being there, and my friend told him I was there. I wanted nothing to do with it. I have my work to study.

11851. That was the time they came to you for your statement?—Yes, I gave it to them in brief.

11852. Before that occasion nobody had ever asked you whether you had seen Manning on the steps?—Manning does not know me.

11853. (Chairman.) You do not know that?—I daresay the man does know me by sight. He has seen me tons of times—they all have.

11854. (Mr. Dickinson.) On that evening you say you saw Manning?—I believe I did.

11855. You did not think about Manning on that evening as anything important?—No.

11856. When was the first time you thought of Manning being there in connection with this case as a matter of importance?—It was on that particular Friday night. I could not tell you the date.

11857. Somebody must have spoken to you about Manning being on those steps?—No one whatever. On this particular Friday they came down about a quarter to one, when I was just going out for a walk after I had come home from the hospital.

11858. That is recently?—That is the first time I heard of it.

11859. Have you ever given any evidence before?—No, I have never been in the witness box before. I have been in the dock, but that was only for gambling when I was a little chap.

11860. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Were you asked whether you remembered seeing Manning standing on the door step on that night?—Yes, I was asked that, and I told them I was not quite sure.

11861. You told the person who asked you that you were not quite sure?—Yes, I am not quite sure. I say I thought it was him, and yet I thought it was not him. It is doubtful on both sides.

11862. An equal balance?—Yes.

11863. But helped a little by somebody asking you whether you remembered it?—Nobody has asked me.

FRANCIS BASSETT, sworn.

F. Bassett.
24 Oct. 1908.

11864. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Are you an engineer's assistant, living at 44, Harvar Street?—Yes.

11865. You were charged with Obeney before Mr. Cluer?—Yes.

11866. You saw Andrews brought in there?—Yes.

11867. Had he any marks on his face then?—No, I did not notice any marks on his face.

11868. Did you hear anything said then?—No.

11869. By anybody in the police station?—The sergeant said, "Take him outside" or "down below," or words to that effect. I could not distinctly hear. The constable said, "I won't stand answerable for him, sergeant," and he was taken out of the door. I do not know whether it was downstairs or what it was.

11870. Did you hear anything after he was taken away?—Yes, shouts and holloaing like a man being knocked about, like "Oh" and words to that effect—holloaing and shouting.

11871. Not as if he was having a nice time of it?—No, he was holloaing as if the man was in pain.

11872. Where did those sounds seem to come from?—Out of this doorway he was taken through.

11873. Upstairs or downstairs?—I could not say whether upstairs or downstairs, but like a door on the ordinary level of where I was or else downstairs.

11874. You saw him at the police court the next morning?—Yes, in bandages, and his face was swollen, and he had a black eye.

11875. He had none of that when he came into the station?—He had none of that when I saw him in the station.

11876. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You have given evidence before, have you?—Yes.

11877. Once or twice?—Twice.

11878. When he came in you and your friend were in the dock?—Yes.

11879. You were both of you charged with being disorderly?—With disorderly conduct.

11880. And at the time this man was brought in the sergeant was in the act of taking the charge against you?—Yes.

11881. Was he asking your names and addresses?—Yes.

11882. And telling you what the charge was?—Yes.

11883. And you were occupied with the sergeant in taking the charge?—Yes.

11884. How far into the room did the man come?—I should think about the distance where you are now.

11885. And how long was it before the sergeant said anything?—He stopped immediately the man was brought into the station and referred to him, which made us look also and stopped us speaking.

11886. So the moment the man came in the sergeant said something the result of which was that they went out?—Yes.

11887. They were hardly in the room a moment?—They were hardly there a minute.

11888. It was done quite quickly?—Yes, the order was given and he was taken out.

11889. So he was not in the room long at that time?—He was in there long enough for me to see him, and I had a good look at him.

11890. I have a note here of what it is alleged you said when you were cross-examined: "It is not the first time I had been arrested. I noticed Andrews' face. I could not say he had not got a cut over his eye"?—I did not say that at all. I was being cross-examined and my words were taken up, and the solicitor who spoke to me said: "Supposing I suggest he had a cut over his right eye, would you contradict me if it was ever so small?" I said: I would not contradict you if it was ever so small." "Oh," he said, "you would not," and he sat down; and on the next hearing when I came up to the court he asked me that question, and he said: "Oh, but on the last hearing you said that Andrews had a cut on his eye." I said "I did not," and he kept on asking me, and of course I would not answer yes or no to the question. They put me down, and would not hear my evidence on the last hearing at the police court.

11891. On the second occasion when you came up you were asked about this, and did you not say this: "I did not hear Andrews' case before Mr. Cluer. Last time I did say 'I will not say he had not got a cut over his eye'"?—That is referring to what I said just now. The solicitor did not say "Did Andrews have a cut on his eye," but he said: "Supposing I suggest that Andrews did have a cut on his eye, what should you say if it were ever so small?" I said: "If it were ever so small I would not contradict you." That was my answer. My word is as good as those people's words are. I know what I said, and I remember what it was.

11892. (Chairman.) You deny that you used those words?—I do deny it. I do not deny I said that I would not contradict it. The suggestion was made to me that if there was a cut ever so small would you contradict me. I said "If it was ever so small I would not contradict you," because my meaning was if they had made a close examination of him they would contradict me.

11893. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You have been in trouble yourself, have you not?—Only on one occasion, and that was very small. I have always had a good reference.

11894. You were sent to prison?—Yes, but that is no reason why you should say "You have been in trouble before, and you have been in the police station." It is not a case at all for your people to bring into this case. I have come here to give evidence, and not for you to put it in the papers about me.

11895. Were you sent to prison for embezzlement?—Yes, which I suffered for; and I do not see why, unless I have committed another offence, it should be brought forward in public.

11896. You think you are entitled to give evidence against other persons, and to assume the position of being a respectable man, although you have been sent to prison for embezzlement?—Have I said I was respectable? I have not said I was respectable. I was subpœnaed to come here to give evidence. I said I did not want to come because I had a situation I wanted to study, and I have only just come out of trouble. I had a good reference until I got into that trouble.

11897. When the man came inside you say the sergeant said something. Did he say, "You must take him outside?"—The words were not very distinct.

11898. What do you say any of the constables said when that order was given?—The youngish constable—I could not recognise him—said, "I won't stand answerable for him, sergeant," and the man was taken out of the room.

11899. Can you recognise the man who said that?—No, I would not say I could.

11900. Was it one of the men who came in with Andrews?—I would not say. There are so many men in that station alike and of the same appearance.

11901. Was it one of the men who came in with Andrews?—I would not say. I was more occupied with Andrews than looking at him.

11902. Have you ever mentioned that before—about being answerable?—No, because I was interrupted on that point when the solicitor in the court stood up. I was stopped and another question was put to me. In the statement that I made to Mr. Young's clerk beforehand I did say it, but it was not put to me because my evidence was interrupted.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) He means Mr. Nicholson, the solicitor.

11903. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) When you went to the court, before you were asked to say what you knew about it before, you were not cross-examined?—No. Mr. Young had my statement, and I answered his questions.

11904. You told the Magistrate that you had heard the sergeant say something about taking him outside or taking him below?—Yes, taking him below. I was interrupted.

F. Bassett.
24 Oct. 1906.

11905. At that time did you attach any importance to what the constable is supposed to have said about not being answerable?—No, because I did not get a chance to say it.

11906. Did you attach any importance to it?—No; I was making my statement at the time, and I thought I had finished.

11907. What did you think the man meant when he said it?—I did not know what he meant, when all of a sudden I heard shouts of "Oh, oh," and I turned round to my friend in the dock and said, "They are doing it in on that poor fellow—hark at him."

11908. What did you think he meant when the man said it?—You do not know what is meant in a police station like that or what the order is.

11909. You do not attach any particular meaning to it now?—I do now. I can see the meaning of what he was sent there for.

11910. What do you say it was?—My opinion is that the man was sent down for what they done.

11911. When did you first form that opinion?—I have had it in my mind.

11912. You had it in your mind before you went to give evidence before the Magistrate?—I told people directly I was bailed out that they had done it on a fellow in the police station.

11913. You have always had it in your mind what the man said when he said "I won't be answerable"?—When I heard shouts and halloaing I took it they were paying the fellow, because I told my friend.

11914. You have never mentioned this in public before, although you had been twice examined before the Magistrate?—I did not get a chance to speak on the last occasion. I don't reckon I gave evidence on the last occasion. I did not get the chance to.

11915. You and Obeney were the two men who were in the dock together?—Yes.

11916. And both of you have made that statement to-day, but have never said it before to-day?—It seemed that we got interrupted on that point by the solicitor for the police.

11917. I am not talking about the solicitor for the police?—You want to know why and how.

11918. Will you give me your attention for a moment?—I want to speak on my own behalf as well as for yours.

11919. We cannot both speak at once?—Give me a chance.

11920. Do you want to answer my question before I put it?—I want to speak.

11921. (Chairman.) Do you reflect that you have come here to give evidence for the benefit of the Commission?—Yes.

11922. Why are you rude to the learned counsel?—He asks me questions, and I don't get a chance of answering them before he asks me another one.

(Chairman.) No, you are wrong. You have had every opportunity. Now attend to the question.

11923. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You went to the police court to give evidence for Andrews?—Yes.

11924. And you gave evidence for Andrews before you were cross-examined at all?—When I stepped into the dock I was cross-examined on my statement which Mr. Young had before him.

11925. You were asked what you knew about the matter, and you were asked to tell the Magistrate what you knew in Andrews' favour to begin with?—I was cross-examined on my statement.

11926. Was this gentleman, Mr. Young, there?—Yes, he was the gentleman who examined me on my statement.

11927. He asked you questions?—On what I had said to him.

11928. Do you say they stopped you telling the Magistrate about what the constable said?—They both got up and started speaking, and there was an interruption, and Mr. Young said something, and they got on to a point, and I stood there, and it was nothing to do with me, and then when they came to terms again I was asked on another question.

11929. Did that happen on both occasions?—What you refer to on the first occasion about the cut over the eye was put down on the other occasion.

11930. On the second occasion you had an opportunity of saying this about the constable if you wanted to?—No, I did not, because they were getting at me that I had said the man had a cut over his eye, and I would not have it, and I got very excited, and they said my evidence would not be sufficient, so I had to stand down.

(Chairman.) We have got the depositions.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) There is no jury here, and if I am wrong you must correct me, but here is the original statement made by this man at the time the charge was brought against Dawson and Peck. I hold it in my hand, if you would like to see it.

(Chairman.) Is it in his handwriting?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) It is a statement taken down by him and put in my hands many weeks ago by this witness.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is it in his handwriting?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No, it is a typewritten statement.

11931. (Chairman.) Did you make the written statement?—No, I went to a gentleman who wrote it. One of the solicitor's clerks asked me for the statement, and I made one to him, which I handed to Mr. Young.

11932. And he took the statement away?—He took the statement away.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He did not typewrite it before you. Who was it who put it down with pen and ink?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) It was given to me at the time, and here it is in my brief if you would like to see it.

(Chairman.) I do not think we ought to take that, and I do not see that it is very important.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Everybody is endeavouring to get at the truth, and if you wish me to say that this man said anything about it I can say it.

(Chairman.) If you like to give evidence that you omitted to ask the questions at the police court, that is another matter.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I think the statement he has made is fairly correct. There was some misapprehension about the effect of this cut over the eye matter, and both parties did not like it at all. They thought he was prevaricating, whereas, as a matter of fact, it was clearly a misunderstanding as to the way in which he answered the question, "If the cut had been very, very small, would you have said it was not there?"

(Chairman.) That has nothing to do with the point on which Mr. Eldon Bankes is cross-examining. We have a copy of the depositions, and it appears that something he has said now was not mentioned at the police court. That is the whole point.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Very likely that may be so.

(Chairman.) He has said on oath now that he heard those words, and he does not appear to have been asked as to that at the police court.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) This is the only point I was considering. Mr. Eldon Bankes says, "Have you ever made to any person the statement you have made now about being responsible?" That question I can answer.

(Chairman.) Mr. Eldon Bankes asked the question, and took his risk, and I think the witness said "No."

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I believe he did not say so in the police court.

(Chairman.) We cannot go further than that, because if we did the inquiry would never end.

11933. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) That is quite true. I quite see your difficulty, sir. (To the Witness.) You said you were convicted for embezzlement?—Yes, nearly two years ago now.

11934. What punishment did you have?—Six weeks' hard labour.

11935. Have you been in a good situation since?—I have been in a good situation since.

11936. Have you satisfied your employer?—I have not got any employer now.

11937. How long have you been out of employment?—About seven weeks.

11938. What did you leave for?—I think it was partly getting locked up for disorderly conduct and losing the time.

11939. This time when you were accused?—Yes.

11940. He thought you must be above suspicion because of your previous history?—Yes.

11941. Before that unfortunate case you have referred to you had never been convicted before?—Yes, I was convicted once before for desertion from the Army. I was in the Army at 16½, and I came up and passed, and deserted.

F. Bassett.
24 Oct. 1906.

(Chairman.) We were rather surprised that Mr. Eldon Bankes thought it was worth while asking this witness the question on that subject, but now you have got out two other cases.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) They are not two other cases. One is the case against him when he was discharged, which tells strongly against the police. I now propose to call Miss Barrett.

(Chairman.) What is she called to prove?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) She will prove very strongly the condition of Andrews when he went into the station.

Miss Mary Barrett, sworn.

Miss Mary Barrett.

11942. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) What are you?—A shop assistant to my sister.

11943. Do you live at 44, Harwar Street, Hackney Road?—Yes.

11944. Do you remember this midnight of the 29th July?—Yes.

11945. Please tell the Commissioners what you know about it. Were you in somebody's company?—I was in my sister's company at Old Street Police Station, to bail out Francis Bassett, the last witness. I saw Andrews, who I did not know, brought along. I noticed he had a cut over his eye, and also a blood-stained handkerchief, which he held up to me, and he said, "This is what they do in here."

11946. Who did he say that to?—He said that to me.

11947. Did Andrews say anything to you in the station?—No, that is what he said to me as I was standing at the charge-room door. He held up the handkerchief like this (describing), and said, "This is how they serve you in here." Then I saw him show it to a sergeant, and the sergeant said, "Do not blame me for it. I was not here when you were charged."

11948. Did you see a sergeant there?—Yes.

11949. Did you know him?—Yes.

11950. Is that Sergeant Hollands?—I do not know what his name is.

11951. Do you know him by sight?—Yes.

11952. Did Andrews say anything to him?—Yes, he made a reply, and he said to Andrews, "I know nothing of it; I was not here when you were charged."

11953. Who said that?—The sergeant.

11954. In response to what Andrews said to him?—Yes.

11955. You have told us what Andrews said to him?—Yes.

11956. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) No, you have not?—I do not know what he said to the sergeant. I do not think he said anything much to the sergeant—it was only what he said to me.

11957. (Chairman.) The sergeant heard it, did he?—Yes.

11958. Was he close by?—The sergeant was in charge of the station, and I heard him say to Andrews, "I know nothing about it," and another sergeant came out and said to Andrews, "You had that before you came here from those who you were fighting with outside." I took no notice at all; I never spoke at all. It did not concern me at all.

11959. (Chairman.) Who said "You had it before you came here"?—Another sergeant.

11960. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Can you recognise either of the sergeants?—Yes, there is one (pointing).

11961. Who is that one?—That is the one who said he knew nothing about it, and that he was not there.

(Chairman.) What is his name?

11962. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Sergeant Roberts. Will Sergeant Hollands stand up?—That is the one that said Andrews had it before he came in.

11963. You say you were in the police station, and at that time Andrews had got the cut on his eye?—Yes, he had got the cut on his eye, but how he came by it I cannot say. I know nothing about that. I was in my own home when it must have been done.

11964. Did you see him when he was brought in?—No.

11965. How long after he had been brought in did you see him?—It was near 3 o'clock in the morning when I went. It was half-past 2 when the constable came to our door.

11966. It was 3 in the morning?—It was quite 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Bassett, sworn.

Mrs. M. E. Bassett.

11967. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I think you are a widow living with your son at 44, Harwar Street?—Yes.

11968. At midnight on the 29th July you went to bail your son out?—At 3 o'clock in the morning.

11969. Did you see Andrews there?—Yes.

11970. What was he doing?—I heard him complain to a constable, a sergeant, and he said, "You brute, you had this done to me."

11971. What did the sergeant say?—He came out of the room, and one sergeant said "No, I don't know nothing about it," and another sergeant came out and said, "No, you had that before you came here."

11972. What was the condition of Andrews then?—He had a swollen face; it was very much swollen.

11973. Did you notice his forehead?—No, I did not notice it. My sister called my attention to it, and she said "That man has had a good knocking about."

11974. When your sister called your attention to his forehead what was the condition of his forehead?—I cannot see very far, and I said "You know I cannot see very far," but she said "You ought to see that."

11975. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Were you there with the last witness?—Yes.

11976. You would not be able to recognise the sergeant?—No. I know them when I see them there, but I should not recognise the gentlemen from this distance.

11977. Do you say it was as late as 3 o'clock?—Yes, it had just struck 3 as Andrews was being released on bail.

11978. The sergeant your sister has spoken about, Sergeant Hollands, you would not be able to recognise? I saw him yesterday. I can recognise them when I am close to them.

11979. He was not in the station at 3 o'clock I am told?—There were two sergeants in there. It was 3 o'clock.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I only wish to say, sir, that it is challenged that this sergeant was in the place at 3 o'clock. I do not know what the materiality of it is, but I do not want it to be understood that I admit that.

11980. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Were you close to him when you saw him in the station, and could you recognise him clearly in the station?—Yes.

11981. Could you, if you went close to that sergeant or he came to you, recognise him now?—Yes. (Sergeant Hollands stood forward close to the witness.)

Mrs. M. E Bassett.

24 Oct. 1903

Yes, that is the gentleman who I saw who came out of the room.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) That is Sergeant Hollands.

11982. (Mr Eldon Bankes.) Yes. You say it was at 3 o'clock in the morning?—Yes.

11983. Did you see that sergeant yesterday?—Yes.

11984. Did somebody point him out to you?—No.

11985. Did you talk to anybody about him?—No. I ought to know some of the constables. I have been in my shop fourteen years, and I know them passing and repassing. I know a great many of them, and they know me, and they know that I am a respectable person, and my husband also.

11986. I am not saying a word about that?—My son's character has been very much taken away through these policemen.

11987. Was the sergeant in uniform yesterday when you saw him?—No, he was in private clothes.

11988. Did you speak to your sister about him?—He spoke to me yesterday, I believe, over there in the court.

11989. Did you ask her or she ask you whether that was the man?—No, I did not. My sister was not with me yesterday.

11990. I understood you to say that yesterday you did speak to her or she spoke to you?—My sister called my attention to Andrews' face, I said.

11991. I am asking you as to what happened in this building yesterday. Did you see that sergeant here yesterday?—Yes.

11992. Had you anybody with you when you saw him?—No.

11993. Was your sister here?—No.

11994. Did you speak to anybody yesterday about that man?—No, nothing about him, only he was over that side I believe in private clothes, and a gentleman here said, "There is room at the back," and he pushed me back there, and my son said, "Come this way, mother."

11995. You were not speaking about the sergeant?—No, I never spoke on the subject to anyone, and I have never all the time.

11996. Have you spoken to your sister about this man since yesterday?—I may have done since yesterday. We spoke about it directly we went out of the station that night when I bailed my son out.

11997. Did you speak yesterday to your sister, or this morning, about this Sergeant Hollands?—No.

11998. Did you tell her you had seen him in court?—I told her yesterday I saw him.

11999. When you got home you did tell her that you had seen Sergeant Hollands?—I told her the sergeant who came out of the room. When my son saw that the sergeant was going to push me right back in that archway he said I had better come out, and I said yes, it was the sergeant who came out of the room.

12000. You told your sister that?—Yes.

12001. Did you tell her what his name was?—I did not know his name.

12002. You described him?—Yes. We do not know many of the names, but we can describe who they are.

12003. Did you see him again this morning?—No, I never saw any of them this morning.

12004. You came with your sister this morning?—Yes.

JOSEPH ALBERT SMITH sworn.

J. A. Smith

12005. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Are you a French polisher living at 37, Granville Buildings?—Yes.

12006. You heard about midnight on July 29th that Andrews was in custody?—Yes.

12007. I think you went to Old Street and asked what bail was required?—Yes.

12008. They told you £5?—First £3 and then £5.

12009. Then you got bail?—Yes, I went and fetched it.

12010. What time?—Twenty to three.

12011. Did you see Andrews brought up from the cells?—Yes.

12012. What was his condition, what was he doing?—He came up with a blood-stained handkerchief to his eye or his forehead, and there was blood all over his hands. Then he took it down and shook it out, and it was all covered with blood, and we could see a cut just over the eye.

12013. Did he say anything to the sergeant?—There was a stout gentleman, a sergeant, at the desk who was taking the bail, and Andrews said, "This is what they have done to me downstairs." He said, "Don't blame me for it, I know nothing about it."

12014. That was Sergeant Roberts—this one? (Pointing to a sergeant.)—Yes.

12015. He was not there when Andrews was charged?—No.

12016. Did you see anybody else?—Another sergeant came out of the room.

12017. Will Sergeant Hollands step forward?—That is him.

12018. What did he say?—Andrews said: "You cur, this is what you sent me downstairs for." He turned round and said, "Bosh, you got that before you came in."

12019. Then you went to the hospital?—I took him home and made a cup of tea, and went straight to the hospital. He came out of the hospital at half-past four.

12020. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should like to inquire about this. What time do you say it was when you saw these two sergeants?—It was just about three o'clock, when we came out of the station.

12021. This is Sergeant Roberts. Do you say you ever said a word to him about Andrews?—I never said a word to him.

12022. Did Andrews say anything to him in your presence about his (Andrews') condition?—Yes, I saw him come out of the door and stand there.

12023. Do you say that Andrews said to Roberts, "This is how I am treated in the place," or words to the effect?—Yes, I heard every word they said.

12024. You did not say anything about that to the Magistrate, did you?—I could not tell you. I believe I did.

12025. "Joseph Albert Smith"—that is you—"I live at 37, Granville Buildings"?—Yes, that is me.

12027. You never said a word about that before the Magistrate?—I could not tell you what I said there. I answered such questions as were asked me.

12028. You have said he had blood on his hands and also on his handkerchief, and he said something to the sergeant. "I spoke to Andrews and left with him. We went home and afterwards to St. Bartholomew's Hospital"?—Yes.

12029. You realise it was an important statement made by Andrews, whether it was right or wrong, when he came up from down below, that this is what happened to him down below?—He said that directly he entered the room.

12030. Why did you not tell the Magistrate that?—I believe I did. I was asked questions, and it was not for me to tell the Magistrate. When I did go on to speak about what Andrews was saying to the sergeant I was stopped by the other solicitor.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes, I remember quite well that was so, Manning not being there.

(Witness.) They would not allow it.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) The accused party being absent, it could not be given in evidence before the Magistrate.

(Chairman.) Why not? Not what Andrews had said to the sergeant in the police station?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) So Mr. Biron held. Mr. Biron distinctly held, and I think with some amount of correctness and rightly, that because Manning was not present, therefore what was said in Manning's absence, he being the accused party, could not be given in evidence against him. It is common knowledge as the res gesta, and my argument was it was part of the proceedings, but I was overruled.

(Witness.) Mr. Young asked me if I saw Manning in the station at the time.

(Chairman.) There may be a point about that. That is a sufficient reason for this witness not giving the evidence. J. A. Smith. 24 Oct. 1906.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes, the words are in the depositions, he said something.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He said something, and apparently he was not asked what, for the reason you have given.

THOMAS KEOUGH called.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I understand this man has been subpœnaed, but he is not here. He gives the same evidence.

(Chairman.) He will have another opportunity of giving it if you can get him here by to-morrow morning. Have you any other witnesses?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) There is the witness Keough, who is not here, and two other witnesses, Gibbs and Sparks.

(Chairman.) You had better give the Secretary the list of those who are not here and who have been summoned already, but we cannot prolong the thing indefinitely. This is a sort of case in which you might get fresh witnesses every day who will come and say they saw something of this thing. One hundred people may have witnessed it.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) The crowd is said to have been a large one.

(Chairman.) We must conduct the Inquiry in a reasonable way. If you give the Secretary a list of the witnesses who have been summoned by your client and who have not come, we will call them.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no objection to their depositions or the note of their evidence being read. Surely at this stage of the Inquiry it is not necessary to call the particular witness.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) The depositions are not very full.

(Chairman.) You have asked us for summonses for the witnesses, and we have given you summonses, and they have not come, and you ought to have an opportunity of calling them.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I will confine it to Thomas Keough.

(Chairman.) Then we will call him to-morrow, otherwise we shall not take any further evidence on your side.

TWELFTH DAY.

Thursday, 25th October 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
RUFUS DANIEL ISAACS, Esq., K.C., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE (Barrister-at-Law), Secretary.

(Chairman.) Is Mr. Keough here?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I am not sure.

(Chairman.) Let him be called.

THOMAS KEOUGH was called inside and outside the Court.

(Officer.) There is no answer, sir.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I misapprehended you yesterday. I thought the Secretary would be sending another letter to him to see that the subpœna of the Commission was attended to. I know nothing of his absence to-day and yesterday, and it came upon me by surprise. You remember you asked me for the names of the persons I wanted to call, and I gave you that name only, and thought I would not trouble about the rest.

(Chairman.) Yes, I think you are quite right in that. He has been summoned and is not in attendance, and if we think his attendance is necessary we will take steps to have him here.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Rather than that there should be any idea that every witness who can throw any light on this case has not been called, I am quite ready this witness's statement should be read. Our desire is that every possible investigation should be made into this matter. 25 Oct. 1906

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Keough was one of the bail of Andrews, and I think he substantiates the statements of the other witnesses.

(Chairman.) Let Mr. Keough's statement be read.

(Secretary.) "Thomas Keough, machine-minder, 13, Ware Street. At 2.30 a.m., 29th July, went to Old Street to bail Andrews. Saw him brought up holding a blood-stained handkerchief to his forehead. He said to a sergeant, 'This is your ordering, you coward.' Sergeant replied, 'Nonsense, you got that before you came in here.' We came out, and left them, and went home."

(Chairman.) Do you call any witnesses, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, sir. I have had a plan of the police station prepared, and I can call somebody to prove it. (Handing plan to the Commission.) On your left-hand side there is the ground floor, and on the other is the floor below. You see the entrance into the station from the street, which is just at the Chairman's right hand. Then you come up the passage and the charge room is the room nearest to me, and you see the dock marked. You see there is a door which is on this side of the room nearest to me which leads out. Then you see a place where we say the complainant was detained, which is marked "Outside landing," and the steps are from there down which he alleges he was taken which would lead him into the basement below, which is shown on the other plan.

(Chairman.) Do the steps lead into the parade room or into what is called the basement yard?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Perhaps my witnesses had better tell you that.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) According to the plan it is the basement yard.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think so, but my witnesses who are familiar with the place will tell you that.

Police-constable FRANK DAWSON 371 G, sworn.

P.C. F. Dawson.

12031. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you Police-constable 371 of the G Division?—Yes.

12032. How long have you been in the force?—Sixteen years come the 3rd of next month.

12033. On the 28th July last, that was a Saturday night, were you on duty in Luke Street?—Yes.

12034. Just describe shortly what it was that you saw with reference to Andrews?—About 12.15 on the 29th July I was on duty in Luke Street. I saw a large crowd just past the corner of Phipp Street. On going up I saw the complainant fighting with a man and a woman. I went through the crowd and separated them, and requested the complainant to go away. He immediately rushed at the woman, and, calling her an offensive name, struck her in the mouth with his fist. She retaliated by striking him on the right side of his face with a quart beer can which she had in her left hand. I then caught hold of him, when he struck me in the mouth. I then took him into custody, when I was immediately surrounded by a very hostile crowd, chiefly composed of his friends, who incited him to resist. With great difficulty I proceeded a few yards with him, when Police-constable 337 Stevenson came to my assistance and advised him to go quietly. He said "I will not go until I get my cap." Someone went to find his cap, but not returning, we proceeded on the way with him. He resisted very violently, and one of the witnesses, Bletcher, got in front of us, and said, "Don't you go, Skin—have a go." I told him that if he continued to interfere with us he would be taken into custody also.

12036. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) P.C. 245 is Peck?—Yes. We then proceeded through Curtain Road and he went very quietly for about 100 yards, and then he commenced to resist again by crossing his legs in front of us and trying to trip us, and twice in Curtain Road he fell on his knees in consequence of his trying to trip us. When nearly at the top of Curtain Road he said "I will not go any further until I wipe my face," and P.C. 245 released his right arm sufficiently to allow him to take his handkerchief out of his pocket, and he wiped the right side of his face. On taking him into the station other charges were being taken, and a number of persons being in the charge room, the officer taking the charges directed that he should be taken on to the landing.

12037. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Who was the officer?—Station Sergeant Hollands. He was taken out by me and P.C. 245, and we remained for about 10 minutes, when we were directed by the station sergeant to bring him in, which we did, and he was placed in the dock and the charge preferred against him. In answer to the charge he said, "I am sorry," and asked if he could have bail. He was told by the station sergeant that would be a matter that would be considered afterwards.

12038. And then was he taken to the cells?—Yes, he was taken to the cells.

12039. Who took him, do you know?—I believe, as far as my recollection goes, the gaoler.

12040. Did you have anything more to do with him after that?—No, nothing whatever.

12041. Now to go back a little. You tell us he was fighting with a man and a woman. Is that the man and woman we saw here yesterday?—Not the man—the woman.

12042. Who was the man he was fighting with?—I could not say, but from the evidence I have heard I should imagine it was the woman's husband.

12043. It was my mistake; I thought the husband was called here yesterday. Is that the woman who had the can in her hand?—Yes.

12044. Did she or did she not hit him with the can?—Oh, yes, certainly she hit him on the right side of the face with the beer can—a swinging blow.

12045. When you were taking him to the station had he got any mark over his eye?—Yes, I noticed he had got a slight cut over his eye when I caught hold of him outside the shop. He rushed this woman on to the footway, and by the lights of the little chandler's shop at the corner I could easily see how his face was.

12046. When you got to the station you told us that the sergeant told you to take him into the corridor?—On to the landing.

12047. Is that the landing that leads out of the charge room? Do you understand a plan?—I think I should be able to (plan handed to witness). This would be the door, and we went out of that door to that landing.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What is described as the outside landing on the plan?

12048. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) While you were on that outside landing with him who was with you?—P.C. 245, Peck.

12049. Anybody else?—No one else whatever during the whole of the time.

12050. Did you take him downstairs from that landing, or did you remain on the landing the whole time?—We remained on the landing the whole time.

12051. Was Manning there?—No.

12052. Were you two constables alone there with him?—The whole of the time.

12053. Is there any foundation for the suggestion that 10 or a dozen constables got round him and mauled him?—None whatever.

12054. It is said now—we heard yesterday for the first time—that when the sergeant told you to take him outside somebody said "I won't be answerable"?—I never heard any such remark made.

12055. When he was charged he said himself he made no complaint?—He made no complaint with the exception of saying he was sorry.

12056. He made no complaint of any violence?—No, none whatever.

12057. He suggested he was in a dazed condition. What do you say about that?—He was far from being in a dazed condition, I should say myself. He was perfectly compos mentis.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You asked a question just now, Mr. Bankes, which is a little ambiguous. You said "Was Manning there?" At that time you were dealing with the outside landing, and, I suppose, the question was meant whether he was on the outside landing.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes; I understood the complainant said that Manning was one of the 10 or 12 who pushed him out of the charge room, and pushed him downstairs, and hit him.

12058. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes, but one thing I should like to know is whether Manning was on the doorstep of the station when Andrews was brought to the station. Can you tell us?—No, nobody was on the steps at all.

12059. (Chairman.) In plain clothes?—No one at all.

12060. It was stated yesterday Manning in plain clothes was standing on the doorstep when you arrived with the prisoner?—No, it is not so—neither Manning nor anybody else was on the doorstep when we went in.

12061. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Did you give all this evidence before the Magistrate?—Yes, I believe so.

12062. I do not think I can complain that it is not on the notes of evidence, for I remember some of it was certainly given before the Magistrate, but nothing about the hostile tribe and his friends and the incitement to resistance.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Oh, yes, there is; you will find it on the second day at page 20: "I went a little way with him, and was surrounded by a hostile crowd, chiefly of his friends. They then said, 'Go on, Skin—have a cut.'"

12063. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes, that is so. (To the witness.) Let me test your accuracy a little in this matter. Were you the first person to arrest Andrews?—Yes.

12064. And you saw what took place, you say, between the woman and the man and him?—I saw part of it.

12065. Were you the constable who went and interviewed Mrs. Webster?—No.

12066. It was not you?—No.

12067. You did not go to Mr. Webster's house and see Mrs. Webster?—I went to nobody with reference to this case.

12068. You say you noticed everything that took place?—From the time I arrived there.

12069. Was there much fuss when you arrived there?—Yes.

12070. And yet you could notice it was a quart beer can?—Yes, certainly.

12071. You particularly noticed that?—Yes.

12072. You noticed he was cut by the beer can?—No.

12073. You could not swear that?—No.

12074. When did you first notice the mark on the forehead?—When he was outside the shop after he had struck the woman and the woman struck him.

12075. Was he bleeding?—Yes.

12076. Did you see any woman offering him a handkerchief?—No.

12077. That you did not see?—No.

12078. But he did want to wipe his face?—Yes, in Curtain Road.

12079. Not till he got to Curtain Road?—No.

12080. How far off is that?—From where it occurred I should say it would be from 400 to 500 yards.

12081. Then it did not occur to this man to wipe his face till he got 400 or 500 yards?—That is the only time he asked.

12082. What did he want to wipe his face for?—I take it he wanted to wipe his forehead where the cut was.

12083. That is what you took?—Yes.

12084. Did you say anything about that at the station?—Yes, in answer to the question asked me.

12085. What sort of a cut was it?—A slight cut over the right eye.

12086. A thing for stitching or a thing for sticking plaster?—I should imagine that a piece of sticking plaster would meet the case. It was not a very deep cut.

12087. Not a thing to send for a doctor for?—No, I should not myself.

12088. Just a little cut?—Yes.

12089. How long?—I should say it would be about an inch or three-quarters of an inch long, or an inch. I would not be certain.

12090. Not longer than that?—There was a certain amount of blood round it, and it would be a difficult matter without examining it thoroughly to ascertain the exact length or anything connected with it.

12091. You think it was about an inch long, and not more than that?—I should not say it was more than that myself.

12092. You say the hostile crowd was composed of his friends?—Yes.

12093. It is rather odd we have not had any of his friends here?—Yes, I noticed that myself, and I think I drew your attention to it at the police court.

12094. I think I drew yours, if I recollect right?—I drew yours, I think.

12095. You have not arrived at the conclusion that the persons summoned here are the friends among this hostile crowd, but we have picked out the respectable ones?—They have all said they are entire strangers to him, but I have frequently seen them in company with him since.

12096. But not before?—I had not been in the division very long before.

12097. You have made some inquiries about witnesses, have you not?—None whatever.

12098. You have heard of inquiries being made?—No.

12099. No inquiries being made about these witnesses?—Not that I am aware of.

12100. You say that Bletcher was evidently a friend of his?—I should imagine he was by the remark he made to him by calling him his nickname.

12101. You know now he has sworn he never saw him or heard of him before?—Yes.

12102. And there is no evidence to contradict it?—Only the fact of his calling him by his nickname.

12103. You say that?—Yes.

12104. You have no evidence to show that Bletcher was known to him or Andrews to Bletcher before this occurrence?—None whatever.

12105. You did not charge Bletcher with inciting to resist the police?—No.

12106. And you went before Mr. Cluer on the Monday morning?—Yes.

12107. Did you say all this to Mr. Cluer?—I stated the case as it was from beginning to end.

12108. Just as you have told us to-day?—Yes, with very few exceptions, I think.

12109. Mr. Cluer said the assault on you, at any rate, was a very trifling one?—Yes, and I admitted it was so.

12110. Yet it was a swinging blow that he gave?—No.

12111. What was it?—He shot out with his right hand—a straight blow.

12112. A severe blow?—I explained to Mr. Cluer that it would have been a severe blow had I not ducked my head and only partly received the force of it.

12113. That I do not understand. I can understand a bullet jutting off an inclined surface, but I cannot understand a blow being any the less because you only received it on one side of your face instead of in the front?—Oh, yes, if you did not receive a blow with the full force on the face, and you got it on the side of your face, a sliding blow, you would not receive the full force of it.

12114. You say he tried to hit you a severe blow?—Yes.

12115. But you turned your face so that it struck the side of your face?—Yes.

12116. Would that make it any the less blow than if it had struck you in the front?—Yes, because I should have received it full in the mouth.

12117. Instead of which you received it at the side?—Yes.

12118. That makes it a less blow, you think?—Yes, certainly.

12119. Andrews complained at the time of being assaulted, did he not?—No.

12120. Not to Mr. Cluer?—Oh, yes, he complained of being assaulted, certainly.

12121. To Mr. Cluer?—Yes.

12122. He said he was assaulted by several constables?—Yes.

P.O.
F. Dawson.
25 Oct. 1906.

12123. Not by Manning only?—Three and a sergeant.

12124. And Mr. Cluer said he had better get summonses, and he would attend to the case?—He did not exactly say those words, as far as I recollect. He said, "If you care to take any further steps in the matter I shall be only too pleased to investigate it."

12125. Did Andrews appear in Court with his face all strapped up?—Yes, he had a bandage over the top of his right eye.

12126. When the sergeant directed him to be taken outside what were the exact words he used?—"Take him out on to the landing."

12127. Those were the exact words the sergeant used?—Yes.

12128. Have you made a report of this case?—I have.

12129. I think you remember I asked for that report at the police court?—I heard you ask for it.

12130. And it was refused?—Yes.

12131. I ask for it now.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is a matter for the Commissioners.

(Chairman.) What report is it?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) A report made by this man to his superior officers at the station in regard to the circumstances leading to the arrest of Andrews.

(Chairman.) What is the reason for not producing it?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is no reason at all if you think it right it should be produced.

(Chairman.) We have had the reports in other cases, and we had better have them in this case.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Mr. Barker, who appeared for the police in the police court, absolutely cross-examined on that report, but still it was refused me.

(Chairman.) Very likely, but that was a criminal proceeding.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Whatever grievance there was then is removed now, because you are going to have it.

(Chairman.) In that case Manning, as I understand it, was on his trial for assault.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That is so.

(Chairman.) And the solicitor was cross-examining on the statement made.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No, he was examining in chief. I make no reflection whatever on the Magistrate.

(Chairman.) It was a statement made by the witness. I do not see that you are entitled to look at that and then tender it.

12132. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I will not pursue that. I make no complaint whatever with regard to the Magistrate, who also said he thought the report ought to be produced. (To the Witness.) When did you make this report?—On Tuesday, I believe.

12133. On the 31st?—Yes, that would be the Tuesday.

12134. Is the original in your writing?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I have no doubt the original is here.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. (Original report produced.)

12135. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Is this the original report made on the ordinary police paper?—Yes. (Report handed to Witness.)

12136. You made your report on July 31st, the same day on which Andrews came before the Magistrate, Mr. Cluer?—No. It was on the Monday that he came before Mr. Cluer, and I believe I made the report out on the Tuesday.

12137. Surely July 31st was a Monday, and surely Andrews was brought before the Magistrates on the Monday. He was arrested on the Saturday night.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The 30th was the Monday.

12138. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) This was the day after he had made a complaint to the Magistrate of being assaulted by the police?—Yes.

12139. And then with all the matter fresh in your memory you made this report?—Yes, certainly.

12140. Is that one which you have before you the actual report you made without any alteration?—Yes.

12141. Did you make a draft report?—No.

12142. You made no draft first?—No.

12143. It was written straight off on paper as you have it there?—Yes, I was called upon to make it out as quickly as I possibly could.

12144. And you made it out like that?—Yes.

12145. Did you talk to anybody about it first?—No.

12146. You had no assistance whatever in making that report?—I did not require any.

12147. You made it just as you say straight out on that paper without any corrections or alterations of any kind?—Yes.

12148. How was it that you did not tell them anything about the hostile crowd in the report. Why did you not tell your superiors about the hostile crowd and inciting to resist in the report which you made when the thing was so fresh in your memory?—No one was taken into custody for interfering, and I made out my report as briefly as I possible could, not omitting the principal facts of what led up to taking him into custody.

12149. Do not you think that a very important fact that a crowd surrounded you and persons incited Andrews to resist?—It is the usual thing in the neighbourhood of stations.

12150. And the usual thing to arrest them?—If you get the opportunity.

12151. You did not put that in the report lest it might be suggested you did not do your duty in arresting Bletcher for inciting this man to resist?—I should have done so had he continued to do so.

12152. He did enough to make you tell the Magistrate that he had incited the prisoner to resist?—Yes, certainly.

12153. Just now you told me in answer to my question that you told all to Mr. Cluer that you told us this morning?—Yes, I believe I did, as far as my recollection goes.

12154. You did not tell anything to Mr. Cluer beyond what is here in this report?—Yes, I believe I did mention the fact that there was a hostile crowd surrounding me when I took the complainant into custody.

12155. Did you mention Bletcher's name to Mr. Cluer?—I would not be sure.

12156. Is it not the fact that the first time you gave evidence before Mr. Biron you said nothing about Bletcher. You were all out of court then, and you did not know what was said?—I would not be sure.

12157. But I think I can be. There is nothing in the notes about it is there?—Then I did not say it.

12158. When you came before Mr. Biron again with regard to yourself and Peck, then we heard about Bletcher after he had given evidence?—Yes, I gave him a full account of what took place.

(Chairman.) Who appeared before Mr. Biron on the first occasion.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I appeared for Andrews.

(Chairman.) Who appeared for the police.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Mr. Barker.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Mr. Barker is a member of the firm of Wontner and Sons.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you also appear in the other cases, Mr. Young.

12159. (Mr. Schultess - Young.) I appeared for Andrews on both inquiries before Mr. Biron. (To the Witness.) You did not say a single word about Bletcher inciting to resist until after he had given evidence, although you had given evidence yourself in Manning's case?—No, I do not think I did now you have refreshed my memory by my depositions.

12160. (Chairman.) You answered the questions put by Mr. Barker first of all?—Mr. Barker was not engaged in that case. The gentleman is speaking of the case before Mr. Cluer.

12161. (Chairman.) No, he is speaking about the case before Mr. Biron?—He is asking me whether I said anything about the hostile crowd before Mr. Cluer.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That only strengthens my case. You did not say anything about it to Mr. Cluer.

12162. (Chairman.) Did you answer the questions put by Mr. Barker when he asked you?—Certainly.

12163. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) You did not before Mr. Cluer say anything about Bletcher or before Mr. Biron when you came up on behalf of Manning as a witness?—I would not be sure.

12164. There is nothing in the notes of evidence about it, and I called attention to it when I cross-examined you with regard to yourself and Peck. But when Bletcher gave evidence you come forward and say he is evidently a friend of the prisoner, because he called him "Skin" and incited him to resist?—Yes, because I saw him at the police court.

12165. But it was not till then that you said so. Why did you say this? Here is another discrepancy in your evidence. You said just now in answer to Mr. Bankes that Andrews went along within 100 yards all right and then he wanted to trip you up again?—Yes.

12166. But here in your report you say he was very violent all the way?—Yes.

12167. Now which is right?

(Chairman.) What are you reading from?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) From the witness's report, dated July 31st, which he made to his superior officer.

(Chairman.) In the case against Manning before Mr. Biron, as I understand it, the charge of assault was an assault committed by Manning at the police station.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) Yes, that is so.

(Chairman.) Then the question of what took place at the time or shortly after the arrest before they got to the police station was quite immaterial, was it not?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not think so, because Andrews had charged three police constables with assaulting him—two police-constables who took him to the station and Peck and Manning who assaulted him, as he says, upon the steps, and therefore the whole of this was germane and material to the inquiry.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The charge against the two police-constables who arrested him was for the assault at the station, as I understand.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) They were not charged with assaulting him after arresting him, and going to the station, but it was for what took place at the station that the summons was taken out, was it not?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) For assaulting him generally on that occasion.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, pardon me.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) For assaulting him on that day, and that included, according to the evidence, the twisting of his arms and so on, on the way to the station.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You were there and you know, but so far as I can follow from the depositions that does not seem to have been the question at all. The question was what took place at the station.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That was the real question, and in my opinion that was the real thing that our attention was directed to.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) If that was the real question, I suppose that is the real question now.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) But what took place before this constable got to the station with him was, I think, part of the whole occurrence, and showed the tendency of this constable towards the prisoner.

(Chairman.) I am not suggesting that it might not be admissible in evidence. I am only pointing out to you that you are asking the witness why he did not say something about what took place on the way to the station. I am suggesting now to you that very likely that was absolutely immaterial in Mr. Barker's opinion, at any rate, and that Mr. Barker never asked the witness about it.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not think I could have made my question or my meaning clear. What I said was that to-day, in answer to Mr. Bankes, the witness said the prisoner Andrews, as he then was, went along all right for a time on his way to the station—100 yards, he said—and then he began to try and trip the two constables up; but in the report which he made he does not omit something, but he makes an assertion, and he says "The prisoner was very violent all the way." I call attention to the fact that there was a discrepancy in the report which he wrote at the time when the matter was fresh in his memory, and which is very different to the evidence he gives now.

(Chairman.) What I understood you were cross-examining him upon was his silence as to certain things at the hearing before Mr. Biron.

12168. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) No; I did not put it as clearly to you as it was in my mind. (To the witness.) Which is correct of these two statements, the one you made to-day to Mr. Bankes at this distance of time or the other one?—He certainly went quieter for the 100 yards than he did afterwards.

12169. Then why, when you were giving a report which the unfortunate man would not see, do you say, in order to make it bad, that he was very violent all the way?—It is only a short distance that he did not resist so violently.

12170. It made it a little bit worse for him in the report?—I should not say so.

12171. Was he not quiet when you were not twisting his arms, and was he not violent when you were twisting them?—I never twisted his arms at all.

12172. Did you hear the witnesses in court yesterday say that you did?—Yes.

(Chairman.) There must have been some little intermittence in the violence. A man is not continually violent for five minutes or when going a quarter of a mile.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) He said Andrews walked about 100 yards without being violent at all. In the report the witness made at the time he says Andrews was very violent all the way.

(Chairman.) If his violence occurs at intervals all the way, then there is nothing wrong in the description.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In fairness to the constable, when you are putting that you ought to take into account the next words, which rather describe what he means by being violent all the way—"several times throwing himself on the ground."

12173. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Is that what you mean by being violent?—Yes.

12174. You told us to-day he threw himself once on his knees?—Twice.

12175. Is that what you mean by being violent?—Yes.

12176. I thought it was tripping you up that you told Mr. Bankes was the violence?—It was through attempting to trip us up that he fell on his knees.

12177. Your report does not seem very valuable.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You ought not to make these interlocutory observations.

12178. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not think I am doing any more than my duty. You say "He was very violent all the way, and several times threw himself to the ground." You told Mr. Bankes this morning that he tried to trip you up?—Yes.

12179. Is that the violence you mean?—Yes.

12180. Why did you not put it into your report?—I did.

12181. As the learned Commissioners have said, you seem to imply there that throwing himself to the ground several times was the violence you intended to imply. It is worse to try and trip up a constable on the way to the station, is it not?—(No answer.)

12182. "Prisoner was still violent in the station." Was he still throwing himself to the ground?—No.

12183. What was he violent in, then?—Resisting.

12184. In the station itself?—Yes.

12185. Can you suggest any reason for his resisting, except that you were hurting him?—No, only his general conduct right from the beginning of the business to the finish.

12186. And then he was taken outside on the landing?—Yes.

12187. By the direction of the sergeant?—Yes.

12188. You have told us to-day he was there 10 minutes. Why do you say he was there 10 minutes?—I should imagine that would be about the time. It might be a little more or less.

12189. Why should you imagine that now? When the thing was fresh in your memory you said five minutes?—I do not think so.

12190. You have your report before you, which Mr. Bankes has requested you to refresh your memory with. You do not appear to have taken advantage of that.

P.C. F. Dawson.
25 Oct. 1906.

If you cannot do it under the protection of the learned counsel, how do you expect the Commissioners to know what you mean?—I said 10 minutes to-day.

12191. You said five minutes the other day?—Yes. I did not say for certain. I gave an estimate that I imagined at the time. I should say it was quite correct—about five minutes or a little more.

12192. I suppose you mean that what you state to be about 10 minutes may be 10 minutes or a little less, so as to make the 10 minutes and the five minutes meet. You say that no violence of any kind was used towards him?—None whatever.

12193. You made that statement since he made the complaint to Mr. Cluer?—No, I spoke the truth.

12194. I am not attacking your truth, but you made your statement, and you wished to deny that any violence was used, after Andrews had made his complaint to Mr. Cluer?—I was requested to make a report of the circumstances, which I did.

12195. You do not, surely, state, as a matter of necessity, that no violence was used to a prisoner unless there is some suggestion that there has been?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There had been at the time he made the report.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I am trying to help him, but he will not accept the help.

(Witness.) I do not follow your question.

12196. Did you not put in the fact that no violence was used to Andrews because Andrews had made a complaint to Mr. Cluer of violence?—Oh, yes, that would be so.

12197. Then this report was made in that respect because Andrews had made this complaint to Mr. Cluer of violence?—I had reported actually what took place before that.

12198. It was all leading to the same thing, was it not?—Yes.

(Chairman.) I apprehend that the report was asked for in consequence of the remarks of the Magistrate.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) So I should suppose.

(Chairman.) In other words, because of the complaint.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The complaint was that three constables and a sergeant had assaulted Andrews, and thereupon, as one would expect, a report was called for.

12199. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Naturally I should think so, but the witness would not accept that suggestion.

12200. The man Andrews was taken out on the landing. What took place then?—We remained with him there.

12201. What happened? What did you do to him?—He continued to abuse us, and resisted to a certain extent, to compel us to release our hold of his arms.

12202. He was still violent?—To a certain extent. He resisted.

12203. The violence seems to be a very shadowy, indefinite thing. What was the violence on this occasion?—He simply wanted to wrest his arms away, and continued to abuse us generally.

12204. When you say he abused you generally, did he not say "Let me go?"—No, I did not hear him say so.

12205. Did he not groan?—No.

12206. Did he not moan?—No.

12207. Did he howl?—No, I cannot term it howling. He was holloaing.

12208. Did he seem pleased?—Hardly pleased, I should say.

12209. Did he seem in pain?—No.

12210. If any other constable states that he was groaning and moaning, you think that is quite wrong?—It would be a wrong interpretation to put on what he was doing.

12211. What do you mean by "interpretation"?—I mean that you might describe it as moaning, but I should not do so myself.

12212. We will not ask for a specimen of what you think is moaning, but a moan you understand to be a noise a person makes when he is in considerable pain?—I should say so.

12213. Have you ever known any other prisoners taken out on that landing?—No.

12214. Have you ever known other prisoners to be brought to the station violent?—Yes.

12215. Have you known the station to be as full as it then was?—No, I cannot say I have.

12216. You have never known it to be quite so full?—I have not been there a great while, and I have not been in the charge room when charges are being taken a number of times.

12217. You have known prisoners brought to the station violent?—Oh, yes, I have brought them there myself.

12218. You have brought them in when they have been making a noise?—Yes.

12219. Making a great row?—Yes.

12220. Why were they not taken outside on the landing?—Because they were placed in the dock.

12221. And not taken out on the landing?—I have never seen one taken out on the landing before.

12222. (Chairman.) Did you know Andrews at all before this occasion?—Yes, I knew him, but not by name. About three or four weeks prior to this affair taking place I was on duty in the street in which he lives, and a woman was given into my custody by a man who alleged that she had stolen a shilling from him while he was having sexual intercourse with her. This occurred about one in the morning, about the 17th July. He insisted on my taking the woman into custody, and I took her into custody. On taking her into custody Andrews came out of his house, which was opposite where the electric light was, and suggested that he had been with this woman for an hour, and if she had got a shilling on her the shilling belonged to him, as he had given her a shilling for having sexual intercourse with her, and he came to the station for the purpose of corroborating that statement. That was the first time I knew him.

12223. He came to the station for the purpose of giving evidence on behalf of the woman?—On behalf of this prostitute; but the charge was not sustained,

12224. Did you know his nick-name?—No, I did not know either of his names. I did not know the man was Andrews or "Skin."

12225. How long have you been in the G Division?—Six months.

12226. You have had occasion to go to the police station with a prisoner more than once or twice?—I think I have had about three or four charges, but I would not be quite certain.

12227. When you say that you have never known of any other prisoner taken out on to the landing, you mean that during that six months you had never known that?—Yes.

12228. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When first did you know there was any charge against you personally of having assaulted this man?—When he applied for the summons. That was, I think, about three weeks afterwards.

12229. About the 24th August?—Yes, about that date, I believe.

12230. Until that had you ever known that you were one of the three constables who were alleged to have assaulted him?—No; but I came to the conclusion when he told Mr. Cluer that when he was taken into the station he was taken downstairs by three police-constables and a sergeant, where he was brutally ill-treated; so I imagined he might be referring to me as being one of the constables who brought him in.

12231. Can you tell us how many constables there were who you saw at the station on that day when you went into the charge room? Have you any recollection of it?—When I took him into custody?

12232. No, that was in the street, but when you brought him to the station and you brought him into the charge room we have heard there were two men, Obeney and Bassett, being charged, and there was another witness?—I should say there would be about six or seven to the best of my belief, and I believe there were one or two private individuals.

12233. Obeney and Bassett we know were there, and some other persons?—They were in the dock, I believe.

12234. "Skin" is a name that has been used. Did you at that time know that that was Andrews' nick-name?—No, not at that time.

12235. You found it out since?—Yes.

12236. It is a nick-name, I suppose?—Yes.

12237. For him?—Yes.

12238. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you were out on the landing was there any struggling going on at all?—He resisted slightly, which compelled us to retain our hold of him.

12239. You say you were there about ten minutes?—I could not be certain as to the exact time. My attention was engaged with him, and I did not notice the time exactly when we came in or when the charge was being taken. As far as I can remember it would be about five minutes.

12240. Just describe how it was you held him?—I had hold of him by the right arm here (describing), and hold of his wrist.

12241. Was the door shut?—Yes.

12242. The door between the charge room and the corridor was shut?—Yes.

12243. You had hold of him by the arm and the wrist?—Yes, by the left arm.

12244. Had Peck got hold of him?—Yes, on the other side.

12245. Whereabouts were you standing?—I was facing the door.

12246. And during that time he was shouting?—Yes, abusing us. He was calling us foul names.

12247. The whole of that time you held him in that position, and then brought him in again?—Yes, we brought him in directly we were directed to by the sergeant.

12248. You have looked at this plan?—Yes.

12249. You had gone out of that charge room through the door on to the landing?—Yes.

12250. Whereabouts were you standing on that landing?—On this side of the complainant, and Peck would be standing on that side.

12251. Then the steps go down there (pointing on the plan)?—Yes. There are two flights of steps.

12252. What is all that place marked yellow?—I should imagine that would be the parade shed. There are 17 or 18 steps leading down there. That leads into the lavatory; and then, turning to your left, that takes you into the parade shed.

12253. You turn to the left down some more steps, and you come into the parade room?—Yes.

12254. Is that the only place you can get to down those stairs?—No, you can turn off to the right and go into some cellars at the back and the lamp room.

12255. Where can you turn off? When you go down these steps you get down some further steps and turn to the left?—Yes, turn sharp to the left there, and go back that way, underneath the landing.

12256. That is to the parade room?—No, the door of the parade room is on my right, but, by turning sharp to the left you get to the lamp room, which brings you practically underneath this landing, where we were standing.

12257. Under what room is the parade room. If you go down those steps you go straight down, and the steps run to a certain point?—Yes.

12258. Do the steps turn then, or not?—Oh, no, there is another landing. You turn to the left and go down another flight of steps straight into the parade room.

12259. Would that be those steps?—Yes.

12260. Do those steps come on like this, and then turn down here (describing on the plan)?—Yes.

12261. By going down those steps, the only thing you come to at the end of those steps is the parade room?—Yes, unless you turn to the left and go along to the lavatory and to the cellars, and that would bring you underneath this landing.

12262. The parade room is outside?—Yes.

12263. I want you to describe to me that parade room. What kind of a room is it?—It is a very long room, with a number of windows in the front looking out on to the parade ground outside, and at the back there is a long seat. As you go in the door from the steps you turn to your left and your right, and there are two seats.

12264. That is where the windows are, and there there is a long seat?—Yes, on the opposite side of the door.

12265. That is a seat against the wall?—Yes.

12266. Are there any other seats?—There are no other seats.

12267. What do you use that parade room for in the evenings?—We only use it at certain times for parading for duty. We all parade there for duty.

12268. It is only used for parading for duty?—Yes.

12269. In the middle of the night would it be occupied or unoccupied, as a rule?—Unoccupied.

12270. Was there a light in it?—Yes, but I believe that is turned out at 12 o'clock. All the lights are supposed to be turned out about that time.

12271. You say that when he asked for a handkerchief, and he asked to be allowed to wipe his face, you allowed him to do so?—Peck did. He was on his right side, and he allowed him to release his right arm sufficient to take his handkerchief out of his right-hand pocket.

12272. And he wiped his face?—Yes, we allowed him to do that, thinking that by doing that he would be quieter.

12273. Was his face covered with beer?—I did not notice that he had any beer on his face. He had some beer over his collar and his waistcoat.

12274. What did he want to wipe his face for?—I imagined he wanted to wipe the cut on his face.

12275. Was that cut bleeding?—Yes, but the blood had stopped; it had become corroded down the side of his face.

12276. If it was not bleeding why should he want to wipe his face?—I imagine he wanted to put his handkerchief to the cut over his eye. He said, "Let me wipe my face."

12277. Did you see blood on the handkerchief?—Not at the time. I did not see blood after he wiped his face, but in the station I saw him pull his handkerchief out of his pocket, and I saw some blood on the handkerchief then.

12278. But when he asked to wipe his face the blood was dry?—It was corroded somewhat on his face. It had come down to about there (describing), and it was not fresh blood.

12279. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You asked, sir, whether a charge was made against this man before a certain day, and I should like to ask a question upon that. (To the witness.) Were you amongst the constables who were paraded on the 31st, when Manning was picked out?—Yes.

12280. Had Andrews the fullest opportunity of picking you out if he wanted to?—Certainly.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is the 31st July.

12281. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, were you all in plain clothes then?—Yes.

12282. About how many were there?—I should say, as far as I could recollect, about 24 or 25.

12283. Which room were you in—the charge room?—The charge room.

12284. Did he come up to you, amongst others?—No, he walked straight over to P.C. Manning directly he came to the door.

12285. Were you standing close to Manning, or where were you?—I was standing about four or five feet off Manning.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What is said with reference to that—that the parade was held for the purpose of seeing whether he could identify Manning, or was it for the purpose of identifying various constables?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The evidence I shall give here is that Andrews came to the station and complained of an assault by Charley Wood, upon the steps, and that he did not know Wood's proper name or number, therefore would they parade them in order that he might identify him. Then all these men were put there, and amongst them Dawson, and he went and picked out Manning.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The charge was against Manning. There was no complaint made by Andrews at the time when he saw those men paraded?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) My evidence is that he told the Inspector he could not recognise anybody else.

P.C. ALFRED STEVENSON, 337 G, sworn.

P.C. A. Stevenson. 25 Oct. 1906

12286. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are Constable 337, of the G Division?—Yes.

12287. How long have you been in the police force?—Twenty-two years come February next.

12288. I think you were on special duty, were you not, outside Messrs. De la Rue's warehouse on this night?—Yes.

12289. Whereabouts is that warehouse?—It stands a portion in Luke Street and a portion in Leonard Street.

12290. Your duty would be to remain at that point unless you were specially summoned away?—Yes; all that building.

12291. Did you see Dawson coming along with Andrews in custody?—No. When I got up into Luke Street I patrolled round, and came up through Raby Street into Luke Street, and I saw Dawson with Andrews in custody.

12292. Whereabouts were they when you saw them?—I should think about 10 yards from me.

12293. Were they coming in the direction of the station?—They were walking that way.

12294. Did you go up to them?—Yes.

12295. Did you notice what Andrews was doing?—Andrews was resisting P.C. 371 taking him into custody.

12296. Was he saying anything?—When I went to catch hold of Andrews' arm on the right-hand side, he turned to Dawson and said, "What are you taking me into custody for?" Dawson said, "For behaving in a disorderly manner and striking me on the mouth."

12297. Was there a crowd there?—A great crowd.

12298. What was the attitude of the crowd?—They were very threatening towards the constables.

12299. Did you notice Andrews' face?—After he turned round to the right of me I noticed he had a slight cut over the eye.

12300. Then I think you assisted Dawson to take Andrews along?—For a short distance, yes.

12301. How did he behave while you and Dawson were taking him?—He was very violent all the way down Luke Street.

12302. And then did Peck come up?—When I arrived at the corner of Curtain Road.

12303. Did Andrews say anything at that point?—He said "I will go quietly," when Peck caught hold of his arm.

12304. Then, upon that, did you leave him with Dawson and Peck and go back to your special duty?—Yes.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I want to look at this witness's report, and see if the words in his report are similar to the words in other reports, and if so to ask the witness whether he did not collaborate with these constables.

(Chairman.) I understand Mr. Eldon Bankes is willing to give you Stevenson's report, but it is in a bundle of papers he has handed to you, and you are looking at something else.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No, only the reports.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You can have the original.

(Chairman.) Mr. Schultess-Young wants all the reports.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Whose report do you want to compare it with?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not know. It is purely speculative. I have not been allowed to see these reports before.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You must speculate by yourself, as far as I am concerned.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I am in the hands of the Commissioners, and I ask to see the reports.

(Chairman.) What documents do you call for?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) First of all I call for Stevenson's report.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You shall have it.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I am sure the learned Commissioners see my point. I want to look at Stevenson's report, and I want to compare it with the report of the other constables to see whether the same words are used in the reports, or whether they show signs of being made up together. That is the whole point of my inquiry.

(Chairman.) Did several constables make reports?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, and any report my friend asks for of any constable I am going to call I am desirous he should have, but I do not want to hand him my bundle of papers for him to use.

(Chairman.) There is no reason why you should hand him your bundle, but you can give him the original reports of the constables who have given evidence or are about to give evidence.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not want only to look at the reports of the constables as they come up, and have to bear them in my mind.

(Chairman.) No, you shall have all the original reports.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Mr. Bankes' objection, as I understand it, was merely to handing you a bundle of documents which contained other matters for his information, but which were not reports. He is willing to hand you the reports.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) This is Stevenson's report.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not want Stevenson's report only.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is no necessity for any discussion about it. In answer to the Chairman, Mr. Bankes has said he will give you the reports of the police-constables he is going to call, and you shall have them now. He then proceeded to do it by giving you the first instalment which he had in his hand, which was this witness's report. He handed that to you while the others are being found to be handed to you.

12305. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) This report was not made till long after the last witness's report?—No.

12306. You had not seen that report of the last witness?—No.

12307. But you did not give evidence before Mr. Biron on the first occasion?—No.

12308. Here you tell us that the man named Bletcher and others incited Andrews to resist. You were not called to state that on the first occasion?—No. The question was not asked me.

12309. You were not called by the defence?—No.

12310. Therefore of course the question was not asked you. We know now that Dawson on the first occasion did not say anything about that, but he did on the second. Then you were called?—Then I was called.

12311. Had you not said anything to Dawson about this affair between the two occasions?—It had been a general topic right the way through.

12312. Then you had spoken to Dawson?—Yes, I had spoken to Dawson.

12313. (Chairman.) Is the person called Bletcher or Belcher the same as the man Bletcher who was called yesterday?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The man who had been 16 years a ratepayer in the City of London?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Can you tell me, with reference to the question you have just put, are you talking of the second occasion on which he gave evidence? Am I right in this, that on the first occasion when he did not give evidence the charge was against Manning?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes, you are quite right, Sir.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) On the second occasion, when he did give evidence, the charge was against Dawson and Peck?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I tell you why I want to know, because his evidence would be relevant upon the charge against Dawson and Peck, and would not have been relevant to what took place on the charge against Manning.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Not relevant unless the charge was against Dawson and Peck taking the man into custody and assaulting him on the way.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You do not appreciate what I am putting to you. We are asking you about the first and second occasion. What I am anxious to understand is what that means, because if the first occasion is the charge against Manning, the question as to what took place with Stevenson and whether he resisted when he was taken to the station was not relevant. If, on the other hand, it was with regard to the charge against Dawson and Peck, as he had taken part in the arrest and taking him to the station, then the evidence as to what took place on that would be relevant, as you pointed out before.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes, I appreciate that.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When you speak of the one occasion do you mean still the charge against Manning, or are you referring to when the charge was heard against Dawson and Peck?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) There were several adjournments in the case against Manning, and I am trying to recollect.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I tell you why I am asking. According to the notes as I read them, Constable Stevenson was not called until the charge was heard against Dawson and Peck.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That is very probable. I do not dispute it. I am only trying to refresh my memory. That no doubt is the case, but my memory is not quite clear enough to appreciate it at once.

12314. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) (To the witness.) You were only called once?—Yes.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Mr. Barker mentioned him as one of the witnesses who was to be called in respect of Manning, but he was not called.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Naturally enough, because he could not give any evidence that was relevant.

12315. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Can you recollect Andrews being taken to the station before this occasion?—No.

12316. You were not there when the charge was not taken?—No.

12317. Have you spoken to any of the witnesses for the prosecution?—No.

12318. You are not one of those who have done so?—No.

12319. How do you say that he was violent?—On the way down Luke Street he tried to throw us, and we had to restrain him very strongly to keep our feet.

12320. You say he tried to throw you?—Yes.

12321. Is that the interpretation of violence in your view?—I should say so.

12322. Is that what you said before Mr. Biron?—I believe so if the question was asked me.

12323. That he was violent, and you interpret that by saying he was trying to trip you?—If I was asked the question I must have said so, because that is what occurred.

12324. Is that what you said?—I believe so.

12325. Is that what you said in your report? Did you make a report about that?—Yes. I did not say anything in the report respecting his trying to throw us.

12326. Which is it you mean—that you did not say anything in the report about his being violent and trying to throw you?—No.

12327. It is a serious matter trying to trip up constables in being taken to the station, is it not?—It is not an unusual thing.

12328. All you said in the report was that Andrews was struggling and saying he would not be taken to the station?—Quite so.

12329. You said nothing before the Magistrate about his trying to trip you up?—No.

12330. Have you talked this matter over with Dawson since?—No.

12331. The curious thing is that Dawson is in the same position as you, because he said nothing in his report about tripping up, and now you both come here and talk about tripping up?—It is such a usual thing that you would not take notice of that kind of thing unless you were grossly assaulted in some way.

12332. Is it not a matter that you would take any notice of—his trying to trip you up on the way to the station?—No.

12333. It is not a matter you would take any notice of?—No, it is what we should term acting in a violent manner.

12334. Why have you told me now that his violence consisted in trying to trip you up. You say you do not take any notice of it, and yet when I ask you what you mean by violence you say trying to trip you up.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you asking the witness a question?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What is the question?

12335. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Why have you noted it now since you have had an opportunity of talking to Dawson about it. Why do you say that "violence" means trying to trip you up?—I have not been speaking to Dawson about it. It is what I should say any time.

12336. You said nothing about it before, but Dawson and you both together come and say that the violence consisted in trying to trip you up?—In resisting and trying to throw us as we were going down.

12337. "In trying to throw you"—you put it in another way that is more serious still. Then you say he said, "I will go quietly"?—Yes, on arriving at the bottom of Luke Street.

12338. You say he said he would go quietly when Peck took hold of his arm?—Yes.

12339. Did Peck hurt him, do you know?—Not in my opinion.

12340. If a man's arm is twisted up behind his back it would be a serious amount of inconvenience and hurt, would it not?—It all depends on the amount of violence he used.

12341. Did he directly Peck touched him say he would go quietly?—Yes.

12342. So far as you know did he go quietly?—Yes, so far as I know.

12343. When you left him was he going quietly?—When I left him he was going quietly.

12344. It would not be correct to say he was violent all the way to the station?—So far as I can see. I did not see a very great distance.

12345. If he said to Peck "I will go quietly," it would not be true if Dawson should say that he was violent all the way to the station?—I cannot answer that question.

12346. How do you begin your reports always?—The same as you see it there.

12347. Supposing you were called upon to report, would you always begin the report in the same way?—Yes.

12348. What is that way?—"With reference to the report called for."

12349. I daresay. I do not think there is anything wrong in that. I have not looked over these other reports yet. Do you know about any of the witnesses being visited?—I know nothing at all about that.

12350. You have never heard anything about it?—No.

12351. When you say Bletcher and some of his friends do you mean Bletcher's friends or Andrews' friends?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You had better read the witness the whole sentence.

12352. (Mr. Schultess Young.) "Peck came up and took him to the station, Andrews promising to go quietly. I watched them for a short distance up Curtain Road; the crowd then dispersed. Bletcher and some of his friends came to me shortly afterwards and asked if they would accept bail for him"?—Some of Bletcher's friends.

12353. Accept bail for him—you mean for Andrews?—Yes.

12354. "I referred them to the station." You say Bletcher incited the prisoner to resist?—Yes.

12355. One of the witnesses has told us that Bletcher was not taken into custody. Why did you not take him into custody?—I did not consider it necessary to take him into custody.

P.C. A. Stevenson. 25 Oct. 1906.

12356. Not for inciting a man to resist the police?—We had quite sufficient to do to handle the one man.

12357. Did you? That is the reason, is it, Bletcher came up to you, did he not, and spoke to you quietly?—Shortly after, when I returned.

12358. What was there to prevent you arresting him then? You had not enough to do with Andrews then. He was taken off to the police station?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Your complaint is that we had arrested too many already.

12359. (Mr. Schultess Young.) I say the action is inconsistent. I am suggesting distinctly that it was an afterthought altogether?—It is not an unusual thing for that to occur.

12360. It is not an unusual thing to see many men in the dock?—If we did that in every case we should have enough to do.

12361. You said just now that your hands were quite full enough with Andrews, and that therefore you did not arrest Bletcher. You have told us the reason was because your hands were full with Andrews. I am pointing out to you that he came up to you and spoke to you, and that you did not arrest him. Give me another reason?—(No answer.)

12362. It goes on to say "Bletcher then said he had been a City police officer, and it would take more than six policemen to take him. I said if that is true I am surprised at you inciting the prisoner to resist and assault, but were not man enough to go to the station if you thought you could do any good. He then said he did not think of that. He then went in that direction"—meaning in the direction of the station?—Quite so.

12363. Here is a man who incited the prisoner to resist and said it would take more than six policemen to take him to the station, and yet you did not think it necessary to take him into custody. You say the reason why you did not arrest him was because you had your hands full with Andrews. Do you not think he was just the kind of man you ought to have arrested?—(No answer.)

12364. Do you know a man named Charley Wood?—No.

12365. Never heard of him?—No, not until this case.

12365*. I take it what you mean is you did not hear it mentioned until first before Mr. Biron?—Quite right.

12366. Then you ascertained he was in the case?—I have ascertained now—only what I have heard.

12367. You have heard it from the police officers, have you not?—No, I have only heard the evidence given.

12368. You know Manning was called Charley Wood?—Yes, I know now.

12369. Do you say the cut was bleeding, or was it a dry cut?—Bleeding slightly, not much.

12370. Not enough to cause the man to wipe his face?—No, not at the time that I had anything to do with him.

12371. Had he any dried blood on his face at all?—Not at that time.

12372 Dawson had seen him earlier than you, had he not?—No.

12373. After you?—After me.

12374. Who was it who saw him first?—Dawson.

12375. Who was the man who took him into custody before you saw him?—Dawson.

12376. Then Dawson had seen him earlier than you?—Yes.

12377. Therefore the cut would be more recent when Dawson saw him?—I saw him for a few minutes.

12378. But whatever it was, it was more recent?—Yes.

12379. There would not be any dried blood on his face then?—I should not think so.

12380. Did you see any beer on him?—No.

12381. You know it is stated that a woman threw some beer at him or over him?—Yes.

12382. You saw no beer on his face?—No.

12383. No beer on his clothes?—No.

12384. No wet at all?—No, I did not notice it.

12385. How long were you with him?—I should think about four to five minutes.

12386. All that time was he trying to trip you up?—Yes, as we were going down to the bottom of Luke Street.

12387. You do not know why he suddenly said "I will go quietly"?—I do not know 12388. You can give no reason why he said "I will go quietly"?—No. He did say so.

12389. That was at the very moment when the Inspector caught hold of him?—Yes.

12390. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You have been cross-examined at some length about why you did not arrest Bletcher. Am I right in this, that you did not want to arrest the man unless it was necessary?—Quite so.

12391. That is why you did not arrest him?—Yes.

12392. I suppose you very frequently get in some neighbourhoods, if you arrest a man for fighting or anything of that kind, a number of people who cry out and want to rescue him?—Yes, it is the usual thing in that particular neighbourhood.

12393. I suppose, unless a man really actively interferes with you, you would take no notice of it?—No. There is a great difficulty sometimes.

12394. A great difficulty because of the neighbourhood?—Yes.

12395. Nevertheless, although it seems to be a neighbourhood in which there is sometimes some difficulty, you do not take any notice of it as long as you get your prisoner to the station without active violence on the part of those who are shouting?—No.

Police-constable William Peck, 245 G, sworn.

P.C. W. Peck.

12396. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think you are No. 245 of the G Division?—Yes.

12397. How long have you been in the police force?—Ten years come the 4th of next January.

12398. Have you been stationed in the G Division the whole time?—Excepting for eight months.

12399. I think on this night you were one of the two constables who assisted to take Andrews to the station?—Yes.

12400. At what point did you come up?—At the top of Luke Street and Curtain Road.

12401. I think you took the place of Stevenson, and went from that point to the station?—Yes.

12402. How did Andrews behave on the way to the station?—He walked along fairly quietly for a short distance, and then he commenced struggling, trying to free his arm and placing his legs by the side of our legs, trying to trip us over.

12403. Did you notice his face when you first came up and took hold of him?—Yes. When I came up I was right underneath a strong electric light, and I looked at his face. He had a cut over the right eye.

12404. When you got to the station did you take him into the charge room?—I took him straight up the front stairs into the charge room.

12405. Was any constable standing on the steps as you went in?—None whatever.

12406. Was Manning there during any part of the time that Andrews was in the station?—No.

12407. When you got into the charge room what happened?—Andrews was still struggling and abusing us, trying to free his arm, and the station sergeant directed me to take him outside on the landing, as there were other charges to be taken besides.

12408. Did you take him on the landing?—Yes.

12409. Did you and Dawson remain with him on the landing until he was taken into the charge room?—Yes.

12410. Was any other constable there besides you two?—No.

12411. Is there any foundation for the statement that you took him downstairs?—None whatever.

12412. Is there any foundation for the statement that you took him downstairs and tumbled him, and mauled him?—No.

12413. When the sergeant did tell you to take him on to the landing did anybody made any remark?—I never heard none.

12414. Then I think you brought him back into the charge room, when the sergeant told you to, and he was charged?—Yes.

12415. There was an end of it as far as you were concerned?—That is right.

12416. When did you first hear that any charge was made against you of assaulting him?—I never heard of it till, I think, the 22nd August, when he went to the police court and applied for a summons against us two.

12417. Was that the first you heard of any allegation against yourself?—Yes.

12418. (Mr. Schultess Young.) Have you seen any of the witnesses in this case?—Only when I have been at the police court.

12419. You have not called on them or seen them in any way outside the police court?—No.

12420. Do you remember when Andrews was put in the dock his saying: "I am sorry; I am not going to be hit for nothing"?—Dawson was explaining the charge.

12421. I am talking about Andrews?—But it needs explanation as to what reply was made. Dawson was explaining the charge to the station sergeant. Dawson was saying he was fighting in the street when he arrested him. Andrews replied: "I am sorry; I was not going to be hit for nothing. Can I have bail?"

12422. Do you say he was violent on the way to the station?—Yes.

12423. What do you call "violent"?—Trying to free his arm, and trying to trip us up by placing his legs round our legs.

12424. You held him pretty tightly?—Yes.

12425. Did you hurt him a bit?—No.

12426. You did not twist his arms as one of the witnesses has told us?—No.

12427. Where did you really take him when you got him to the charge room?—Took him outside the charge room door on to the landing.

12428. Nowhere else?—Nowhere else.

12429. There are some steps, are there not?—Yes, there are some steps; there are two steps out of the charge room on to the landing.

12430. If you had taken him down the steps you would have taken him to such a place as he described before the Magistrate?—If he had been taken down to a place down there.

12431. You say he was not taken down there?—He was not taken down there.

12432. What did you do when he was outside there?—He abused us, using very foul language to us, and he said: "Leave go my arm!"

12433. He did say that?—Yes; he turned round to me and said: "Leave go my arm."

12434. When I asked Dawson just now the question he said he did not. You say he did?—He said it to me.

12435. "Leave go my arm"?—Yes.

12436. Then you were really holding his arm to hurt him?—I was holding his arm like that (illustrating).

12437. That is the reason he said "Leave go my arm"?—I do not know whether that was the reason.

12438. He was not likely to escape, was he?—No; but he might have used his arm against me.

12439. Do you mean he might have hit you?—Yes.

12440. As a matter of fact, he did not at any time, did he?—He had not the opportunity when I had got hold of his arm.

12441. You came up and found him in the custody of Stevenson and Dawson, did you not?—Yes.

P.C. W. Peck.

25 Oct. 1906.

12442. Was he quiet then?—He was still struggling to a certain extent. Then he said: "I will go quietly." When I arrived on the scene I took hold of his right arm. Stevenson went back to his point.

12443. Was he quiet for a little bit?—Yes.

12444. For how far?—For 100 yards, or it might be less. I did not take particular notice of the distance.

12445. Do I understand that you are one of the policemen charged with assaulting him when he was before Mr. Cluer?—No; I had no idea of it then.

12446. It did not occur to you that you might be one?—No, it did not occur to me.

12447. You felt so free from any blame in the matter that you could not possibly imagine that you were one of the policemen?—I never had any idea that there was any allegation at all.

12448. I want to get that quite clearly from you. You had no idea then that you were one of the policemen charged?—He alluded to the police-constable and the sergeant.

12449. You did not think you were either one or the other of them?—I was there.

12450. It did not occur to you that you might be one of those persons accused?—Perhaps I might have been.

12451. What do you mean? It is a bit difficult to know what you mean, is it not?—That I might have been one of them.

12452. What did you mean when you made the report on the 31st July? Did it occur to you that you might be one of the policemen who might be accused of assaulting him?—I did think I might be one of the persons accused.

12453. It occurred to you that you might be one of them?—Yes.

12454. It never occurred to you then, or does it only occur to you now?—Yes, it occurred to me then.

12455. When you were writing the report?—Yes.

12456. It occurred to you that you might be one of the policemen accused of assaulting him?—Yes.

12457. You do not say so in the report. You say in the report: "No violence of any kind was used to him; he made no complaint when he was charged; his face was swollen and his face slightly cut when he was arrested." Is that what you say?—Yes, on the right cheek; when he came under the electric light it appeared to be slightly swollen.

12458. Underneath the eye?—Just at the side here, it might have been.

12459. Of course, it might have been, but was it?—It was slightly swollen.

12460. As if it had had a blow?—I cannot say whether a blow caused it or not.

12461. Was it consistent with a blow being struck at that place, on the top of the eye?—It might have been.

12462. What kind of a cut was it?—I should say it was about an inch long.

12463. Bleeding?—Slightly bleeding on the right-hand corner at the top. There was a little moist blood there.

12464. Was that all?—It appeared to be drying up on the other part—partly corroded—partly dried up.

12465. I think you told me last time when I cross-examined you on it it was partly wet and partly dry?—That is quite correct.

12466. There was dry blood on his face—on his forehead?—Yes, in one corner.

12467. How long before that was this row with a woman?—I could not say.

12468. You came on the scene when Stevenson had marched him far from the place?—200 or 300 yards.

12469. Did you know anything about his wiping his face with a handkerchief?—Yes; we allowed him to wipe his face with a handkerchief on the way to the station. He asked to be allowed to wipe his face with a handkerchief and then he would go quietly. I lifted his right arm slightly to allow him to put his arm round and take his handkerchief out of his pocket.

12470. He did not try to strike you then, did he?—No.

12471. Why did you not release his arm at the station? You had more mercy on him in the street than in the station?—No.

12472. You did not release his arm at the station for fear he might strike you?—Slightly—I did not release it.

12473. Just enough for him to wipe his face?—Yes. I still retained hold of his arm.

12474. Had he beer on his face?—Not when I saw him.

12475. No beer on him at all?—No.

12476. No beer on his coat?—No, I did not notice it.

12477. Did not a woman lend him a handkerchief to wipe his face?—There was no woman there when I assisted him to the station.

(Chairman.) The incident of the woman lending him a handkerchief took place before.

12478. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Was he searched at the station?—I believe so. I had no hand in searching him.

12479. Who searched him?—I could not say.

12480. You do not know who searched him at the station?—No.

12481. Who would be the proper person to search him?—The person charging him and the gaoler, as a rule.

12482. The gaoler would search him?—He is only searched to see if he has any matches or a pocket-knife.

12483. He would be searched at the station?—Yes.

12484. You would search his pockets?—Just search his pockets to see if he has a knife or a box of matches.

12485. You would come across the pocket-handkerchief on the way?—No; you would not trouble about that. That is kept in a pocket where there are no matches, or a pocket knife, as a rule.

12486. You would not notice whether there was a handkerchief or not?—No.

12487. How long did you stay in the station afterwards. Did you see him come out at all?—No.

12488. You are sure he had this mark below the eye from what I call a blow, and also a cut?—He had a cut over his eye, and his face appeared to be slightly swollen at the top.

Police-constable Alfred Payne, 420 G, sworn.

P.C. A. Payne.

12489. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you Police-constable No. 420 in the G Division?—Yes.

12490. How long have you been in the Force?—About eighteen months.

12491. What were you before. What did you do before?—I was a bootmaker.

12492. You have been about eighteen months in the Force?—Yes.

12493. I think you were on reserve duty at the station on the night Andrews was brought in?—Yes.

12493*. Were you in uniform?—Yes.

12494. Whereabouts were you standing when Andrews was brought in?—On the landing at the top of the station steps.

12495. Did you notice a man being brought in?—Yes.

12496. He was brought in by Dawson and Peck?—Yes.

12497. How was he behaving as he was brought in?—He was struggling coming up the steps, and shouting.

12498. Did you notice his face?—Yes.

12499. Did you notice anything upon his face?—I noticed a cut over his right eye.

12500. He was taken into the charge room?—Yes.

12501. Did you go into the charge room or did you remain in the lobby?—I opened the door to let them into the charge room. Part of the time I was in the charge room, part of the time I was out on the landing.

12502. Did you hear the sergeant say he was to be taken outside. What did the sergeant say? Did you hear the sergeant say anything?—I am almost sure I was not in the charge room when he said "Take him outside."

12503. Were you in the charge room when the man was taken outside or not?—No, I was not.

12504. You opened the door and let him in, and then you went into the lobby again?—Yes.

12505. Did you come into the charge room later or not?—I was in and out of the charge room, as I say.

12506. Whilst you were standing in the lobby did you hear any noise from the landing where Andrews is said to have been?—No, I did not. I could not hear very well from there.

12507. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) You knew, I suppose, did you not, that Andrews had charged some people with assaulting him when you made your report. Did you or did you not?—I knew he had come to make a complaint about Manning.

12508. And about nobody else?—No.

12509. That you are quite sure of?—Yes.

12510. You say in your report: "I saw the police-constables bring the prisoner up the steps into the charge room. Police-constable Manning was not present. I did not see him at all at the time. The prisoner was not assaulted by anyone whilst being brought into the station." The charge against Manning was that he was not assaulted in being brought into the station, but it was after he got outside. Why did you say that if you did not think Dawson and Peck were also charged with assaulting him?—

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You do not follow it.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do, indeed. You do help the witness.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I wish I could, but I cannot.

(Chairman.) I did not observe it.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I think it does help the witness to make these suggestions.

(Chairman.) You had better read the report.

12511. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) "The prisoner was not assaulted by anybody whilst being brought into the station. I was in the charge room whilst Andrews was waiting to be charged. I saw him with two police-constables just outside the door. I did not see or hear anything of any assault." That does not refer to Manning, surely, or if it refers to Manning, it cannot be said to refer only to Manning. It is for the Commissioners to consider that, and not for me. You say you had no idea of anybody else being implicated in assaulting him when you made this report?—No.

12512. You make this statement: "Prisoner was not assaulted by anyone whilst being brought into the station." Do you say now you did not hear anyone besides Manning——

(Chairman.) The report was called for because of what Mr. Cluer said on the Monday at the hearing of the charge against Andrews.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes, but the only point I am raising here is: The constable now says that he did not know anything about Dawson and Peck being charged with assaulting him, but only Manning.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What does it matter? He has to tell the truth in his report.

(Chairman.) This charge had been made against the police, and his report was called for because of that. He then sits down and writes his report.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You cross-examined the last witness because he had not told the whole of the statement in his report.

12513. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes, but in this report

I am looking at the mere question of whether he knew of the charge against the police when he made it. I am suggesting to you that you knew that Andrews complained about the whole of the police, and not only of Manning?—No, against Manning.

12514. Therefore, this report is only referring to what took place in your mind with regard to the assault by Manning?—Yes.

12515. Did you hear any noise outside the door?—No.

12516. Did you hear any noise when Andrews was taken outside?—No.

12517. You did not hear any shouting?—No.

12518. Or howling?—No.

12519. Or any noise of any kind?—Not outside.

12520. You did not hear any noise of any kind outside the door. Then Andrews was quiet when he was taken outside the door?—That I could not say.

12521. At any rate, you did not hear him make any noise?—I did not go outside the door.

12522. How far was the door off you?—I was on the landing most of my time—at the top of the station steps.

12523. Close to this landing?—No.

12524. How far off?—The other side of the charge-room. P.C. A. Payne.

12525. You were in the charge room very often, were you not?—No. 25. Oct 1906.

12526. You were in and out of the charge room all the time and did not hear any noise outside the door after Andrews had been taken out?—No.

12527. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you remember the time it was when you were asked to make this report?—In the afternoon.

12528. When was it that you first heard that Manning was concerned in it?—After the charge had been heard at the police court.

12529. On that Monday?—Yes.

12530. That was because it was mentioned in court?—Yes.

12531. You heard that the name of Charley Wood was mentioned?—A man named Charley Wood.

12532. The name of Charley Wood was mentioned?—Yes.

12533. You were told so by the other policemen?—Yes.

12534. I suppose Charley Wood is well known to be the name of Manning, is it?—Yes.

Sergeant WILLIAM HOLLANDS, sworn.

12535. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think you were on duty, were you not, at the station as sergeant in charge when Andrews was brought in?—Yes.

12536. When he was brought in were there already in the charge room some other cases?—Yes.

12537. How many?—Two.

12538. Do you remember how many constables had come in with those two cases?—One in the first, two in the second, and two in the third, I believe.

12539. You mean Andrews was the third?—Yes.

12540. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When you say two cases let us be clear. Suppose two men are charged together, do you treat that as one case?—Yes.

12541. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) So that there were three private individuals and three constables in the charge room besides yourself when this man Andrews was brought in?—Yes.

12542. Were there any other constables then in the station except the man on reserve that you know of or remember?—I fancy there was one in plain clothes coming off, but I am not quite certain.

12543. That is all you know of. When I say "in the station" I mean in the charge room or in the lobby?—Yes.

12544. When Andrews was brought in how was he behaving?—Violently. He was trying to break away from the constables.

12545. What did you tell them to do?—I told Andrews to keep quiet, but that had no effect, the struggling still continued, and finding that I could not get on with the work with the charges, I said "Take him outside on the landing until I am ready."

12546. Did they do that?—They did.

12547. Did anybody say anything to you when you said "Take him out on to the landing." I forget the words used, but it is said that somebody said "I am not responsible, or I am not answerable"?—No, I did not hear anything of the kind.

12548. Was there anybody there who was not engaged upon one or other of the cases at the time in the room?—There may have been the gaoler there who would not be engaged.

12549. But otherwise there was nobody else except those you have told us?—That is all.

12550. Was the door shut when Andrews was taken out on to the landing, do you remember?—I believe it was.

12551. Did you hear anything whilst he was out on the landing?—Yes, I heard the noise by the constable restraining him and trying to keep him quiet outside on the landing.

12552. What kind of a door is it? Is it a wooden door or a glass door?—Half glass and half wood. From the outside I believe you can see the dock. Sergeant W. Hollands.

12553. How long were these men with Andrews out on the landing before you told them to come in again?—I should think about eight minutes.

12554. When they came in again who was it preferred the charge against him?—P.C. 371 Dawson.

12555. Did he tell you what he had seen happen, and what had happened?—Yes.

12556. Did you then enter the charge in the ordinary way?—I did.

12557. Did you read it over to him?—I did.

12558. What did he say?—There is one thing if you will excuse me, that I might mention. When I was half way through the charge Andrews looked up and said "Can I have bail, sergeant?" I said "You can have bail after the charge is taken."

12559. You read the charge out to him?—Yes.

12560. What did he say?—After the charge was signed by the constable I took it from the desk, went over towards him and read the charge to him, and he said "Right."

12561. Did he appear to you to be dazed or injured in any way?—No, I saw him when he first came in with the constables struggling, and he had a cut over the right eye, which was slightly bleeding.

12562. Did you ask Dawson how he came by that?—I did.

12563. Did Dawson tell you?—He did.

12564. After the charge was taken he was taken down to the cells, I think?—Yes.

12565. Or taken into the cell?—Yes, it is on the same floor, just at the back of the dock.

12566. What time was it when you took the charge. Would the charge sheet show that?—Yes. It was 12.35 I fancy, I am not quite certain.

12567. The charge sheet will tell us?—Yes.

12568. "William Andrews—date and hour. Brought to the station 12.35 a.m." So that it would be some little time after that before the case would be completed?—Yes.

12569. How long after that did you remain on duty in the station?—Till two o'clock.

12570. At two o'clock what did you do?—I was relieved by Sergeant Roberts.

12571. Where did you go to?—He and I went together to the cells and took over the prisoners.

12572. Is it the ordinary routine that you tell him who is there and he takes over the charge from you?—He takes over charge of the prisoners.

Sergeant. W. Hollands.

25 Oct. 1906.

12573. Then where do you go to?—I let him know how the cases stand, who we have sent for bail for, who we have not, and so on.

12574. You put him in possession of what is to be done?—True.

12575. Then what did you do?—Then I went into the office, changed my jacket, signed the book, and went on patrol duty.

12576. Were you on patrol duty from two o'clock to —when?—Two to six.

12577. When you leave the office to go on patrol duty, do you have to sign a book saying what time you come back?—Yes.

12578. Is this the duty book (handing)?—Yes.

12579. Just show the Commissioners the entries of the time when you left the station, and of the time when you came back?—I went on patrol at 2 a.m. and I returned to the station at 6 a.m.

12580. Did you sign that entry there—2 a.m.—at the time you left the station?—Yes.

12581. Did you sign that entry—6 a.m.—at the time you returned to the station?—Yes.

12582. At the time you returned did you also make those entries shewing where you had met the sergeants and received their reports?—Yes.

12583. Did you enter the station at all that morning between 2 and 6?—No.

12584. We know that this man was bailed out about 3 o'clock. Were you there when he was bailed out?—No.

12585. Is there any foundation for the statement that either of those women who came yesterday or that man saw you in the station at 3 o'clock, and spoke to you about this matter when the man was bailed?—No. At 3 o'clock I had a point with the sergeant.

12586. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is an entry here —Hour and place of Inspector receiving sergeant's report. There is a cross to this in pencil?—That is the point.

12587. That you know from the duty you were upon is where you reported first to the Inspector?—The sergeant would report to me. I was Acting Inspector. This was the acting sergeant who would report to me.

12588. There is no name. It is only the place?—Yes.

12589. You would be on patrol duty from 2 to 6 o'clock, and you would receive at Harwar Street the sergeant's report at 3 o'clock. How far is Harwar Street from the police-station?—About 400 yards along the Kingsland Road.

12590. (Mr. Dickinson.) Does that table show what you ought to do or what you did do?—What I did do.

12591. When were those names of the policemen written in?—When we returned from our patrol.

12592. That is your writing?—That is my writing.

12593. When you returned from patrol that morning you wrote down what you had done?—No.

12594. There is no signature there?—No. We do not put the signature. You will find that that is my writing there.

12595. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) This is your writing?—Yes.

12596. (Mr. Dickinson.) What took place at 11.30?—That is meeting the sergeant out on patrol.

12597. You were not out then?—No; I was in the station.

12598. Then this is not an account of what you did?—This is the account of what I did, but this is the account of the sergeant who was out on patrol duty.

12599. Does the man who is out on patrol duty write this in, too?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you wish it, I believe we have the reports from the sergeant should you desire to carry it further.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Not at present. The only reason why we asked the questions was this: it is not very clear until you do ask questions about it.

(Mr. Dickinson.) There is no name of any of the sergeants.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) So we had to find out how far it went.

12599.* (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is there any foundation at all for the statement made by these two women and the man yesterday, that you were in the station at about 3 o'clock when this man was bailed out, and that you spoke to them about this matter?—No.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is Mrs. Bassett and Miss Barrett.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) One was a lady who could not see very well.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) He was brought close to her.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) And there was one man.

(Chairman.) It is obvious there was somebody there at the time.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The point was, if you remember, these women said there were two sergeants there at the time; one was Roberts, but he said he knew nothing about it, and then the statement was made to this man.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The importance of the statement made to this man is that one of the witnesses said Andrews turned to him and said: "You coward, see what you have done." That could only be the sergeant who was in charge, if the statement was made.

(Chairman.) What I meant was this: I do not suppose those two women, judging from what I saw of them in the box, are likely to be able to distinguish a sergeant from an ordinary police-constable.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) With submission, it is more serious than that, and I am anxious to investigate this, because I hope it will satisfy you that respectable people, from some reason or other, do make statements which cannot be substantiated, against the police.

(Chairman.) I do not see that they were making any statement against the police at all. I follow the point you make about Andrew's alleged observation.

12600. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Who was the sergeant who took your duty when you went on patrol?—Sergeant Roberts.

12601. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Can you offer any explanation why two witnesses should make the statement that you were the person whom they saw at the station if it was not so?—No.

12602. Do you never go back to the station after you leave it?—No.

12603. Never have done such a thing?—If anything of an extraordinary nature crops up and it is necessary to go back, I should go back, but in this case there was not.

12604. Andrews was put in the dock, was he not, after he was brought from outside?—Yes.

12605. Before that you directed him to be taken outside?—I did.

12606. Did you hear any noise?—Where?

12607. Outside?—Yes, I did, nearly the whole time I was taking the charge against the two other men, and the noise, the disturbance, and the confusion he created in the charge room was the reason why he was told to go outside.

12608. You say in your evidence, I think, that it sounded like two men trying to over-power another?—Yes.

12609. That was the noise you heard?—Yes, the shuffling of feet, and "Oh, oh," and all that sort of thing.

12610. Did you hear any groans?—No, I did not.

12611. Did you hear any howling?—No, you could not call it a howl.

12612. You hear that at the station sometimes, do you not?—Some of them are not quite nightingales.

12613. There was no sound which gave you an indication that a man was being hurt outside?—No, I do not think a man was hurt at all.

12614. When he came to the station did you notice the cut on his forehead?—I did.

12615. What was the condition of his face?—Bleeding slightly.

12616. His face?—It was slightly swollen where the cut was, otherwise his face was all right.

12617. His face was all right except where the cut was?—Yes.

12618. Is that what you say?—Yes.

12619. You are sure of that?—Yes.

12620. His face was all right, except where the cut was. Where was the cut. Indicate it on your own face?—About there, on the right side (pointing)—about the right eye, or in a line. They were struggling, and as his head came round like this, and they were coming round so (illustrating), I caught sight of it.

12621. You saw it when he was in the dock?—I saw it again in the dock. He wiped his eye then; and it was not bleeding while he was in the dock.

12622. You saw a cut over his eye when he was in the dock?—Yes.

12623. I want to get the time when you had the best chance of seeing it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You asked him when he saw it, and he said when he was first brought in he saw it, but not so clearly as when he was in the dock.

12624. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) You saw it before he was in the dock, but you saw it most clearly when he was in the dock?—Yes, because he was quieter as soon as he got in the dock he seemed to quiet down.

12625. You say there was a cut about his right eye?—Yes.

12626. You say it was not bleeding?—It was not bleeding then.

12627. Was there any dried blood on it?—Slightly round the edges.

12628. You noticed all that?—Yes.

12629. You did not think to call in a doctor?—No.

12630. How big was the cut?—About an inch, or an inch and a quarter, I should think.

12631. That was the only mark on his face?—Yes.

12632. There was no other mark except that cut?—That is all I saw—I saw no other mark.

12633. You had him in full view?—I had.

12634. Right in front of you?—I had.

12635. If another constable says his face was swollen I suppose that is a mistake?—I think one of them did say his face was slightly swollen where the cut was.

12636. No?—At no other place than the cut

12637. When he was put in the dock he made a statement, did he not?—He said, "Can I have bail, sergeant?" I said, "You can have bail when the charge is taken."

12638. Did not he say, "I am sorry; I am not going to be hit for nothing"?—I did not hear that. A constable standing close to him told me that.

12639. I cross-examined you about it before?—I did not hear it.

12640. I ask you if Andrews said it, it would not be true, but if Peck said it, it would be true?—Peck was standing nearer to him, because I was writing the charge out.

12641. How do you make these reports. You are directed to make them, I think, and to hand them in to some superior officer?—That is so.

12642. I find the word "submitted" on this report; what does that mean?—The sub-Divisional Inspector would sign it, and then it would go forward to the Superintendent.

12643. And, having seen it, would add something to it, or take something from it?—No.

12644. Are you sure?—Yes.

12645. Why is this report written afterwards?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is comment.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) We have had it in earlier cases that the practice is for the Inspector to make notes of his comments upon it.

12646. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) It is in several handwritings. This is your handwriting?—Yes.

(Chairman.) I think you ought to read that now.

12647. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I will, of course. That is your handwriting?—Yes. Sergeant W. Hollands. 25 Oct. 1906.

12648. Is this your handwriting?—No.

12649. This is not the same handwriting as that. Whose handwriting is that?—That is Inspector Pilgrim's.

12650. Whose handwriting is that?—I believe that is the Superintendent's handwriting.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The witness' writing is contained in what you have got preceding his signature.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Does what appears afterwards appear to be in a similar handwriting, or in somebody else's handwriting?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I thought at first it was the same handwriting, but this is Inspector Pilgrim's handwriting, then there is another handwriting, and then I understand there is the Superintendent's handwriting.

(Chairman.) You had better read it.

12651. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) This is the report of the 31st July. The words are: "Submitted. The cell passage referred to is the landing immediately outside the charge room door, and between that room and the cells belonging to the police court. Andrews has made no application for a summons at present. He is well known to Police as a determined thief and a desperate character." Do you know that Andrews was in a most respectable situation then?—No, I did not know the man; it was the first time he came under my notice.

12652. You know now, do you not, that he is in a respectable situation?—No. I have heard so in this case.

12653. Here is a report stating that "He is well known to the Police as a determined thief."

(Chairman.) Will you finish the note?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) "His description appears in Case No. 100 Special Release Notice, 1st February, 1902."

(Mr. Dickinson.) Which is the line you say was interpolated?

12654. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not think it was in the least interpolated. I do not think it is of the slightest consequence. I think it is only intended to be descriptive.

12655. When you go outside this door where Andrews was taken on to the landing, what is there?—It is an open space, as large as from that side to here.

12656. Suppose you go downstairs, where would that take you to?—Two steps lead to the landing where Andrews was taken.

12657. Two steps downwards?—Yes, from the charge room.

12658. From the charge room you drop two steps on to the landing?—Yes.

12659. From that do you go down more steps?—Yes, about twelve or fifteen, I should think. That brings you to the bottom of the basement.

12660. What is there?—Round to the right you go to the urinal, and if you turn to the left you go from here to about there, and then down four steps, and then into the long room.

12661. Then Andrews was taken back to the charge room to be charged, and then he was taken to the cells?—Yes.

12662. That would be to a place opening from the charge room?—Yes, to a passage opening from the charge room to take him to the cells.

12663. Why do you say here: "I directed the police constables to take him to the passage between the cells and charge room"?—That is so. There are cells on this landing which nobody, unless they knew about it, would take for cells. It is the backs of the cells.

12664. I do not understand the explanation.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) If you look at what is submitted by the sub-Divisional Inspector and Superintendent I think it is clear "The cell passage referred to is the landing immediately outside the charge room door and between that room and the cells belonging to the police court."

Sergeant W. Hollands.

25 Oct 1906.

12665. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) But there is no entry to the cells that way?—No.

12666. It is the backs of the cells?—It is the backs of the cells.

12667. Have you any knowledge of Andrews having been taken to the station on a charge before, and the charge not being accepted?—No. As I said a little while ago, this was the first time he came under my notice.

12668. Can you tell me if you remember anyone else being taken on to the landing?—No, I have never had occasion to make use of the landing before.

12669. What was the actual reason why you sent Andrews on to the landing on this occasion?—Because he was so violent, and I could not get on with my work.

12670. Were the other prisoners who were brought into the charge room very violent?—Yes, but the circumstances may not arise.

12671. What were the special circumstances here?—The dock was full, and I was just clearing away the other case, the burglary case, and I was making a start with the two men in the dock.

12672. And another prisoner was brought in making a noise?—That is so.

12673. Are you not ever in that position in a station like Old Street?—On a Saturday night, occasionally; but they were inclined to be exceptional that night.

12674. You do not have them taken on the landing?—I should not do it again, unless it was a case of necessity.

12675. And you have never done it before?—No. The station has not been opened for so over long.

12676. Although you have had similar occasions at Old Street on Saturday nights, especially when the dock was full, and another prisoner was brought in who was very noisy?—I cannot say I have had the exceptional circumstances like it was that night, although many a Saturday night I have had my hands full.

12677. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) How long have you been in the Force?—22½ years the 22nd of last March.

12678. You have risen from constable?—Yes.

12679. How long were you a constable?—I was nine years in the West End, seven years in North London, and six and a half years where I am now.

12680. How long have you been a sergeant, about?—Since 1893.

12681. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do your books show any entry of the exact time when you took the charge against this man?—The charge sheet would show that. From the charge sheet it is copied into the book.

12682. William Andrews, 12.35. Would that be the time when he first came in, or the time when you actually took the charge? I suppose you put down 12.35?—Yes. That would mean as nearly as possible the time he was brought to the station: possibly it might have been 10 minutes before I started on the charge.

12683. Then this does not show the actual time when you took the charge?—No; it may have been a few minutes after.

12684. You say he came into the station at 12.35, and then he was eight minutes outside on the landing?—Yes.

12685. Then you have no means of showing by your book that eight minutes had elapsed?—No.

12686. When you called him in, how did you call him in?—I called out "Bring the other man in."

12687. The door was closed?—Yes.

12688. You called out from the charge room?—Yes.

12689. Would they hear that from the door?—It is not quite certain whether the constable was at the door keeping observation on them out on the landing; if so, he would pass the word on.

12690. Do you ever have prisoners put down in the parade room?—No.

12691. It is never done?—No.

12692. There is no seat on the landing?—No.

12693. But there is a long seat against the wall in the parade room?—That is so.

12694. You know Andrews says he was sitting on a seat. You can give me no explanation of that, I suppose, as there is no seat on the landing?—No.

12695. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is suggested in the case made by the complainant that in giving this order to take him outside you were actuated by some animus against Andrews. Had Andrews in any shape or form come before you before this occasion?—Never, I never knew of him.

12696. You did not know him at all—No. I had not the slightest idea until I had got his papers, and then I knew something more.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I ask the Commissioners leave either to ask him the question, or to call the Commissioners attention to the fact that it is stated in the report that he is well known to the police as a determined thief, and a desperate character. That is what is added by these two gentlemen, Pilgrim and Hammond; and yet this experienced policeman says he knew nothing about the man.

(Chairman.) That is argument.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You do not seem to follow what the witness said. He said: "When I got the papers about him then I knew something more."

Sergeant WILLIAM ROBERTS, 17 G, sworn.

Sergeant W. Roberts.

12697. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you section sergeant in the G Division?—Yes.

12698. Did you relieve Station Sergeant Hollands on the night when Andrews was brought in?—Yes.

12699. Just look at the station book. (Book handed to Witness.) What time did you come on duty?—Ten o'clock at night.

12700. What time did you relieve Sergeant Hollands?—Two o'clock in the morning.

12701. What were you doing between ten and two?—Out patrolling.

12702. Do you and Sergeant Hollands interchange duties?—Yes, at two o'clock.

12703. You would be patrolling when he is at the station, and when you are at the station he is patrolling?—That is so.

12704. Did you sign the book when you came on duty and relieved Sergeant Hollands at two o'clock?—Yes.

12705. Is that shown there?—Yes.

12706. How long did you remain on station duty?—From 2 a.m. to 6 a.m.

12707. When you arrived and relieved Sergeant Hollands was Andrews then in the cell?—Yes.

12708. Did you know anything about what happened up to that time of your own personal knowledge?—No.

12709. But he was reported to you as being in the cell?—Yes.

12710. After you had come on duty did someone come to bail him out?—Yes.

12711. Look at the bail book. (Book handed to Witness.) What time was he bailed out?—2.30 a.m.

12712. At that time was Sergeant Hollands in the station?—No.

12713. Is there any foundation for the statement that was made by those witnesses yesterday that you and Sergeant Hollands were both in the station when the man was bailed out, and that they spoke to you both?—None whatever.

12714. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Is the time entered in that bail book?—Yes.

12715. Was there a clock in the station?—Yes.

12716. You are so exact about that "2.30." I did not know whether you were particular to a minute or two. With regard to this report of yours, one of the reports referred to as being added to——?—I have not made a report.

12717. You made no report at all?—No.

12718. It is Sergeant Robertson. You were not called upon to do so?—No.

12719. Did you come from your patrol to relieve Sergeant Hollands?—I leave the station at 10 o'clock; I work round to get to the station by 2 a.m. to relieve him.

12720. If anything detains you you would not be there quite as soon sometimes?—I had nothing to detain me on this night. I went under the railway arches in Old Street as the clock in the church was striking two, and I would be at the station door a minute past two.

12721. You were a little after two?—About a minute. The chimes of the clock had not finished when I got to the station door in any case.

12722. But they were striking when you passed under the railway arch in Old Street. That is about 250 yards, is it not?—Oh, no.

12723. Are you sure?—Positive.

12724. I have been there several times. Do you think it was about 250 yards?—No, certainly not.

12725. How far?—I should not call it 50 yards.

12726. You were a little after two?—A minute after two.

12727. Was there any object in putting down the time when you arrived, because it was only your duty to relieve. I suppose Sergeant Hollands took your place and you his?—That is right.

12728. He was not going off duty?—No.

12729. You would not be so very strict to a minute or two?—Yes. I say the clock had not finished chiming when I went up the steps of the station.

12730. You would not be obliged to be very strict?—I should not go in five minutes before two, but I should work so as to get to the station as near as two o'clock as possible.

12731. You might be detained. I do not say you were on this occasion?—Naturally if anything occurred that wanted my assistance in the streets I should stop.

12732. When you got there it was two o'clock, or a minute or two after?—It was not more than a minute in any case.

12733. Is there any object in putting exactly the time when a man is bailed out?—Yes, we always put the exact time when a man is bailed out.

12734. Not to the minute?—I went by the charge room clock. I do not know whether that was exact or not.

12735. But approximately it is enough for you to say half-past two or a quarter past two, or three o'clock, or whatever it was?—About half past two.

12736. There is no reason for putting 2.30 or 2.20 or 2.16?—I should do so if I looked at the clock. I looked at the clock, and it was exactly 2.30.

12737. Were you in court yesterday when the witnesses identified you?—Yes.

12738. Not before that had you come into court?—I have been in court all the time.

12739. You heard what they said?—Yes.

12740. Do you say you did not see any one of these witnesses?—I saw the man Smith, because he came to the station with the bailee, and he said: "I have come with this man to bail out Andrews." I said: "Are you the bailee?" He said: "No." I said: "You wait out in the corridor," and then he went out in the corridor.

12741. What time was that?—I should say about twenty-five past two.

12742. You kept him waiting in the corridor?—Yes.

12743. Then did you send for the prisoner?—I did.

12744. And he came upstairs?—He came out of the cell passage. There were no steps to come up.

12745. There were two stairs?—No, there are no stairs. The cell is on a line with the charge room.

12746. That was close by?—Yes.

12747. You brought him out at once?—The gaoler brought him out.

12748. At once?—Yes.

12749. How long did it take—about a minute to bring him out?—I could not exactly say. It might have been some minutes.

Sergeant W. Roberts.

25 Oct. 1903.

12750. Would it take more?—I should not say so.

12751. That would make it about 27 minutes past, would it not?—Yes.

12752. Did you see Sergeant Hollands go away?—Yes; he went out of the office about eight or nine minutes past two; anyway, it was not beyond ten minutes past two.

12753. You did not look at the clock?—No.

12754. You would not have any reason to?—No.

12755. He had got some little business in the office before he went, leaving you in charge?—He had no business to do, only to go and visit the prisoners.

12756. Then he went out of the office after he had looked at the prisoners?—Yes.

12757. Did he go into Andrews' cell?—No, he did not.

12758. Would it not be his duty to?—No.

12759. Did you make the remark stated by the witnesses yesterday, "I do not know anything about it"?—No, I did not.

12760. You heard what they said?—I heard what they said.

12761. A complaint was made about Andrews being knocked about?—Not to me.

12762. That is what was said, and you said: "I know nothing about it"?—They made no complaint to me whatever. I never used those words.

12763. If they had made it you would know nothing about it?—No, because I was not there.

12764. If they had said that, that is exactly what you would have said?—I do not know that I should have said that.

12765. You might have used different words, but it is what you would have said in effect?—I do not know that.

12766. Do you suggest anything else you could have said?—I might have said: "If you have got any complaint I will deal with it," which is the usual thing to do. But the man did not make any complaint to me.

12767. As a matter of fact, you did not know and could not have known of any affair which had taken place between you and anyone previously?—No; I was not near the station after ten o'clock until two.

12768. Do you suggest that these witnesses have been telling an untruth, and a very serious untruth, amounting to perjury?—I do not know what you mean.

12769. They said when a complaint was made by Andrews: "You have cut me about—this is your doing, you coward," that you said: "I know nothing about it"?—I did not make that remark.

12770. You heard what was said?—Yes.

12771. You say you did not make any remark of that kind?—I did not.

12772. But you remember seeing the parties there?—I remember seeing the man Smith there, and asking him to walk outside where the two women were waiting in the corridor. My back was turned; I do not know whether they were there or not.

(Chairman.) You say: "All these witnesses," but I only find three.

12773. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I was referring to three. Of course, Keough was not called. Mrs. Bassett said you said: "Do not blame it on to me, I know nothing about it." You say you did not say that at all?—No, I did not.

12774. But you saw the persons there who made the statement?—They may have been in the corridor in the police station. I am not sure. I did not see the woman there until Mrs. Bassett came in to bail out her son at 2.40 a.m., and I believe I took his bail Possibly they may have been in the corridor outside, which is used practically as a waiting room.

12775. Was Bassett bailed after Andrews?—Yes.

12776. Mrs. Bassett came in before Andrews came out?—She may have. I am not in a position to say.

Sergeant W. Roberts.

25 Oct. 1906.

12777. You did see one of them, at any rate?—I saw Smith, and asked him to wait outside.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I ask the Commissioners to look at the bail book, which is signed by Andrews. The man said he was dazed.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No; he did not say he was dazed when he came out of the cells, but before he was taken in.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) How long have you been in the Service?—Fifteen years on the 17th December. Prior to that I had four years in the Hampshire Constabulary, or just on four years.

12778. How long have you been a sergeant?—About three and a half years.

12779. (Mr. Dickinson.) What time do you say it was that Sergeant Hollands left there? You came in at two o'clock, and then I understand you and he went round the cells?—Yes.

12780. What time do you say he left the office?—I should say it was eight minutes past two. It would take us four or five minutes to go round the cells. One prisoner did not speak, and we had to undo the cell door and have at look at him, which is usual, in order to see that he was all right.

12781. You are positive that Hollands had left before this woman came?—I am sure he had.

Police-constable CHARLES IRWIN, 335 G, sworn.

P.C. C. Irwin.

12782. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you Police-constable 335 of the G Division, and were you on duty as gaoler when William Andrews was brought to the station in Old Street by Police-constables Dawson and Peck?—Yes.

12783. How did Andrews behave when he was brought in?—He was resisting the constables and shouting.

12784. What was the station sergeant doing at the time?—He was engaged at the desk taking a charge.

12785. Did you hear him give any orders with regard to Andrews?—Yes, to take him outside on the landing.

12786. What was done upon that?—Two officers took him on the landing.

12787. Where were you at that time?—I was in the charge room.

12788. Could you see Andrews after he was taken out on to the landing?—Yes, I could.

12789. Did you see him brought back into the charge room to be charged?—Yes.

12791. You could see him the whole time?—Yes.

12792. Was he assaulted at all by anybody?—No.

12793. Was he taken down to the basement?—No.

12794. When brought back and charged did he make any complaint?—I did not hear him. No, he made no complaint.

12795. Was Constable Manning there at that time?—I did not see him at all all the evening.

12796. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) But you were there when he was bailed out, were you not?—Yes.

12797. Did you see Smith there?—I saw Smith.

12798. Did you see Mrs. Bassett and Miss Barrett?—I did not see her at the time that Smith came there with the other man to bail Andrews out.

12799. When he came out of the cells what did he say?—I heard him making use of offensive language to the sergeant.

12800. Which sergeant was that?—Sergeant Roberts, who bailed him out.

12801. You heard him make use of offensive language to the sergeant?—Yes.

12802. He seemed to have some grievance against the sergeant, do you mean?—I do not know. I did not hear what he was directing his language to him for.

12803. You say you had him under observation when he was on the landing?—Yes.

12804. Could you see him?—I could see him through the glass door.

12805. You were looking at him all the time?—I was.

12806. What was he doing?—He was resisting the constables, and I could hear him shouting.

12807. What was he shouting?—A sort of yawling noise. I could not describe it.

12808. Not a crying noise, as if he was in pain at all?—No.

12809. Just an angry noise?—I could not describe it.

12810. That took place all the time he was out there?—Yes.

12811. Could you hear what he said?—I could not.

12812. You could not hear what was said?—No.

12813. Is it your duty to search the prisoners when they come in?—Yes.

12814. Did you search Andrews?—I did.

12815. What did you find upon him?—I think I took a box of matches from him. That is all I took away from him.

12816. What was there on him besides that?—I could not tell you clearly now. That is all I took from him, and a handkerchief.

12817. Then it was not correct what the constable said?—I took the matches from him, I mean—I did not take the handkerchief from him.

12818. You said you did?—I corrected my error.

12819. When I told you what the constable had already said about it you then correct it. You said you took a handkerchief from him, but now you say you did not take it?—No, I did not.

12820. What was his condition when you took him into the cells?—His face was very red, and he had a cut over his right eye.

12821. Anything else about his clothes?—I did not notice.

12822. Did he smell of beer?—I did not take that notice, and I did not put my face close to him to smell his breath.

12823. Did his clothes smell—were they wet?—No, I did not notice.

12824. Did you see the cut over his right eye?—Yes, some dried blood over his eye.

12825. That is when he came into the station?—You asked me when he came up from the cells.

12826. No. I thought you saw him when he came to the station?—Yes.

12827. You searched him when you took him to the cells?—Yes.

12828. When you took him to the cells you searched him after he was charged?—Yes.

12829. He had got dried blood over his eye?—Dried blood and the other kind of blood, too. There was some damp blood. Dry and damp blood.

12830. Were you present in the charge room when the charge was taken?—Yes, I was.

12831. Did you hear what he said to the sergeant?—I did not take any notice of that, as I was otherwise engaged.

12832. Did you see Sergeant Roberts that night?—I saw him after two o'clock—just after two.

12833. What did he do when he came in. Did he come into the cells with Sergeant Hollands?—Yes, and I accompanied the two officers round to visit the prisoners.

12834. What time was that?—Just after two.

12835. Were there many prisoners?—There were three or four. I could not tell you exactly now.

12836. You said you visited the prisoners, but I thought you did not visit them unless they called for you?—You visit them without being called.

12837. Do you go into their cells?—No.

12838. You look through the door?—Yes.

12839. You did so on this occasion?—Yes.

12840. How long did that take?—I could not say exactly. It may have been a minute or a minute and a half.

12841. Did you look at the time when Sergeant Hollands went away?—I did not.

12842. You do not know what time he did go away?—He left just after two, I know that.

12843. He only came in at two?—Just after two. I would not be certain to a minute, but a few minutes after he left.

12844. A quarter after two?—No, not so late as that.

12845. Ten minutes after two?—No, I should not think it would be as late as that.

12846. We have just been told that he stayed ten minutes there?—I cannot be certain. I know it was not long after two. P.C. C. Irwin. 25 Oct. 1906.

12847. You had no reason, then, to consider the matter, had you?—No.

12848. Did you hear any talking about this case the next day?—I heard talk of it when I was called upon to make the report.

12849. The very next day, Sunday?—No, I did not.

12850. You heard no talking about the case?—No.

12851. Have you seen any of the persons who have given evidence?—Do you mean as regards my brother officers?

12852-3. Oh, no, I mean the witnesses on the other side?—No, I have not.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have the four constables here who were in the charge room at the time in charge of the other cases, and I propose to call them unless the Commissioners express a wish to the contrary.

Police-constable JOHN SWAIT, 391 G, sworn.

12854. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are a constable, 391 of the G Division, and how long have you been in the force?—Fourteen years.

12855. On this night were you in this charge room, having brought a charge in yourself?—Yes.

12856. Which charge was it you brought in?—A case of burglary.

12857. Were you alone concerned with that, or was there another man with you?—I was the only constable in the case.

12858. Were you there when Andrews was brought in?—Yes.

12859. How was he behaving?—He was very noisy. He was struggling, trying to release himself from the two constables.

12860. Did you hear a sergeant say anything?—I did. The sergeant said he was noisy, and he asked him to be quiet. That did not seem to have any effect, so he said, as near as I can say, "For goodness sake take that man outside," pointing to the landing.

12861. Then he was taken out?—He was taken outside.

12862. Were you in the charge room when he came back?—Yes.

12863. Did you notice when he came in on the first occasion whether he had any mark on his face?—Yes, I noticed this mark on his eye.

12864. Did you see or hear anything or any assault outside?—No, I could not see him outside.

12865. Is it true that a number of constables accompanied him out of the charge room?—No, there were only two constables, who had him in custody, who took him out.

12866. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Any constable in plain clothes who happened to be outside could have come round by the other door without going into the charge room?—No, not at that time. That door would be locked.

12867. Would it be locked on this occasion?—I do not know. It should be.

12868. You say you saw the cut over his eye?—Yes.

12869. Did you see any other marks on his face?—No, not that I noticed.

12870. No other mark except the cut over the right eye?—That was the only thing that drew my attention as he passed. P.C. J. Swait.

12871. Did you give evidence before the Magistrate?—On one occasion.

12872. Would that be the second occasion?—No, on the first occasion in the case of Manning.

12873. Did you hear any noise when he was outside the door?—Yes, I could hear a noise of persons out there loudly talking.

12874. Was that the noise you heard?—Yes, as if they were struggling out there. The noise we hear occasionally in a case.

12875. No cry of pain?—No, I did not put it down to anybody being in pain.

12876. No groans or moans?—No.

12877. Nothing of that sort?—No.

12878. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you had done with your charge what did you do? Was your prisoner taken away to the cells?—My prisoner was put back in the cells.

12879. Did you put your prisonner back?—I put my prisoner back because the gaoler was engaged at the time.

12880. Did you go in the cells through a different door from that out of which this man had been taken by the two constables?—Oh, yes. The door I went through was across that side of the charge room, and the door they went through was over here. (Describing.)

12881. Did you come back?—Yes, I had a little formality to go through in my case, because in a case of burglary you have to take the descriptions and hand it on to the sergeant, so I had to remain there.

12882. Did you hear the sergeant call Andrews and Peck and Dawson in?—I could not say that I heard him call them in.

12883. Were they in when you came back?—They came in while I was standing there.

12884. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I ought to have asked you whether Manning was there?—No, not the whole of the time that I was there.

Police-constable HERBERT BARTRAM, 41 G, sworn.

(Chairman.) Is Bartram's evidence to the same effect?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Chairman.) Then you might ask him whether he agrees with the last witness.

12885. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Were you in the station on the night of the 29th July, at about half-past twelve in the early morning?—Yes.

12886. Did you see what took place with regard to Andrews?—I saw him brought in.

12887. Did you hear the last witness give his evidence?—Yes. P.C. H. Bartram.

12888. Is that correct so far as you know?—As far as I know.

12889. And did you make a report on the subject on the 17th August?—I think it was on that date, but I am not quite certain of the day.

12890. You made a report and signed it?—Yes.

12891. Did you see anything about Andrews' face when he came in?—I saw a mark just here on his face.

P.-C. H. Bartram.
25 Oct. 1906.

(Describing.) There appeared to be some blood on his face partly dry and partly moist.

12892. Did you see his face when he came back again?—Yes.

12893. Was it any different to what it was when he came in?—No, not that I could see; not in the least.

12894. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) You say he had a cut over the right eye, and that was all?—That is all I know. I was not very close to him.

12895. You say also in your report he had a cut over the right eye and blood over his face?—Yes, he had. It appeared to have come from that cut.

12896. You say blood on the face?—Yes.

12897. That was when he was placed in the dock?—Yes, I think it was.

12898. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did you hear the sergeant call them in?—Yes, I think he called them in to the charge room again.

12899. How did he call them in?—He said "Bring them inside now." I believe those were the words he used exactly.

12900. Did he open the door?—I believe the police-constable on reserve opened the door, if I remember right.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I will now call P.-c. Williams.

(Chairman.) Is his evidence to the same effect?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) To the same effect.

(Chairman.) Unless Mr. Schultess-Young wishes him called we do not.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I shall not trouble to cross-examine very much, but I should like one or two more to be called.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is only with regard to these two constables out of the four. We have had two before us, and the only thing is whether you want the other two.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I want P.-c. West called.

Police-constable THOMAS WILLIAMS, 204 G, sworn.

P.C. T. Williams.

12901. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Were you in the charge room when Andrews was brought in?—Yes.

12902. How did you get there? Did you bring a charge in?—I was there in connection with the charge taken previous to that—Obeney and Bassett.

12903. Have you heard what the last witnesses have said with regard to what happened in the charge room?—Yes.

12904. Is that accurate?—It is.

12905. Did you see the mark on the eye when he came in?—Yes.

12906. Is there any foundation for the suggestion that Manning was there?—None whatever.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I have no question.

Police-constable HUGH WEST, 263 G, sworn.

P.C. H. West.

12907. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you Police-constable 263 of the G Division?—Yes.

12908. Were you in the station when Andrews was brought there?—Yes.

12909. You have heard the evidence of the last three witnesses as to what took place in the charge room?—Yes.

12910. Is that correct?—Yes.

12911. Was Manning there?—No.

12912. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Do you remember anything before Mr. Cluer with regard to Bassett's case?—Yes.

12913. Who was the Inspector in charge of the police court then?—I could not tell you that; he was a stranger to me.

12914. To your knowledge was any report made of anything that took place in the station on that day?—No.

12915. You are the constable, are you not, who Mr. Cluer charged with endeavouring to mislead him with regard to a prisoner?—Not exactly.

12916. I asked you that question in the police court, and you said "Yes." Have you anything to add to it now?—Mr. Cluer did not quite understand the evidence that I gave him.

12917. Did not Mr. Cluer say, "Why mislead me into believing that both were arrested on the spot where you say they were disorderly? I do not believe the charge after that." Did he not say that to you and dismiss the charge?—No, not both of them, but one of them—Bassett.

12918. Then Mr. Cluer did accuse you of endeavouring to mislead him with regard to the prisoner?—Mr. Cluer misunderstood my words.

12919. Was any report made of that, I want to know?—Yes, there was.

12920. To whom?—I was called on to make a report.

12921. About that particular thing?—I was called upon to make a report on the evidence that I gave in the court.

12922. You were also called as a witness on behalf of Manning, were you not?—Yes.

12923. Before that other matter had been cleared up?—After that had been cleared up.

12924. It had been cleared up, had it?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) We do not know what had taken place at the police court. Is that observation of Mr. Cluer made in another case on the same day?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It was the charge this constable was in charge of.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Obeney and Bassett's charge?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes. I have the shorthand note of the constable's answer, if necessary.

12925. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You made a charge against the man Bassett?—Against both of them.

12926. And you gave evidence before Mr. Cluer about that?—Yes.

12927. And Mr. Cluer made some observation to you about your evidence?—Yes.

12928. I think I understood you to say that you think he did not understand what you had said?—I do not think I made him properly understand my evidence as to the arrest of Bassett.

12929. In consequence of the Magistrate's remark were you called upon by your superiors to make a report?—Yes.

12930. On that matter of Bassett's?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I will try and get that report for you, Sir, if you wish to see it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not quite understand what it is that he is supposed to have misled Mr. Cluer in.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) "Mr. Cluer (to the constable): Did you arrest him at the station? The constable: I arrested him. Mr. Cluer: Answer the question. Did he walk to the station, and was he taken into custody at the door? The constable: Yes. Mr. Cluer: Then why mislead me into believing that both were arrested on the spot where you say they were disorderly? I do not believe the charge after that."

12931. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had you ever told Mr. Cluer they were both arrested at the same place?—Yes.

12932. Just explain in your own way what happened?—I arrested both the prisoners together, and in the struggle Bassett got away from me, and I got the assistance of two other constables and handed Obeney over to them. When I got to the station Bassett was outside, and I arrested him, or re-arrested him, at the station. Mr. Cluer understood me to say that I arrested him at the station.

12933. You originally arrested both together, and then one got away and you re-arrested him at the station?—That is quite right.

12934-5. You did not make those facts plain to Mr. Cluer. Is that your view of it?—Yes.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Here is the actual shorthand note taken at the time at the police court, and it is by the purest accident I happened to have it. (Handing document to the Commissioners.)

(Chairman.) This is in shorthand. It is not transcribed.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Shall I read the whole of the newspaper report?

(Mr. Dickinson.) Can we have the newspaper report about the Andrew's charge? You have said there was a newspaper report of the charge against Andrews on the first day.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have not seen that.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I have that here.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There are no notes of evidence.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There are no notes of evidence, as far as we know, of what took place before Mr. Cluer on the first day when the charge was made against Andrews.

(Chairman.) That was on the 30th July.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Here is the report that appeared in the "Daily Telegraph" on the 31st July, 1906: "William Andrews, about 40 years of age, respectably dressed, was charged, at the same court, with disorderly conduct by fighting, and with assaulting Police-constable Wilson 371 G. The constable said that at 12.15 on Saturday, in Luke Street, Finsbury, he saw prisoner and another man fighting. A woman joined in and attacked the prisoner, and when witness had separated them prisoner passed him and struck the woman. He then arrested prisoner, who struck him in the mouth. Prisoner denied the charge of assault, and said that he was first attacked by the man, then had beer thrown in his face by the woman, and when he struck back he was seized by the constable. Pointing to the condition of his face, with a lint and surgical strapping over the right brow, a bad black eye, and a badly bruised and swollen cheek, prisoner said that before the charge was entered against him at the station, a police sergeant and three or four constables took him by an underground passage, where they beat him about the face and knocked him down, causing the injuries he now showed. He added that he had witnesses to prove he had gone into the station without a mark upon him, but when he was bailed at three o'clock in the morning, he had to go to St. Bartholomew's Hospital for his injuries. He had to have the wound over his forehead sewn up. He said there was some ill-feeling against him on the part of the police because he had had to report constables who interfered with him because there was one or two little things against him. Mr. Cluer said the prisoner's complaint was no part of the charge before him, but he would be glad to investigate it if brought before him in another form—by summonses. He was bound to say he had heard too often the allegation of police violence at the station. The assault charged by the constable was a very trifling one, and he ordered the prisoner to be bound over to keep the peace. Prisoner asked if he could take any steps for the assault on himself, and was told he could apply later."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is there anything to indicate how many witnesses were called before Mr. Cluer?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I can get the notes, Sir, if you wish it. We have not asked for them, and did not know that they were material.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) May I call your attention, Sir, to the fact that this document which is put before the Commission as being a shorthand note of something said by this constable reads thus: "Police-constable West"—that is in longhand—"The constable who was reprimanded by Mr. Cluer for trying to mislead him." It is obviously not a shorthand note of anything that was said at all, but some observation of the person who makes that note in shorthand.

P.-C. H. West.

25 Oct. 1906.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That note came from the reporter of the court, and was among my papers.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is what it says.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If that is correctly read by my learned friend, Mr. Muir, somebody is responsible.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) This was not taken at the time when Mr. Cluer dealt with the man in the way mentioned. This was taken at the hearing of the case against Manning, with regard to Andrews, when I cross-examined West as to whether he was not the constable who was reprimanded by Mr. Cluer, and that, I take it, is a short statement of the effect of it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) As pointed out by Mr. Muir, that cannot be a shorthand note of what took place, because it begins by a shorthand description of what the man is.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I have more of them here.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do not you think you should not hand up any notes which you say are shorthand notes? We have that one illustration which shows that they are not reliable in any way.

(Chairman.) I took that from you because I understood that it was a shorthand note of what had been said before Mr. Cluer.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No, I tried to explain what it was a shorthand note of. It says, "Swait, West, Williams, and Bartram." These are all notes of the reporter in the court, and this is what they formerly said.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Just follow for a moment. I do not think you appreciate what Mr. Muir read. Obviously, from what he read, if it is a correct transcript of the shorthand note, that cannot be a shorthand note that was taken at the time, because it begins by saying "This is the man who was reprimanded by Mr. Cluer." Nobody ever said that.

(Chairman.) That is all that it says.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That is the very question I asked the constable. I said, "Are you the constable who was reprimanded by Mr. Cluer for endeavouring to mislead him?" and the constable said "Yes." Then I sat down and said, "Then I ask you no more questions." And that is evidently a note of that.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The witness admitted it. I do not know how the shorthand note adds to what we have already heard.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I could not read it. I did not know what was in shorthand.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Why was it handed to us?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It was handed to you as being a shorthand note of what the constable said before Mr. Cluer.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No, how could it be, when there were the names of West and Bartram and Williams on the same paper?

(Chairman.) I should not have looked at it, but I understood it to be a shorthand note of what took place before Mr. Cluer.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No, of what the constable admitted he said before Mr. Cluer.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is a misunderstanding about it, because on the note that has been handed up there are the names of the other witnesses who were called.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should ask you to look, if you think it worth while, at the report of the Bassett case before Mr. Cluer, because that will show how the misunderstanding arose, and why the Magistrate made the observation.

(Chairman.) Police-constable West has been asked about it, and he has given his explanation. That is all we have to do with it.

Police-constable WILLIAM MANNING, 226 G, sworn.

P.C. W. Manning. 25 Oct. 1906.

12936. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are Police-constable No. 226 of the G Division?—Yes.

12937. How long have you been in the Force?—Nine years.

12942. On Saturday, the 28th July last, were you on day duty?—On early-point duty.

12943. When did you go off duty?—After 9 o'clock at night. I was relieved at 9 o'clock.

12945. How do you get to your section house where you sleep. How did you go that Saturday night from the street. I suppose you were out?—Yes, I went for a walk.

12946. When you came in how did you get to your quarters?—Through a side gate in Old Street, apart from the police station; a private gate.

12947. Is that the ordinary way for men living in the barracks there to go in?—Yes, past the canteen.

12948. You go through the canteen?—Yes, past that.

12949. And up to your quarters?—Yes.

12950. What time did you come in that night?—Half-past 11, as near as I can say.

12952. What had you and he been doing?—A little bit of shopping.

12953. You cater for yourselves to some extent in the barracks?—Yes.

12954. You got in at what time?—Half-past 11 we called in the station mess. We had a drink there, and then proceeded upstairs.

12955. What time did you get upstairs?—Into the bedroom about 5 minutes to 12, as near as I can say.

12956. Do you remember whether anybody went upstairs with you at the same time?—Yes.

12957. Who were they?—Police-constable Percival and Police-constable Lane, 379.

12958. There is a room there called the brushing room?—Yes.

12959. Is that for brushing your uniforms and boots?—Brushing and cleaning.

12960. Did you go in there?—I went in there and changed my boots.

12961. And after changing your boots, what did you do?—I went straight upstairs and into bed.

12962. You sleep in cubicles there, I think?—Yes.

12963. Who was in the next cubicle to you?—Police-constable 340 on one side, and Police-constable Lynch, 91, on the other.

12964. Did you hear Lane at all that night?—I spoke to Lane.

12965. Did you see him?—I saw him.

12966. Where did you see him?—I accompanied him to the dormitory, and I left him at the dormitory. He went into the lavatory, which is on the same floor, I turned into the dormitory and he passed by my bunk to get to his.

12967. Did you see him passing?—Yes.

12968. Did you speak to him at that time?—Yes.

12969. What were you doing when you spoke to him?—Undressing.

12970. What did you say to him?—I said, "Don't forget to call me in the morning, I am on leave, and I want to go out early."

12971. The next day was your leave?—Yes, the Sunday.

12972. What time would that be, as near as you could judge?—Just after 12.

12973. How long was it after that that you got into bed?—Directly.

12974. When did you get up?—I came down just before 10 the next morning.

12975. You had been in your cubicle all that time?—Yes.

12976. Were you on the station steps at all on the night of Saturday, the 28th, or the early morning of the 29th?—No, not after I was relieved from duty at 9 o'clock, when I went in.

12977. When you are off duty do you wear your uniform or not?—No; plain clothes.

12978. Always?—Yes.

12979. That is the rule?—We always do.

12980. On this Saturday evening you were in plain clothes?—Yes, after 9 o'clock I went off duty.

12981. When did you first hear of Andrews being charged at all?—I heard it talked about in the section house amongst ourselves.

12982. Do you wear a ring at all?—I never have in my life.

12983. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You were asked when did you hear of Andrews being charged, and you did not answer that question?—On the following day, the Sunday.

12984. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You say you have never worn a ring in your life?—Never.

12985. When did you first know that anybody was making a charge against you?—After they came and picked me out on the Tuesday.

12986. At the special parade in plain clothes on the 31st July?—Yes, on the Tuesday.

12987. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Was there anything very peculiar in Andrews being arrested that called for comment?—I do not know about peculiar. He was well known to us fellows, and we talked about it.

12988. He was well known to you fellows. In your evidence in chief you say he is a well-known thief?—So he is.

12989. That is your feeling about him?—Certainly he is.

12990. Do not you know he has been trying to get his living honestly for the last two years?—I do not know where.

12991. Do you know he has been in the same employment the last two years?—I do not know where he has done it.

12992. Do you know his employer's son came up to give evidence on his behalf?—There was a man who gave evidence.

12993. He has never been convicted of crime since he has been released two years and more ago?—He has not been convicted, but he has been tried and acquitted.

12994. He was also taken to the station in Old Street and the Inspector refused to take the charge?—I do not know anything about that.

12995. Do not you know that was given in evidence by one of the constables?—I have heard it to-day.

12996. Whom did you hear it from?—I heard he went to the station with P.C. Dawson on one occasion—something about a shilling and a woman.

12997. We have not heard anything about that yet?—Yes, you heard it this morning.

12998. I knew nothing about it, and know nothing about it now. You have no reason to say he is not working for a respectable man at the present moment?—I have no reason to say that he is.

12999. Is not that trifling with the matter. You know his employer's son came to give evidence?—I am not always with him.

13000. So far as you know as a policeman he is in respectable employment at the present time?—I would not say.

13001. You do not want to say perhaps?—I would not.

13002. What was there about this case which would call special attention to it?—Nothing, only "Old Skinner got pinched last night"

13003. That is the way you spoke about it?—"What was that for," "Drunk and disorderly and assaulting Dawson." "Oh."

13004. That is the talk you speak of in your report?—Just ordinary conversation.

13005. You said "I did not know the man had been charged till the following day, Sunday, when I heard some of the police-constables in the section-house speaking about it. That is how they were speaking about it"?—Yes.

13006. Nothing else about his being knocked about?—Nothing said about his being knocked about.

13007. Nothing said about his being knocked about—that is not what they were talking about on Sunday?—No, I heard nothing about that.

13008. You heard nothing about having cuts about him, or anything of the sort?—No.

13009. Do you know Christopher Briggs?—What is he?

13010. Do you know him by name?—I do not know, I am sure.

13011. Standing at the corner of Norton Folgate?—A bookmaker.

13012. You know him now then—yes, a bookmaker?—I know a man of the name of Briggs a bookmaker.

13013. Are you often in his company?—I have never been in his company.

13014. Never been in his company—that you swear?—I do.

13015. That you swear?—I do.

13016. You have had nothing whatever to do with him at all?—I have never been in the man's company. I know this man by seeing him brought into our place. That is all.

13017. He has been brought there?—Yes, lots of times.

13018. Has he been charged?—Yes.

13019. Over and over again?—Over and over again.

13020. And still stands at the same old corner?—I could not say. I have not been down there on duty for some time.

13021. When did you see him last?—Last month I expect.

13022. That is to say in September?—Yes.

13023. Not since?—No.

13024. That you are quite sure of?—Positive.

13025. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You say he has been charged. Has he been convicted?—Yes, for street betting times out of number—five or six times this year, I should think.

13026. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Do you know Andrews' brother?—Yes.

13027. You are not on very good terms with him, are you?—I do not know what you call good terms. What do you mean by "good terms"?

13028. Not very friendly with him?—I am not very friendly with any of the lot.

13029. You have nothing to say against the brother, have you. He has never been convicted. He is an honest man earning his living honestly?—Ahem.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Are you not rather inviting answers which are a very long way from this case and do not seem to be of very much use?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) It may be. We had statements made in the police court which seemed to show this witness was antagonistic to the whole family, the respectable ones as well as the unfortunate ones. P.-C. W. Manning. 25 Oct. 1906.

(Chairman.) If you ask a question you must take the answer.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I will follow the wish of Mr. Rufus Isaacs.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is not my wish, but I am merely suggesting to you that I should have thought it desirable not to put the question.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I have ascertained the man is respectable or else I should not have done it.

(Chairman.) The constable has hesitated as to whether he is or not, and we shall not try that issue.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) He has hesitated very much, but it shows his animus if he hesitates.

(Chairman.) No, because I do not know whether his hesitation may not be right.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I ask you the question whether he has ever been convicted or charged?—Not to my knowledge, but I have never known him to do any work.

13030. That is what you said before. When I asked you whether Andrews was not in respectable employment you said you were not always there to see. Now you are not always there to see whether his brother does work or not?—I do not live with him. He cannot do much work if he is loafing about our ground, can he?

13031. You do not know whether he does work in the day or not?—I could not say.

13032. He might be a printer doing work at night and walking about in the day?—He might be anything.

13033. Do not you know that he is in good work with Merritt, of Motley Avenue, Curtain Road, glass bevellers?—I could not say.

13034. You say nothing about it one way or the other?—No.

13035. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I should like to understand one thing from you. We have been told you are called Charley Wood?—Yes, all the thieves of Hoxton know me by that name.

13036. Why Charley Wood?—It is my nickname.

13037. There is a reason as a rule for a nickname. Why is it?—I remember on one occasion there was a gang outside a public house in Drysdale Street and I ordered them away. Some of them demurred about going—they considered it as if they would not go. I said "Charley Wood will do you a little bit of good"—that was my stick.

13038. Then "Charley Wood" means your truncheon?—Yes, that is what I call it.

13039. Is it peculiar to you, or is it often called that—is it a name you have given it?—A sort of phrase.

13040. A sort of pet name?—That is it.

13041. (Mr. Dickinson.) What did you mean when you cried out "Don't forget to call me in the morning; I am on leave; I want to get up in good time"?—That was on going to bed. In the morning they called me, but I thought I would have an extra half-hour, and then I laid in bed till ten o'clock.

13042. I ask you, first of all, what you meant by asking them to call you, as you wanted to get up in good time?—That was on the Sunday. Being on leave, I wanted to get out before dinner.

13043. What hour did you mean to get up?—About half-past seven or eight o'clock.

13044. And yet you did not get up till ten o'clock?—I did not get up till just on ten o'clock.

Sergeant ROBINSON, 22 G, sworn.

13045. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you the sergeant who on Saturday night, the 28th July, had the section house roll called?—I am. Sergeant Robinson.

13046. What is the object of that. Is it to ascertain whether the men are in?—Yes.

13047. How often is it done—in the day or night?—It is done every night.

13048. What time did you call the roll call on that Saturday night?—I commenced about twelve o'clock.

Sergeant Robinson.
25 Oct. 1906.

13049. Is twelve o'clock the time to call it?—Yes.

13050. Where did you call it?—In the dormitory where the men sleep.

13051. And about what time would you reach Manning's name in calling over the names?—About ten minutes past twelve.

13052. And at that time where was he?—He was in his bed.

13053. How many men live in this section house?—Thirty-seven single men.

13054. Is there a communication from the section house into the police station?—No, there is no communication. They have to go out of the section house and go round.

13055. In which street is the entrance to the police station?—Old Street.

13056. Is the entrance into the section house in the same street?—The same street.

13057. And about how far away?—It is about, I should think, 50 feet from the station door. There is a side gate that leads to the background, and then off to the section house.

13058. So there is a gate leading into the section house premises about 50 feet from the main entrance to the station?—Yes.

13059. You have to go through this gate and go back some distance to get to the door of the section house?—Yes, round the background to the section house.

13060. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) You mean there are some means of communication. Any man in the dormitory might come down that way and get into the station house?—There is a door leading from this landing or steps into the station.

13061. Did you ever know any man after he had gone to his cubicle come downstairs again?—No, except for the purpose of going to the urinal or lavatory.

13062. Never?—Not to my knowledge.

13063. It is never done—no man ever thinks of doing such a thing?—I do not know of it.

13064. I daresay you may have some explanation of this, but this is your report, made on the 31st July?—Yes, I believe so.

13065. Whose writing is that in pencil at the end of the report?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is Mr. Barker, the solicitor's, writing, the member of Messrs. Wontner's firm, who made a note on it.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) "I finished calling the roll."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That, no doubt, is an answer he gave to the solicitor.

13066. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Do you know about any of these witnesses being spoken to?—No.

13067. We had it before, when you gave evidence at Old Street, that some of the witnesses, Mrs. Webster particularly, were seen. Who saw her?—I do not know anything about that.

13068. Who saw Mrs. Webster?—I could not say anything about that.

13069. Do not you know anything about that?—No.

13070. Have you heard nothing about it?—Nothing whatever.

13071. You know, as a fact, that her husband and herself were seen?—I do not know anything about it.

Police-constable JOHN FRASER, 13 G R, sworn.

P.-C. J. Fraser.

13072. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are No. 13, G Reserve?—Yes.

13073. How long have you been in the Force?—Twelve and a half years.

13074. Had you been at the Britannia Theatre on the night of Saturday, 28th July?—I had.

13075. On special duty?—Yes.

13076. When you came back to the section house did you go into the brushing-room?—Yes, after I had left the station.

13077. You went to the station first, I suppose, to report yourself off duty?—Yes.

13078. Then you went to the section house?—Yes.

13079. Did you take off your uniform and boots in the brushing-room?—Yes.

13080. Was there anyone there at the same time?—Yes, Manning was there.

13081. And did you see where he went?—Yes.

13082. Where did he go?—Upstairs.

13083. Where did you go?—I went downstairs.

13084. To the mess-room?—To the station mess.

13085. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Did you hear this matter being talked about the next day about Andrews?—No.

13086. Were you in the station all the next day—the Sunday?—No. I got up, dressed, and went out. I was on leave that day.

13087. Have you ever known of any person going downstairs after they went to the cubicle?—Not unless it was for a very urgent purpose.

13088. Coming downstairs for their own purpose?—It would be a breach of discipline if they did.

13089. I am asking you if you have ever known of anybody doing it?—No.

13090. Never?—No.

13091. (Chairman.) If a man came down, and it was a breach of discipline, he would not go and stand on the station steps?—No.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is the last thing he would do.

13092. (Mr. Dickinson.) At what time did you write this report of the 31st July?—In the afternoon, after three o'clock—after we had been paraded for this identification. After that I was asked by the sub-Divisional Inspector what I knew about it. I told him I knew the man was there when I came home.

13093. Manning having been picked out at this inspection?—Yes.

13094. Just before you wrote the report?—Yes.

13095. Was that the first time you knew Manning was involved?—Yes, just before I stood up there. I did not know who was coming in to identify us.

Police-constable HARRY LANE, 379 G, sworn.

P.-C. H. Lane.

13096. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are a police-constable stationed at Old Street?—Yes.

13097. I think you live in the section house?—Yes.

13098. Do your remember on this Saturday coming into the station or the section house?—Yes.

13099. About what time did you get back?—I came in between half-past eleven and twelve.

13100. Had you been on duty?—No, I finished at six o'clock that evening. I had been out for a walk.

13101. You think you got in between half-past eleven and twelve?—Yes.

13102. Was Manning in the section house when you got there?—He was in the station mess.

13103. That is part of the section house?—It is.

13104. Did you and he afterwards go upstairs together?—Yes.

13105. And you entered the brushing room together?—Yes.

13106. Then he went up to bed before you?—No, we all went up together.

13107. What time did he go to bed that night?—As near as I can say it would be close on 12.

13108. You had been in his company from half-past 11 to 12 in the section room or mess room?—Yes.

13109. Did he speak to you about calling him in the morning?—Yes, when I passed his cubicle I went to the lavatory to get a glass of water to take to my cubicle, and he went to the dormitory. He said, "I am on leave to-morrow. I want to be up in good time." I said, "All right, John."

13110. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Have you ever known any constable come down from the dormitory after they have gone up?—No.

13111. Never known such a thing to happen?—No; there are about 80 steps to go down. I do not think anybody would be likely to go down like that after getting up once; I should not, any how.

13112. They could do so, if they liked, by the back way?—Yes, they could go down.

13113. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When did you last see Manning that night?—When I passed his cubicle. I saw he was undressing. P.-C. H. Lane. 25 Oct. 1906.

13114. Had he any clothes on still?—Yes, he had his coat and vest off, and his collar and tie.

13115. Had he been in uniform or in plain clothes?—In plain clothes.

13116. About what time was that?—That would be about 12 o'clock, or just a few minutes before, or it might have been a few minutes afterwards.

13117. You could not tell within a few minutes either way?—No.

13118. (Mr. Dickinson.) Is this lavatory you speak of upstairs?—Yes, it is on the same landing. We come out of our dormitory and go straight into the lavatory to have a wash, or to have a bath.

Police-constable Alfred Percival, 439 G, sworn.

13119. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are a police-constable, No. 439, of the G Division?—Right.

13120. When did you go off duty on the evening of the 28th July last?—6 p.m.

13121. Did you go out after that?—Yes, I went out with Manning. I waited for him to come off till about 9.30, when we went out. He came off at 9 o'clok.

13122. Both of you in plain clothes?—Yes.

13123. Where did you go?—We went down Shoreditch.

13124. When did you come back?—About half-past 11.

13125. How did you go into the police buildings?—By the side gate.

13126. Did you go into the police station at all?—It is all in the same building. No, I did not enter the station.

13127. Did Manning?—No.

13128. Did either of you stand on the steps of the police station?—No.

13129. Did you enter together, or not?—Yes, we went to the station mess—the canteen—together.

13130. You went in by the side door of the station buildings, together?—Yes.

13131. How long were you and Manning together after that?—About 20 minutes.

13132. Where did you part from Manning?—At the mess room, the second floor up the building.

13133. Which direction did Manning take?—He went upstairs towards the domitory. P.-C. A. Percival.

13134. Did anybody go with him?—Yes, Police-constable Lane.

13135. How long after that did you go up to the dormitory?—It might have been 7, 8, or 10 minutes.

13136. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) You went to bed about midnight, did you not?—Yes.

13137. You did not see Manning after that?—I did not.

13139. A few minutes previously to that?—Yes.

13140. At about 11.30, I think you say?—Somewhere about that.

13141. It might have been a little later?—Yes, it might have been 11.55?

13142. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When you went for a walk with Manning did you pass Luke Street?—No.

13143. Did you go in that direction at all?—High Street, Shoreditch, is not in that direction—not a direct direction to it—it would not be the nearest way to it.

13144. I was wondering whether you could tell me whether you saw Andrews on that walk?—No.

13145. Do you know him by sight at all?—Yes. I did not see him on that night.

13146. You cannot say whether he saw you?—No.

Police-constable Daniel Lynch, 91 G, sworn.

13147. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are Police-constable No. 91 G in the G Division?—Yes.

13148. When did you go off duty on the afternoon or evening of the 28th July last?—Half-past 11.

13149. What had been the last duty you were on?—I had been on special duty at the Britannia Theatre.

13150. Did you report yourself at the station?—Yes.

13151. What did you do then?—I went away to the brushing room and changed my clothes.

13152. You went into the section house, first of all?—The brushing room is in the section house. I left the charge room, and went into the section house, and went into the brushing room, and changed my clothes, and then I went upstairs into the mess room. I sat up there, had supper, read the paper, and then I went to bed about 10 minutes past 12.

13153. Where does your bunk lie with regard to Manning's?—The next bunk.

13154. Do you know Manning quite well?—Yes.

13155. Do you know his voice?—Yes.

13156. Did he speak to you?—Yes.

13157. What did he say?—He said, "Put the light out, Marquis." They always call me the Marquis.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not quite follow why you are called the Marquis because you read the paper.

13159. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Is there anything to distinguish you from other Marquises?—Yes, see I have a shirt stud. I do not know whether it is a diamond, but it looks very nice.

13160. You are distinguishable from other Marquises by your shirt stud?—Yes.

13161. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) You say, do you not, that you went to bed at 10 past 12?—Yes.

13162. Then it was Manning who asked you to put out the light?—Yes.

13163. I think you said, "Wait a moment, the sergeant has not yet finished calling the roll"?—Yes.

13164. Had he begun calling the roll then?—He must have begun, I expect, because he came along just afterwards, and he had passed several bunks then when he got up to mine.

13165. How long would it take him to call the roll—a minute or so?—I suppose it would take two or three minutes.

13166. He said he began calling the roll at 12 o'clock?—Yes.

13167. This was 10 minutes past?—Yes.

P.C. D. Lynch.

25 Oct. 1906.

13168. Had you any reason for noticing the time?—Not particularly. I say about 10 minutes past 12.

13169. You really began first of all to see Manning about 10 minutes past 12 that night?—Yes. I do not suggest that I saw him; I heard his voice.

13170. Ten minutes past twelve was the time?—Yes, that is all I know about it.

13171. As to what happened before, you know nothing?—No.

13172. And you do not know what happened after?—Nothing whatever, except what I heard after when I was called on to report.

13173. When did you first hear that?—That was after the identification took place.

13174. You heard nothing on the Sunday?—No, I heard nothing whatever about it.

13175. Were you downstairs on the Sunday amongst the police-constables? What did you do on the Sunday?—What I do on any other ordinary day. I went out.

13176. Where did you go—downstairs amongst the constables in the mess-room?—No, I think I went to Mitcham.

13177. Did you hear them say anything about Andrews?—I did not see him on the Sunday.

13178. Did you hear the police-constables talking about Andrews on the Sunday?—No, I never heard anything.

13178*. Manning says he heard it talked about on Sunday—about Andrews?—I was not there.

13179. You heard nothing about it?—We do not all have the same views. I do not talk about business much myself.

13180. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I just want to understand about the time the sergeant would call the roll—about twelve o'clock?—Yes.

13181. Does it vary much?—Very little. They are very precise about it.

13182. You say ten minutes past twelve?—I may say I went to our room. There are three rooms, although there is a door at the side which separates us.

13183. Our consideration does not turn on a minute or two. The point turns upon this, that Andrews, according to the charge sheet, was brought there at 12.35. If Manning was supposed to be on the door step when Andrews was brought to the station, Manning must have been there at twenty-five minutes to one. So far as you know, was Manning in bed at twenty-five minutes to one?—He was in bed when I went in at ten minutes past twelve. I do not suppose he went out afterwards.

13184. You might possibly make a mistake of a few minutes, but is there any possibility of you making a mistake of twenty or twenty-five minutes?—No.

13185. (Mr. Dickinson.) You made this report, I understand, immediately after the identification?—Yes.

13186. What caused you to make a report?—The Sub-divisional Inspector came to me and said "What tiime did you go to bed last night?" I said "I think about ten minutes past twelve."

13187. What is the name of the Sub-divisional Inspector?—Pilgrim. He said "Was Manning in bed?' I said "Yes." He said "Well, he is accused of assaulting a man, so you will have to write a report on the subject."

13188. Then you wrote the report?—Then I wrote the report, so far as I know.

13189. Did you have any further communication with anybody?—No further communication whatever.

Inspector GEORGE ALLISON, sworn.

Inspector G. Allison.

13190. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you an Inspector stationed in the G Division?—I am.

13191. Did Andrews come to the Old Street Station on Tuesday, the 31st July?—He did.

13192. Was it about mid-day when he came?—About ten minutes past twelve.

13193. Will you please tell us what took place between yourself and Andrews?—He came into the station, standing in the waiting room just outside the door. I called him into the office. I said "What do you want, Andrews?" He said "I want the name of the man who was in plain clothes standing on the station steps when I was brought in." I asked him if he knew him. He said "No, but I know him by the name of Charley Wood." I said "We have not got a man by that name in the station." He said "That is the man that was standing on the station steps when I was brought in. They struck me in the face. He had a ring on his finger, and he cut my eye. He hit me at the back of the neck, and that led up to the disturbance in the charge room."

13194. Did he say where he had been struck—at what part of the station?—At the station steps. I asked him what steps he meant. I said "Do you mean those steps out there?" I pointed through the little window from the Inspector's office looking down on to the steps. He said "Yes, those steps out there."

13195. Did he say anything else about the assault, or any other constable, or anything?—Not just at that moment. I asked him if he could identify him. He said "Yes." I said "You can have a parade of the men in plain clothes if you wish it." He said "Yes, I would like it." He said "I should not know the others that struck me, as there were twelve or fourteen of them."

13195*. Anything else?—I arranged with him to be at the station at half-past three that afternoon, and I made an arrangement with a number of men to be at the station for the purpose of identification.

13196. Before you arranged for the men to come for the purpose of identification had you ascertained who the man was who was known by the name of Charley Wood, or whether there was a man who was known by that name?—No. I said to hom "Do you know him at all other than as Charley Wood?" He said "I think he is on Tabernacle Square point." I said that is not the man on Tabernacle Square point; that is not his name.

13197. How did you select the men whom he was to see?—Those men who were off duty in plain clothes on Saturday night I arranged to be there.

13198. You arranged that all the men who were off duty in plain clothes on Saturday night should be there?—A great number of them. The man being on duty, and as it was suggested he was on duty at Tabernacle Square point at the time, I sent out to him to be relieved so that he should be there.

13199. Were you present when Andrews came again to identify the man?—I was not.

13200. I think that is all you know about it?—That is all I know about it.

13201. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) In spite of Andrews having made a complaint, as read out to Mr. Cluer, you say now he complained of being assaulted on the station steps, and not on the ground at all?—That is so.

13202. Do you really mean that?—I really mean it.

13203. He comes to you, points to the station steps, although we know the statement made the day before to Mr. Cluer was that he was taken down some steps?—He told me he was assaulted by a man in plain clothes who stood on the station steps.

13204. Was there anybody present when he said this?—No, not just then—Sub-divisional Pilgrim came in.

13205. You had not heard of the man named Charley Wood then?—I had not.

13206. Had you never heard of the man being called Charley Wood?—No, I knew him called by another nick-name.

13207. What nick-name was that?—"Buttercup."

13208. They are rich in nick-names in Old Street. Is there any reason for that?—I do not know the reason for it.

13209. No reason for calling him "Buttercup"?—I do not know of one.

13210. "Charley Wood" seems more appropriate, now, does it not?—I do not think so—I should think "Buttercup" suits him.

13211. Andrews came to you and said it was on the steps?—Yes.

13212. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You made a report upon this on the 31st July?—That is so.

13213. That was the day he came to you?—That was the day he came to me.

13214. How long after he came to you was it that you made the report?—Immediately afterwards. I made the report out, and I sent it by special messenger to my Superintendent.

13215. I notice in the report which was written directly after you do say this very thing, that Andrews "stated that while being brought into the station in custody on the 29th inst., when on the station steps he was assaulted by a constable in plain clothes"?—That is so.

13216. That is what he had told you?—That is what he had told me. Inspector G Allison.

13217. What you put there, is all that you know about it?—Yes. 25 Oct. 1906.

13218. I suppose before you sent for the man you had not found out in the station who Charley Wood was?—No; I sent for him in consequence of Andrews telling me he thought he was on Tabernacle Square point.

13219. Manning was on Tabernacle Square point?—He was.

13220. So that you did not know at the time that was Charley Wood?—I did not.

13221. But he was the man who was on duty at Tabernacle Square point, and you had him there?—That is so.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) Will you allow Police-constable Williams to be recalled?

(Chairman.) Yes.

Police constable WILLIAMS, 204 G, recalled.

13222. (Mr. Schultess Young.) When Andrews was taken from the charge room outside I think you told us at Old Street that you heard him moaning and groaning?—Moaning and groaning. P.-C. Williams.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know whether you want to see Inspector Pilgrim. He is the man who caused these reports to be made.

(Chairman.) No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should now like to finish the evidence I desire to lay before you in this matter, and I should like permission to read the Magistrate's clerk's note of the evidence of the doctor who was called on behalf of the complainant.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) That was a mistake. My client supposed that he was the doctor who had actually examined Andrews, but, as a matter of fact, he was not.

(Chairman.) Was the witness called for the complainant at the police court?

(Mr. Schultess Young.) He was; but we found out by mistake that he was not the right man. We said we did not want him, and we have called the right man.

(Chairman.) Never mind; he was a witness at the police court for you.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I read it?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is at page 8 of the Magistrate's clerk's note: "Bazette Butcher, sworn. I am house surgeon at St. Bartholomew's Hospital. A man named Andrews was brought to the hospital on the early morning of 20th July. He had a cut on the right side of the head. I cannot say more than that. I do not remember the case particularly. I cannot say if I saw him or not. The dresser attended to him. (Examines Andrews' head in court.) The cut might have been caused by a sharp instrument or a blunt instrument, not, I should say, from a fist. I should not think a great deal of force was used to cause it. Cross-examined: If it had been anything serious the dresser should have called me. I should not think the cut was caused by a ring on the finger." Then I should like, if I may, if the Commissioners desire it, to tender the report which was obtained in the case of Police-constable West, whose evidence was commented upon by Mr. Cluer.

(Chairman.) If it were necessary we would ask for it, but at present we do not think it is necessary.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) This is an indication of the action taken in such a case as this, because here are the copies of the report showing that the matter went as high as Sir Edward Henry, and we are dealing with it at every step to see whether or not the matter was one which required action.

(Chairman.) If you press it, you can hand it up. We have received the other reports. If you think it sufficiently relevant we will take it.

(Mr Schultess-Young.) With regard to Dr. Butcher, I ought to say a letter has been written by him, and it will be sent on to the Commissioners if they wish it, to say he is sorry that he examined the wrong scar.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We had better have the letter.

(Chairman.) We had better have the doctor himself in that case.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) He is the doctor who said he did not know whether he had seen the man or not.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I understand he examined the man's face in court.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What is the other scar he is supposed to have?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That is a scar which he unfortunately received some years before through falling on a fender. You have heard the evidence of the man who actually sewed up the wound.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Was not the man Andrews examined by the doctor in court in the presence of the counsel or solicitor who represented him?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) There was a very cursory examination at the moment, I believe.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Andrews knew where the scar was.

(Chairman.) If you at some subsequent date make application that the doctor wishes to be heard I do not suppose we shall refuse to hear him; but I do not think it is worth while going further into the matter now.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Surely the evidence of Dr. Dobson, the man who sewed up the wound, is of greater importance than the evidence of the man who did not examine that scar.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) How long before, in point of time, was it that that scar had been caused by a fender?

(Mr. Andrews.) I should think I was four years old.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you mean that the doctor mistook that scar for a scar which had been caused a few weeks before?

(Mr. Andrews.) He did.

(Chairman.) We shall take the witness Platt tomorrow.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is only right to West to say I notice that Sir Edward Henry says in his report that the police-constable failed to explain clearly to the Magistrate; hence the trouble. He does not appear to be much at fault.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I only tendered it, not to deal with West's case particularly, but to show the care taken by the Police Authorities in this case when a complaint of any kind had been mentioned.

THIRTEENTH DAY.

Friday, 26th October 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Esq., K.C., M.P.
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

Alfred Francis Platt, recalled.

Mr. A. F. Platt. 26 Oct. 1906.

13223. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You told the Commissioners that one thing in corroboration of your statement, that you had an arrangement with the police, was that other men carrying on the business of street bookmakers were convicted oftener than you?—And summonsed.

13224. Convicted on summons or otherwise. Can you name any other man who was betting in that district between May and October, 1903, who was convicted oftener than you?—There are several.

13225. Can you name one?—Yes.

13226. What name could you give?—Chapman.

13227. The date of the first bribe has been fixed as the 29th May. Now Chapman was only convicted twice. You were convicted four times?—About four summonses he had against him which he appealed against.

13228. That was one conviction. He was convicted on that, but it was one conviction?—That would be equal to four if he was arrested in the street.

13229. That was one hearing and one conviction. Can you tell me anybody else?—It would only amount to the same money in fines that I paid.

13230. I am not talking about the amount of fines but the number of times the man was proceeded against. Can you name any man who was proceeded against and convicted oftener than you?—In the same firm connected with Chapman there were several men.

13231. Name one?—I was not aware I had to answer that question, or else I should have had the names down. I could give them to the Court at a future time.

13232. I can save you the trouble, because we have a return of everybody who was convicted at this police court within that period. You were convicted four times and nobody else was convicted oftener than three times. How do you account for that if you were paying the police and the other people were not?—The fines those men paid would equal mine.

13233. How do you account for being convicted four times and nobody else being convicted as often, if you were paying the police and other people were not?—Because there were others in the district who were not convicted as often as I was.

13234. That is the opposite of what you have been saying up to now?—Perhaps I do not explain myself fully. You tell me that only two were convicted in the district as often as I was.

13235. No man was?—The fines he paid amounted to what I was convicted for.

13236. I am not speaking about the fines but the number of times persons were proceeded against. You in the district was proceeded against four times within were proceeded against four times, and no other man that period?—The one firm of Chapman was.

13237. I am talking of the names?——

13237.* (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There were other partners, you mean?—Not partners, workmen, agents.

13238. Working for the bookmaker who was summonsed, although not in the name of Chapman?—Yes.

13239. The name of Chapman would not give the real answer, in your view, to the question that is put to you?—That is it, Sir.

13240. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Who were the men who were working with Chapman?—I could not give you the names at the present moment, but I could get them.

13241. Then you afford me no means of checking were your statement?—If I had known the question was going to be asked, I should have had an answer for you.

13242. (Chairman.) Do I understand you can get the names for us?—Yes. (The Witness attempted to speak to Mr. Rufus Isaacs.)

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You must not speak to me privately. Anything you have to say you must say it so that everybody can hear.

(Witness.) I am very awkwardly placed in this matter. I am fighting this all on my own. I have no assistance from anybody whatever, and I am very awkwardly placed in obtaining evidence, and having unwilling witnesses to get here. There is nobody amongst the men that I have been doing this particular business who is helping me, so you can understand the position I am in in having to answer the questions of the learned gentleman.

13243. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) As I understand, what Mr. Muir is asking you does not, in the least degree—in fact, you may take it from us that it does not in the slightest degree—pledge you to call them as witnesses, nor is Mr. Muir's question directed to that. He is seeking to get from you the names of persons, if you can give them, who have been convicted oftener than you. As I understand, you have told us there was a firm of Chapman, and, according to your view, other persons who were betting for Chapman were convicted, although not in the name of Chapman?—Yes.

13244. They were of one firm carrying on the business?—Yes.

13245. But you cannot remember those names now?—No.

13246. But you know it did occur?—Yes.

13247. Supposing you were supplied with a list of all the convictions during the material time from the 29th May, 1903, to October, 1903, between this and the next occasion when you come here, will you be able to tell us who are the persons who were convicted?—Yes.

13248. Who were really acting for Chapman?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Then that answers it.

13249. (Chairman.) That is what you told me. You think you can get us the names of the persons who were Chapman's agents?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I should strongly object to supplying this witness with a list of names which would enable him to say, without my having any check upon it, that any single person in that list was betting with Chapman. He could say everyone of them was and how could I check it? But on the other hand, if he can supply us with names without having seen the list then we will know how to deal with it.

(Chairman.) I understood Mr. Platt to say that he might, when he had had the opportunity of thinking over the matter, be able to get the names for us.

(Witness.) Yes.

13250-51. They do not occur to you at the present moment?—No.

13252. You do not require the list of convictions?—No.

13253. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You can do it without?—Yes.

13254. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Now I am passing from that matter to another. I want a definite statement from you as to the place at which you first bribed Powell. You say you did so within a few minutes of leaving the police court after you were fined on the 20th May. Where did you bribe Powell?—Southwark Bridge Road.

13255. Whereabouts in the road?—A public-house there.

13256. What public-house?—I could not give you now the sign of it.

13257. Oh, come. If you were inside the public-house surely you would know what it is?—The public-house nearest to the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway. If you have a directory you will find the name of the pub in it.

13258. (Chairman.) Which station?—The London, Chatham and Dover, Borough Road Station.

13259. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) In the Southwark Bridge Road?—Yes.

13260. Was anybody else with you in that public house at the time you gave the bribe?—Yes.

13261. Who?—Soer.

13262. And did you go there with Soer and Powell straight from the police court?—Yes.

13263. You three together?—Yes.

13264. They were in plain clothes?—Yes.

13265. How did you get them to go to this public-house with you straight from the police court. What did you say to them to induce them to go?—I asked them, as their general system is, if they would have a drink.

13266. You asked them to have a drink immediately after you had been convicted?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I understood the witness to preface that by saying "I asked them as their general system is."

13267. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) "As the general system is I asked them to have a drink," I understood you to say?—That is right.

13268. Where were they when you asked them to have a drink?—I would not be positive whether it was coming through the courtway or whether it was after we got into the thoroughfare at the back of the court.

13269. Either coming out of the court or just outside?—That is right.

13270. This was the Southwark Police Court. Did they agree at once?—Well——.

13271. Did they come to you without a word?—They followed me on.

13272. Without a word?—Yes.

13273. Which did they do, did they go with you or did they follow you on?—Followed me on.

13274. How far did you walk ahead of them?—A few yards.

13275. You went into this public-house the three of you together?—Yes.

13276. Which bar did you go into, do you remember? I think it was the furthest bar from the station.

13277. What bar would you call that?—I think it was the private bar.

13278. And getting in there what was done?—They were asked to have what they would like; they called for it and then I offered the sums of money.

13279. You paid for their drinks?—Yes.

13280. Up to that time you had neither paid nor offered a bribe to either of those men?—No.

13281. I want to know how you made the proposal?—I said "I don't want to give you chaps a lot of trouble, here is something for your trouble to-day," and I offered each of them the money at the same time, and they both looked at one another, and accepted it.

13282. What was the sum of money which on this first occasion you paid to them?—5s.

13283. Up till now you have said you paid them £1?—That is in a week. That was the first introduction, that was.

13284. I asked you this very question, what sum you paid them on the first occasion, and you said £1?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Can you give us the reference to that?

13285. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Did you say that you gave them £1 when I asked the question before?—You asked me what the weekly bribe was, and I understood you to mean what the sums were that I gave them weekly. I do not think I have ever been asked the question before as to what I gave them at the first time of meeting them after being fined. I do not think I have ever been asked that question in this court.

13286. With regard to Powell you were asked on page 209, Question 8636: "With regard to Powell, have you been bribing Powell?—From the first time I saw him. The first day I saw him he had money—the first day I appeared in the first conviction in 1903." Then at Question 8648: "Do not pass away from Powell, because that only confuses you. We are dealing with Powell. Do you mean you paid him 10s. a week when you saw him on that duty?—10s. or £1. Q. But why 'or £1'?—Sometimes I made it a little more, and sometimes it was less. Q. Sometimes it was 10s. then?—I think I paid one 10s. Q. Who was that to—Powell?—Yes. Q. You paid him once 10s.?—Yes. Q. But all the other weeks that you paid him you paid him £1?—Yes. Q. You are quite clear about that?—Yes. Q. How soon after this conviction did you begin to bribe Powell?—I started from then—five minutes after the first conviction. Q. Just outside the court?—Yes." Then Mr. Rufus Isaacs says, "Before you pass from that I should like to understand this. It is not clear to me yet what the witness says about that. Was Powell paid so much a week. Suppose you did not see him for three weeks, when you did see him what did you give him then?—I perhaps would not give him fully for the three weeks of £1 each. Q. I do not understand what you mean. You would not give him 'fully for the three weeks,' but you would give him for the three weeks?—It might be 50s. Q. You mean you would be paying him then for the three weeks, although you had not seen him during those three weeks?—Yes. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) He was paid £1 a week whether you saw him or not?—Yes. (Chairman.) £1 a week?—The various sums of money allotted would work out at that. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) To each of them?—Yes. Q. As I understand you, as far as Powell was concerned, his was always £1 a week, except when you gave him 10s?—Yes. Q. Down to what date did you continue to see Powell and pay him regularly at the rate of £1 a week. We will not trouble about the 10s. a week?—Up to about October." That is all about Powell.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is my recollection of it. The specific question was not put to him.

(The Witness.) No, it was not, sir.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You are quite right, Mr. Muir, in what you say about the £1 a week, but this specific question was not put to him.

13287. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Perhaps not, sir. (To the Witness.) Did the other man, Soer, have 5s.?—Yes.

13288. You paid that in that public-house?—Yes.

13289. Did any person see you pay him?—Not that I am aware of.

13290. Did any person see you in the public-house with those two men?—Not that I am aware of.

13291. Were you ever in the public-house with those two men on any other occasion?—No.

13292. Were you ever in any public-house with those two men on any other occasion?—Not together.

13293. You paid Powell £1 a week you say, or thereabouts. Whereabouts was it you paid him the other moneys?—Near about the vicinity of the police station.

13294. The police station?—Yes.

Mr. A. F. Platt.
26 Oct. 1906.

13295. I am on the question of the place of the bribery rather than the amount. Where is the police station?—In Kennington Road.

13296. That is a continuation of Westminster Bridge Road?—Yes.

13297. Not very far from the end of Oakley Street?—That is right.

13298. Where you gave your false address?—It is quite right.

13299. A false address?—No—a false address in a manner, but there is a thing that I could not explain to you the other day. In the case of these constables who apprehended you on the first conviction they enter the name and address in a book, and then on any future arrest they always put the same name and address down. They do not ask you for the same name and address, but they simply know you, and they just turn their little books back and tell the Clerk or the sergeant the address.

13300. That is a false address?—That was the address I gave.

13301. And a false one?—There is a 27, Oakley Street.

13302. But you did not live there?—No.

13303. That is where the station is, and it was close outside the station, was it—in the street?—Yes.

13304. Always in the street?—Yes.

13305. Did you ever give to either Soer or Powell money, except this one payment in the public-house, anywhere else except in the street?—Yes, I have Soer.

13306. Where did you give him money?—In the Hero, in Waterloo Road.

13307. I think its full title is the "Hero of Waterloo"?—Yes.

13308. On how many occasions did you give Soer money in the Hero?—Several times.

13309. What sums of money did you give to Soer in the Hero?—It averaged £1.

13310. Do you mean sometimes more than £1 a time and sometimes less?—That is right.

13311. What is the biggest sum you have given him at a time?—£2.

13312. Where was that given?—Not very far from my residence.

13313. What was that for? Why did you give him £2?—He was on the sick list at that particular time, and I told him that I thought he could very likely do with a little bit more; you want more necessaries when you are sick than otherwise.

13314. It was charity. That was in the street also?—No.

13315. Where was it?—In the Two Eagles public-house, Brook Street, Kennington.

13316. Is that a place where you are well known yourself?—Fairly well known.

13317. And you have been in this public-house how often with Soer?—I think that was the only time.

13318. But I understand you, with regard to the Hero, you have been there with him several times?—Yes.

13319. The Hero is quite close, is it not, to your pitch, where you did your betting?—Quite true.

13320. What hours were you in the Hero with Soer—in racing hours, or out of racing hours?—It would be within racing hours.

13321. So that the very time that Soer was supposed to be watching you to prevent you from betting or arrest you for betting, you were in the public-house near by with him?—Yes.

13322. On several occasions?—Yes.

13323. (Mr. Dickinson.) Can you say when it was you gave him this £2?—In the latter days of May, or the first few days of June. I am not positive of the date, but that was the first time he was aware of where I originally lived.

13324. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) He was sick, was he?—Yes.

13325. How long had he been sick?—To the best of my recollection, three or four days.

13326. Off duty?—I believe so.

13327. On the sick list?—Yes, from what he led me to believe.

13328. He may have been practising a fraud upon you?—I do not say that.

13329. Obtaining money from you by false pretences?—I take it to be that he had been sick three or four days.

13330. But still it is open to that difficulty that he may have been practising a fraud on you?—No, I was willing to give him what I did give him.

13331. But he may have been telling you an untruth in saying he was on the sick list?—I do not think that. There is no doubt he was on the sick list.

13332. You have no doubt he was at the time?—Yes, I should think so.

13333. That would be a matter of record?—Yes. I have only his word for it.

13334. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Before you pass from that I should like to ask a question. It is difficult to carry dates, but can you give us any idea of how long it was before the first conviction that you gave Soer the £2?—A matter of a few days, I should think.

13335. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) A matter of a few days after the first conviction?—Yes.

13336. Was that the only time you gave him £2?—The only time I gave him £2.

13337. What is the highest you have given him next to the £2?—30s.

13338. What was the occasion of giving him 30s.?—They never refuse a bit extra.

13339. No. But why should you give him a bit extra?—I think I had run five weeks.

13340. Without a conviction?—Yes.

13341. So that was the cause of your giving him 30s.?—Yes.

13342. Did that occur on any other occasion?—Yes.

13343. How often did you give him 30s.?—I could not say.

13344. But there was only one occasion on which you gave him £2?—That is right.

13345. And that was because he had been on the sick list?—Yes.

13346. A few days after the first conviction?—Yes.

13347. Can you name any other place at which you have given Soer money, other than in the street, and those ocasions that you have named?—Yes, the Pocock public-house.

13348. Where is that?—Francis Street, I think the name of the street is Westminster Bridge Road. I think the name of the pub. is the Pocock. I forget whether it is Francis Street or Lefranc Street; I am not quite positive; they may have renamed the street.

13349. How often have you been in the Pocock with Soer?—Several times.

13350. Ever in uniform in any of those public-houses with Soer, or was he always in plain clothes?—Always in plain clothes.

13351. Is there any other place that you can name where you have bribed Soer?—No premises.

13352. Only the street?—That is all.

13353. I think we have exhausted Soer, so far as places are concerned, and we have also exhausted Powell, because you only bribed him once in that public-house that you describe, and all the other payments were in the street?—Yes.

13354. Now with regard to Gunn. Where did you first bribe Gunn?—I think it was in the Newington Causeway.

13355. What was the occasion of your bribing Gunn?—He was with the officer that I had been in the habit of bribing, so I used him the same.

13356. When did you first bribe Gunn?—The first time I was arrested.

13357. When he was there as a witness?—Yes.

13358. That was the first occasion?—Yes.

13359. We have had that date before. Tell us how you managed to bribe Gunn. What took place after you were convicted. You say it was after your conviction?—Yes.

13360. What took place with regard to Gunn. Just describe it to us?—The direction, I believe, that they lived coincided with the way I was going, and passing through the street I simply put it into their hands, and told them to accept it as a present.

13361. This is a casual meeting?—No, this was after we went to the police court.

13362. Not arranged beforehand that you should go the same way?—We generally wait on one another. I have always found it so.

13363. Did you arrange that you should wait on them, or they should wait on you?—No, there was no thorough understanding with regard to that.

13364. Who waited. Did you get out of the court first, or did they get out of the court first?—I believe one of them was out first, and I was in between.

13365. Who was out first?—I am not positive.

13366. One of them, whoever it was, was outside waiting for you?—Perhaps he was waiting for the other officer.

13367. He was waiting?—Yes.

13368. And you came up?—Yes.

13369. When did the second officer come up?—Within a minute or so.

13370. You and the first officer were waiting there?—Yes.

13371. How far from the court was that?—A few yards.

13372. Just outside?—Yes.

13373. (Chairman.) What was the name of the first officer?—Soer.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) And Gunn?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is it clear there were only those two. We have reference to the plural, but we have no statement from the witness, yet, as to Soer and Gunn.

13374. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Soer and Gunn were the officers who arrested you on the first occasion, the 1st August. Is that so?—Yes.

13375. Only those two?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Does he mean the only two who gave evidence against him?

13376. (Mr. D. R. Muir.) Yes. You all three met together within a few yards of the door of the police court?—Yes.

13377. And did you go away. Tell us how you went away?—It is a very short turning, and we made our way into Newington Causeway.

13378. Did you go together?—Yes, we went together.

13379. Into Newington Causeway?—Yes.

13380. That is only a few streets, really round the corner?—Yes.

13381. One side of the court is in Newington Causeway, and the exit from the court is at the back of the building, and you simply go round the corner into Newington Causeway?—Yes.

13382. That is the same corner?—That is true.

13383. Where was it that the money was paid?—Outside Lillywhites', the cricket-bat makers.

13384. Just at the corner, opposite the Newington Sessions House—almost opposite?—The corner of Borough Road and the corner of Newington Causeway.

13385. And almost opposite the Newington Sessions House?—I could not call it opposite. It is on the same side of the road.

13386. As Newington Sessions House?—I was thinking of the court—yes.

13387. It was in the Newington Causeway, in front of Lillywhites' shop, with all the bats and balls, and so on, in the window, that you met Soer?—Yes.

13388. And Gunn?—Yes.

13389. This was the first time you had bribed Gunn?—Yes.

13390. How did you do it?—Simply offered them the money. Put it in their hand, and done with it.

13391. How much?—One sovereign.

13392. To each of them?—Yes.

13393. Why were you so generous with Gunn?—Because I did not make fish of one and flesh of the other.

13394. You had only given Soer 5s. for his first bribe?—Yes.

13395. And Powell, too?—Yes.

13396. Why were you so generous to Gunn?—Because I did not lower my payment.

13397. I do not follow that, but that is your explanation?—Yes.

13398. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I understand him to mean he was giving the others £1 a week at that time, and so he had to give Gunn the same. (To the Witness.) That is what you mean, I think?—That is right.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He did not want to give one less than he gave the others.

13399. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I follow. (To the Witness.) Did you bribe Gunn on other occasions?—Yes.

13400. Where?—In the "Hero of Waterloo."

13401. Was he with any other officer at the time you bribed him in the "Hero of Waterloo"?—Soar.

13402. Always?—Yes.

13403. Always those two officers in the "Hero of Waterloo." How often have you been with Gunn in the "Hero of Waterloo" when Soer was present?—I could not say, but I was more with Soer than Gunn in the "Hero of Waterloo."

13404. On how many occasions, do you suppose?—I could not say.

13405. About?—I would not like to give an answer to that.

13406. Was it once?—Several times.

13407. Twice?—Several times.

13408. Three times?—More times than that.

13409. Half-a-dozen times?—More than that.

13410. A dozen times—as many as that?—Put it about that number.

13411. About a dozen times with Gunn and Soer together?—No, Gunn was not there each time.

13412. I am asking you about Gunn. We will start again. Were you as many as six times in the "Hero of Waterloo" with Gunn?—I could not say.

13413. Would you say it was more than three times?—Yes.

13414. More than three times. Would you say it was as many as six?—I would not like to say.

13415. Something between three and six?—It might be more, but I am not positive.

13416. You will not pledge yourself to more than six?—It might have been more.

13417. It might have been anything. You will not pledge yourself to more than six times, or will you pledge yourself to more than six times?—It is hard to say.

13418. As I understood you told me, if I am right, that on each occasion when you bribed Gunn in the "Hero" public-house Soer was present. Is that right?—There might have been once or twice when Soer was not there.

13419. There might have been once or twice when Soar was not there?—Yes.

13420. And the only number you have pledged yourself to up to the present is three?—I have not pledged myself to any number of times.

13421. You do not pledge yourself to Gunn being there three times?—He was there more than three times.

13422. Then you can pledge yourself to that. How many occasions have you been in the "Hero" public-house with those two officers together?—I could not say.

13423. More than once?—Yes.

13424. More than three times?—Yes.

13425. More than six times?—I could not say that.

13426. Is there any other place that you can name where you have bribed Gunn?—Yes.

Mr. A. F. Platt.
26 Oct. 1906.

13427. Where?—On the premises of the South-Western Railway at Waterloo Station.

13428. Whereabouts there?—In the tube way of the Electric Railway.

13429. The passage between Waterloo Station main line leading down to the City tube?—That is right.

13430. How did you come to go there?—They had simply looked through the wicket gate at the end of the turning where I was betting, and I followed them.

13431. They looked through the wicket gate at you and you went to them at once?—Yes.

13432. And they led the way to this tube?—Yes.

13433. Who were they—Gunn and who?—When you say "they," Gunn.

13434. I thought you said "they"?—No.

13435. Gunn led the way?—Yes.

13436. To the tube?—Yes.

13437. Was he alone then?—At times he has been.

13438. Then sometimes it was "they." There were two of them sometimes?—Yes.

13439. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In the same place, the tube?—Yes.

13440. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Who was the other one?—Soer.

13441. I had been asking you about Soer, and you have never up to to this moment mentioned the tube tunnel in connection with him. Do you say that you bribed Soer in the tube tunnel?—No.

13442. But he was there?—Yes.

13443. You went there when he and Gunn were together, and you bribed Gunn and you did not bribe Soer. Is that what you say?—Yes.

13444. Why was that?—It is quite possible I would have seen Soer during patrol duty in some turning on my way home in the evening, and he might have had his previously.

13445. How many times would you see Soer and Gunn together in the tube?—Once.

13446. Only once?—Yes.

13447. On how many occasions did you see Gunn there without Soer?—I could not say.

13448. About?—I should say several times.

13449. But "several times" does not tell us very much. How often?—I could not say.

13450. You mean you will not pledge yourself to any number of times at all?—No.

13451. Have you bribed Gunn in any other place?—No.

13452. You are quite clear about that?—Yes.

13453. And no other place where you have bribed Soer?—Oh, yes.

13454. Where?—Living in the vicinity of the station, of course I generally make my way past the station, and it is on my way home.

13455. What station?—Kennington Road Station, and it is quite possible for me to pass these officers in the evening on late duty.

13456. In the street, you mean?—Yes.

13457. I am not asking you about the street. I understand you have already answered that you have sometimes bribed him in the street, but is there any other definite place or premises or place like the tube or anything of that kind?—No.

13458. Any place that you can name?—No.

13459. Did you ever bribe Soer in any other definite place than this you have told us of?—Not that I can call to mind.

13460. Did you ever say that you had ever bribed him in any definite place to any Inspector of Police? Let me see if I can help you. Did you ever tell Inspector Spencer of a definite place where you had bribed him? You know Inspector Spencer?—Oh, yes.

13461. Does that help you?—(No answer.)

13462. Did you ever tell Inspector Spencer of a definite place where you had bribed Soer and Deed at the same time?—(No answer.)

13463. Let me put it to you in another way. Can you tell us of any definite place where you bribed Soer and Deed at the same time?—(No answer.)

13464. What I am putting to you is a thing that, if it is true, you could not have forgotten?—It is like this, with regard to these men, their duties were not always together.

13465. No, but do you remember ever bribing Soer and Deed together in any definite place, and I am suggesting that if this statement is true you could not possibly have forgotten it?—I have a lot to think of, and I have not been taking notes or had anybody doing it for me.

13466. It is not a thing that would require a note to impress it on your memory if it is true?—Yes, it would, because their duties have been confusing.

13467. I will give you the date of the 13th October, which is the date of your last arrest.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that the date of the conversation with Inspector Spencer that you are suggesting?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, the date he alleges as the one on which he alleges he bribed Deed and Soer together. I am much obliged to you, sir, for correcting the ambiguity. (To the Witness.) The date I give is the date upon which you said, according to my information, that you had bribed Soer and Deed at the same time in a definite place. Can you remember it at all?—(No answer.)

13468. Did it take place—that on that occasion you bribed Soar and Deed?

13469. (Chairman.) Do you recollect having a conversation with Inspector Spencer?—Yes, but they have their methods.

13470. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You remember when you were arrested on the 13th October?—You have it there. I know the month, but I am not particular to the date.

13471. You will find that is correct—the 13th October, the day of your last arrest. You were arrested by Soer and Deed together. That is right, is it not. They were the two officers who arrested you?—I am not positive of that.

13472. It was so, there is no doubt about it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is the fourth conviction that year.

13473. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes. Now on the occasion of your very last arrest in this district did you bribe Soer and Deed together in one place?—I know we had a few words about the shabby trick that I considered Soer had done, and I was very much upset that I had two convictions against me that day when there ought to have been only one.

13474. You are thinking of the 20th August. I am talking of your last arrest on the 13th October. Can you remember bribing those two officers in one place at the same time?—(No answer.)

13475. Tell me when I have given you long enough, and then I will go on?—I cannot recall to mind at present.

13476. You cannot recollect bribing those two officers on that day at all?—I cannot recollect where.

13477. Did you bribe them at all?—Yes.

13478. On that day?—Yes.

13479. Before your arrest or after your arrest?—After.

13480. Before you were convicted or after you were convicted?—It would be after I was convicted.

13481. In the court building or outside the court building?—I could not say.

13482. Are you clear it was after your conviction?—Yes.

13484. Absolutely definite?—Perhaps I should count my convictions different from you. I should say from the time I got into their hands—from the time that they handled me.

13483. You are quite clear about that?—Yes.

13485. What time was it that you met them—before you had been before the Magistrate or after you had been before the Magistrate?—I am not positive; I am not sure.

13486. What is your belief about it?

13487. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You have got something in your mind. Can you tell us whether it was before or after your arrest?—It would be after my arrest.

13488. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are quite clear about that, are you?—Yes.

13489. Absolutely definite as to that?—After my arrest—the two officers who arrested me; yes.

13490. It was after your arrest that you gave them a bribe?—Yes.

13491. You do not want to go back on that?—No, I do not think so.

13492. How do you remember it was after your arrest?—I had not seen them previously in the day.

13493. Anything else?—No.

13494. Nothing else that calls it to your mind that it was after your arrest?—No.

13495. After your arrest, of course, you were in custody all the time until you got before the Magistrate?—Yes.

13496. Was it while you were in custody, and before you got before the Magistrate, that you paid them?—I am not positive.

13497. Why are you not positive. If you remember the occasion at all, why are you not positive as to whether you paid it while you were in custody, or while you were a free man?—I know there was some talk going on, and I would not be exactly positive—not to trust my memory that far back.

13498. Was not that the very first bribe you had given to Deed?—No.

13499. He had never handled you before?—No.

13500. It was the first time Deed had ever handled you?—Yes.

13501. Could you remember where it was and when it was?—I paid Deed so much money previously to that.

13502. This is the first time that Deed ever handled you?—Yes.

13503. Cannot you remember where it was?—No, because those two officers were playing off to one another. They had never been out in company with one another to arrest me before. That is how it was that Deed did ever arrest me.

13504. What I am putting to you is that that is a reason why you should remember it. The first time they had ever acted together, the first time that Deed had ever put hands on you at all?

13505. (Chairman.) Is that so?—Yes.

13506. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You had been bribing him for some time. but it was the first time he had put his hands on you?—Yes.

13507. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Now do you not remember it?—These two men had always worked so different that I know there was something that I cannot just call to mind.

13508. Can you tell me this: How much did you pay them on that occasion?—If I remember correctly, I paid Soer on his own—gave it to him quick, because I did not let these two officers know. These two officers never knew that I was bribing each of them, so what I did was to pay one, as it is commonly called, "to get his head screwed," and paid the other one when I got the other heads screwed.

13509. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That applies to Deed and Soer?—Yes.

13510. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) On this occasion?—Yes.

13511. So that you paid them separately?—Yes, separately, but they might have been in company, but one would not see what I had done to the other.

13512. But you have never said that with regard to any other group of officers?—No.

13513. You mean the arrest on the 13th October and case?—Because I had known Deed longer than the others, and he had never come and put his hands on me; therefore I did not want the other officers to know that I was doing the same to him as I was to them.

13514. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I should like to put a question on this point, because we must understand it as we go along. With whom had the conviction of the 13th October been arranged?—That was not an arranged meeting.

13515. You mean the arrest on the13th October and the prosecution and conviction was not in collusion with the police?—No.

13516. It was unexpected by you?—To a degree, yes. I had not been the same as I had on the previous times, told I should be wanted—not by Soer. But I knew they were out for me, but not to the knowledge of Soer. Deed had sent me the information that I was going down that day.

13517. That is what I am trying to find out from you. Deed had sent you notice on the 13th October before you were arrested that you would be arrested that day?—Yes, and told me it would not be his fault.

13518. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Then do you adhere to your answer to the learned Commissioners that this particular arrest was not an arranged arrest between you and the police?—Not with Soer or Deed.

13519. Was it an arranged arrest at all?—No, not in the way that the others had been.

13520. It was not a collusive arrest?—Not in the way that the others had been.

13521. That is another branch of the matter that I will have to deal with. Can you tell me the amount that you paid to those officers on this day?—Soar's was one sovereign.

13522. And Deed's—the first time he put his hands on you, and he was the person who sent you warning on this day. What was it you paid him?—I think his was a sovereign, but I met him later in the day and gave him more.

13523. Deed's was a sovereign, but you did meet him later in the day and gave him more?—Yes.

13524. So it was a sovereign at the time of the arrest and something more later?—Yes.

13525. Do you remember how much more?—I could not say now.

13526. I have spent a good deal of time over this, because I may tell you that this is the only occasion on which you ever made a definite allegation, giving time, place, names, and amounts, so I want to see exactly what your allegations are with regard to that. Do you want to correct any answer that you have given?—I was rather put out that day having these two very men, and having to play off one against the other. I am not so positive of most of the things that took place.

13527. Here I have got from Inspector Spencer the details of a particular bribe on a particular occasion, and it is the only one that I have got. Do you want to be as indefinite as possible now in case your answers now should contradict your statement then?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not think you ought to put it in that way. The witness is unrepresented.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) If you think not, Sir, I will not put it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The question is quite right, except that last part, which is a thought which you have translated into words.

13528. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) If you please, Sir. (To the witness.) Do you wish to add anything or detract anything from any answer that you have given with regard to this transaction?—The transactions that day were under more peculiar circumstances than the others, and it was more confusing.

13529. Do you mean that your memory is less definite as to this information than it is as to others?—I should have to be that way.

13530. I do not quite follow what you mean by saying you should have to be that way. Is your memory less definite as to this occasion of which you made a definite complaint than it is as to the others of which you have never made any definite complaint, as I shall show?—(No answer.)

13531. Can you give an answer to that question, because if not, I will go on?—I cannot just at the present moment. Something might come to my mind as we are going along.

13532. Would it be true to say that the sum you handed to those police-officers was 10s.?—Perhaps that would be the sum I handed to Deed then.

Mr. A. F. Platt.
26 Oct. 1906.

13533. To the two police-officers, 10s.?—That would apply to Deed, because I should see him later in the day.

13534. Would it be true that the sum you handed to the two police officers was 10s.?—I do not know whether it would apply to Deed.

13535. It certainly would not apply to Soer?—No.

13536. You are definite that you handed him a sovereign?—Yes.

13537. Would it be true that you handed that sum of 10s. to those two police officers in the charge room in the presence of the sergeant who was taking the charge—Station Sergeant Dale? Would that be true?—The sergeant would not be allowed to see it.

13538. Would it be true that you bribed those two officers in the charge room while the charge was being taken?—To the best of my recollection, I think that is the place where I gave it to Soer. As he came over to me talking I should go like that (illustrating), and should give to him.

13539. Do you represent to the Commissioners that if you had bribed those two police officers in the charge room before the station sergeant, while the charge was actually being taken against you, you could possibly have forgotten it?—It is a long time to think about, and I have had a lot of other things to think of.

13540. You have thought of a great many other things, and you have told the Commissioners a great many other things that happened before this. Do you suggest that if that had taken place you could possibly have forgotten that you bribed them in the presence of the man taking the charge? Do you suggest if that had happened that you could possibly have forgotten it?—I gave the money that day, I know, under different circumstances to those that I had given it to previous officers.

13541. That is not an answer to my question. It may be an explanation, but it is not an answer. Do you suggest that you could possibly have forgotten it if it had happened?—It is possible, because I know that day it was under different circumstances I gave these officers the money to what I gave the others.

13542. Did you, on the 23rd November, 1903, go to the station in Kennington Road and see Inspector Spencer, or about that date? I will fix the date for you?—It was earlier than November—my first complaint to Inspector Spencer.

13543. I am speaking about this complaint on the 23rd November. I do not say it was your first complaint at all?—That is my confusion.

13544. (Chairman.) How long after the conviction did you first see Inspector Spencer?—I think a matter of seven or ten days.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I think it was the 19th or 20th October.

13545. (Chairman.) Did you see him again?—I have seen him several times.

13545*. Mr. Muir is asking you whether you saw him on the 23rd November?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Take the date as about that time?

13546. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) That was about the time. Did you say this to Inspector Spencer that when charged on the 13th October you handed 10s. to two police-constables in the charge room?—I may have told him I gave the money in the charge room.

13547. 10s. to two police-constables in the charge room?—I may have told him I gave the money in the charge room.

13548. I am asking you whether you said that you handed 10s. to two police-constables in the charge room. Did you say that or not?—I do not think so. I may have done.

13549. Then how is it that to-day you tell the Commission that you are absolutely certain that what you gave to Soer was £1, and that you believe you gave Deed £1, and gave him more afterwards?—I gave Deed more money later in the day that I did Soer. It is quite possible for Inspector Spencer to have took me different.

13550. (Chairman.) Did Inspector Spencer write down what you were saying?—Not that I am aware of. I do not know whether he wrote it down.

13551. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You gave evidence before Mr. McConnell and other justices on Chapman's appeal?—Yes.

13552. You gave evidence as to the matter we are now dealing with?—As nearly as possible.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Give us the date, Mr. Muir.

13553. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The 15th January, 1904. Did you say this, when giving that evidence, in answer to the learned Counsel, Mr. Elliott, who was counsel for Chapman, and who called you as his witness: "(Mr. Elliott.) Now tell us about the last arrest?—It was through the same arrangement. Q. who came to you?—Soer. Q. Tell us just exactly what he said" (that must be Soer)?—"As near as possibly he said, 'I shall want you to-day.' That was previous to the day I was arrested, Sir. Previous to the time they took me down to the police court they came to me, I think it was on the 10th or the 11th of October, the Duke of York's Stakes day. Deed and Soer wished to take me down, and I begged of them not to, as it was a big racing day. I asked them to let me go the following week, and the arrangement was made then on the Saturday that I should go down on the Monday or Tuesday. I went down on the following Tuesday"?—Deed did not want to bring me down.

13554. That is quite a different account to what you have given to-day that Deed had come and told you early in the day that you were to go down and Soar came and fetched you?——

(Chairman.) It was on the 13th October that Deed told him—on the day, I understood.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes. It is different altogether.

(Chairman) I do not quite follow that. The conversation put there seems to have taken place some days before.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Chairman.) Platt is not represented here by counsel, and there is nobody here but ourselves to re-examine him. I am only making this interposition that he may follow me.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Perhaps I had better start at the beginning.

(Chairman.) Yes. This was Chapman's appeal. Did Chapman appeal against a conviction?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I am going to deal with Chapman's appeal on another branch of the case.

(Chairman.) I only want to know how this gentleman came to be called as a witness.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I am going into that, but the only question I am on now is the amount paid to these officers on that day. He has given one account to you this morning as to the amount paid.

13555. (Chairman.) That I understand. (To the Witness.) Were you called as a witness for Chapman?—Yes.

13556. (Chairman.) Is that which you read the examination-in-chief or the cross-examination?——

13557. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The evidence-in-chief by Mr. Elliott, counsel for Chapman. I will read it again: "(Mr. Elliott.) Now tell us about the last arrest?—It was through the same arrangement. Q. Who came to you?—Soar. Q. Tell us just exactly what he said?—As near as possible, he said 'I shall want you to-day.' That was previous to the day I was arrested, Sir. Previous to the time they took me down to the police court they came to me, I think it was on the 10th or 11th of October, the Duke of York's Stake day. Deed and Soar wished to take me down, and I begged them not to, as it was a big racing day. I asked them to let me go the following week, and the arrangement was made then on the Saturday that I should go down on the Monday or Tuesday. I went down on the following Tuesday. Q. That was a special favour?—Yes, for which they received a sovereign each." That was your answer on the 15th January, 1904. Which is right?—I know I made two payments to Deed that day.

13558. The learned Chairman, Mr. McConnell, says, "That was special payment," and your answer is

"Yes." How do you reconcile those statements as to the amounts that you paid on this particular day? Can you reconcile them?—(No answer.)

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not quite follow. From what you read it is not by any means plain to me that that sovereign was paid on the 13th October; in fact, I should infer it was paid earlier, from his not being arrested on the day of the Duke of York's Stakes.

(Chairman.) That is why I interposed a little while ago to ask for some more particulars of the character of the evidence.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) My point is that this was a special payment made to those two officers on that particular day, and the only payments mentioned at all.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You have the document before you, and no doubt you have read it, and there may be something else which shows what you are saying, but in what you read to us it did not seem to me to follow at all that that payment of £1 each which is said to have been made as a special favour, and was a special payment, in answer to Mr. McConnell's question, was paid on the 13th October; indeed, I should have inferred that it was paid for not being arrested on the day of the Duke of York's Stakes, and was paid on that date or about that time.

(Chairman.) I think it says it was some days before.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I will read it again. "(Mr. Elliott.) Now tell us about the last arrest?—It was through the same arrangement. Q. Who came to you?—Soer. Q. Tell us just exactly what he said?—As near as possible he said: 'I shall want you to-day.' That was previous to the day I was arrested, Sir. Previous to the time they took me down to the police court they came to me, I think it was on the 10th or 11th of October, the Duke of York's Stakes day. Deed and Soer wished to take me down and I begged of them not to, as it was a big racing day. I asked them to let me go the following week, and the arrangement was made then on the Saturday that I should go down on the Monday or Tuesday. I went down on the following Tuesday. Q. That was a special favour?—Yes, for which they received a sovereign each."

(Chairman.) That was postponing the day of arrest from that day to the 13th October. That led to my original interposition.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It might be that the sovereign was then paid. He does not say anything about any other payment on that day.

(Chairman.) I do not see that this statement referred to a payment on the 13th October at all.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The only point is this. You have the document before you, and we have not, and when it is read out to us it makes a certain impression, and you assumed from your question that it was impossible to reconcile the two statements.

(Mr. R .D. Muir.) I did.

(Chairman.) We have allowed you to cross-examine because we saw that a conflict of evidence was likely to arise, and that permission could be given to you in accordance with our procedure, but we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that Platt has neither solicitor nor counsel present, and, as far as we know, as public Commissioners, we do not know whether he is taking any advice or having any assistance in getting up the case at all.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Mr. Muir is putting the question, and I suppose he reads to us the whole of it. I understand there is nothing more in it, so far as you know. You drew the inference which, when your attention is called to it, may be coloured, perhaps, by something you have been told in connection with it.

(Chairman.) What I meant was if Platt had a solicitor he would have asked for all that was said at the Newington Sessions, and it would have been read over to the Witness before he came into the box.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I hope not.

(Chairman.) Why. If Platt had been represented, the very first thing the solicitor would have said, when Platt referred to his documents at Newington, would have been, "I want to see all those documents."

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, but not the evidence which he had given.

Mr. A. F. Platt.
26 Oct. 1906.

13559. (Chairman.) Have you tried to get the documents. I think the first day on which you gave evidence you told me that some documents had been impounded at Newington?—Copies of letters that I had.

13560. Have you asked for those letters?—I have asked to have them.

13561. From whom?—I have asked for the whole to be——

13562. Returned to you?—Yes.

13563. Whom have you asked?—The Commissioners.

13564. Do you mean you have asked Mr. Leslie. You do not mean the Commissioner of Police, do you?—I have asked that the letters should be taken notice of. I cannot say I have asked for them to be returned to me personally.

(Chairman.) What took place as to that, Mr. Muir?

13565. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) As I understand, the witness said there were numbers of copies of letters which he had written to the Commissioner of Police and to the Home Office, which he had kept, and in giving his evidence in the witness-box he produced those copies, and they were put in, and so far as I recollect, those were the only documents put in. I know Mr. Grain, who appeared for the Police, suggested to Mr. McConnell that those documents ought to be impounded, and Mr. Grain impounded those. They would then, I suppose, be in the custody of the court, and I suppose they are there now. I think I ought to read on in order to see if there is anything which shows the date at all: "(Q.) That was a special favour?—Yes, for which they received a sovereign each. (Mr. McConnell.) And that was special payment?—Yes. (Mr. Elliott.) That was Deed and Soer?—Yes. (Q.) Did you go down the following week?—I went down on the following Tuesday. (Q.) The same police court and the same fine? Yes. (Q.) This is the first time you have mentioned Deed in connection with arrest. I should like to ask you, Mr. Platt, whether you had any previous dealings with Deed at all before that time before October?—Yes." That finishes the part about the arrest. So far as I recollect, nothing more is said about it, and nothing at all is said about bribing in the charge room. Now you have been asked some questions about the amount of the bribe, and you said £1 a week?—Yes.

13566. When you were before Mr. McConnell did you say it was 10s. a week?—Perhaps it was the way the question was put to me. I should say in some cases it had been 10s. a week. I was asked for one particular payment, perhaps; I was asked as to one 10s.

13567. What was put to you was whether you would suggest the payment was 10s. a week, and you said no, you would not suggest it; it was £1 a week, and you would not think of saying it was 10s. a week, putting it in great detail. What do you say now you paid those men, 10s. or £1 a week?—It averaged £1 a week.

13568. Just listen to this: "(Mr. Elliott.) Then after that first conviction you surrendered by arrangement?—Yes, after I had been fined we adjourned to the 'Goldsmiths' Arms,' in Southwark Bridge Road." Is that the name of the public-house you were thinking of. You described two houses, not by name, but by situation. Is that the Goldsmiths' Arms?—No, that is not the Goldsmiths' Arms. The Goldsmiths' Arms is just close by.

13569. This was your first arrest by Powell: "(Q.) Powell was brought there because Soer was too well known to arrest you himself?—Yes, Soer was getting so well known that he would not be able to get within 50 or 60 yards of me. (Mr. McConnell.) You knew him too well?—Yes. (Mr. Elliott.) He would not allow Soer to get sufficiently close to him. (Mr. McConnell.) Soer said so himself. (Mr. Elliott.) Then after that first conviction you surrendered by arrangement?—Yes, after I had been fined we adjourned to the Goldsmiths' Arms, in Southwark Bridge Road." You say that is not the public-house you described?—It is not the house that we went into. We went into the house next to the railway station.

13570. "(Q.) Who do you mean by 'we'?—Powell, Soer, and myself. (Q.) In what road?—Southwark Bridge Road, I believe, the road is. I got into conversation with them, and said I hoped they would not trouble me any oftener than they possibly could, at the same time giving them half a sovereign. (Q.) You said, "After I had been fined we adjourned to the Goldsmiths' Arms. What do you mean by adjourning?—I asked them to come. (Q.) We adjourn the court, but not to a public-house. You say you paid them money on this occasion?—Yes. (Q.) How much?—10s. (Q.) Each?—No, between them, 5s. each. (A Magistrate.) Did they ask for it?—I offered it and they accepted it. At the same time I said I hoped they would not give me any more trouble than they possibly could, and that any time they wished me to go down I was always willing to go. (The Magistrate.) You said you were willing to accept what charge they preferred?—Yes. (Mr. McConnell.) If you thought it was necessary for them to do their duty by taking you before the Magistrate you would go at once?—At any time it suited me I would go. (Mr. Elliott.) You did not want them to give you any more trouble than was necessary?—Yes. (Q.) Of course you knew what the charge would be under any circumstances?—Yes, betting. (Q.) You were not thieving, burglaring, or assaulting?—Not at all. (Q.) After that interview when was your next arrest?"

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Are you passing from this incident?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

13571. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is something I do not understand about it. Where is the Goldsmiths' Arms?—As near as possible to the public-house.

13572. It is a public-house?—Yes.

13573. But there is another one close by?—Yes.

13574. Which one did you adjourn to?—We adjourned to this one that I cannot think of the name of.

13575. Not the Goldsmiths' Arms?—No.

13576. You are not quite clear about that?—Yes. We attempted to go in one and went to the other.

13577. If I have followed correctly what Mr. Muir was reading, what you said was you did adjourn to the Goldsmiths' Arms. That was the name of the public-house.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes. He says: "After I had been fined we adjourned to the Goldsmith's Arms in Southwark Bridge Road. Q. Who do you mean by 'we'?—Powell, Soer, and myself. Q. In what road?—Southwark Bridge Road I believe the road is. I got into conversation with them, and said I hoped they would not trouble me any oftener than they possibly could, at the same time giving them half a sovereign. Q. You said, 'After I had been fined we adjourned to the Goldsmith's Arms.' What do you mean by adjourning?—I asked them to come. Q. We adjourn the court, but not to a public-house. You say you paid them money on this occasion?—Yes. Q. How much?—10s. Q. each?—No, between them—5s. each."

13578. (Mr Rufus Isaacs.) You say you mean by "adjourned" you asked them to come to the Goldsmith's Arms?—To have a drink. That would be about the conversation.

13579. You went to the Goldsmith's Arms. Did you go in?—No.

13580. Why not?—Because there were people there we did not want to see.

13581. You intended to go in there, but went to another?—Yes.

13582. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) "Q. After that interview when was your next arrest?—A matter of within four or five weeks. Q. From that date?—Yes. Q. Just tell us all about it. Had you seen Soer or Powell between times?—I had seen Soer. Q. Had any further payments been made?—I passed him further money. Q. Where was that?—In the 'Hero of Waterloo.' Q. At that time did you know Deed at all?—Yes. Q. Perhaps we had better go on with Soer at present. You say your next arrest was four or five weeks after the interview. Just tell us what happened then?—Soer came to me at a place where there was a little wicket gate. He looked straight through. I knew who he was, and I went out on to Waterloo Station and met him there He said: 'I want you to come down to-day. What time would suit' I said, 'Any time after half-past two.' (Mr. McConnell.) Where was this little wicket?—The approach where the traffic empties. It is within Waterloo Station in Waterloo Road. (Mr. McConnell.) A betting place there?—There was then, but I do not think it is now. (Mr. Elliott.) We will deal with the past rather than the present?—Yes. Q. At what time?—Half-past two. I was in the police station about a quarter to three. Q. Was Soer there?—Yes, he took me down. Q. Which station was that?—Kennington Road. Q. And from the station where did you go?—To Stones End Police Court. Q. To Southwark Police Court?—I believe that is what it is called. Q. And you went before the Magistrate and pleaded guilty?—Yes. Q. And the usual fine was imposed?—Yes. Q. £5 was it?—Quite right, Sir. Q. Well, then, was anything paid on that occasion?—Yes. Q. What did you pay on that occasion?—I paid Gunn, the other constable, and Soer half a sovereign each"?—Yes, I expect that was it.

13583. You have told us it was £1?—When I averaged it out at £1 I averaged the money I paid collectively.

13584. You have told us about the money paid outside Lillywhite's this morning.

13585. (Chairman.) "The money was paid outside Lillywhite's, almost opposite the Sessions House. I put a sovereign into the hands of each, Soer and Gunn."

13586. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You said before Mr. McConnell that it was half a sovereign. What do you say to that, anything?—No.

13587. "Q. When were you next convicted?—In a matter of four or five weeks. Q. A little over a month each time?—Yes, barring the last conviction. Q. You are taking me now to the third conviction?—He came down to me, Soer, and told me he should require me again. When he came to me it was just after twelve. I had a communication from my wife that her eldest girl was very bad, and I did not go down that day, but the following day he apprehended two of us. Q. What time were you apprehended the following day?—I should think about two. Q. Where were you apprehended. The same place?—Yes. Q. Did you go to the same police station and the same police court?—Yes. Q. And fined the same sum?—Yes, the two of us. The remark was made that it would cost me £10 instead of £5 it would have cost me the day before. Q. What did you pay on that occasion?—Half a sovereign each"? What do you say to that?—No doubt I paid them 10s. each then, but I should see them afterwards, or previously in that week.

13588. "Q. Had any money been paid between the second and third conviction?—If they did not take it one day they had it the next. Q. How much per week." What do you think your answer was before Mr. McConnell to that question, "How much per week"? You have been asked that question a great many times here. What do you think your answer was then. Have you any idea?—I should think it would be £1 a week.

13589. "Half a sovereign each, on the average." That was your answer before Mr. McConnell. How do you account for that?

13590. (Chairman.) Was it your answer?—The different way they put the questions there. I suppose I should have to answer the question in that way, but I always meant £1 a week.

13591. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) "Q. How much per week?—Half a sovereign per week, on the average." Then comes the passage which refers to the money which I have already read. Now tell us about the last arrest, and the sovereign, and the special favour, and the special payment. Do you remember the first payment you made to Deed?—No, I cannot say I remember it. The first payment?

13592. Yes, the first payment you made to Deed?—It was over some transaction with some relation of his.

13593. I mean the first bribe you paid to Deed. Do you remember that?—I remember where it took place, but I cannot be positive of the time.

13594. Where was it?—At the "Hero of Waterloo."

13595. Do you remember how much it was?—No, not at the exact moment.

13596. You have told us that although Powell was not out against you in plain clothes you paid him regularly his £1 a week on the average. Do you remember saying this before Mr. McConnell: "Q. Were you paying everyone of these men between the dates of the different convictions or only at the time you were convicted?—Three of them I paid every week or fortnight. Powell was the only one that only received very little remuneration of me. Q. You did not pay Powell much?—No." Before this Commission you have said that you paid Powell as you paid the others, £1 a week, and you paid it to him because, although he was not out against you, you thought he might be out against you?—Quite right.

13597. Here you put him in a different category altogether. "Three of them I paid every week, or fortnight. Powell was the only one that received very little remuneration of me. Q. You did not pay Powell much?—No."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The statement he made about Powell was that it was £1 a week, only on one occasion he paid him 10s. That is my recollection of his statement.

13598. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) How do you reconcile that answer with the evidence you have given before the Commissioners?—The last few weeks of the time I did not see Powell—the last two or three weeks of my betting transactions.

13599. I will now pass to another matter. Have you got your books which were handed in to the learned secretary? (The books were handed to the witness.) I want to know the form of the entry which you say indicates to your mind that it relates to the bribery of police officers. Just give me a specimen.

13600. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Which is the entry? Point to it?—There. (Pointing.)

13601. Under "expenses" do you mean?—That would be it.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) May I look at the book?

(Chairman.) Yes. (The book was handed to the learned Counsel.)

13602. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Do you mind my putting a red cross opposite to it to identify it?—No.

13603. (Chairman.) We must mark that book in some way for the purposes of the evidence. What book is that? How do you describe it?—It is an ordinary paying out book.

13604. Is it an early one or a late one in regard to these transactions?—I think it would be an early one—one of the first I had. (The book was put in and marked A.P.1.)

13605. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) First of all there is a name, is it—Juris?—I cannot tell.

13606. Just look at it?—You have not marked it against the name I want.

13607. Which is the name?—The one where the dash is.

13608. I thought the learned Commissioner asked you whether it was the word "expenses," and you said yes?—I understood him to say under the list of expenses.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You pointed to something. I thought it might be something which had an initial at the beginning and end indicating the name. I did ask him whether it was under expenses. I meant was it included in expenses? He thought I meant the entry below.

13609. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) There is an initial "L," a dash, and then comes a final "g." Is that it?—Yes.

13610. Does that represent a name?—Yes.

13611. Of a police officer?—Yes.

13612. In what Division?—G Division.

13613. At what date was he an officer in the G Division?—From March, to my knowledge, and I believe at the present date.

13614. (Chairman.) From March, 1906, that means?—Yes. That is to the best of my knowledge.

13615. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) "10s."?—Yes.

13616. So that this book relates to the period between March and July of the present year?—Yes.

13617. Have you any book at all that relates to the period between May and October, 1903?—No.

13618. Absolutely none?—No.

13619. Did you ever have any book relating to that period, May to October, 1903, which contained entries showing payments to police officers?—No.

13620. You never had?—No, these are entries made by one of our men, one of the agents.

13621. (Chairman.) The entry "L——g" is not in your handwriting?—No.

13622. In whose handwriting is that book?—One of the agents.

13623. What is his name?—Mr. Leslie has the name.

13624. The book is not in your handwriting, but in the handwriting of some other person who is an agent for you?—Yes.

13625. Cannot you give me his name?—Fisher.

13626. What is his Christian name?—I think his Christian name is William.

13627. He is your agent?—He was at that time.

13628. At any rate, the book is in his handwriting?—Yes.

13629. And you got the book from him?—Yes.

13630. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) But you know from that entry who the person is who is referred to?—Yes.

13631. You have told us it is somebody in the G Division?—Yes.

13632. And there is the beginning and end of the name of an officer?—Yes.

13633. We must know who that officer is in order to be able to test it?—I handed the name in.

13634. Is it one of the names handed in to us?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) With regard to that name, I suggest I should have an opportunity of testing it.

(Chairman.) You have handed in the name of "L——g." Have you any objection to Mr. Muir knowing the name?

(Witness.) No.

(Chairman.) The name is Lang.

13635. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Have you got his number?—No.

13636. Or his rank?—No. I could not tell you his rank.

13637. That is the form of the entry in 1906. I ask you whether you have any similar entries for 1903. You say "No"?—It was not necessary.

13638. I ask you whether you ever had any book containing such entries. You say "No"?—No, it was not necessary.

13639. Did you ever have any memorandum book with such entries?—No.

13640. Or any diary with such entries?—No.

13641. Or any pocket book with such entries?—No.

13642. Are you absolutely definite about that?—About the L Division there?

13643. Yes. Are you absolutely definite that you never had any book, pocket book, diary, or memorandum book?—I had books for betting purposes.

13644. In which you had the names of constables to whom you had paid money?—Not as regards the L Division.

13645. You are quite clear about that?—Yes.

13645*. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is rather important that you should know what is said about the book. I want you to look at this book which Mr. Dickinson has been going through. You see, for example, there is that entry?—That would be in the other brother's handwriting.

13646. Does that relate to police bribes?—Yes.

13647. You mean that the entry which I have got here, which I read to be "Coppers, 4s.," relates to police bribes?—Yes.

13648. That occurs a good many times in the book, and there are various amounts.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I thought that the one he handed to me was a specimen of all the entries, but now it appears there is another book.

13649. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes, Mr. Dickinson has been through it, and pointed out various entries, and it is important to know what they mean. I see, for example, on almost the last page there is an entry of "Coppers, 4s. Looker-out, 4s." Just look at that?—That is right.

13650. Does that mean police 4s., and 4s. to somebody who was looking out?—Yes.

Mr. A. F. Platt.
26 Oct. 1906.

13651. (Mr. Dickinson.) Who was not a policeman?—No—what we call a scout.

13652. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Apparently from a cursory glance I have given to it it is "coppers"?—Yes.

13653. I see at the same time there is an entry "Looker-out"?—Yes, that would be where they account for the money.

13654. (Chairman.) Is that "scout" there?—Scout, 2s. That would be an extra scout we had that day.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I will pass this book to you. Mr. Muir, and I will put a slip in at the entries to which I have referred, so that you may follow it. They are a little difficult to find otherwise. I do not think he had got to this book yet, but it is important that you should see it, and that you should put any question you want to put upon it.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I see the difficulty of embarking on a cross-examination on this book, which I have never had an opportunity of examining. It is advisable that I should see it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There are the entries. (The book was put in and marked A.P. 2.)

13655. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) In whose handwriting is that second book?—Most of the handwriting is in William Fisher's, and odd markings in Robert Fisher's.

13656. Those two are brothers?—Yes.

13657. They are both agents of yours?—Yes.

13658. Will you kindly look at the page where the markers are, and tell me in whose handwriting the words "Coppers" and "Looker out" are in. In whose handwriting is the first one?—I should say Robert's.

13659. (Chairman.) We had better have the entry?—"Coppers, 4s."

13660. In whose handwriting is that?—Robert Fisher's.

13661. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The next one?—There is a mark here, "10s."

13662. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There are three entries there. One is "Looker-out, 4s." What is the next entry?—"Tecs, 10s."

13663. What does that mean?—One of the others of the G Division.

13664. A police officer?—Yes.

13665. "Tecs 10s., Copper 1s."?—Yes.

13666. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) In whose handwriting are those entries?—I should say they are in William Fisher's.

13667. Do they write at all alike, or can you easily distinguish between them?—I can distinguish in most cases.

13668. The next one?—This would be William's. I would not swear to it. It might have been written hurriedly.

13669. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Read the entry?—The entry is: "Coppers 4s., Query —, Dart 8s., Chandler 14s."—they are two lookers-out. We have the names here. This happened perhaps on a Saturday when they would receive the balance of the wages that were due to them. That is why the name would be put instead of "Scout" or "Looker-out." "Copper 4s. Comm." That would be commission to some man who had been in the habit of bringing us several pounds during the course of the week.

13670. Not a policeman?—No.

13671. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) In whose handwriting is that?—I think that is in Robert's.

13672. Are you sure about it, or are you doubtful?—I rather think it is Robert's. For preference I should say it was Robert's.

13673. Will you turn to the next one?—"Coppers 4s., Lookers-out 4s." That would be in William's handwriting.

13674. Is that the last of those marks?—Yes.

13675. Then do all those relate to 1906?—Yes.

13676. Do all the books that have been handed in relate to 1906?—Yes.

13677. (Chairman.) I think it would be useful to have the other books marked now. Do you know anything about the order of date?—No, they were written promiscuously. I was very fortunate to have them by me.

13678. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In whose handwriting is this?—That is in William's. (The book was put in and marked A.P. 3.)

13679. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) A.P. 3 is in William's handwriting?—I have not looked at every page, but the generality of them.

13680. (Chairman.) What do you say about the handwriting of that one?—The greater part of it, so far as I have looked at it, is in William's hand-writing, but there might be an odd sheet in somebody else's handwriting; the generality of it is in William Fisher's handwriting.

13681. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Now will you look at this one, and tell us in whose handwriting that is?—The greater part of it is in William Fisher's. (The book was put in and marked A.P. 4.)

13682. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is one other book you have referred to. In whose handwriting is that book?—There is one list there that I might be called on to show. There is a little bit of paper in that.

13683. What we want to know is in whose handwriting is the greater part of the book?—Nearly all mine. (The book was put in and marked A.P. 5.)

13684. What period does that relate to?—From the latter part of March to July.

13685. (Chairman.) Of this year?—Yes.

13686. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) That contains entries nearly all in your own handwriting. Does it relate to transactions by yourself or to transactions by your agents?—They would be transactions I had done myself very quickly. It is nearly all relating to betting, but not bets made.

13687. Does it contain any entries relating to payments to the police?—Yes.

13688. Made by you?—Yes.

13689. Personally?—Yes, but not in the book itself.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Mr. Muir's question was as to the entries in that book.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Certainly.

13690. The book contains no entries of payments to the police?—No.

13691. Not the book itself, but something else?—Yes.

13692. What is the something else?—A piece of paper on which I put the expenses down.

13693. (Chairman.) The slip of paper you are referring to?—Yes.

13694. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I understand you to say that is the slip of paper?—Yes.

13695. Is that the only one which contains any entry about the police?—Yes.

13696. That slip in this book, which, so far as I understand, is not a leaf of the book but is in the book you say is the only entry relating to payments to the police in this book?—That is right.

13697. (Chairman.) You found that slip of paper in the book when you brought it to the court the other day?—Yes.

13698. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When he brought the book to the court he handed it to me, and he showed me this one entry, which was on a loose sheet, as it was then, in the book, and is now. The entry is, "Police 4s." I do not know whether there is anything else?—"Leach 10s."

13699. Who is Leach?—A detective officer.

13700. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) What division?—G Division.

13701. Do you know his number?—No.

13702. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There are other names there, but I do not know what they mean. What is "Looker"?—"Looker"—Looker out—"4s. 6d."

13703. "Looker" there means "Looker-out," and not a name?—Yes.

13704. What is that?—That is "Lookers" where I averaged their payments up for the week—the number of men we had. That was the balance I paid.

13705. That again means "Lookers-out"—scouts?—Yes.

13706. Do any of the other entries, except what you have told us with reference to Leach and 'Ins and Outs," apply to payments to the police? What does "Ins and Outs" mean?—"Ins and Outs" means that there was a relief police officer on that particular section paid, and I have put it "Ins and Outs." This is where I am making out a list of the payments.

13707. Do you mean that is like "Sundries"?—Yes.

(The slip of paper from A.P. 5 was put in and marked A.P. 6.)

13708. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The sheet of paper A.P. 6 is all in your handwriting, is it?—Not all of it, because there are some pencil marks on it. I do not know who they belong to.

13709. You do not know whose handwriting it is in?—No.

13710. Will you tell me to what date that paper relates?—Perhaps I have got the date in the book. (After referring to book.) Between May and June, I should think.

13711. Between May and June of this year?—Yes.

13712. (Chairman.) Am I to understand that that list relates to some transactions in May and June?—I cannot precisely say, but between on that as it is in this book.

13713. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) "Police, 4s." Was that a payment you made yourself to a policeman or policemen?—No.

13714. To whom did you make that payment?—The payment was made by one of my agents.

13715. But to whom did you make it? You have a note of it?—That was a query in the list of expenses for the day.

13716. What payment does that relate to?—That relates to Robert.

13717. Robert Fisher?—Yes.

13718. The other payment is "Leach, 10s."?—Yes.

13719. Was that a payment made by yourself or made by an agent?—It was made near enough for me to see.

13720. What is the name of the agent?—Robert Fisher.

13721. You personally saw him pay it to Leach?—Yes.

13722. You remember the transaction quite well, do you?—I remember it taking place.

13723. Where did it take place?—Clerkenwell Road.

13724. What part of Clerkenwell Road?—Near Great Sutton Street.

13725. I do not quite know where Great Sutton Street is?—It is a turning out of Clerkenwell Road, running into Goswell Road, I believe.

13727. It is on the opposite side of the way to Foresters' Hall, is it?—Yes.

13728. That is where you saw this money paid to Detective Leach?—Yes.

13729. Could you see the amount of money that was paid?—I knew, because I was asked for it before it was paid.

13730. You were asked for it, and in your eyesight it was taken and handed to Leach?—I gave the agent 10s.

13731. Robert Fisher?—Yes.

13732. You saw him go to Leach?—He looked into a jeweller's shop window, and I could see it pass like this. (Illustrating.) I could see through the window. The agent had not any money on him, and therefore I know it was the same coin that I gave him that he passed to the officer.

13733. With regard to those books, have they the handwriting of any other agents of yours than William and Robert Fisher?—No.

13734. Were those your only agents at this time?—They were the two men that we employed. There were five other men who would take occasional bets who would have nothing whatever to do with paying out or making entries in the books.

13735. So that if any agent of yours paid money to the police in 1906 it would be one or other of the officers?—Quite true.

13736. Those were the only agents you employed this year?—The only, as we term them, actual agents.

13737. Who paid the police?—That is right.

13738. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) One or other of these two afterwards—William or Robert?—Yes.

13739. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) So that when you spoke of payments being made to members of the G Division by agents of yours you were referring to William and Robert Fisher?—In one sense, yes, but it is quite possible for Robert or William Fisher to have handed one or other of the men money to take to the coppers on the point.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I do not wish now to ask any questions about these books, because I have not been able to examine them.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) We have had reference made to some documents which were impounded before Mr. McConnell. Has the Commission or have your clients copies of those documents?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Only in this way, that the documents impounded purported to be copies of letters sent to the Commissioner of Police and the Home Office. We have the originals. Copies of those will be supplied to the Commissioners.

(Chairman.) That will answer our purpose. I thought from what was said that they were actually at the Sessions House impounded, but you say you have them.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) We have the originals, but in order to make sure we must see the documents that were impounded at Newington, so as to ascertain whether there is anything which we have not got.

(Chairman.) Notice will be given to the public in the usual way as to our next sitting. Notice will be given to you, Mr. Muir, and notice will be sent to the Press.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I am obliged.

FOURTEENTH DAY.

Tuesday, 20th November 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
RUFUS DANIEL ISAACS, Esq., K.C., M.P.
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Secretary.)

20 Nov. 1906.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Before the Commission proceeds, would you allow me to make one or two applications? The first is with reference to the case of the man Platt. You may remember he handed in a book or books in which he said there was writing in the handwriting of a man named Fisher or two Fishers, which showed that sums of money had been paid to the police. I ask permission that that book or books may be inspected by the man Fisher—of course, the books remaining in the custody of the officers of the Commission. There is a reason why I suggest that. We do not suggest it is not Fisher's handwriting, but we do suggest that an opportunity should be given to us of allowing Fisher to inspect the book.

(Chairman.) I understand from the Secretary that under my order you have had inspection of the books—that is to say, that Mr. Muskett, who is acting as solicitor for the police, and his clerks have had full access to the books.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes; I am not on that point. We asked the Secretary to allow further inspection by the man Fisher, and he said that would be a matter that he would have to apply to the Commission for.

(Secretary.) No; I said I must take instructions from the Commission.

(Chairman.) You can tell me about this, Mr. Bankes, and correct me if I am wrong. Upon an ordinary order for inspection in an action it is not the custom for witnesses to look at the books, is it?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is no limit to the people who may inspect, so far as I know. It is common to have an order for inspection by experts, for instance.

(Chairman.) However, we are not bound by the technical rules that govern actions at law, and I see, unless my brother Commissioners see any reason against it, no reason why you should not have the kind of inspection that you want. Fisher must not take the book away.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly not. It shall be done in the presence of the Secretary.

(Chairman.) Mr. Muskett must come with him. It must be done with some formality.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Quite so, Sir. Then I have another application to make, and that is with reference to the D'Angely case. That was the case which really was the foundation of the order for the Commission. It is a long time now since the matter was investigated before you, and we have a mass of evidence that we desire to present to the Commission, unless the Commission will make a definite pronouncement that they are satisfied that the Police were not to blame in that matter. Of course, at the present moment nothing has been said, and therefore I am instructed to press the Commission to hear the evidence that was taken at Algiers, but, of course, if there is anything in the nature of a definite pronouncement that evidence would not become necessary.

(Chairman.) According to precedent, a Royal Commission proceeds to give its decisions or its recommendations in the form of a report to the Crown, and what you are asking us is, in effect, to make an interim report.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, Sir; what I am asking you to say is this: I press for the admission of this evidence unless the Commission state that they do not require it. Of course, if they do not require it, the inference is that they are satisfied with the evidence that they have got.

(Chairman.) I will take a note that you have made the application. We will consider it, and I will let you know later on in the day or to-morrow.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Then the last application I have to make is this: I do ask that some intimation should be given to us of the course of procedure. The last time this Commission sat was on October 26th, three weeks ago, and a week ago application was made to the Secretary that he would give us information of the cases that were going to be taken. The only information we have received is that the case of Mander or Maurer would be taken to-day, and that Platt's case would not be taken either to-day or to-morrow. The result is, the only information we have got up to the present, although three weeks have elapsed, is that one case of Maurer may perhaps be taken, which, so far as we know, is quite a short case, and if the Commission are going to sit the rest of to-day and to-morrow we are absolutely unprepared to deal with any matter which comes before you. I must say that that course does give the impression that the Police authorities are not being treated fairly, and therefore I do ask that further information should be given to us. Up to the present we have done our best with the information that has been given us to deal with matters that come before you, but may I give one illustration? The man Platt was called after the luncheon interval on one day without the slightest intimation to us that he was going to be called, or what was the nature of his evidence, and he was well into his evidence before we realised that it was a matter relating to street betting. Of course, at that point it was impossible to interrupt, because people would have thought we were desirous that the matter should not come before you, but if I had known I should have desired to take your ruling as to whether evidence of that kind was within the scope of the Commission at all.

(Chairman.) That is for us to determine. You are talking now as though you were counsel with a right to appear before us.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no right.

(Chairman.) We are a Commission charged to make a certain inquiry, and it is perfectly obvious from the very nature of our inquiry that so far from discouraging any evidence, if we are to do our duty we ought to hear any citizen who comes forward and says, "I complain of the conduct of the Police"—that is, assuming his complaint is with regard to a matter coming within our terms of reference.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Quite so, Sir.

(Chairman.) When Platt came forward to give evidence it was our absolute duty to hear him. We shall, on the other hand, take care that the Police are in no way prejudiced, because every opportunity shall be given to the police to rebut the charges which have been made by Platt.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That statement was made on the first occasion, but up to the present I can only say that in our opinion we have not had the reasonable opportunity which we are entitled to. For instance, with regard to this sitting, I do ask that we should have reasonable information at this moment, if possible, of what cases are going to be taken to-morrow.

(Chairman.) You are really asking us to make a regular code of procedure suitable for your particular clients.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Pardon me, I am only asking that we shall have a reasonable opportunity of meeting the cases that are brought forward.

(Chairman.) That I say you shall have. How on earth can you be prejudiced by the fact that A B comes into the witness-box and gives his story, and the Commissioners listen to his story, and then you are given, if you ask for it, an ample opportunity to cross-examine?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You have reminded me of a fact which I have always desired to keep present to my mind, that I am not here in the ordinary capacity of a counsel, and I am only entitled to address you to the extent and limit you authorise me to.

(Chairman.) We have given no permission to any counsel to make addresses to us.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is quite true, but at the same time you would not have resented my calling your attention to the fact that it is, at any rate, open to question whether under the powers of this Commission such evidence as that of Platt is admissible.

(Chairman.) That is entirely for us, and we shall decide it in due course.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I suppose you have decided it or else you would not have allowed him to be called.

(Chairman.) If I were to answer that observation I should be giving a kind of decision with regard to certain matters. I must not be taken as assenting to your view that cases have been sprung upon you. Reasonable notice has been given in the most important of the cases that have had our consideration and as far as possible we have endeavoured to group witnesses together on both sides for reasons of convenience.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) With the qualification "the most important cases" yes, but with regard to numbers of them we have been told overnight that they are going to be taken in the morning, and though we have done our best it really is not, with great submission, a reasonable opportunity of getting up the necessary evidence in order to meet the charges which are brought. As I said before, I do not want to make a grievance. It is the last thing I want to do, but I must keep on calling attention to it unless we do get further opportunity.

(Chairman.) That is what I keep on saying, a further opportunity you will have. We will hear any witnesses that will throw any light to a reasonable extent on the charges made by Platt. I fail to see any grievance at all.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You have said that we shall have the fullest opportunity, and I am quite sure under the circumstances we shall get it, and if we do get it I shall have nothing further to say.

(Chairman.) Mr. Dickinson has reminded me that what you appear to want is a reasonable opportunity of getting up your case before the witness has made his statement in the box.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Pardon me. For instance, I assume that a certain number of cases are in the possession of the Commission, that is to say the names of them. Why should we not be told the names of the cases that are going to be brought forward? I do not say a proof of the witness's evidence, but merely to enable us to collect together the information which is necessary to put before you in that case. 20 Nov. 1906.

(Chairman.) The answer is because the Commissioners do not think that they could conduct the inquiry efficiently if that information were given to you.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Not the names of the cases that are going to be brought forward?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I certainly regret it. That is all I can say.

(Mr. Dickinson.) You have never been prevented from bringing your evidence after the case has been called. We have never resisted any application for a postponement.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is not a question of bringing our evidence, but I can tell you the great personal inconvenience and difficulty I have been placed in. In one case which has been brought before you the witnesses were giving their evidence before I had even had an opportunity of reading the Police reports or the evidence of the police constables.

(Chairman.) But why not. The statement on oath of the witness may be looked upon as a kind of indictment. You get the indictment we will say on the Monday, and if you say you want time to answer it you get the time from the Commission.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If I had taken that course there would have been more adjournments than there have been now. I have struggled with the difficulty. If no assistance is going to be given I must stand on my strict rights, and when the witness is examined he will have to stand down till we have had a reasonable opportunity of considering the matter. I have endeavoured to facilitate the proceedings, and because I have endeavoured to facilitate the proceedings it must not be suggested I am making a complaint which is without justification.

(Chairman.) You talk about "rights."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no rights.

(Chairman.) I have already explained that you are not here as counsel in the ordinary sense of the term. We are not bound to allow cross-examination by anybody, and we may do all the work of examination and cross-examination ourselves if we like, but we felt having regard to the peculiar character of this inquiry —I mean the peculiar character having regard to the fact that it is given to a Royal Commission—we thought that it would greatly assist us and be to the general advantage that in some cases counsel should have the right to examine and cross-examine.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not think I used the word "rights," and up to the present I have endeavoured loyally to obey your ruling.

(Chairman.) You said "strict rights."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That was a mistake of mine, and I unreservedly withdraw it. I quite admit that I am here subject to your pleasure and with only such an opportunity of asking questions as you think proper. I only ask for a further opportunity, and you say it shall be given. I have nothing more to say.

(Chairman.) Now we will go on with Maurer's case. That is a case closely connected with the case of Altfuldisch and Ruppert.

(Earl Russell.) Yes, it arose on the same night, and about the same time. The name of the man is Maurer, and he is the same man who was called Mander in Inspector McKay's evidence.

WILLIAM MAURER, sworn.

(Examined by Earl Russell.)

13740. What is your occupation?—Gardener. W. Maurer.

13741. You work for Mr. Clark, of Priory Lane, Putney?—Yes.

13742. Are you still there?—Yes.

13743. Have you been there some time?—Sixteen months.

13744. Do you recollect on the 16th December last a party at the Wedes Hotel, in Greek Street, Soho?—Yes.

W. Maurer.
20 Nov. 1906

13745. That was the occasion of a meeting of the Floral Society, or something of that sort?—The German Gardeners' Club.

13746. Were you present at that meeting?—Yes.

13747. You are a member of that society?—Yes.

13748. Do you remember what time you broke up?—Yes, 12 o'clock.

13749. Have you heard of the case of Altfuldisch?—Yes.

13750. Do you know Altfuldisch personally?—I do now.

13751. Did you at this meeting on the 16th December know Altfuldisch?—No, I did not know him at all.

13752. Did you see him there to your knowledge?—Yes, I saw him, he was sitting opposite to me at the table.

13753. Were you introduced to him or did you speak to him at all?—No.

13754. When the meeting broke up at midnight what did you do?—We went outside the hotel, and we were waiting until some other friends came out.

13755. How many people were with you?—I could not say exactly how many, but I should guess about ten or twelve were standing outside—not with me.

13756. How many were with you?—I was talking to two gentlemen.

13757. Was there any noise or disturbance from the party?—No, I did not see any noise.

13758. Were you or your two friends making any disturbance?—No, I saw no noise and no disturbance.

13759. You did not see any in the street at all?—No.

13760. While you were talking to your two friends what happened?—These two friends wished me good-night. I was asking the gentlemen where they were going to. They told me to Hampstead, because I did not know them before. It was the first time I was introduced to them, so I wished them good-night, and said I should be very pleased if they became members of the club. Then I turned round and followed the president and several members of the club, and I was going the opposite road.

13761. That was after you said good-night to your two friends?—Yes, it was a matter of a minute or two.

13762. About how many were with you when you were following the president?—I think about five or six; I could not tell you exactly, because there were several more coming out of the hotel.

13763. And then?—Then I was arrested.

13764. But what happened exactly? What was the first you knew of it?—The first I knew was that I felt a push.

13765. Where?—On my back. I did not see any policeman before. I felt a push on my back, and I turned round and said "We are not obliged to run." There was Ruppert and another gentleman in there—I do not know who was with Ruppert, but he was paying the bill of the club. That is all I said, "I am not obliged to run," and I felt a push towards another police constable, and the inspector said "Take this man."

13766. Do you know who the inspector was?—Yes.

13767. What was his name?—I did not know his name then, but I know now, it is Mr. McKay.

13768. You say he pushed you to another policeman and said "Take this man"?—Yes, that is right.

13769. Was that all you had done before you were arrested?—Yes, that is all I had done.

13770. Had there been any fighting on your part since you came out of the restaurant?—No, not on our part.

13771. You did not fight with anybody?—No.

13772. Is it true that you were rolling on the ground?—No.

13773. Were you using bad language of any sort?—No, not at all.

13774. You were standing on your feet with your back to the Inspector?—I believe I was on the pavement, and my friends were walking on the pavement and on the road.

13775. And you were walking slowly?—Yes, slowly, because we were waiting for the others to come out.

13776. At the time you were arrested did you see any other men fighting or rolling in the street?—No, not at all.

13777. Nobody in sight of you?—No. I did not take any notice of what happened on the road.

13778. Then you were taken to the police station?—Yes.

13779. Did you make any complaint of the conduct on the way to the station or at the station?—At the station I told them my case, what happened, and what I was arrested for, because I had not done anything.

13780. Do you mean by "them" the Inspector on duty?—This policeman who took me there.

13781. You told the policeman who took you there?—Yes.

13782. You were taken before the Inspector at the station?—Yes.

13783. Did you say anything to him?—I did not say anything, but I stood there, and the Inspector asked me to sit down, and I said "Thank you." I thought I was coming out again. I thought that I would give my evidence there, and then I could go out, and he said "Sit down." I said "Thank you," and while I said "Thank you" he gave me a push on to the chair, so I had to sit down.

13784. Was that the Inspector in charge of the station or the Inspector who arrested you?—No, Mr. McKay.

13785. Did Inspector McKay come to the station with you?—He came afterwards. I do not know, but I believe he and another policeman brought Ruppert, a friend of mine.

13786. It was Inspector McKay who pushed you down on the bench?—Yes.

13787. But what about the Inspector who took the charge. Do you remember being charged before the Inspector on duty at the station?—I believe that was a man with a bald head. I could not tell exactly who it was.

13788. Did you hear a charge against you made before him. Did you hear him told what you had done?—Yes.

13789. Who made the charge? Was it Inspector McKay or the constable who took you there?—No, Inspector McKay took the charge, as far as I know.

13790. Did you know what Inspector McKay told the Inspector on duty?—Yes.

13791. What did he say to him?—As far as I can recollect, he said we were fighting and using bad language, and we were disorderly.

13792. Did you say anything to the Inspector on duty about it?—Yes, after he came upstairs and asked me, I said I did not know what I was arrested for.

13793. Did you tell him exactly what had happened, what you have told us now?—Yes.

13794. You told him you had not been fighting?—Yes.

13795. You remember that?—Oh, yes.

13796. You were let out on bail soon afterwards?—Yes, but I have to say something more about that. Then I was searched in the pockets, and Inspector McKay behaved to me like a dog. He searched my pockets, and I thought he was going to pull my overcoat from me. I had several papers in my overcoat, but I do not recollect what they were—letters and postcards and a couple of cigars. They went in the fire. I did not get them back.

13797. You say he took the papers and cigars from your pocket and put them on the fire?—Yes, I had several letters and postcards in my overcoat pocket, and I believe there was a programme of that evening there, and a few cigars I had in my pocket. He threw them in the fire in front of me.

13798. When you were bailed did you not get those back?—No; my knife and pencil case and things like that I got back, but not the other things.

13799. Is there anything else that you want to say about the police station?—Yes, in the morning I asked to come out because I had to be on duty that day.

We had a big job on in my place. They sent for bail to Barnes, and as far as I know the policeman was in Barnes early in the morning, about nine o'clock. I had to stop there till one o'clock, so I told my Governor why it was I did not come, as we had a big job on. It was the Sunday before Christmas.

13800. How many hours were you in the police station altogether?—I was in the police station from twelve o'clock at night, or soon after twelve, till one o'clock on Sunday.

13801. Do you mean midnight on Saturday?—Yes.

13802. Then you were about thirteen hours in the police station?—Yes. I told the Inspector who was on duty that I had to go out and do my duty, but he did not take any notice.

13803. It was on Sunday morning that you were let out?—Yes.

13804. Then on the following Monday you had to appear at the Police Court at ten o'clock?—Yes.

13805. Did you go there?—Yes.

13806. You heard the charge made against you?—Yes.

13807. Did you make any defence?—Yes.

13808. What did you say to the Magistrate?—I told him the case as it was, and I said it was untrue what Mr. McKay said.

13809. Did you go into the witness box yourself, or did you say that from the dock?—I do not know the difference between the dock and the witness box. It was a place with an iron bar.

(Earl Russell.) I suppose we shall have the notes of what occurred in the Police Court?

13810. (Chairman.) If it becomes necessary. (To the witness.) Were you sworn upon the book?—No, I do not think I was sworn upon the book.

13811. I think you probably mean you made your statement from the dock?—Yes, it was the dock.

13812. Did you not have an opportunity of being called as a witness? Did not somebody ask you whether you would like to give evidence?—No.

13813. (Earl Russell.) Did the Magistrate or anybody tell you that you could be sworn if you liked and go into the witness box and give your evidence on oath?—No, it only took two or three minutes.

13814. The whole case lasted two or three minutes?—Yes.

13815. You called no other witnesses?—I did not have any witnesses at that time.

13816. What did you tell the Magistrate about the case?—I told him very nearly the same, only I did not have time enough to tell the whole case. The only thing I could say was how it happened and that what Inspector McKay said was not true, and then I was convicted.

13817. Who stopped you when you were making your statement. You say you did not have time enough. What prevented you from having time?—The Judge.

13818. Who was it who interrupted you when you were making your statement?—The Judge.

13819. You say that was while you were speaking?—I said it was untrue what Inspector McKay said, and the Judge said "Ten shillings or seven days," and I had to go out. I could not say any more.

13820. Then you paid the fine and said no more about it?—Yes.

13821. Have you had any trouble with the Police before this?—No, not at all.

13822. Or since?—No.

13823. How long have you been in this country?—Very nearly three years.

13824. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had you belonged to this club long?—Since last August twelve month, but I had been there several times before without being a member.

13825. Without paying anything?—I only went there several times in August.

13826. Has the club got any rules?—Yes.

13827. Have you got them?—Yes, these are the rules for this year and last year. (Producing books.)

13828-9. They are in German, and I am not scholar enough to be able to translate them, but do you pay any entrance subscription?—Not entrance, but 7d. monthly. W. Maurer. 20 Nov. 1906.

13830. What does the 7d. go to?—For newspapers and things like that—the gardening papers.

13831. Have you a room of your own?—Not only for us.

13832. Do other people use the room besides yourselves?—Not the same evening when we are there.

13833. Do you have the room to yourselves on evenings when the club meets?—Yes.

13834. How often does the club meet?—Twice monthly—the first and the third Saturday in the month.

13835. Do you have to pay your subscription every month or only when you go?—When we like, but as a rule it must not be too many months back.

(Earl Russell.) I will call the President of the club of whom Mr. Bankes can ask these questions.

13836. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do these stamps on your membership card show when you paid your subscription?—Yes.

13837. And the months in which you paid it?—Yes.

13838. How many guests is anybody allowed to bring—as many as they like?—Not as many as they like, but they never bring more than one or two.

13839. Is drink allowed at the meetings?—Oh yes.

13840. Do you have anything to eat at the meetings or only drink?—If we like we can eat as well.

13841. You have to pay for it I suppose?—Yes.

13842. How many people were present at this meeting on this Saturday night?—I could not tell you exactly, but I think about 25 or 30. Of course I did not take any notice, but the President will tell you this.

13843. Did 25 or 30 remain there until the closing time?—No.

13844. Did some of them remain up to closing time?—Some of them.

13845. Were you one of those who remained up to closing time?—Yes.

13846. How many were in the room at closing time? I could not tell you.

13847. Would there be 20?—Oh no.

13848. Not so many?—I do not think so. Most of them had to go away and catch the last train.

13849. Were there other people coming out of the restaurants, besides your club at closing time?—I did not notice.

13850. Were there other people coming out of other public-houses and other restaurants in the street?—There were several people in the street. It was just closing time.

13851. Do you say when you got in the street it was very quiet?—I should say for London it was quiet.

13852. You understand what a noise means, and what shouting means?—Yes.

13853. There was no shouting?—There was no shouting.

13854. Was there any singing?—I did not hear any.

13855. Did you hear any people speaking angrily?—No.

13856. You did not hear that?—No.

13857. Were you there when Mr. Altfuldisch gave his evidence and Mr. Ruppert?—No.

13858. Let me read you what Mr. Altfuldisch says about the street. He came out of the restaurant at the same time as you did, did he not?—Yes, or perhaps one or two minutes before.

13859. At page 125, Question 4910, he is asked: "Was anything going on in the street?—The street was very noisy and very full of people that night." And then again when he is asked the question he says: "There was a rare lot of noise and a rare lot of people about the road. (Q) Were those people fighting and quarrelling amongst themselves?—It was a buzzing noise"?—I did not notice that.

13860. You did not hear that at all?—No.

W. Maurer.

20 Nov. 1906.

13861. Were you in a condition in which you would not notice those things. Had you had too much drink?—No, I was talking to my friends quite seriously. I did not take any notice of that, and I was not with Mr. Altfuldisch. He was a little further on.

13862. He was within a yard or two of you, was he not?—No, I did not see him.

13863. He is speaking of the state of things he saw in the street when he came out, or as he came out?—Yes.

13864. You were close to him then, were you not?—Yes, certainly.

13865. Mr. Ruppert says with regard to the people who came out that some of them were jolly. Do you agree with that?—It may be. I do not know, because I was only talking to a gentleman.

13866. And some were singing?—Not our members.

13867. Were there people close to you singing?—I do not know. I could not recollect that.

13868. Is your evidence to the Commissioners that the street was quite quiet, that there was no noise and no quarrelling at all?—No quarrelling as far as I know.

13869. How many people were there standing by you?—About 10 or 12. Of those who came out with me there were about 10. I do not think there were any more.

13870. Do you suggest there was no reason at all why the Police should intervene?—I did not think so.

13871. No reason at all?—Not at all.

13872. Did you hear them telling the people to move on?—No, I did not hear them. They may have done it, but I did not hear that.

13873. Did not you say something just now to the effect that you did not see any reason why you should run?—Because I was pushed, and I turned round and said: "I am not obliged to run."

13874. Did you hear anybody say "Move on"?—No, I did not.

13875. Was there nobody fighting there at all?—I did not see anybody fighting—not members of our club.

13876. Never mind about members of your club for a moment. Was there any fighting going on close to you?—No, I did not see it.

13877. Did you fall on the ground at all?—No.

13878. Did Inspector McKay catch hold of you at all?—Yes.

13879. Did he hold you?—Yes, with both hands under the arms from the back.

13880. How long did he hold you?—Only a moment while pushing me to a constable.

13881. Should you know the constable who took you?—No, I could not recollect him.

13882-3. Is he here. (P.C. 134 C stood forward.) Is that the constable?—I might have seen him.

13884. You do not recollect him?—I do not recollect him.

13885. Although he is the man who the Inspector handed you over to in Greek Street, and with whom you walked to the station?—Yes.

13886. And with whom you say you spoke?—I spoke several words to him going from Greek Street to the station.

13887. Are you not able now to recollect that man as being the man, or to recognise him?—No, I might have seen him, but I could not recollect him because it is rather a long time, is it not. It is nearly one year.

13888. Did you say anything to the constable as you went along?—Yes, I told him that and asked him what I was arrested for.

13889. What do you say he said?—He said, "I cannot help it, I have got to take you to the station." That is what I believe he said.

13890. And you went with him quite quietly to the station?—I went with him quietly.

13891. And when you got there you went into the charge room?—Yes.

13892. Did you speak to the constable as you were going along in English or not?—Yes, I spoke in English.

13893. Do you remember that?—Oh yes.

13894. When you got to the charge room Inspector McKay had not come in then, had he?—No. I believe he brought Mr. Ruppert.

13895. No, he brought Mr. Altfuldisch. Do you remember that?—No, I did not see Mr. Altfuldisch, but I saw Mr. Ruppert in the same charge room as I was.

13896. You were in the charge room some considerable time before Inspector McKay came in?—Yes.

13897. And during that time you were in charge of this policeman?—I was standing there and the policeman was in there as well, I believe.

13898. Do you remember?—I could not tell now if it was the same policeman or another one.

13899. Could you remember how many people there were in the charge room?—Only a few. I believe there were two policemen in there, and another Inspector on duty in the police station.

13900. Did you stand up or sit down?—I stood up then.

13901. You were quite quiet?—I was quiet.

13902. You made no complaint to the Inspector?—I do not know if I had done it then or later on.

13903. Then later on Inspector McKay came in?—Yes.

13904. He told the charge against you to the other Inspector?—Yes.

13905. Did you hear that?—Yes.

13906. And that charge was read over to you?—Yes, I heard that.

13907. Did you say anything?—Yes, I said that I was not disorderly, and I told them that I came out and was talking to my friends, and moved along slowly, and waited for one or two more from the hotel. That is all I told him.

13908. Who did you say that to?—To this other Inspector.

13909. Should you recognise him?—Yes.

13910. Is Inspector Remfrey here? (Inspector Remfrey stood forward). Is that him?—I do not know. I believe it is the same.

13911. You do not recognise him either?—I think it is the same. I believe it is the same. There was another gentleman there with a bald head on the same evening. He was behind the partition, behind the glass window.

13912. Was it Inspector McKay? (Inspector McKay stood forward). Is that the man you are referring to?—That is the man who charged me.

13913. Do you say there was another man with a bald head there?—I believe so.

13914. Just think. You are telling the Commissioners your recollection of what happened that night, and you have told us your recollection of what happened in the street, and now you are telling us your recollection of what happened in the charge room?—It might be that Inspector McKay was in that room and I saw him and did not know it was him.

13915. Up to this moment you have been under the impression that there was another man there with a bald head?—I think perhaps it was another man because I did not know Inspector McKay so well then as I do now.

13916. After you had been charged you were taken down to the cells, were you not?—Yes.

13917. How soon did you ask for bail?—I did not know that I could get bail.

13918. How soon did you find out that you could get bail?—A policeman explained to me about three o'clock in the morning.

13919. And then did you ask for bail to be sent for?—Yes, I told him the address I was living at.

13920. And you gave him the name of somebody to fetch?—Yes.

13921. That would be three o'clock on Sunday morning?—Yes.

13922. Where did the gentleman live whose name you gave?—31, Thorn Street, Barnes.

13923. What time was it when your friend came to the station?—Nobody came.

13924. How was it that you got bail?—A policeman came to where I was living and asked after me.

13925. In Barnes?—Yes, he asked after my behaviour, and my landlady told him about it, and he said "That is all right," and so I came out about one o'clock.

13926. You gave this man your name and where you lived, and you know now that the Police went and made inquiries in Barnes on Sunday morning, and as the result of that you were let out about one o'clock?—Yes.

13927. On the Monday following that, you went before the Magistrate?—Yes.

13928. And the Magistrate was Mr. Denman?—I do not know that.

13929. You had been at home, had you not, between the mid-day Sunday and the Monday morning?—Yes.

13930. Had you spoken to anybody about the charge that had been made against you?—Yes, certainly.

13931. You had spoken to your friends about it?—I had only told the people I was working with, and not that day, because it was a Sunday and there was only the governor and another man there.

13932. Who is your governor?—Mr. Clark.

13933. He is your employer?—Yes.

13934. You told him about it?—Yes, he asked me where I had been and I had to tell him.

13935. Then you went to the Police Court and you heard the evidence given against you, did you not?—Yes.

13936. Who gave evidence against you. Was it Inspector McKay?—Yes.

13937. Did the Magistrate ask you whether you wanted to ask him any questions?—Yes.

13938. Did you say you did, or did you say you did not?—I said what happened.

13939. Did you ask Inspector McKay any questions?—No.

13940. Did anybody else give evidence against you?—No.

13941. And then did the Magistrate ask you if you wanted to give evidence?—I believe there was a policeman or Inspector standing beside me, and he said, "Have you got anything to say?"

13942. Then did you say what you had to say?—Yes.

13943. Did you tell the Magistrate that there was no noise in the street at all, and that it was quite quiet?—I only said a few words and then I had to go out. I did not have time to say any more.

13944. Did you tell the Magistrate that the street was quite quiet, there was no noise at all?—I was not asked.

13945. But you were told to tell the Magistrate all you knew about it?—Not all I knew about it. He only asked me if I had anything to say, and I told him what happened, and then he said: "10s., or seven days." That was a matter of two or three minutes.

13946. Let us ascertain what you did tell the Magistrate. First of all, did you tell him anything about the street being quite quiet and there being no noise at all?—No.

13947. Did you tell him that there was no quarrelling at all there?—I said I was not quarrelling, and I was not using bad language at all.

13948. That is all you did say?—Yes.

13949. Did you make any complaint to the Magistrate as to the way you had been treated at the Police Station?—No.

13950. That was last December, was it not?—Yes.

13951. When did you tell anybody that you had been searched at the Police Station and your things had been thrown into the fire. When first did you tell anybody of that? Have you told anybody before to-day?—Yes.

13952. Now think. Who have you told?—The gentleman who was in the nursery and took my statement.

13953. When was that?—That was before the last time the Commission was sitting. W. Maurer. 20 Nov. 1916.

13954. Who was the gentleman who took your statement. Do you see him here?—No.

13955. I call for the statement if Earl Russell has got it?

(Earl Russell.) I have not the least idea who took his statement.

(The Witness.) He did not write it in the statement.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you suggest to the Commission you told that to the gentleman who came to take your statement, but he did not write it down?—I only told him before, and then we went into the office and he wrote it down.

13956. When he was writing it down you did not tell him?—No. I thought I had to come here and could tell you myself.

13957. So you have never told anybody yet about that suggestion of throwing your things into the fire to anybody who has ever written it down?—No; but I believe my governor reminded me to tell you this as well. He said: "You must tell them this as well."

13958. When did he tell you that?—A fortnight or over three weeks, I believe, ago.

13959. (Chairman.) By "Tell this as well" you mean about the papers being thrown into the fire?—Yes, and the cigars, too.

13960. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Have you ever told anybody before about Inspector McKay pushing you into the chair?—Oh, yes; I told my governor at once.

13961. Did you tell that to the gentleman who took the statement from you?—Yes.

13962. I should like to see that statement?—I do not know if he put that in the statement.

(Chairman.) If you have got the statement, Earl Russell, that was supplied to the Commission you might hand it to Mr. Bankes.

(Earl Russell.) I was just asking who did take that statement. I am not sure that the statement I examined the witness from is the same as that supplied to the Commission.

(Chairman.) I think it is only fair that Mr. Bankes should have it. I am expressing no judgment as to the effect of the cross-examination.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The learned Chairman hands me this statement, and I will read it to you and ask you if that is the statement you made to the gentleman who wrote it down: "I am a gardener, and work for Mr. G. Clark, Priory Lane, Putney, where I have been for fifteen months. On the 16th December last I was at a social party at the Wedes Hotel, Greek Street, Soho. We broke up at twelve midnight and went into the street. Two of the people were talking to me, bidding 'Good-bye,' etc. Suddenly I received a push in the back. I looked round and saw a Police Inspector. I said: 'We are not obliged to run.' With that he seized me by the arms and pushed me towards a constable, and said: 'Take this man.' I was taken to Vine Street, searched, pushed about roughly, and locked in a cell. I was released on bail about 1.30 p.m. I was at the Police Court on the following Monday at 10 a.m., and was fined 10s, or seven days. I told the Magistrate that the Police evidence was untrue. I have had no trouble with the Police before or since."

13967. (Chairman.) "Vine Street" is evidently a mistake there?—Greek Street, it must be.

13964. No, Marlborough Street?—The Police Station.

(Earl Russell.) I have the original here, if Mr. Bankes would like to look at it (handing document to Mr. Eldon Bankes). It is identical with what he has read.

13965. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Now, just look at that. Have you seen that before? (handing document to witness). I believe this is what that gentleman wrote.

13966. Did the gentleman bring that to you ready written, and was it altered in your presence?—He read it at the office as I was speaking.

(Chairman.) The original had better be put in.

13967. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please, sir. (To the witness.) Just look at this. You see there is some writing there at the bottom of that. Was that written at the time that you gave in the statement?—This blue writing?

W. Maurer.

20 Nov. 1906.

13968. Yes?—I do not know

13969. That is in a different handwriting altogether, is it not?—I do not know if he wrote this afterwards, or what.

13970. (Chairman.) Is that your signature, William Maurer?—Yes, that is what I wrote.

13971. Did you sign it in the conservatory or the office, or wherever you were?—Yes.

13972. With this gentleman?—Yes.

13973. Now look a few lines above your signature, and you will find some words apparently in a different ink?—Yes, in blue pencil.

13974. Were those words "I told the Police Magistrate" which are in a different ink there when you signed your name in the office?—I do not know. I could not tell you, because this looks as if it was a different handwriting altogether.

13975. Apart from the difference in the handwriting, was the interlineation—the writing between the lines—there when you signed the paper in the office?—I could not recollect. I do not think so.

13976. Do you know who the gentleman was who took the statement?—I believe if he was here I would recognise him.

13977. Do you know what his name is?—No.

13978. When was it he came to you?—I believe it was Wednesday morning—one Wednesday morning.

13979. Was that before Mr. Altfuldisch gave his evidence here or afterwards?—It was the day after.

13980. The day after Mr. Altfuldisch gave his evidence?—Yes, and I did not know anything about it.

13981. (Chairman.) You did not know anything about Mr. Altfuldisch's evidence?—That this was adjourned again.

13982. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Until that gentleman came and asked you for your evidence you had never formulated any complaint at all yourself against the Police?—No, I had not.

13983. I do not know whether that statement has a date upon it. Who are Anthos and Co., Court Florists, Baker Street?—A flower shop.

13984. Was it somebody from their shop who came and took your evidence?—No.

13985. Do you know anything about this piece of paper which is put on this statement?—No.

13986. Was that piece of paper on this document when you signed it?—I believe this is the address that my friend gave to that gentleman.

13987. Which friend?—Mr. Ruppert. He is working at the floral depot.

13988. Was he with you at the time he made this statement?—No. I believe this gentleman went to Mr. Ruppert and asked for my address.

13989. (Chairman.) Mr. Ruppert worked for that firm?—Yes.

13990. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The same gentleman who came and asked you for your evidence had got your address from Mr. Ruppert?—Very likely; I am not quite sure.

13991. Was the slip of paper stuck on to the statement when you first saw it?—I do not know whether he put it on or not. I put it in my pocket, and did not open it any more.

13992. You put this in your pocket?—Yes, in an envelope. The gentleman put it in an envelope and handed it over to Mr. Timewell as he gave it to me.

13993. Did you go and see Mr. Timewell then?—I saw him here.

13994. When was that?—This was about three weeks ago, I believe—three or four weeks ago.

13995. Who brought you here?—This gentleman told me to come here.

13996. Did he tell you to come after he took your statement?—Yes, at once, he said as soon as possible, and I asked him if it would be time enough to get down here about half-past one or two.

13997. Where did he get the paper from that he wrote this on?—I do not know if Mr. Clark gave it to him or if he brought it.

13998. (Chairman). As I understand it, the gentleman wanted you to come and give evidence before us in regard to Mr. Altfuldisch's matter?—No, it was the day afterwards. Mr. Altfuldisch's case was on Tuesday, I believe, and this was a Wednesday.

(Chairman.) It appears that there was a suggestion that if Maurer could be got on Wednesday we should hear him as a kind of sequence of the other case.

(Earl Russell.) I think that was suggested by the Commissioners themselves.

(Chairman.) I think that is so.

13999. (Earl Russell.) This piece of paper on which there appears the address of the Court florist has on it the address of George Clark, Priory Lane, Putney, in pencil. That is your employer?—Yes.

14000. The words that are added at the end are these:—"I told the Magistrate that the Police evidence was untrue." That is true, is it—you did tell him so?—Yes, I told the Magistrate so.

14001. "I have had no trouble with the Police before or since." That is true also?—Yes.

14002. After you had made this statement you told us you brought it to Mr. Timewell here?—Yes.

14003. And you saw Mr. Timewell about it here?—Yes, in the afternoon.

14004. Did you see him on these additions? Do you know they are in his handwriting?—I do not know his handwriting.

(Earl Russell.) I presume the Commission do not want any further evidence about how that got there.

(Chairman.) No, I do not think so.

14005. (Earl Russell.) About this question of the burning of your papers. You say you mentioned it to the gentleman who took this statement, whoever he was?—Yes, I was in the nursery and from there we went into the office.

14006. The place where you mentioned it to him was not the place where he was sitting writing down your statement?—No.

14007. You did not repeat it any more when he took your statement?—No.

14008. You told Mr. Bankes that your governor reminded you to tell the Commission that as well as about the burning of your papers?—Yes.

14009. You mean Mr. Clark, your employer?—Yes.

14010. You had told him about it then?—Yes.

14011. How long ago had you told him?—The day that the gentleman wrote this statement.

14012. Just a few weeks ago when he took the statement?—Yes, but I told my first governor, the brother of this one. There were three governors, and one departed from the business, and I told him first about it the Sunday I was released from the Police-Station.

14013. You say you told somebody the Sunday you were released?—The brother of my present governor.

14014. You told him the Sunday you were released?—Yes.

14015. Have you told people about it before?—No. I kept it to myself. I thought it was wiser.

14016. You did not want any trouble with the Police?—No.

14017. You would not have come here to give evidence now if you had not been fetched?—No. I was glad to come out of it so, because I had never had anything to do with them. I was very sorry indeed to get into trouble like that.

14018. (Chairman.) How many people came out with you at the same time, so to speak, from this restaurant?—I think about ten or twelve.

14019. Were you at the head of them or behind them?—Between—amongst them. I could not tell if I was in front. I am always one of the last.

14020. There is a passage leading from the staircase into Greek Street, is there not? You came out through a door—I suppose there is no doubt about that?—No.

14021. Beyond the door is there a passage or is there a large room or what is there?—You come in a corridor like.

14022. A kind of passage?—A kind of passage about five yards in length.

14023. And then you go up the staircase?—Yes.

14024. About ten or twelve people were coming through this passage together?—Yes, I think we came out together.

14025. You came out one by one then?—Yes.

14026. When you came to the door and looked out on the street did you notice anything particular?—I did not notice anything at all. I did not take any notice.

14027. No noise?—I did not notice any noise.

14028. Were there any people standing in the street?—There were some people coming out of the public-houses.

14029. There were people coming out of the Café Turc. Do you know the Café Turc?—Yes.

14030. People were coming out of the Café Turc as well?—I did not notice whether they were coming from the Café Turc, because I was talking calmly and seriously to my friends. I did not take any notice.

(Earl Russell.) The witness said "I did not notice where they were coming from."

14031. (Chairman.) I do not know which people you are referring to. My question was: Did you see any people coming out of the Café Turc?—No.

14032. Did you see any people standing in the middle of the street?—No, I did not. People were going about up and down, but I did not see any shouting or quarrelling, or anything.

14033. There was no crowd?—No, I did not notice anything. I only saw people.

14034. You continued the conversation in which you were interested in the street?—Yes.

14035. How long did you continue conversing?—Only about two or three minutes until my friends came out of the hotel, and then I followed them.

14036. Do you mean to say you noticed nobody who was jolly or talking loudly, or laughing loudly?—No, I did not notice anything. I could not really say.

14037. Do you know that Reuscher told us that there were several people, and some that came out from the restaurant were jolly?—Perhaps that was after I was taken away. I had not been there more than two or three minutes.

14038. Then, as I understand it, as far as your evidence goes, you were talking to some of your friends who had just come out of the Wedes Hotel, and there was nothing at all that attracted your attention in the street?—No.

14039. Nothing at all in the behaviour of the people coming from any other restaurant?—I only saw the people coming out of the houses. I did not take any notice.

14040. Nothing attracted your attention?—No.

14041. You would not even describe the street as being noisy at the time?—No, I could not.

14042. Nor crowded?—No.

14043. And then a constable arrested you, I understand?—Yes.

14044. May I ask you why you think he arrested you if your story is true?—My story is true, and I think it was because I said "I am not obliged to run." I thought perhaps that was too much. That was the only thing I said.

14045. But according to you there was no need even to make people move on?—No.

14046. There is no reason why a constable should say to you or anybody else there "Move on"?—We were walking slowly on.

14047. There was absolutely no reason in the condition of the street why Inspector McKay, or anybody else, should be telling people to move on?—No.

14048. Can you suggest any reason why Inspector McKay, or anybody else, should tell you to move on?—No, I could not.

14049. And no reason why he should give you a push in the back?—No.

14050. You want us to believe it was a pure gratuitous interference by Inspector McKay with you?—That is what I think.

14051. You had never seen him before?—No. If I might ask Inspector McKay does he understand German at all.

(Chairman.) I think Inspector McKay told us he did understand a little German. Is not that so Mr. Muir?

(Mr. Muir to Inspector McKay.) Do you understand German?

(Inspector McKay.) No.

(Witness.) Then how can Inspector McKay say that I was using bad language, because I was talking in my own mother tongue? How can Inspector McKay say that I was using bad language?

14052. (Chairman.) I quite follow your argument, but that does not answer my question. What reason do you suggest there was for Inspector McKay doing anything at all to you if the state of the street was as you describe it?—I reckon it must be what I said first, that Inspector McKay made a mistake and took us for somebody else.

14053. But even if you were somebody else there was no reason at all for his taking you into custody according to your story. What is your age?—Twenty-seven.

14054. How long have you been in this country?—Very nearly three years.

14055. What part of Germany do you come from?—The Rhine land, Kreuznach.

14056. Have you served in the Army?—No.

14057. Where were you educated?—In Kreuznach.

14058. In a public school?—An ordinary elementary school.

14059. You are able to read and write German?—Yes.

14060. And, as we see, you are able to talk English very well, too?—Yes.

14061. If that is so, and there was really nothing in this charge against you, how came it that you allowed yourself to be convicted without insisting on the Magistrate hearing you at full length?—I do not know.

14062. You know our English ways, do you not, by this time?—Yes.

14063. Do not you know that an English Police Magistrate always listens to what the accused has to say. Lord Russell laughs, but you know it is his duty to do so?—Yes, if there is any disturbance, certainly.

14064. I am talking of what took place in the Police Court. You are a well-educated German young man, and I want to know why you did not tell the Magistrate and insist on telling the Magistrate the story you have told us to-day?—As I have told you already twice I do not think I had time enough to tell any more. I was charged too quickly. The case was over too quickly.

14065. Did you see Mr. Altfuldisch in the court or about the court?—Yes.

14066. Did you know that Altfuldisch had instructed a solicitor and counsel?—Yes, I did.

14067. Then, you knew that Altfuldisch was going to defend himself?—Yes.

14068. Why did you not defend yourself?—Because I had not got the means to.

14069. But you know the Magistrate was bound to listen to you if you insisted?—Yes. I did not know then, but I know it now. I did not know anything about a court before. It was the very first time that I had been in a court.

14070. But I understand you knew that Altfuldisch was taking steps to defend himself against the charge?—Yes.

14071. Did it not occur to you that you yourself would have the right to defend yourself?—I really did not trouble about it. I thought I came free.

(Earl Russell.) May I make a suggestion? I am not quite sure if you ascertained from the witness when he learnt that Altfuldisch was going to be represented in this way, because his case was disposed of before Altfuldisch's.

14072. (Chairman.) That is why I asked him whether he saw Altfuldisch about the Police Court?—I did not know Altfuldisch then. I only knew him by sight, and I did not speak to him. As soon as my case was over I did not stop there a minute. I went home, because we were rather busy that day. I was going to stop there, but I had not time to.

W. Maurer.

20 Nov. 1906.

14073. Now, you tell us that your papers and some cigars were taken away from you and thrown into the fire?—Yes.

14074. Did you complain to anybody about that?—No, I did not take any notice of it that day. I was glad that it was over, and would have been glad if I had not heard anything more about it.

14075. Did you tell that to the gentleman who came to take your evidence on this Wednesday a few weeks ago?—Yes, I did.

14076. He does not seem to have taken that down?—That was in the nursery, and then we went to the office and he wrote my statement there, but I did not repeat it any more. I thought it was quite sufficient, and I thought I was coming here in the afternoon, and I could give my evidence here.

14077. I suppose you had been to Greek Street a good many times before, had you not, during the three years?—No.

14078. I thought you said you had been a member of this society for some months?—Since August, last year.

14079. Since August, 1905?—1906.

14080. But you were a member, I understand, in December last of this Gardeners' Society?—Yes.

14081. How long had you been a member of the Gardeners' Society then?—Only a few months.

14082. Then you had been there several times before?—Yes.

14083. (Mr. Muir.) The 19th August, 1905, is the date in your membership book?—Yes.

14084. (Chairman.) The meetings took place twice a month, so you might have been there nine or ten times?—Yes, more than that.

14085. I suppose during the time you have been here you have often been in London streets near Greek Street and the more crowded parts of London?—Never at any other times than Saturdays, when I go to town.

14086. That is the only time?—That is the only time I come to London.

14087. You had never seen the police-constables trying to disperse a crowd by making people move on in one direction or the other?—No.

14088. You had never seen it done at all?—No, I never saw anything about it.

14089. Have you ever been told to move on before by a constable?—No.

14090. And, as far as you can see, there was no reason at all for any reasonable man telling you to move on?—No.

14091. (Mr. Dickinson.) When did you go to the hotel first? What time of day was it?—I was there after nine o'clock in the evening.

14092. And you stayed there till twelve?—Yes.

14093. Will you tell me exactly what you were doing all that time?—We were singing and giving recitations and drinking beer.

14094. What you call in German a "kneipe"?—No, you could not call it a "kneipe." We are always respectable when we are doing anything like that.

14095. But you were singing and amusing yourselves and drinking?—Yes.

14096. Drinking beer?—Yes.

14097. How much beer did you take?—I had about two glasses.

14098. Not more than two glasses in three hours?—No, I never take much more.

14099. Those are rather large glasses, are they not?—Yes, these big Schoppen glasses.

14100. When you had done that, did anybody go on singing at all as they went out of the door, into the street?—Not with me.

14101. You must have gone out a little before twelve?—No, just twelve o'clock.

14102. You went out before Altfuldisch, and before Ruppert?—I think so. But Ruppert paid the bill, and very likely Altfuldisch went with him. I do not know whether I was out before or after.

14103. After you got out of the police station on Sunday at one o'clock what did you do?—I went straight home.

14104. When did you first say anything to your employers about this?—It was about half-past three in the afternoon.

14105. On the Sunday?—Yes.

14106. What did you tell him?—I told him what happened in a few words. There was not much time to talk. I had to do my work. He did not ask any more.

14107. You had been in his employment for some time?—Yes.

14108. And you still are in his employment?—Yes.

14109. Tell me what you did tell him?—I told him that I was in the club last night, and as I came out I was arrested. He asked me what for, and I told him. Then he said "I believe there must have been a mistake, because it is a noisy part of London, and they took you for somebody else." As far as I know, that is all I said, and I went and did my work.

14110. Was that the time when you told him about this Inspector McKay throwing away your papers?—No, that was my first governor. He departed from the nursery.

14111. He was not the same one?—No.

14112. When was it you told this other one?—About three or four weeks ago, when the Commission was last sitting.

14113. I suppose you told your governor that you would have to go to the Police Court?—I told him I had to go up the following day.

14114. When you went to the Police Court you say that the only person who gave evidence was Inspector McKay?—Yes.

14115. What did he say?—He said that he saw forty or fifty foreigners fighting and using bad language and being disorderly after twelve o'clock or half-past twelve.

14116. Did he say anything about their being on the ground fighting?—Not when I was in the court.

14117. You did not hear that?—No, that must have been with Altfuldisch and Ruppert.

14118. Then you understood that he was saying that you had been fighting?—Yes. He saw me amongst 40 to 50 foreigners fighting and using bad language, and we were disorderly. That is what he said that day.

14119. That you knew, according to your story today, to be untrue?—Yes.

14120. When the Magistrate asked you whether you had any questions to ask, why did you not ask Inspector McKay anything to test the truthfulness of that statement?—I had not a chance to.

14121. He gave you the opportunity?—I do not think it was a moment that I spoke.

14122. That was when he asked you if you had anything to say, but before he asked you if you had anything to say did he ask you whether you had any questions to ask?—I do not think so. I do not know about that.

14123. When you went back to him after you had been fined, did you then say anything to your employer about it?—I told him I had to pay 10s.

14124. Did he make no observation upon that?—He said, "I thought you would come off with 2s. 6d. or 5s."

14125. (Chairman.) Inspector McKay told us, and he seems to have said the same thing at the Police Court, that he found "two men rolling on the ground, they were fighting and making use of obscene language to each other. We pulled them up and they started to renew the fight"?—I do not know.

14126. You saw nothing of the fight?—No.

14127. Do you know now that Inspector McKay says you were one of the men who were fighting?—He says he saw me amongst 40 to 50 foreigners fighting, that is what he said at the Police Court.

14128. But you were one of the men who were rolling on the ground. Then he said this appeared to be a squabble between the two gangs that had met there. One party had come out of Wedes Hotel or restaurant, and the other came out of the Café Turc. But you told me you saw nothing at all about the party coming from the Café Turc, as I understand you?—No.

14129. You say all that is fabrication of Inspector McKay's?—Yes.

14130. There was no fight at all?—No. Why did not Inspector McKay or the other man arrest anybody from the opposite side. Where are they?

14131. What he told us was that there was a squabble going on between the two gangs, and there were two men rolling on the ground, and you were one of them?—It is quite untrue.

14132. Then if your story is true (we have asked you a good many questions upon it) can you now suggest any reason whatever for Inspector McKay interfering with you in any way?—I only think it is because I am a foreigner.

14133. Because you are a foreigner, that is the only reason for Inspector McKay interfering with you?—Yes, that is the only reason that I can say.

14134. But you were nearly all foreigners there?—We were all foreigners there.

14135. Why did Inspector McKay pick you out for arrest?—Because I was the last going on and I said "We are not obliged to run," and the others did not say anything. That is the only reason I know.

14136. That is the only reason you can suggest?—Yes, that is what I said first.

W. Maurer.

29 Nov. 1906.

(Earl Russell.) There are these books of rules here. I do not know if the Commission want them put in, or whether my learned friend wants them put in?

14137-8. (Chairman.) I do not think we want them at present. (To the Witness.) One observation you made, and I want to ask you a question about it. You suggested to Inspector McKay that you could not have been using obscene language because you were talking German?—Yes.

14139. Had you ever heard the word "ponce"?—I did not hear it before.

14140. Did you hear it on that night?—No.

14141. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Did you say "I am not obliged to run" in English or in German?—In English.

(Earl Russell.) I will call the employer of this man with the Commission's permission as to character, if the Commission will hear him.

(Chairman.) Is he here?

(Earl Russell.) No.

(Chairman.) The character that he has given him is a good one.

(Earl Russell.) You have a written character?

(Chairman.) Yes. He says that he has been in his employment for some time. You may take it that it is quite unnecessary to call him. The case cannot turn upon any question of the character of the man as a gardener.

GABRIEL SCHUHMANN, sworn.

14142. (Earl Russell.) You live at 40, Tavistock Crescent, Westbourne Park?—Yes.

14143. You have been employed by Messrs. Piper and Co., of Bishop's Road, for a considerable time?—Yes, for three years.

14144. You are the Vice-President now of this German Gardeners' Society?—Yes.

14145. And you will be quite willing to answer any questions about the rules?—Yes.

14146. You were present at this social evening in December, 1905?—Yes.

14147. Were you there during the whole time?—Yes, I was.

14148. Have you any rule or regulation about drinking?—No, we have not.

14149. No regulation about it?—No.

14150. What is the rule about drinking—what is the practice?—Most members drink two or three glasses of beer.

14151. Have you been at a great many of these functions?—We only have one function—we have an annual dinner every year—but this was an exceptional one of an old member who was married.

14152. This was an exceptional function?—Yes.

14153. This was not the kind of function that you have twice a month?—No; that is a business meeting.

14154. A pleasant evening and a dinner is an exception?—Yes.

14155. Do you drink yourself?—No, I do not.

14156. Not at all?—No.

14157. What do you say about drinking on this night at that function?—There was no excessive drinking at all.

14158. You left about 12 o'clock?—Yes, about that time.

14159. With how many other people?—With two of my friends who had been there.

14160. When did you first see Mr. Maurer as you were leaving?—I did not see him at all; he joined me after we came out of the hotel.

14161. After you reached the street Maurer joined you with your two friends?—Yes.

14162. That made four of you together?—Yes.

14163. Were there any more with your party?—Not in our party; there were some more in the street.

14164. You four were altogether in a little bunch?—Yes.

G. Schuhmann.

14165. What do you say about the state of the street. What was going on in the street?—When I came out it was quiet.

14166. Did you see any crowds of people coming out from other public-houses?—Yes, it was closing time, but they had nothing to do with us.

14167. (Chairman.) Did you see a crowd?—No, not a crowd; the people came out of other public-houses as well at the same time.

14168. (Earl Russell.) Did you hear any shouting or disorder?—Not when I came out.

14169. Did you see any fighting going on?—No.

14170. I am speaking up to the time of Maurer's arrest. Did you see any fighting?—There was no fighting.

14171. Was there any rough pushing, jostling, or anything of the kind?—No.

14172. What did you see happen to Maurer?—When he joined us Inspector McKay came and pushed him. He turned round. I could not exactly catch what he said—he talks rather gently or quietly—I only caught the word "run." Then he arrested him.

14173. Where was the Inspector when he pushed him. Did he come in front of him?—No, at the back.

14174. Did you hear the Inspector say anything to him first?—Not that I recollect.

14175. Did you hear the Inspector say "Move on" to anybody close to you?—No.

14176. Were you walking or standing at this time?—We were walking at the time.

14177. Had Maurer done anything at that time? Was he shouting?—No.

14178. Was he fighting?—No.

14179. Was he rolling on the ground?—No, I did not see that.

14180. You were there just before he was arrested?—Yes.

14181. He was with you a minute or two before he was arrested?—Yes, perhaps two or three minutes.

14182. He was not fighting?—He was not fighting.

14183. When the Inspector took hold of him what did he do with him?—He gave him in charge of another police-constable.

G. Schuhmann.

20 Nov. 1906.

14184. And the other constable took him away?—Yes.

14185. What did you do after Maurer's arrest?—I considered whether I should follow as a witness, but I thought if they arrested Maurer without any cause they would arrest me as well

14186. So instead of going to the police station what did you do?—I went towards the hotel again. I saw another gentleman standing outside the door of the hotel.

14187. One of your party?—One of our party.

14188. Was anyone going towards the hotel at the same time with you?—No.

14189. What did you do when you got there?—I passed on. The Inspector came back again and arrested the gentleman standing outside the door. I could not understand what he was saying to the gentleman, but I heard the reply that he was waiting for a friend.

14190. Did you know who it was that Inspector McKay had arrested?—No, I did not at the time.

14191. Who was it?—I did not know his name; but his name was Altfuldisch.

14192. You knew he was one of your party?—Yes, he was introduced as a guest.

14193. Did you see the arrest of Mr. Altfuldisch by Inspector McKay?—Yes, I did; I turned round.

14194. You say you heard him say he was waiting for a friend?—Yes.

14195. Did you hear anything more of what passed between Mr. Altfuldisch and Inspector McKay?—I only heard what Inspector McKay said.

14196. What did you hear Inspector McKay say?—I heard him say "You ponce."

14197. What happened after that in connection with Ruppert?—I was still waiting for Ruppert. Ruppert came outside and he asked what had happened to his friend. I said he had been arrested as soon as he came out.

14198. Did you tell him what for?—No, I did not know the reason myself

14199. You did not follow to the police station then either?—No.

14200. Did you see Ruppert arrested?—No, I did not.

14201. When did you first know how Ruppert had been arrested?—At our next meeting.

14202. A week or so later?—A fortnight later.

14203. That was the first thing that you knew that Ruppert had been arrested?—Yes.

14204. Had you heard before that what had happened to them at the Police Court?—No.

14205. You heard nothing of it until a fortnight later?—No.

14206. What are the rules about becoming a member of your Society? Has a member to be introduced?—He has to be introduced by another member.

14207. Who knows him?—Who knows him.

14208. What sort of meetings do you have as a rule?—Only entertainments and lectures.

14209. And on rare occasions you have these dinners?—Only once a year.

14210. Do you want to say anything about the statement made by Inspector McKay as to the nature of the members of your Society?—Yes, I wish to ask him if he has ever been in our club.

14211. Do you want to make any statement to the Commission about it. You remember what Inspector McKay said—that he had seen undesirable aliens at the meetings of this society?

14212. (Chairman.) Yes, and he claims that the undesirable aliens liked to be members of respectable societies?—Yes, but they are only members of our trade, and introduced by other members who know them.

14213. Is Altfuldisch a gardener, too?—No, he was only at the function. He was invited by Mr. Ruppert; he has nothing to do with our usual meetings; he was a guest, and not a member.

14214. If you see a lot of men together at a club you cannot say who are members and who are guests, can you?—Yes, we can.

14215. But I could not if I had been there?—No.

14216. I think the words used by Inspector McKay were that some members of your club associated with undesirables, and that he had seen them associated in the sense of being together?—Yes.

14217. (Earl Russell.) I have only had this evidence placed in my hands this morning, but I think it was a little more than that—that people of this class attended their meetings. You say as far as you or your committee know, that is not so?—No.

14218. About the state of the street generally, this is what Inspector McKay said: "We found two men rolling on the ground; they were fighting, and they were making use of obscene language to each other. We got them up and they started to renew the fight. I took one into custody. I then called a constable who was coming down the street, and I handed this man over to him." One of those two men he arrested was Maurer. Is that true about Maurer?—No, it was not.

14219. Is there any truth in the statement at all?—No, not at all.

14220. Inspector McKay says further: "It appeared to be some squabble between two gangs that had met there. One party had come out of Wedes' Hotel or restaurant, and the other out of the Café Turc." Did you see anything like a squabble between two gangs, or an organised fight of any kind?—No.

14221. You saw no fighting going on at all?—No.

14222. You never went to the police station either that night or afterwards?—No.

14223. You did not go as a witness for these men or anything?—No.

14224. The first you heard of what had happened to them was a fortnight later?—Yes, at our next meeting.

14225. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You know Greek Street, I suppose, pretty well?—Yes.

14226. How often have you been there?—A good many times.

14227. On Saturday nights?—Yes.

14228. How often do your meetings take place—once a week?—No, twice a month.

14229. You formed one of a group or four who came out together?—Yes.

14230. Maurer was one of those four?—Yes.

14231. Your name is Schumann?—Yes.

14232. What were the names of the other two men?—Mr. William and Mr. Pingel.

14233. They all saw Maurer arrested without any cause at all?—I do not know whether they saw it or not.

14234. You were all together, were you not?—Yes; but I am not responsible whether they saw it or not.

14235. You four came out together?—No, we three came out and Maurer joined us.

14236. Then you all four were outside?—Yes.

14237. Walking along quietly?—Yes.

14238. One of your number is picked up by a policeman and taken away?—Yes.

14239. Did any of you three go to the Police Court as a witness?—No.

14240. Why not?—Because we did not know that the case would be tried at all.

14241. You saw a man taken off by a policeman. Did you not know he would be tried?—It is not our business to know.

14242. How long have you been in this country?—About ten years.

14243. Do you not know that when a man is taken off by a policeman it is usually followed by a charge at the Police Court, and it would be useful for a man who had been arrested without cause that three of his friends should go and say so?—Very likely, but they would have been arrested at the same time as Ruppert was.

14244. That is the view that is held by the Gardeners' Society as to the Police, is it?—No.

14445. Three of you were all members of the Gardeners' Society?—No, only Pingel. The other was not.

14446. Why did you not go to the Police Court on the Monday?—Because I did not know when the case came on.

14447. Did you go and inquire of Maurer?—No.

14448. You knew where he was to be found?—That I did not know.

14449. You had his address in your book?—No, not in mine.

14450. Do you not have the addresses of your members?—Yes, certainly; our secretary has them.

14451. You saw a man taken away by a policeman without any cause at all. Did you not go and inquire how he had got on?—No.

14452. Did not any of your friends—the other two—go and inquire?—I do not know whether they inquired or not.

14453. This is a friendly society, is it not?—Yes.

14454. All respectable men?—Yes.

14455. All foreigners?—All foreigners.

14456. Meeting in Greek Street, and not one of you would face the Police Court on the Monday. Is that so?—Yes.

14457. (Chairman.) I understand you have been for ten years in London?—Yes.

14458. You read the newspapers, I suppose?—Yes, I do.

14459. And you pretty well know our English ways?—Yes, pretty well; not all.

14460. You know, for instance, that there is such a thing as a Police Station and also a Police Court?—Yes.

14461. You knew that?—Yes.

14462. And you are the vice-president of this Gardeners' Society?—Yes.

14463. Altfuldisch had been there as a guest of yours?—Yes.

14464. Maurer was a member?—Yes.

14465. You still tell us there was absolutely no cause for the arrest of Maurer?—No.

14466. You saw him taken away in custody?—Yes, I did.

14467. You never made any complaint to anybody about the matter?—I did not.

14468. And never took any further interest in it?—I took an interest in it.

14469. How did you show your interest. Here are two men who had been in your company arrested without cause by the Police. You see them taken off by the Police?—Yes.

14470. And you do absolutely nothing at all to try and help them?—No, it would have been of no use.

14471. No use?—No, certainly not.

14472. How do you know that?—Ruppert followed them, and he was arrested.

14473. I understand that from prudential motives you did not go to the station at the moment, and you did not say anything or do anything in regard to the police-constable, as Ruppert did, or as he says he did?—No.

14474. I quite follow your action in that, but what I do not understand is how, after this, you ceased to take any interest in your friends?—I did not cease to take any interest in it.

14475. Why did you not go and try to help them on Sunday or on Monday?—I did not know they had been kept there.

14476. Then for aught you knew your two innocent acquaintances or friends were in the Police Station on Sunday and Monday?— I did not know that.

14477. They had disappeared, as far as you were concerned?—I did not notice it.

14478. Did it not strike you as extraordinary that two men should be arrested by Inspector McKay and others without any cause at all?—It struck me as extraordinary, certainly.

14479. You appear to be an intelligent man, well able to take care of yourself. How was it you left your friends to their fate?—I did not know that they would be tried at all, because they had done nothing, and as I do not live with them I did not hear anything about it until the meeting took place again about a fortnight after.

14480. I understand you to say that the whole of the story told to us by Inspector McKay about there being a great crowd in Greek Street, about there being two gangs, and about there being fighting, noise, and disorder is all untrue?—Certainly.

14481. Simply an invention?—Yes.

14482. Why should he invent it?—I do not know the cause of it.

14483. (Mr. Dickinson.) When Maurer was taken up he was handed over to another constable?—Yes.

14484. Can you give us any reason why Inspector McKay should have handed him over to another constable if the street was quiet?—No.

14485. Do you say there was no kind of fighting going on in the street?—Not while I was there.

14486. As we have already heard, at your club there had been singing. When they came out did they continue singing?—Not that I know of.

14487. Who do you say was with you?—Mr Pingel and Mr. William.

14488. Are they coming here to-day?—No.

14489. They were standing with you, and Maurer was standing with you?—No, we were moving on.

14490. Pingel, William, you and Maurer were walking along the street?—Yes.

14491. The police took Maurer?—Yes.

14492. What happened to Pingel and William?—Nothing. I walked on.

14493. Did you cease your conversation with them altogether?—I did.

14494. Did you not think it worth while talking about this episode?—No.

14495. You were considering whether you should go to the police station or not?—Yes.

14496. Therefore you had that in your mind. Why did you not speak to them about it, and consult them as to whether you should not all go to the police station together?—I had not time; it was so quick that I had no time to consult them.

14497. If there was nothing going on in the street, and an Inspector came and took Maurer from you four quite quietly, how was it that you three did not stay and talk the matter over?—The two were in front of us—Mr. Pingel and Mr. William were in front of us—and very likely did not see anything of what had happened at all. They heard about it because when I came back I told them what had happened.

14498. They were not close to you at that time?—Not exactly close.

14499. When did you tell them what had happened?—When I thought I would not go to the station, I came back and met them.

14500. What did you say to them?—I told them Maurer had got arrested.

14501. What did they say?—They said, "Why." I said, "I do not know the reason why."

14502. Did it not occur to any one of you three that you might help Maurer either at the police station or later on?—No, it did not; because after that we were glad we did not follow. After we had heard from Ruppert that he was arrested and Aultfuldisch, I was very glad I did not follow at all, or we might have been arrested as well.

14503. Have you ever since then talked to these two gentlemen about it?—Yes, to one, to Mr. Pingel.

14504. When was it you were first asked to come and give your evidence before us?—It was when Mr. Altfuldisch's case was before the Royal Commission.

14505. Did you volunteer to give it?—I volunteered to give it. I knew the case was on before the Royal Commission.

14506. Nobody asked you to give evidence at all?—No.

G. Schuhmann.

20 Nov. 1906.

14507. What kind of cards of this Society do you have. This is the membership card?—Yes.

14508. Do you issue any other cards for guests?—No.

14509. How do members bring any guests?—They are invited by members.

14510. Is this the only document. Has this document got the name of your Society upon it?—Yes.

14511. Where is it?—There.

14512. "Satzungen des Deutschen Gärtner—Vereins zu London." Is this the only document which is printed by your Society?—Yes, that is the only document which is printed.

14513. When you have entertainments like the one which you had on this occasion do you have any invitation cards?—No.

14514. So that if a man is in any way connected with your Society he must have this?—Yes.

14515. You are certain of that?—Yes.

14516 (Chairman). What Inspector McKay said was: "I know this, that the very last man I dealt with, and one who has been recommended for expulsion, had a card belonging to this Society found upon him." That is what Inspector McKay said. He did not say that any one of these men was a member of the Society?—That is the card.

14517 (Mr. Dickinson). You issue nothing else but this?—No.

14518. You never issue any cards?—We do not.

14519. For no reason?—For no reason.

14520. (Chairman.) You do not issue a small card to admit a guest as a member?—No.

14521 (Mr. Dickinson). This has not got your name on it, has it?—No, it has not.

FREDERICK BURTON, sworn.

F. Burton.

14522. (Earl Russell.) Do you live at 11, Bouverie Street, Paddington, and are you a florist?—Yes.

14523. You were at this entertainment on the 16th December, 1905?—Yes.

14524. When the entertainment was over did you come out with the president, Mr. Schumann?—Yes, and another gentleman.

14525. Is his name Pingel?—Yes.

14526. When you came out what state was the street in?—There were a few people in the street, but no rioting or fighting or anything like that; it was only ordinary.

14527. And no shouting?—No shouting.

14528. No pushing about?—No.

14529. Just the ordinary state of things at closing time?—Yes.

14530. You were looking for a friend of yours, Ruppert?—Yes.

14531. While you were looking for him what did you see?—I saw Altfuldisch standing near the kerb with another gentleman and they went a little way down the street and then Mr. Schumann said there was someone being taken into custody and I turned round and saw Mr.—I did not know the gentleman's name—being taken down the street by a police constable.

14532. That was not Mr. Altfuldisch that you saw then?—No. He was still standing there by himself.

14533. Do you know now who it was that you saw taken away?—I forget his name.

14534. Do you know the man by sight?—Yes, that gentleman there (pointing).

14535. Mr. Maurer?—Yes.

14536. And did you not see Altfuldisch arrested?—No.

14537. Had you seen Maurer before he was arrested or not?—Only inside the hotel.

14538. What condition was he in then?—Sober.

14539. Was he noisy at all?—Oh no.

14540. How did you hear about the arrest of Altfuldisch?—Ruppert came running up and said that he was taken and wanted to know what it was for. I said that I did not know that he was taken.

14541. How long were you in the street altogether, five or ten minutes?—About five or ten minutes.

14542. After you came out did you see any disorder?—No.

14543. Then you went to the Tube Station in Oxford Street?—Yes.

14544. Can you at all fix about the time you got to the station?—About twenty or twenty-five past twelve—I am not sure which.

14545. That was after you had come out and been in the street five or ten minutes and then gone on there?—Yes.

14546. But the last train had not gone?—Oh no, there were two or three after that.

14547. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had you been to this club before?—Never.

14548. You say "Never" very emphatically. There was nothing wrong in going there I suppose?—Not at all.

14549. Whom did you go with on this night?—I went there by myself, but Mr. Anthos invited me.

14550. Did he give you any note of invitation?—No, he told me to ask for Mr. Ruppert.

14551. Who is Mr. Anthos?—The gentleman I work for.

14552. He told you to go to the club and ask for Mr. Ruppert?—Quite right.

14553. Did you know Ruppert?—Oh, yes.

14554. Did you go down upon this Saturday night to the club?—Yes.

14555. What time did you get there?—Nearly ten o'clock.

14556. Did you walk into the room where the club meeting was held?—I had to ask what room it was.

14557. They told you which room it was?—Yes.

14558. And did you just walk in?—I asked for Mr. Ruppert.

14559. Whom did you ask?—I asked a man, a porter. He showed me a room, and I asked him to tell Mr. Ruppert that I would like to see him.

14560. Then did Mr. Ruppert come out?—Yes.

14561. And then you went in?—Yes.

14562. Was that about ten o'clock?—Yes, about.

14563. You stayed there till closing time?—Yes.

14564. Was there singing going on?—Yes, there was singing.

14565. Any other amusements?—Oh, no.

14566. Only singing?—And reciting.

14567. It was a social evening?—Yes.

14568. And I suppose everybody had something to drink?—Oh, yes.

14569. Did anybody have too much?—No.

14570. Were any of them jolly?—There might be one or two jolly.

14571. I mean jolly from drink. Had they enough drink to make them jolly?—Oh, no.

14572. Do you mean they were naturally jolly?—Yes.

14573. You came out altogether, did you not, at closing time?—I came out with Mr. Schumann.

14574. How many came out besides you do you think?—I was in front. I only know Mr. Schumann was behind me, and then there was Mr. Maurer.

14575. It was at closing time that you started to come out?—Yes.

14576. So that the room was clear of whoever were there when you started coming out?—It was not cleared. They were coming out.

14577. When you got into the street do you represent to the Commissioners that the place was quite quiet?—There was a little talking, but no riotous talking or fighting, or anything of that sort.

14578. You understand that talking could not be called a noise?—No.

14579. Do you suggest there was nothing going on in the street beyond mere quiet talking?—Yes.

14580. You are quite sure about that?—Yes, quite sure.

14581. Did Altfuldisch come out of the room at the same time that you did, or about the same time?—He was standing outside when I came out.

14582. He remained in the room did he not up to the last?—No, I do not think he did.

14583. Did you know him by sight?—Yes.

14584. He says when he came out at closing time that the street was very noisy and very full of people, and that there was a rare lot of noise, and the noise sounded like people who were angry, and there was a buzzing noise?—I never heard anything of that.

14585. You never heard any of that?—No.

14586. You did not actually see Altfuldisch arrested did you?—No, I knew nothing about it.

14587. You did not see him till after he had been arrested?—I never saw him until Boxing Day.

14588. But you did not see him arrested?—No.

14589. Can you account to the Commissioners for not seeing him arrested, unless it was that the street was quite full, and there was a crowd there, because he was arrested quite close to you was he not?—A few yards away.

14590. And yet you never saw it?—No, I was not looking that way. I was looking in a different direction.

14591. Was there not a crowd of people all round you?—No, only two or three people.

14592. You never saw Mr. Maurer arrested, did you?—No.

14593. And yet he was arrested quite close to you?—I did not see him. I only saw him after he was marched down the street.

14594. Can you account for that except for the confusion there was at the time?—I cannot account for it at all.

14595. And for all you know Mr. Maurer might have been fighting when he was arrested?—I should have heard him halloaing or scrambling about if there had been fighting.

14596. And for all you know Altfuldisch may have done something wrong before he was arrested?—I do not know that. I was not looking that way.

14597. (Chairman.) How many people were left in the room when closing time came?—I am sure I could not tell you, I did not stop.

14598. You cannot tell me, of course, to one or two, but were there 50 people there?—Oh, no.

14599. Were there more than ten?— There might have been ten or twelve. I could not be certain which.

14600. You think ten or twelve were only left there at closing time?—When I left, there could not be any more in there.

14601. Did you all make a move towards the door all at once?—Oh, yes.

14602. Do you remember anybody who came out with you who was in the passage at the same time with you?—There was Mr. Schumann and Mr. Pingel and Mr. Maurer, but we were in front—Mr. Pingel and I.

14603. Was Mr. Maurer behind you?—Yes.

14604. Mr. Maurer was behind you?—Yes.

14605. When you got out in the street which way did you turn?—Towards Shaftesbury Avenue way—to the left.

14606. Did you walk towards it?—We walked a little way down the street.

14607. You did not see Mr. Maurer come out of the house?—No.

14608. The next you saw of Mr. Maurer was his being in company with a police constable?—Yes, walking down the street.

14609. Did they pass you?—Oh, no.

14610. They went the other way?—Yes.

14611. How long had you been there before you saw Mr. Maurer in the company of a police constable?—I could not say exactly. It might have been four or five minutes.

14612. It might have been as long as four or five minutes, you think?—Yes.

14613. Quite long enough for Mr. Maurer to get into a row with somebody?—I should have heard it if he had got into it.

14614. Answer my question. You say it was four or five minutes after you left the house before you saw Mr. Maurer in company with a police constable?—Yes.

14615. You told me you did not see anything of him between the time you left the door and the time you say you saw him in company with a police constable?—Quite right.

14616. I put it to you there was quite time enough for him to get into a row?—Oh, yes.

14617. When you came out did you see any people coming out of any restaurant—the Café Turc, for instance?—I did not notice.

14618. You did not notice?—No, I did not take notice.

14619. People may have been pouring out of that restaurant as well as far as you saw?—Yes.

14620. Were many people shouting in the street?—There were one or two bunches of them—groups.

14621. Did you see any Inspector or any other constable when you got out in the street?—I think I saw two Inspectors and one policeman.

14622. Where were the two Inspectors and one policeman when you saw them?—As far as I can remember, they were on the other side of the road, or in the middle of the road.

14623. Which was it?—More on the other side than in the middle of the road.

14624. What were they doing?—They were standing there when I came out.

14625. The three were standing together?—Not all together. There was one near the middle of the road, and I think there was one on the kerb.

14626. And they were doing nothing?—I did not notice what they were doing.

14627. Did you notice anything that was taking place in the street at all?—No, I did not take any particular notice.

14628. Let me read you what Inspector McKay says:—"When we were at the junction of Greek Street and old Compton Street"—that was not far from where you were?—No.

14629. "We saw a crowd in Greek Street and we hurried there." You remember seeing the two inspectors?—Yes.

14630. This is what Inspector McKay says:—"We" (that is himself and the other Inspector) "hurried up there, and on arriving there we found two men rolling on the ground?"—I did not see anything of that.

14631. Are you prepared to say there were not two men on the ground?—When I came out, yes.

14632. I did not say when you came out. When you had gone, as you told us, towards Shaftesbury Avenue a few yards?—No, there was no one on the ground fighting.

14633. Now, when you came down to Greek Street and Maurer was behind you, you went a few yards down towards Shaftesbury Avenue. That is so, is it not?—Yes.

14634. Are you prepared to state upon oath that two men did not quarrel after you had left the hotel and fight?—I did not see them.

14635. Are you prepared to state that two men did not fight?—I cannot say that, because I did not see it.

14636. You did not see the actual arrest of Maurer?—No.

F. Burton.
20 Nov. 1906.

14637. What were you doing. When you had gone off the few yards you have mentioned towards Shaftesbury Avenue, did you stand there?—I stood there a little while and started talking, and then we got a little way down and walked back again.

14638. You were standing talking. To whom were you talking when you were a few yards from the door?—I think it was Mr. Pingel, as far as I can recollect, and Mr. Schumann. I am not quite sure whether it was both of them. I know Mr. Pingel was there.

14639. You and he walked back?—Yes.

14640. What made you walk back? What was your intention?—We were going to the Twopenny Tube Station.

14641. Then you turned back, not because anybody had been arrested, but because it was your way of going home?—Certainly.

14642. And with the intention of going home?—Yes.

14643. It was when you were walking back; that is to say, past the Wedes Hotel and towards the Twopenny Tube that you saw Maurer in the custody of a policeman?—No, we were standing then talking to Mr. Schumann, and Mr. Schumann said somebody was locked up.

14644. Locked up?—Taken into custody.

14645. Which did he say? "Locked up" and "taken into custody" are two different things?—Arrested.

14646. What were Mr. Schumann's words?—He said:—"Someone has been taken," I think it was, or something like that.

14647. That is the fourth version you have given?—They all mean about the same thing.

14648 "Locked up," "arrested," "taken up," and "taken?"—Taken.

14649. They are four versions. What did Mr. Schumann say? I am testing your recollection?—As far as I can remember it was "taken."

14650. When Mr. Schumann said somebody had been taken, where were you standing, or where were you walking, if you were walking?—In the middle of the road a little way from the Tube, Shaftesbury Avenue end.

14651. You think the street was then quiet enough for you to have heard if there had been any noise of fighting?—Yes.

14652. And quiet enough for you to have heard if a man had been arrested?—No, you cannot hear a man being arrested very well, if they do not make a noise.

14653. You can hear what the constables say?—We were not near enough for that.

14654. Then Inspector McKay may have told these men to move on and you might not have heard?—Yes.

14655. You did not hear the use of the word "ponce" by anybody?—No.

14656. Or any word of that kind?—No.

14657. Somebody told you, I suppose, that the man who had been arrested had been one of your party?—They did not tell me his name, but they said he was taken. They did not tell me his name or whether he was one of our party.

14658. You did not know that?—No.

14659. And then you went home?—We were going home.

14660. But you went home?—Yes.

14661. You did not go to the station or follow it up?—No.

14662. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you got out of the hotel, to which side did you go?—To the left.

14663. That is not the way to the Tube?—No, that is Shaftesbury Avenue way.

14664. But you were going home?—I was waiting for Ruppert.

14665. What made you go the opposite way to your station?—To wait for Ruppert.

14666. I do not quite follow why you should take one side rather than the other?—I do not know what made us go that way, but we turned to the left.

14667. How far did you go down?—About ten or fifteen yards, not more.

14668. But when Ruppert came out did you go back with him to the Tube?—No, he came up to us and said that Altfuldisch was arrested, and he wanted to know what it was for. Of course, I told him I did not know he was taken.

14669. Did he say anything to you about going after him?—No.

14670. He did go after him?—He went after him.

14671. Then did you go home?—Yes.

14672. (Earl Russell.) A question arises out of what has been asked this witness, and I should like to put to him what was stated by Inspector McKay at question 5679, page 141. Did you hear people shouting from the windows in the street at all?—No.

14673. You heard no one calling out anything?—No.

14674. Did you hear people shouting "Clear them away"?—No.

14675. Could people have been shouting from the windows in the street or shouting "Clear them away" without your hearing it during this time?—Certainly not.

14676. (Chairman.) When did you last see Ruppert before he came to you in the way that you have told Mr. Dickinson?—He was in the house.

14677. Then you agree that he had stopped to pay the bill?—Certainly.

14678. You understood he was stopping to pay the bill?—Yes.

14679. Was he your friend?—Yes, we work together.

14680. Did you hear that night that Ruppert had been taken or arrested?—No, I did not know till he came to work on the Monday.

14681. Then after he had told you of Altfuldisch's arrest and asked you if you knew why he had been arrested you said nothing to any of the parties to this transaction. You did not see Altfuldisch or Reuscher, or Maurer, or anybody after that?—Not after he came up and told me about Altfuldisch.

14682. Not after the conversation with Ruppert?—No.

14683. How long was it after you had left the house that you had this conversation with Ruppert?—It might have been a quarter-past twelve.

14684. That would make about a quarter of an hour?—Yes.

14685. What was the condition of the street when you were talking to Ruppert?—Quiet.

14686. Ruppert had not been arrested then, obviously, at a quarter-past twelve, according to you?—As far as I know.

14687. But I understood that Ruppert had come to ask you why Altfuldisch was arrested?—Yes; that is quite correct.

14688. Do you know now that Ruppert was arrested that night?—Yes.

14689. What was the condition of the street then—Quiet. There were not many people there then.

14690. The people had cleared away then?—Oh, yes, a lot of them.

14691. But I rather gather from you that there had not been a lot of people there at all?—Some of them who had been there went away.

(Earl Russell.) I now call Alfred Brant. I am told this witness can only speak German, and I would ask that Mr. Schumann be allowed to interpret for him.

(Chairman.) Yes.

Mr. Gabriel Schuhmann was sworn as Interpreter.

ALFRED BRANT, sworn.

The Oath being interpreted by, and his evidence being given through, the Interpreter.

A. Brant.
20 Nov. 1906.

14692. (Earl Russell.) What is your name and address?—Alfred Brant, 14, Bolton Road, St. John's Wood.

14693. Did you attend this social evening at Greek Street in December last?—Yes.

14694. Did you leave the hotel with Mr. Maurer?—Yes.

14695. A few yards after leaving the door did you wish Mr. Maurer good night?—Yes, I came outside together with Mr. Maurer and other gentlemen, and I said good night to them.

14696. You did not see Maurer or anybody else arrested?—No.

14697. When did you first hear of Maurer's arrest?—The next meeting.

14698. What was the state of the street when you came out from the restaurant?—Quiet.

14699. Was there any fighting?—No.

14700. Any shouting?—No.

14701. Did you see bunches of people pushing about?—No.

14702. Did you see the police moving people on?—No, I never saw that.

14703. What was the condition of the people you came out with who had been at the social evening? Were they sober, or quiet, or not?—Sober.

14704. And quiet?—And quiet.

14705. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) When you came out from the meeting did you go straight home?—Yes, at once.

14706. And you got into no trouble at all?—No.

14707. You never saw the police there at all, did you?—I saw policemen in the street.

14708. But you came out and walked straight away and went straight home?—Yes.

14709. You never heard for a fortnight after that anybody had been arrested?—No.

14710. Was it a fortnight after, or more?—I do not know.

14711. When was it that you first heard that anybody had been arrested?—I should think about three weeks later or a fortnight.

14712. And all this happened as long ago as last December?—Yes.

14713. When was it that anybody first asked you if you remembered what the state of the street was like?—Five or six weeks ago; I do not remember quite.

14714. Quite recently?—Yes.

14715. Would it be in the month of October, say? We are now in November. Would it be last month that somebody asked you?—Oh, yes, last month.

14716. Somebody asked you what you remembered about what had taken place in the December previous?—Yes.

14717. As a matter of fact you walked straight home, did not you, and paid no attention to what was going on in the street?—No.

14718. (Chairman.) How many people were left in the room when you left the room?—I do not know how many, I did not look for that.

14719. You do not remember how many members or their guests were there when closing time came?—There were 20 or 25 members altogether.

14720. How many remained at 12 o'clock when closing time came?—I do not know, I was very quickly outside.

14721. Were you one of the last?—No.

14722. What time did you leave the room?—I should think 12 o'clock.

14723. Then you were among the last to leave the room, were not you?—No, not the last.

14724. Were any of the party in the passage when you got in the passage after going to the door?—Some people were before and some people were behind me.

14725. When you got to the door, did you turn away and walk away?—I said good night to Mr. Maurer and was going away.

14726. You said good night to Mr. Maurer, and then walked away?—Yes, that was all.

14727. Which way would you turn when you got to the door?—To Hampstead.

14728. That would be towards Oxford Street?—Yes.

14729. And walked straight on and saw nothing of any disturbance?—No.

14730. Did you look at the street at all?—No.

14731. Nothing attracted your attention?—No.

14732. (Mr. Dickinson.) Were you a friend of Maurer's?—No, I saw him for the first time on this evening—not before.

14733. There was some singing in the evening, was there not?—Yes, in the room.

14734. Was Maurer one of those who sang?—I do not know.

14735. You did not notice him?—No.

(Earl Russell.) This is Maurer's character from George Clark, of Priory Lane, Putney. "October 22nd, 1906. William Maurer has been working for me from August 7th, 1905, during which time I have always found him to be a respectable, hard working, honest, and sober man." We have no other witnesses.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I was told Pingel was going to be called. I asked whether either of these men, Pingel or William, was here, and the witness said one of them was.

(Earl Russell.) I think we have called one of the men who was mentioned.

(Frederick Burton.) They call me William.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Then that answers my question.

(Chairman.) Would you like to call the police evidence now, Mr. Bankes, or postpone the calling of your evidence?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, we had notice of this a week ago, and we are quite ready. Inspector McKay has dealt with this before, but I should like to call him again.

(Chairman.) Yes, certainly.

Sub-Divisional Inspector FRANCIS MCKAY, sworn.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. McKay.

14736. (Mr. Bankes.) I think you have been asked about this incident before?—Yes.

14737. I will just ask you one or two matters again. On this night in question I think you and Inspector Manning were on duty?—We were patrolling.

14738. I think you told us on the last occasion that when you came to the junction of Compton Street and Greek Street you saw something?—Yes.

14739. A word about Greek Street. You said something about Greek Street on the last occasion, which apparently has created a good deal of feeling. What is your view about Greek Street?—I was referring, Sir David, to a number of persons who frequent Greek Street, not persons who live in Greek Street, and I gave a description of it. I am not going to retract one single word from what I have said, but I am extremely sorry to think that there are people in Greek Street, respectable people, some of whom I look upon as my personal friends, who have taken offence at this because they were under the impression that I was referring to the whole of the people living there. I have no wish to convey that meaning, and it would be monstrous for me to do so, because I know those people so well. There are foreigners there, some who I respect, and highly respect, and persons carrying on business there, and they are men who I feel confident any country would be proud to have as citizens. They have been most kind to me. They have assisted me on many occasions, and they have certainly complained to me about certain things in Greek Street. For what I have done for them they have thanked me over and over again, and therefore I am sorry that that impression should have gone abroad that I referred to those people and to anyone residing in Greek Street, who I had no intention of referring to at all.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. McKay.

20 Nov. 1906.

(Chairman.) Yes; I have the passage.

14740. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You were not speaking of the residents in Greek Street. What you said was: "Greek Street, Soho, is one of the very worst streets I have to deal with; in fact, it is the worst street in the West End of London, without exception." Then you say: "There is a crowd of people that gather there nightly, and they are nothing more or less than pests," and so forth?—Yes.

14741. (Chairman.) I take it from that that Inspector McKay was speaking of the street as a thoroughfare—as a place in which people were allowed to come and go. I did not understand that he meant to refer to residents in Greek Street at all?—No, I did not.

14742. Or to the character of the businesses carried on there?—No; they are highly respectable businesses carried on there.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There was a misapprehension.

14743. (Chairman.) The following words seem to me to put it right:—"There is a crowd of people that gather there nightly." It was with regard to the crowd that I understood you were making your statement?—That is so. That is what I had in my mind at the time I was speaking.

14744. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Now we will go to the matter which is immediately before the Commission. I think you told us you saw a crowd there?—Yes.

14745. Did you go up to it?—Yes.

14746. Tell us in your own way what happened with reference to this man whom we called last time Mander, and who we know now is Maurer?—Maurer and another man were on the ground when I got up there. There was some shouting, but what it was I could not say. I lifted Maurer myself off the ground, and when I did so he attempted to go back to this other man. Inspector Manning was dealing with this other man, so I did not catch sight of him very well, and as he seemed bent on fighting I took him to this constable who I saw coming towards me, and asked him to take him to the station.

14747. Are you quite certain that he was on the ground when you went up to him?—I have no hesitation in saying that he was. We saw the crowd there, and we hurried up. We were on the opposite side of the street to what they were. That is slightly to the north of the entrance to Wedes Hotel. Some of the crowd were in the centre of the road and some were on the footway.

14748. Is it true that you went up to Maurer and pushed him on the back?—No, I did not.

14749. What was the name of the constable to whom you handed him?—P.C. 134—Fleet.

14750. After that, did you say anything more to him till you got to the police station?—No.

14751. When you got to the police station where was he?—He was sitting on the bench, close to the fire, in the charge room. I saw him as I passed the door, and the constable went away. The constable was standing in the charge room door, and he left.

14752. Did you then make a charge against the man to the Inspector who was then in charge?—Yes.

15753. That was Inspector Remfrey?—Yes.

14754. Is there any foundation for the suggestion that you pushed Maurer down into a chair?—I never placed my hands on him at all. There was no occasion to do so because the man was sitting down when I came in, and, moreover, I was dealing with Altfuldisch at the time, so that I did not come into the charge room till probably a minute or two after when he was placed in the dock, so that he was not placed in a chair at all.

14755. There is another matter about searching him. Did you search him?—Yes.

14756. Just describe to the Commissioners what you did?—I think I asked him if he had a knife upon him, and he told me no he had not. I put my hands through his pockets and I did not find any knife.

14757. Did you do anything else?—No, I did not.

14758. Is it the ordinary practice to ask for a knife and if it is not produced just to make sufficient search to see if there is one?—Yes, if it is a person who we consider sober we should not search him—I mean a respectable person—unless we had some reason for doing so. For a trivial offence we would not do it.

14759. Maurer says that you took some letters and postcards and two cigars out of his pocket, and threw them into the fire?—I did nothing of the kind. It would be entirely irregular for me to do anything of the kind to take letters from the person, because it would be quite unnecessary—or cigars either.

14760. Would it be contrary to the regulations to do anything of the kind?—It would.

14761. Was there any occasion to do that with regard to this man?—None whatever.

14762. Or did you attempt to do it?—No, I did not.

14763. I think we may pass now to the Monday when he was brought up before the Police Magistrate. You gave evidence against him, did you not?—Yes, I did.

14764. Did you hear him say anything to the Magistrate when he was charged?—He said it was not his fault. As far as I can recollect these are the exact words he used—"It was not my fault."

14765. He has told us to-day he attempted to give the Magistrate an explanation, and said he had not been fighting, and that he had been pushed, and so forth. Did he say anything of the kind?—He said nothing of the kind. The Magistrate, when he was placed in the dock, asked if he was guilty or not guilty, and he said it was not his fault, and the Magistrate asked me what he was doing, and I think I replied in about half a dozen words, and he again replied it was not his fault, or some words to that effect.

14766. And was that all that took place?—That was all that took place.

14767. Until he came into the witness box to-day had you ever heard of any complaint either from him or from anybody else about the way in which he was treated?—No, I never saw the man or heard a word of him till I saw him this morning.

14768. (Earl Russell.) When he was asked to plead, I understand, instead of saying guilty or not guilty, he said it was not his fault?—Words to that effect.

14769. Do you suggest the Magistrate took that as being practically a plea of guilty?—I could not say what opinion the Magistrate formed.

14770. You said you were asked to say how this matter came about, more with a view of fixing the penalty than anything else?—Yes, probably.

14771. That was your impression at the time?—Yes, I looked upon it as that.

14772. You looked upon it as an uncontested charge?—Yes, he made that statement in the station when I told Inspector Remfrey what he was charged with. He said it was not his fault, and I gathered he meant it was not his fault that he had been fighting.

14773. He is right in saying, is he not, that the whole proceeding before the Magistrate was an affair of two or three minutes?—They did not last long.

14774. They do not generally last long in a London Police Court, do they?—They have not got much time sometimes.

14775. Did you hear him asked whether he had any question to ask you?—Yes.

14776. In answer to that did he begin to make a statement?—He did not. The only statement that he made was that it was not his fault. He seemed to use those words more than once.

14777. Who was it asked him if he had any questions?—The Magistrate.

14778. Did he make no reply whatever?—No, except it was not his fault.

14779. He did not say a word?—He said "It was not my fault," and shrugged his shoulders. That is all he did.

14780. When he was asked if he had any questions to ask you?—Yes.

14781. He did not begin to make any statement?—No, I am positive he did not.

14782. It is very common in your experience, is it not, that a prisoner who is not used to legal procedure when he is asked to question a witness begins to make a statement on his own account?—Yes, but they are corrected and told to ask questions.

14783. They are told it is not the time to make a statement, but they must ask questions?—Yes.

14784. It is a very usual thing for them to do?—Yes.

14785. Especially when they are not used to police courts?—Yes.

14786. In the evidence you gave how much did you tell the Magistrate. Did you tell him that you had seen him fighting and on the ground?—Yes.

14787. You said you had picked him off the ground?—Yes.

14788. You know there is no note of that in the Clerk's note?—I could not say.

14789. Have you not seen the Clerk's note?—Yes, but I did not take notice of it.

14790. You are quite certain you said it?—Positive.

14791. Did you say he was surrounded by a crowd of thirty or forty people?—Yes.

14792. Was that a fact?—It was.

14793. Thirty or forty people in one bunch round him?—I would not call it in one bunch. There might be two or three yards between one crowd and the other crowd.

14794. You mean to say, taking his own little group, and several other groups, you would make up thirty or forty people?—Yes, in the immediate vicinity; I will say in a circumference of twenty yards.

14795. That would not be correctly described by saying that he was surrounded by forty foreigners?—Perfectly.

14796. If they were merely in the street?—They were all composed of the same crowd—at least, two crowds.

14797. You still stick to the two gangs' theory?—I do.

14798. In spite of everything you have heard to-day?—I see no evidence to contradict it.

14799. You still think there was a kind of organised fight between persons coming out of one hotel and persons coming out of the other?—I do.

14800. You have heard all the witnesses say they know nothing of it?—I heard them say so, but I was there, and I saw what took place.

14801. Did you notice this gentleman, Mr. Schuhmann?—No, I cannot say I did notice him.

14802. You cannot say whether he was alongside him or not?—No, I cannot.

14803. Did you hear him say that Maurer was not shouting?—I did not pay much attention to who was standing there. I could not be positive.

14804. You heard Schuhmann say to-day that Maurer was not fighting, and was walking along when you arrested him?—I heard him say so.

14805. That, you say, is absolutely false?—It is false.

14805*. A deliberate lie?—I have no hesitation in saying so.

14806. Has there been any quarrel between you and Schuhmann?—No, there has not, that I know of.

14807. Can you suggest to the Commission any reason why that gentleman should stand there and perjure himself?—I could give a reason, I think.

14808. I should like to have it?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is that a proper question?

(Chairman.) I do not think I shall stop it; but it seems to me rather a dangerous question for Lord Russell.

(Earl Russell.) I am not in the least afraid of it.

(Chairman.) He might say, Yes, I think this, or I think that.

(Earl Russell.) I am anxious he should do so. It seems to me to require explanation that an apparently respectable witness should come here and make a deliberately false statement. But I am quite in the hands of the Commission.

(Chairman.) Mr. Whitmore says, and very properly, that he can draw his own inference, as he has listened to all the witnesses. Without saying what we think, if you were to put that question to us we could give you what we think might be a possible reason for Mr. Schuhmann giving false evidence. I do not say that he has done so.

14809. (Earl Russell.) Now to come back to this question of searching at the police station. You were the man who had caused the arrest of Maurer?—Yes.

14810. Although you did not actually take him to the police station, he was your prisoner?—Distinctly.

14811. Was it your business to search him?—Yes.

14812. The constable who arrests him, and not the gaoler?—No, not the gaoler.

14813. This statement which Maurer makes about your taking things out of his pocket and throwing them into the fire is entirely false?—It is entirely false; it is monstrous. I should not think of doing such a thing. I say the suggestion is monstrous from beginning to end.

14814. From beginning to end?—From beginning to end.

14815. About throwing them into the fire?—We do not treat prisoners like that.

14816. Would you allow him to go to the cell with cigars in his pocket?—Certainly.

14817. Would you allow him to smoke them there?—We should certainly take lights from him.

14818. At any rate, you would take lights from him?—Matches. They would not hurt the cells, which are of concrete, by smoking.

14819. I am afraid that is not a lawful thing to do, is it?—There is no great harm in it if it is a trivial offence.

14820. You did not suggest, and you do not suggest now, that Maurer was drunk in any way?—I did not.

14821. You told us in the case of a sober man you would not search him unnecessarily?—No.

14822. You would not make any suggestion now that he was in any way the worse for drink?—No. He had had some drink, but he was not the worse for drink.

14823. You heard some questions asked of Mr. Schuhmann, Maurer's friend, who was with him, as to why he did not go to the police station either then or the next day to see what had happened to him?—Yes.

14824. It is the case, is it not, that in very small cases of disorder, or in cases where you think a man is drunk, and you make up your mind that he is not when you get him there, the case is released before it gets to the Magistrate?—Never. If a man is charged at the police station he has to appear before the Magistrate.

14825. If he is charged before the Inspector on duty?—Yes.

14826. That is to say, sometimes they are released. Suppose you took a man to the police station, and the Inspector said, "This is too trivial; I shall not take it"?—He would not say anything of the kind. The Inspector can only go by what he is told.

14827. Suppose, when you told him, he said, "The charge is so trivial it is not worth troubling about"?—The charge could be refused, certainly.

14828. Then when a man is being taken to the police station, and someone sees that he has done nothing, the chances are he might not come before the Magistrate?—If the charge was refused, certainly.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. McKay.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. McKay.

20 Nov. 1906.

14829. Was Police-constable Fleet 134 in Court at the hearing of that charge?—No, I do not think so.

14830. He gave no evidence?—No; in fact, he would not know anything about it.

14831. I think he was within a yard or two of you when you arrested Maurer?—No, he was not.

14832. About how far was he from you?—I could not say how far from me he was in the first instance, because when I came on the scene he was not there. When I picked Maurer off the ground, and was getting him to one side, I saw Fleet coming towards me. He was then, I should say, about 20 yards from me.

14833. That was after you had picked Maurer off the ground?—Yes.

14834. So that he did not see anything of it?—No.

14835. Did you have to call him?—No; he saw the crowd as we saw it, which was coming towards us. When I got to the outskirts of the crowd he was close upon me. I told him to take the man to the station until I arrived. He did so. On my arrival he left the station.

14836. Do you know anything about the man you say Maurer was fighting with?—No, I could not be positive. I did not have a good view of his face.

14837. What happened to him?—He went away.

14838. Why did you not take him?—He went away. If he had not run away he certainly would have been taken like Maurer was. As the man had a chance to go away and did not go, there was no option but to take him.

14839. You mean you told Maurer he had been fighting and he had better go home?—When I picked him off the ground he seemed inclined to renew the fight, and I felt compelled to take him.

14840. Although he had been fighting, if, when you picked him up, he had said: "I will be good," he could have gone away home?—Yes.

14841. What did he say?—He did not say anything at that moment; he made motion that he wanted to go for the other man again.

14842. (Chairman.) What did you mean by saying a few minutes ago that Manning was dealing with the other man?—He was looking after the other man to see if he came towards the man whom I had lifted.

14843. You had hold of one and Manning had hold of the other?—Manning was dealing with the other man.

14844. Had he hold of him?—I would not be positive.

14845. Your man was trying to get away in order to get at the other man again?—He was.

14846. And Manning's man was not?—I could not say.

14847. (Earl Russell.) Do you know who the other man was?—No.

14848. Does Manning know him, or do you know him?—I do not know him.

14849. You have not been able to identify him?—No; I had a very bad opportunity of being able to distinguish him.

14850. The only thing that Maurer really did that made you finally arrest him was trying to struggle to get away?—To the other man. His attitude was hostile towards this other man. I could see that distinctly.

14851. It was nothing he said to you that annoyed you?—No, certainly not.

14852. Nothing that he did to you?—No.

14853. It was merely that you thought if you let him go he would fly at the other man?—Distinctly.

14854. Where had you hold of him—from behind?—No; I think I raised him by the arm. As near as I can recollect, I caught hold of him by one of his arms.

14855. Did you hold him by both arms?—No; I do not think I could do that very well.

14856. You heard what Maurer said, which was that when he was walking quietly along you pushed him?—I did nothing of the kind.

14857. You never push a foreigner?—There is no occasion to push them. They can go when they are told. It is not necessary to push people.

14858. Do you not push people sometimes?—No.

14859. Never put your hand behind them to quicken the going of them?—No.

14860. Never?—No.

14861. Although Maurer says you did, you are positive it was not true?—I am positive it is not true.

14862. Alfuldisch said that you did something of the same kind, did he not?—Yes.

14863. That is not true either?—No.

14864. One word about the crowd. Was it at the time you assisted Maurer that there was turbulence in the street?—Yes; Maurer was the first we had to deal with.

14865. What was the beginning of it?—I cannot say what the beginning of it was.

14866. I think you said you were attracted by seeing rather a noisy crowd?—Yes.

14867. When you first saw them they were not fighting?—I could not tell you that. They were too far away.

14868. Was there a great deal of noise coming from them?—Yes; the noise increased as you got nearer. They were some distance away when we saw them first, and we could not see much.

14869. Would a fair description be that they were walking along in an excited way?—They were not walking at all. They were standing still.

14870. Talking loudly?—Yes, they were.

14871. Shouting?—Yes, when we reached them they were.

14872. You do not know what sort of things they were shouting?—No. I did not pay much attention really to what they were shouting.

14873. Was it by way of continuing the singing that there had been inside?—Some of them were, and some of them were holding heated arguments.

14874. You thought it rather an explosive crowd?—Usual.

14875. There was not any actual disturbance which made it necessary for you to take any particular individual before Maurer?—Maurer was the first one we reached. Where we saw the crowd thickest that was the spot we made for.

14876. Maurer was down on the ground, as a matter of fact?—He was.

14877. In what way were they fighting?—Rolling about. I could not explain the exact position they were in at that moment, but they were certainly struggling.

14878. Were they shouting, too?—Yes, they were shouting.

14879. What kind of things were they shouting?—I really could not tell you the exact words.

14880. Were they shouting in German or in English? He was shouting in broken English.

14881. Was he abusing the other man?—That is what I inferred.

14882. It is not what you heard; it is only what you guessed?—What I saw and heard.

14883. I rather want to know if you can tell us any of the words you heard him use when he was fighting the other man?—I cannot.

14884. You are not quite sure that you distinguished any actual words, only that there was a certain amount of shouting between them?—They were certainly making use of oaths; they were swearing.

14885. After you picked Maurer up did he go on shouting, or did he shout at you?—Yes; he was saying something, but what it was I did not pay a great deal of attention to.

14886. You could not pledge yourself to the actual words he used?—No; it would be rather difficult for me to use the exact words.

14887. Could you at the time have been sure of the exact words? Is it time that has made you forget, or is it that you never heard distinctly what he said?—I certainly heard him swearing.

14888. Nothing but swearing?—No.

14889. Why did you charge him with using obscene language?—Because he was using it.

14890. But swearing is not obscene language?—Yes it is.

14891. You tell us you did not hear any words distinctly?—I heard oaths used. There is no question about that. I am perfectly positive upon that point. I cannot recall the exact words used.

14892. You are quite clear that the language was obscene and indecent?—It was obscene.

14893. You say that is the same as swearing. But you would not have arrested him for that obscene language if he had gone home when you picked him up?—No, I would not.

14894. But you mentioned it to the Magistrate?—Yes.

14895. You did not give the Magistrate any examples of it?—No, I do not think I did. I am not positive.

14896. And you cannot tell us now?—No, I should not like to pledge myself.

14897. After you arrested Maurer did the state of the street become worse?—Yes. They seemed to become more excited for a little while; but when they saw there were more policemen coming they seemed to move away.

14898. All the time the street was emptying itself, I suppose some people were going home quietly?—Yes, after we were there to deal with them they moved on.

14899. Some went on their own account surely?—No doubt they did. I could not tell you to an individual.

14900. Was it before or after you arrested Maurer that the people leaned out of their windows and said: "Why don't you clear away these dirty ponces"?—They were leaning out of the windows before we reached the street.

14901. Before you reached Maurer?—Yes, and after.

14902. Are these the respectable inhabitants of Greek Street that you are speaking of?—I would not like to pledge myself who they were. I did not know who they were.

14903. I thought you told us you have personal friends there?—I have.

14904. Was it any of them?—No; it was not.

14905. What windows were these people leaning out of?—I could not tell you for the moment. I took no notice.

14906. Were they at the first floor windows?—No; I think it was the second floor windows. It is very difficult to say. It is a thing I took very little notice of.

14907. I asked you whether you had used any language of this kind, and you said: "I used no language of that kind. It was continually referred to, as I said yesterday, and the word was frequently used amongst the crowd, 'Why don't you clear away these dirty ponces' some people were shouting from the windows in the street"?—Yes.

14908. I ask you what sort of windows they were, the ground floor windows or the first floor windows?—Not the ground floor.

14909. The first or second floor windows?—The first or second floor windows.

14910. They must have shouted rather loudly for you to hear it?—No, not necessarily.

14911. There was a noise in the street?—Yes.

14912. And yet you heard people from the first and second floor windows shouting this?—Yes.

14913. Did not you think that disorderly?—No, I did not.

14914. Let me read to you your next answer: "Q. You mean other persons were asking you why you did not clear them away?" Your answer was: "Yes. They were shouting, 'clear them away.'" Who were the people who were shouting "Clear them away"?—Those were the people who were leaning out of the windows—some of them, I suppose. I could not tell you who they were.

14915. These were not people on the street level?—I could not be positive. You hear a voice, but you cannot tell for the moment where it comes from, and to stand and listen to it would be ridiculous.

14916. You seem to have taken a good deal of note?—You cannot help it sometimes.

14917. Supposing you had, in your anxiety, to move on a crowd, pushed somebody in the back—a foreigner—and supposing he turned round and said: "I am not bound to run," what would you do?—I do not think I should take any notice of him.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. McKay.

20 Nov. 1906.

14918. Sure?—Positive.

14919. You would not think it impertinence on his part?—Certainly not.

14920. Not to speak to an Inspector like that?—No. We get very much worse things than that said by foreigners.

14921. You sometimes run people in for saying them, do you not?—No we do not.

14922. You never get annoyed by them?—No.

14923. Never lay your hand on a man except to arrest him and take him to the police station?—We might lay hand on him for some reason or another and not arrest him.

14924. (Chairman.) I have not been told, I think, what the exact charge against Maurer was?—He was charged with disorderly conduct and using obscene language. That would be under Section 12 of 2 and 3 Victoria, I think.

14925. Just a question or two with reference to what you said about the crowd in Greek Street from the other cafés. Are there many more cafes and restaurants besides the two which have been mentioned in that street?—Yes; I believe there are several.

14926. Are they much patronised on Saturday and other evenings?—Yes.

14927. So that a very considerable number of people are to be found in Greek Street immediately after 12 o'clock on a Saturday night?—Yes. The cafés usually disgorge those they have in them, and the foreigners hang about for a time.

14928. You have said: "There is a crowd of people that gather there nightly, and they are nothing more nor less than pests." Are they the people whom you have referred to as undesirable who have been called "ponces," and that class of men?—Yes; and prostitutes. I do not know if I would be in place in just saying this. I can give you a slight idea of what I have done there in the last—little over two years, perhaps, or say three years. People in the district have complained to me very much—I have been in charge of the district for about three years—of the serious injury that is caused to their business.

14929. (Mr. Whitmore.) In Greek Street?—Yes; and in the immediate vicinity. These fellows having foreign names, and getting so much money, those gentlemen conducting respectable businesses felt it very much, and they wanted to know why these men were allowed to hang about the streets as they were. I said we could not interfere with them as the law did not allow us to do so, but that we were dealing with them in the best way we possibly could; and, as I say, I have done so. I think, as near as I can gather, within the last three years I have arrested over 300 persons for keeping disorderly houses in the immediate vicinity; that, of course, includes brothels, gaming houses, and that class; and for what I have done I have been thanked by the Westminster City Council and by the Holborn Borough Council. I have a list here of persons who come over from abroad who carry on business, and I have a list here of what has actually occurred in Greek Street, I think, within the last two years. I have a list here of cases which have occurred. Some of them have left there, and some have not.

14930. (Chairman.) The cases you are referring to are cases of bullies, are they?—Yes.

14931. I do not think we want the details, because that kind of evidence is outside our terms of reference. I am only asking you these questions and inviting your evidence as throwing light upon what took place in Greek Street on this night?—Yes, I refer to that because people seem to question very much what I said.

14932. I have seen it stated by a very well-known journalist in an article in the "Daily Telegraph" that these men have an organisation of their own, and that they employ spies and watchers. Would that be a true statement, judged by your experience?—Certainly. We describe them as those belonging to a syndicate. There are a number of these men who form a syndicate, and they assist one another and share the profits.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. McKay.

20 Nov. 1906

14933. That I follow. Do you say that there are persons who are likely to commit a breach of the peace in the street? Is it not the cue of these men rather to be quiet in the street and on good terms with the police?—No, not altogether. There are two classes, or I might say three. There are what we call the wealthy bully, who goes about with a silk hat and fur coat; he is very artful and cunning, and he scarcely ever falls into the hands of the police. Then we have the middle man, who is inclined to be more quarrelsome. Then we have the lower man, who is a thorough ruffian. Only the other night, quite recently, two of them fought in Greek Street over a girl, and one of them stabbed the other. These men are most dangerous. They are mostly criminals from their own country.

14934. (Mr. Whitmore.) Did the fight that you refer to occur in Greek Street?—Yes.

14935. On a Saturday night?—Yes.

14936. About the same time?—Yes.

14937. (Chairman.) The mere fact that on a Saturday night you see a lot of foreigners gathered in knots of two and three would not lead you to arrest them?—Certainly not. I should not think of doing such a thing.

14938. You would simply tell them to move away?—Yes. If they were simply standing there, or if they appeared to have come out of a place, I would not interfere.

14939. Lord Russell rather suggested that you had been actuated on this occasion by the fact that Maurer was a foreigner. I suppose, if you allowed that to actuate you you would be arresting hundreds of people?—Yes. I could fill the police station in less than two hours if I did that. Foreigners I respect because I have been in most of their countries, and I respect those who are respectable.

14940. You have not the slightest doubt that Maurer was the man who was engaged in a tussle of some kind with the other unknown man?—Not the slightest, because when I raised him from the ground I never let him go until I handed him over to the other constable, and when I got to the station I saw he was the man. I had not the slightest reason to doubt it.

14941. When you handed him over to the other police constable was he resisting at all?—No, I could not say that he was.

14942. He went quietly?—Yes, he appeared to go quietly.

14943. More quietly than Altfuldisch went?—Yes; I think when I handed him over I came back towards the crowd, so that I did not really notice him after I handed him over.

14944. I do not gather that your recollection enables you to say that you actually saw the two gangs, or the two collections of men?—No, they dispersed before I got there.

14945. With regard to the cafes, I understand one is a French house and another is a German house, as tested by the people who frequent them?—Yes. In the immediate vicinity there is one French house, one German house, and one Italian house within a few yards.

14946. What is the Vienna Café?—That is German mostly—German and Austrian.

14947. How far is that from the Café Turc?—About thirty yards.

14948-9. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you took hold of Maurer I understood you to say you saw that Manning was dealing with the other man?—Yes.

14950. What did you see happen as regards Maurer? You say you saw him on the ground. What did you do?—I took hold of him to raise him from the ground, and I saw that Manning's attention was directed to the other man. I could not positively say what he was doing. After I raised Maurer from the ground I saw he made motions that he wanted to renew what he had been doing.

14951. You say that you actually raised him from the ground?—Yes.

14952. Did Manning raise the other man from the ground?—I could not be positive on that point. I did not really pay much attention to what Mr. Manning was doing.

14953. Then you say that they started to renew the fight?—Yes.

14954. The men were close to you?—Yes.

14955. Had you hold of Maurer or not?—Yes, I had hold of him all the time.

14956. He wanted to get at this other man?—Yes, Maurer was there, and the other man was probably four feet from him at the time.

14957. Manning was dealing with the other man?—Yes.

14958. That is not Manning's story according to what he said to us?—That is the impression that I formed at the time.

14959. Inspector Manning said:—"I went with the inspector up the street. We hurried up the centre of the roadway into this crowd. I saw two men on the ground, and I saw the inspector go to them. They got up. I was in the crowd trying to disperse it, and saying 'Pass along.' I saw Altfuldisch there. He was not on the pavement then; he was in the crowd. He was excited. I spoke to him and said 'Pass along' in the ordinary course of business. He did not move because I passed him. I should think he stepped back two or three yards. I went round and saw Inspector McKay afterwards with this man in custody." Manning tells us nothing whatever about having dealt with either of these men on the ground?—I think I am right in saying I did see him dealing with them, because we both came up together, and it would occur in the ordinary course that one would deal with one and one with the other.

14960. The ordinary course would be that he would be taken into custody?—If he would not go away.

14961. How is it you did not take the other man?—I think the other man went away when he was told, when he got off the ground.

14962. Do you mean that the other man escaped from Manning?—No, I would not say that.

14963. (Mr. Whitmore.) You were attending to Maurer, and he would not go away when you got him up?—No, if a man is not peaceful and will not go away we should have to take him. I did not have the opportunity of seeing the man, so I could not say much about him.

14964. (Mr. Dickinson.) I have to ask you about this answer that you gave last time. You said: "I know this, that the very last man I dealt with, and who has been recommended for expulsion, had a card belonging to the society found upon him." Can you give us the particulars of that case?—Yes, I think I can.

14965. Have you got the card?—I have not got the card, but I think I can give you the name of the man. It was a man named Prinz.

14966. What were the particulars about him?—He was arrested and sentenced to three months, and deportation recommended, on, I think it was, the 13th October last.

14967. I want to know about the card. What was the card? Was it a card belonging to this society?—Yes, that is so.

14968. What kind of card was it?—A small folding card with some inside papers.

14969. Did you take possession of the card?—I do not think I took possession of it, but simply when I was looking over the man's property I saw it.

14970. What happens to documents which may tend to incriminate people. This is a card which belongs to a criminal?—I would not look upon that as incriminating in any way.

14971. It might?—No, I could not see it.

14972. What would you do in the ordinary course with the card?—I would not interfere with it. Like any other papers a man has upon him, if they did not relate to the case, we would not touch them.

14973. Has this man been deported?—No, not yet. He is in prison yet.

14974. I suppose he has the card?—I could not say.

14975. Was it a card like the one we have seen?—Yes.

14976. But that is not a card, is it?—There were one or two leaves inside. I described it as a card. That is the impression I formed.

14977. After all, this is in German. You say it was a card of this society. Will you look at this and tell me whether that was the actual kind of card (handing card)?—Yes, I think this is a facsimile of the card.

14978. (Chairman.) You call that a "card"?—Yes, I would describe it as such, I did not notice that it had so many leaves.

14979. I might mention that I have often received from clubs and societies a book like that, and they are often referred to in correspondence as cards, but I do not know why?—I do not think there were so many leaves in the one I saw, but there may have been.

14980. (Mr. Dickinson.) I am not quarrelling with the word "card" in particular, but had it got a front page on it?—Yes, I feel positive it had.

14981. Had it a name on it?—No, I cannot say that it had a name on it. I am not positive, but I do not think so.

14982. If it had a name on it you would have made a note of that, for it would have shown what party he was connected with?—Yes.

14983. This is a membership card?—I really did not know that that was a membership card, I thought it was a card referring to the society, and that was all. He told me it was. I did not know it was a membership card.

14984. Under what name is the society known?—I know it as the Gardeners' Society. Some people call it the Florists' Society, but I usually know it as the Gardeners' Society.

14985. (Earl Russell.) May I ask a question or two about that card? The name of this man you say is Prinz?—Yes.

14986. It was on the 13th October last that he was arrested?—Yes, about that.

14987. Was he released on bail?—I do not think so.

14988. When was it you found this card?—On his arrest.

14989. Do you say it would have been returned to him?—Yes, I have no recollection of taking it from him.

14990. You mean that in searching his pockets in the ordinary way you found it?—We went through his pockets to see what he had, in a case like that, and to see if there was anything on him relating to his antecedents. I knew the man.

14991. Was he charged with living on the earnings of women?—He was charged with brothel-keeping; that was his occupation.

14992. You say on looking through his things you found it. Has he been tried?—Yes.

14993. And convicted?—Yes.

14994. Then this property would have remained on him?—As far as I know.

14995. And would now be in the keeping of the Governor of the prison where he is?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) I think we might perhaps get this card if it was upon him.

(Chairman.) It is a very remote point.

14996. (Earl Russell.) But the President of the Society tells me that he has been through the list of members, and there is no such person as Prinz?—I have no hesitation in saying this. I do not wish to cast any slur at all upon the society, and it is the last thing I wish to do, because they are respectable men, but these men that I refer to were in the habit of mixing with honest men, and that is why we have so much difficulty in dealing with them.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. McKay.

20 Nov. 1906.

(Earl Russell.) If it is not suggested that they are members I do not think it is worth troubling about it.

(Chairman.) There never was a suggestion that the man was a member, so far as I know.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have here the Magistrate's Clerk's note of this case. Lord Russell referred to this witness's evidence. I would ask you to look at the note as indicating that at the police court this was really treated as an undefended matter. I will hand up the note.

(Chairman.) "December 17th, 1905. Greek Street, Soho; surrounded by forty foreigners fighting, using obscene language."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is really nothing more than the nature of the charge.

(Chairman.) Then in the Clerk's hand-writing: "10s. or seven days." It is disorderly conduct and obscene language.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The way in which that book is prepared is that on the left-hand side there is prepared by somebody a list of the charges, and on the other side the Clerk indicates what the nature of the charge is, and the result. Of course, where a case is fought out you will find notes taken at length; for instance, if you turn some pages on you will find other cases, and there you will find the evidence of the witnesses is taken at length. It is from that, of course, that the notes have been transcribed, or copied, which we have supplied you with.

14997 (Chairman). According to your description I do not know why you charged Maurer under that section with disorderly conduct and obscene language. The offence clearly comes within the section, but from the story you have told us to-day, and from what you have told us before, it seems to me to have been a case of assault and breach of the peace rather than what I should ordinarily call disorderly conduct and obscene language?—You would not prefer a charge of assault unless there was some complainant, and we do not charge for a breach of the peace in London. We usually charge under Section 54 of 2 and 3 Victoria, and under Section 12 of the same Act.

14998. If the Magistrate thought the man had been fighting and not using obscene language he would have been bound to let him off on that apparently?—Yes, he could do so, or he could bind him over.

14999. The Magistrate might bind him over, but if he thought there was no obscene language, and there had been fighting on the part of Maurer, he would have been bound to let him off on this charge?—He would.

15000. He might have bound him over to keep the peace of course?—Yes.

15001. I did not gather that the obscenity of language was the real gravamen of his offence the first time, as you have been telling us to-day, but the disorder?—They are both combined. If the man had used language in the ordinary way I would not have interfered; he would have simply gone away, and there would have been an end of the matter.

Inspector William Manning, Sworn.

15002 (Mr. R. D. Muir). You are an Inspector of the C Division stationed at Great Marlborough Street?—Yes.

15003. You have already given evidence as to some of these incidents in Greek Street in the early morning of the 17th December?—Yes.

15004. When you first saw Maurer what position was he in?—He was on the ground. Two were on the ground.

15005. Just describe what was done with regard to those two who were on the ground?—Inspector McKay entered the crowd prior to me some eight or nine paces; and he immediately went to the two men lying down, or who were down. I was outside the crowd, and attempting to make my way in when I saw Inspector McKay with a prisoner (Maurer)—he had got him up. By the time I got to the centre of the crowd he had turned round, and I saw another man there by his left arm, and I got him away. He went away hurriedly through the crowd. I take it that was the second man that was on the ground. I saw him when I first entered the crowd.

Inspector W. Manning.

20 Nov. 1906.

15006. Did you see Inspector McKay raise Maurer from the ground?—Yes.

15007 (Earl Russell). You did not take the second man who was with Maurer into custody at all, did you?—No; he went away.

15008. You were not actually attending to the matter when Inspector McKay was attending to it?—

Inspector W. Manning.

20 Nov. 1906.

I should have done if I could have got there. I should have arrested him too.

15009. It was not because you did not want to, but it was because you had not the opportunity?—That is so.

15010. Inspector McKay is mistaken in saying you had hold of this man?—I think I did touch him before he hurriedly left.

15011. You were as near as that?—Yes.

15012. I thought you were occupied with the crowd trying to disperse it, and telling it to "pass along"?—At first I did.

15013. This was your answer when you told us about it before: "I went with the Inspector up the street. We hurried up the centre of the roadway, into this crowd. I saw two men on the ground, and I saw the Inspector go to them. They got up. I was in the crowd trying to disperse it and saying 'Pass along.' I saw Altfuldisch there." The rest is all about Altfuldisch. Then you say at the end: "I went round and saw Inspector McKay afterwards with this man in custody"?—That is so, when he left the crowd.

15014. There is no suggestion there that you tried to get to these two men?—That is what I meant, any way.

15015. The man you saw in custody was Maurer?—Yes.

15016. Did you try and accompany Inspector McKay when he went up to these two men on the ground?—Yes. A number of persons followed, and I went into the crowd.

15017. There were two men on the ground, and Inspector McKay went forward?—Yes.

15018. You did not immediately rush after him?—I did, but I could not get to him.

15019. You did try to get to him?—Yes.

15020. The other man got up, did he?—Yes, they were both up.

15021. The other man got up and ran away before you could reach him?—No, he did not run away; they were together when I got to the scene of the crowd, and it was when I said "Pass along" he hurriedly went under the crowd and out of it.

15022. If you had had the opportunity you say you would have arrested him?—Yes.

15023. But he escaped so hurriedly that you had not the opportunity?—He went away when I asked him. I lost the opportunity I should have had.

15024. (Chairman.) Did you ask him to go away?—I said "Pass along."

15025. You asked the other man to go away, I understood you to say?—I said: "Pass along."

15026. You told learned Counsel a moment ago: "I asked him to go away"?—I do not think I said that. "Pass along" I kept saying.

(Earl Russell.) You did say that; I do not know whether you meant it.

(Chairman.) You certainly said: "I asked him to go away."

15027. (Earl Russell.) Inspector McKay tells us there were two men fighting on the ground, one of whom, he says, was Maurer, and the other was a man we do not know anything about. You say you saw these two men on the ground?—I did.

15028. I am asking you about the other man who is not Maurer, and I am asking you whether you would have arrested him if you had had the chance. I understand you to say you would have done?—Yes, but he went away.

15029. (Chairman.) Then you told the learned Counsel that you asked him to go away?—So I did. I said: "Pass along."

15030. (Mr. Whitmore.) You mean you asked him to go away when you said: "Pass along"?—Yes. I did not say: "Pass away, please."

15031. (Earl Russell.) Did you make any effort to arrest this man or not?—No.

15032. Did you wish to have him in custody? Were you trying to get at him to arrest him?—When I got to the centre of the crowd, and said "Pass along," the man hurriedly put his head down and went away.

15033. He bolted through the crowd?—Yes.

15034. If he had not done that would you have arrested him?—I should have done.

15035. How long after Inspector McKay pulled them to their feet was it before this man bolted—a second or two?—Yes, just as I got from the outskirts of the crowd to where he was.

15036. You would have been up to him in about half a minute?—Yes.

15037. But before you could do that he had bolted?—Yes.

15038. How do you explain what Inspector McKay said, that after he had got hold of Maurer, Maurer tried to get at the other man?—He may have done.

15039. How could he do so if the other man had bolted?—Inspector McKay had hold of Maurer before I got to him.

15040. I understand that almost at the moment when he picked him up the other man ran off through the crowd?—Almost at the moment.

15041. I think you said you would have been up to him in about half a minute?—It was some seconds before I got to the centre of the crowd.

15042. Inspector McKay says he picked Maurer off the ground, where the two men were fighting?—Yes. I saw him go down and come up again.

15043. You saw immediately after, or almost immediately after, the other man run away—he slipped under your arm?—Yes.

15044. Almost immediately after?—Yes.

15045. All I ask you is how did Maurer have time to make any attempt to get at the other man if the other man had bolted?—I suppose he would have done when he was raised from the ground.

15046. Were you near enough to hear what was being said between Inspector McKay and Maurer?—Yes.

15047. Everything?—I may have done.

15048. You may have done! If you cannot remember say so?—I should not like to press my memory for that.

15049. You would not like to say you did hear what passed between them?—No.

15050. You cannot be sure that Maurer did say, "We are not bound to run," or anything of that sort?—I never heard that.

15051. You never heard the obscene language, did you?—I heard a lot of it in the crowd.

15052. But I mean from Maurer in particular?—I cannot say that.

15053. (Chairman.) Had you come on the scene with Inspector McKay?—Yes.

15054. Were you patrolling together?—I met Mr. McKay in Old Compton Street after 12 o'clock. We walked together up Old Compton Street until we got to the corner of Greek Street, and it was from some 120 to 150 yards up the street we saw the crowd.

15055. That would be towards Oxford Street?—Towards Soho Square.

15056. As much as 150 yards, you say?—Perhaps 100 yards.

15057. You saw a crowd during the whole time you were walking towards them. Were you walking rapidly?—Yes, we hurried.

15058. Was the other part of Greek Street, the part between this crowd and Old Compton Street, from which you came, free from people?—There were some people there, but there was no disorder there.

15059. It was congested 150 yards up?—Yes, slightly past this hotel in question.

15060. Was there much noise coming from the crowd?—Yes, considerable noise—a quarrel.

15061. Was the crowd growing larger as you were advancing?—Yes, it did increase.

15062. You think there might have been a crowd before these people came out of Wedes Hotel at all?—I could not say that.

15063. You cannot say so, but do you think it was quite possible that during the time you were walking from the corner of Old Compton Street to where you saw the crowd the crowd may have been enlarged by these people coming out of Wedes Hotel?—It may have been.

15064. You did not see any persons coming from any particular hotel?—No.

15065. When did you first see the two men shouting or fighting?—Within a few yards of the edge of the crowd, when I got there I could see they were all looking down, and there was a movement as if persons were on the ground.

15066. Inspector McKay was ahead of you?—Yes, he got in the crowd first.

15067. Did the crowd make way for him?—No, he had to force his way.

15068. He had to force his way to the centre of the crowd. Did you see him pick up one of the men?—Yes, I saw him go down and up again.

15069. How near were you to him when that incident took place?—Some six or eight feet; it might have been more than that; the crowd was moving; I was trying to get in.

15070. As far as this neighbourhood is concerned we need not ask you any further questions. Now as to what took place on the way to the police station. You went to the police station?—Yes.

15071. Did you see Maurer on his way to the police station at all?—No, not after he was handed over to the constable, and they turned to the left in the Square.

15072. Did you see Maurer at the station at all?—Yes.

15073. Where was he when you saw him?—He was sitting down on the bench then.

15074. Was he quiet then?—Yes.

15075. You did not see anybody force him down?—No, not at all.

15076. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He got there before Inspector McKay?—Yes.

15077. (Chairman.) Did you get there before Inspector McKay?—Yes, I was in the room with Maurer, I should think, four or five minutes before Inspector McKay came in.

15078. Who did you take there?—The man named Ruppert.

15079. Ruppert, according to your story, came quite quickly?—Yes.

15080. Did you, in fact, at any time touch Maurer in the charge room or the station?—I saw him searched, but he was certainly never assaulted.

15081. (Mr. Dickinson.) I should like to read you what Inspector McKay's account before was at Question 5472: "We were at the junction of Greek Street and Old Compton Street; we saw a crowd in Greek Street; we hurried up there, and on arriving there we found two men rolling on the ground." That is quite correct, according to you?—Yes.

15082. You saw the two men rolling on the ground?—I am positive there were two there.

15083. "They were fighting, and they were making use of obscene language to each other." What kind of language were they really using?—I really could not say. I heard the word "ponce" and "f——g" and "bull-dog police," and "f——g bull-dog police."

15084. These men who were rolling on the ground were using this language?—I could not say that. Inspector W. Manning.

15085. (Chairman.) It was said in the crowd?—Yes. 20 Nov. 1906.

15086. (Mr. Dickinson.) Were the two men who were rolling on the ground talking in English?—That I could not say with any degree of certainty. They may have been talking in English or broken English. I could not say. It is very difficult to throw your mind back and remember now what those two men absolutely said then.

15087. But it was what he was charged with?—Yes, but I did not charge him. Inspector McKay heard that.

15088. Then Inspector McKay goes on: "We got them up"?—Yes.

15089. I understood you did not get them up?—I do not know who Inspector McKay is referring to. Thinking I was in the crowd he thought I may have assisted him up with them.

15090. But you did not as a matter of fact?—I did not help them up.

15091. This other man seems to have got up anyhow by himself?—Yes, he may have done so.

15092. And when he got up you said "Pass along" to him?—Yes.

15093. "We got them up and they started to renew the fight." How does that fit in with your account?—That may have been right.

15094. But was it right?—I saw Inspector McKay holding him, and he certainly was not quiet.

15095. But it takes two to make a fight?—No doubt he was anxious to get to the other one.

15096. What did the other man do. Inspector McKay says "They started to renew the fight." According to you the other man had escaped?—I do not think I said that.

15097. No, your account now is that this man got away?—That may be right. I could not deny it.

15098. Then there was no attempt to renew the fight?—Not that I saw. The only thing was this man was anxious, that is to say, he was not orderly in the Inspector's hands.

15099. He was not quiet in the Inspector's hands?—No, and possibly that is what Inspector McKay means—that he was anxious to get back to the man he had parted from.

15100. You did not see any attempt to renew the fight?—Not myself. He was not orderly.

15101. If you found two men fighting in the street, and they get up when you told them, and they both go away, should you arrest either of them?—No.

15102. You would not?—No.

15103. There does not seem very much reason then for the arrest of Maurer?—Only that I understand he would not go away when Inspector McKay told him. He was anxious to renew the fight. I should arrest then.

15104. Even if the other man is not there to fight with?—The other man must be there.

15105. I understood you to say the other man got away?—The other man did go away. I do not say at that particular point.

15106. You saw all this?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should like to ask one question of the constable who took this man to the station.

P.-C. George Fleet, 134 C, sworn.

15107. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Were you on duty on this night in the neighbourhood of Greek Street?—I was.

15108. What was the first you saw of Maurer, or rather perhaps you had better begin a little earlier. Where were you on duty?—I was on duty round Greek Street and Soho Square and Charing Cross Road.

15109. Did you see anything of the crowd in Greek Street, or did you come up later?—I came up later. I was in Soho Square, and it was beyond closing time, and I was coming round towards Greek Street. As I came round I saw this crowd and Inspector McKay there. I rushed up to the crowd, and Inspector McKay gave me this man and said, "Take this man to the station and wait till I come." P. C. G. Fleet.

15110. Did you take the man to the station?—I took him to the station.

15111. Did he say anything to you on the way about having been improperly arrested, or anything of that kind?—No.

15112. Did he speak to you at all?—He muttered something in a foreign language, but I could not understand it.

P.-C. G. Fleet.

15113. When you got him to the police station did you take him into the charge-room?—Yes.

15113. What did he do?—He sat down by the side of the fireplace.

15115. Did you wait there some time before Inspector McKay came in?—Yes, some time.

15116. Did you remain there with him until the Inspector came in?—I did.

15117. When the Inspector came in what did you do?—I said "Your charge, Sir," and I walked out.

15118. At that time what was this man doing?—He was sitting down on the form.

15119. He has suggested to-day that the Inspector pushed him down roughly into a seat. Is there any foundation for that?—No.

15120. (Earl Russell.) A nice quiet young man you found him on the way to the station?—That is right.

15121. No trouble at all?—No trouble at all.

15122. Quite sober?—Quite sober.

15123. The only difficulty you had in understanding him was that he spoke in German?—I do not know whether it was German or Italian.

15124. Whatever his language was you could not understand it because it was something foreign?—Yes.

15125. You cannot really say what he was trying to say to you on the way to the station?—No.

15126. You did not manage to make it out?—No.

15127. You went out of the police station before he was actually charged, I understand?—Yes.

15128. As soon as ever Inspector McKay came in you said: "Here is the man I brought for you"?—"Your charge, sir."

15129. And then went out?—Yes.

15130. It might have been a minute or two before he was charged or more?—I could not say.

15131. You said nothing at all to him of what happened before he was arrested?—No.

15132. You came up after the whole thing was over, and you simply took him to the station for Inspector McKay?—Inspector McKay had got hold of the prisoner when I came up, and he said: "Take this man to the station, and wait till I come."

15133. You did not know what he was charged with or what he had been doing or anything about it?—No.

15134. You simply took him by Inspector McKay's orders to save him trouble, or because he had something else to do?—Yes.

15135. Did you try to talk to him at all on the way?—No.

15136. He gabbled to you something you could not understand?—Yes.

15137. And you did not attempt to make it out?—No.

15138. And when you got to the station he sat down quietly?—Yes.

15139. You did not try to talk to him then?—No.

15140. You kept an eye on him until Inspector McKay came?—Yes, I stayed by the door.

15141. (Chairman.) Where were you about two minutes before 12 on this Saturday night?—I was in Soho Square.

15142. Which way were you walking at that time? Greek Street way?—No, I was not walking that way, we work to the right, and when I got into Soho Square I thought I would go back again on account of closing time.

15143. Because the public-houses and restaurants close at 12?—I forgot they closed at 12 o'clock on Saturday night. I was thinking of half-past 12, and when I got round this corner I saw this crowd in Greek Street with Inspector McKay there.

15144. Had you been in Greek Street before?—Oh, yes, I had been there before.

15145. But that night. Since you were out on duty?—Yes.

15146. When had you last been in Greek Street before 12 o'clock on that night—half an hour, or three-quarters of an hour, or what?—I could not say.

15147. You could tell me within an hour?—About an hour I should think.

15148. Do not accept it from me because I suggested an hour. Surely it is not the first time that you have been upon this beat?—I do not do much duty round there.

15149. Had you been before in that week on the same beat?—I think I was transferred there that night.

15150. At any rate you had been in Greek Street that night before you came into it and took Maurer?—Yes.

15151. More than once?—Yes, more than once.

15152. Had you noticed anything special about the street on those occasions?—No, nothing special.

15153. When you got to the corner just at midnight, as you told us, which way did you turn?—I was working to the right.

15154. What could you see from there. Could you see any crowd?—No, not when I got into the Square.

15155. But when you got into Greek Street after having been in the square, I am talking about?—The second time round do you mean?

15156. You told me you had been in Soho Square and you went back into Greek Street because you recollected that the houses would be closing?—Just so.

15157. When you got into Greek Street what did you see there?—Nothing unusual.

15158. Seeing nothing unusual you walked along Greek Street until you met Inspector McKay, and then he gave you a man in charge?—No. I was coming from Old Compton Street; when I came through Old Compton Street I went up Greek Street, and worked to the right. I noticed nothing amiss when I came by. I got into Soho Square—

15159. We know all about that. When you came back into Greek Street from Soho Square you told me you saw nothing unusual?—I saw the crowd then.

15160. I asked you the question a moment ago. Do attend to me. You saw a crowd there?—Yes.

15161. How far was the crowd from you when you got into Greek Street?—About 150 yards I should think.

15162. Just the same distance it was from Inspector McKay when he came into Greek Street?—He was at the corner of Bateman Street, and I was at the corner of Soho Square.

15163. How far is that?—I do not know exactly; I should think it would be about 150 yards.

15164. Seeing the crowd, you went towards it?—Yes.

15165. Did you see two men on the ground, or anything of that kind?—No.

15166. How was the crowd behaving?—I did not take any notice. They were talking very excited.

15167. And you saw Inspector McKay then, I suppose?—Yes; he gave me the prisoner.

15168. And the prisoner went quietly?—Yes.

15169. That is all the light you can throw on the matter?—That is all.

15170. (Mr. Dickinson.) You took the prisoner to the station?—Yes.

15171. And you stayed with him in the station for some little time?—Yes.

15172. How long were you with him?—I could not say exactly, but I should think about ten minutes to a quarter of an hour.

15173. Did the prisoner go quietly with you?—Yes.

15174. You had no difficulty with him?—No, that is so.

15175. Was he at all excited?—He was saying something in some foreign language, but that I did not understand. He tried to speak to me, but I took no notice.

15176. When you got him to the station you could see him pretty well, of course?—Yes.

15177. What was his appearance like?—That I could not say. I did not take much notice of him.

15178. Was it the appearance of a man who had been rolling in the street?—I could not say.

15179. Did you notice any dirt on him at all?—I could not say.

15180. What was the condition of his hat?—I could not say that.

15181. As you noticed nothing, I presume there was nothing to notice?—I noticed nothing amiss with him. It is so long ago now.

(Chairman.) I have been thinking that myself for some time.

15182. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where was the crowd when Inspector McKay handed him over to you?—They appeared to me to be about the centre of the road.

15183. Was the Inspector in the crowd, or had he got out of it?—He was more at the side.

15184. He brought this man out?—Yes.

15185. At that moment was the prisoner excited?—I did not notice.

15186. Was the crowd in a very excited condition then?—They were talking very loudly amongst themselves.

15187. Did you hear any words used?—No.

15188. You did not know what sort of language was being used?—No.

15189. Did you see Inspector Manning?—No, I did not see him.

15190. How far had you to go along the street with prisoner before you got outside the crowd?—About three to five minutes' walk.

15191. And then when you were going away nothing attracted your attention to the crowd?—No, I was looking after the prisoner.

15192. You took the prisoner quietly away?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Those are all the witnesses I desire to call, sir.

(Chairman.) Then we will not go any further to-day. What case will you be ready with to-morrow, Earl Russell?

(Earl Russell.) George Wilson.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Does the order in which these cases are taken depend on my learned friend's convenience?

(Chairman.) Not on his convenience, but on the convenience of the public.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Does he select the cases, or do you?

(Chairman.) You are not entitled to ask us questions.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I understood you were going to tell us which cases were to be taken. P.C. G. Fleet.

(Earl Russell.) I have not heard a word of it till this moment. I did not know what case was going to be taken to-morrow any more than my friend. 20 Nov. 1906.

(Chairman.) Documents have been sent to us in several cases by Earl Russell's clients, and we are informed that they are ready to go on and that their witnesses are here. It is the witnesses we are concerned with. Is George Wilson here now?

(Earl Russell.) No, I am told he is not.

(Chairman.) Is Treshadein here?

(Earl Russell.) No, none of the witnesses in any of the other cases are here to-day. I think we were given to understand that only Maurer's case would be taken.

(Chairman.) I was no party to that myself. I understand Treshadein has a complaint against the police. If he has, he must attend here to-morrow at eleven o'clock. The learned Commissioner who has just spoken to me (Mr. Rufus Isaacs) was not here this morning, and he naturally could not understand your observation to us, Mr. Bankes. It is for us to determine exactly as we like in what order we shall take the witnesses.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is all I was saying.

(Chairman.) You have no right to interpose at all.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Except you asked Lord Russell which case he would take.

(Chairman.) When I said that I was dealing with a gentleman who represents Mr. Treshadein and certain other people who have made complaints to us against the police. That is all I meant by it, and it is perfectly obvious. If Treshadein is ready to go on with his complaint we will take him to-morrow at eleven o'clock, and the same observation will apply to Wilson, who has also made a complaint to us.

(Earl Russell.) Yes, I am told that Treshadein can be got here, but we had been given to understand that Wilson's case was to be ready.

(Chairman.) If Wilson will come here we will hear him to-morrow. We are sitting here to hear complaints against the police.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Can anybody give us any information which will enable us to identify these cases?

(Chairman.) You will hear the evidence to-morrow, and have a full opportunity of answering it.

(Earl Russell.) I should not like it to be thought that I am in any better position than Mr. Bankes. I had no idea that Wilson's case was going to be taken to-morrow, and I have not got my papers here.

FIFTEENTH DAY.

Wednesday, 21st November, 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Esq., K.C., M.P.
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-law).
Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Secretary.)

(Chairman.) We will now take the case of George Wilson.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Would you allow me, Sir, before the case of Wilson is taken, to refer for one moment to what transpired at the very close of the case of Andrews. I only refer to my learned friend Mr. Bankes putting in an exoneration of Police-Constable West. There was no opportunity for me to examine the exoneration given by the Chief Commissioner to P.C. West, who was reprimanded by Mr. Cluer, the Magistrate, on July 31st for attempting to mislead him; but it seems to me of very great importance to inquire whether Mr. Cluer had an opportunity of knowing what the excuse was which West made when the exoneration was given. I have communicated with Mr. Cluer, and I find he has had no communication whatever from the Commissioner, and knows nothing whatever about any excuse which West may have made as to his statement to Mr. Cluer which the Magistrate thought was an attempt to mislead him. It seems to me a most extraordinary thing that an 21 Nov. 1906.

exoneration should take place by the Commissioner in regard to a matter peculiarly known to Mr. Cluer, unless Mr. Cluer was communicated with respecting it.

(Chairman.) What is your application?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Only that an opportunity should be given to me to look at the exoneration of the Commissioner, and that some explanation should be afforded of how the exoneration was arrived at. It is so very germane to the question of police discipline.

(Chairman.) Was any document handed in to us?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes, my learned friend handed in a long paper from the Commissioner which I did not inspect stating that the matter had been inquired into by the Commissioner.

(Chairman.) There was a document handed in to us, you say, but personally I do not remember it being handed in. Has the Secretary got it?

(The Secretary.) No, I have not seen it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I can recall your attention to it, I think. In the case of this particular police constable there was an inquiry by the Commissioner into the alleged complaint by the Magistrate.

(Chairman.) An inquiry into the conduct of the constable who had arrested Andrews?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) The constable being named West.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That was not the name of the man who arrested Andrews. It was a purely collateral matter.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) West was the constable who gave evidence with regard to Andrews.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) West was cross-examined for the purpose of showing that when before Mr. Cluer he had made a statement which the Magistrate thought showed that he had tried to mislead him.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That is so.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You relied on that, and put some questions to West for the purpose of discrediting his testimony before us. In re-examination a document was put to West which, upon the hypothesis you are putting, rehabilitated West in the view of the Commissioner of Police upon this matter.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That has no relation to the issue which we are trying.

(Chairman.) The learned Commissioner is quite right. I now recollect it, and it is entirely collateral, and very remote from the issue before us.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) If you think so I will not pursue it. Under ordinary circumstances it would be remote and would be only collateral, but, as you know, this is a wide inquiry into not only the conduct of the police, but the means which are used to ascertain facts in a matter of this sort.

(Chairman.) What do you wish us to do? Do you want a copy of the document?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) As the document is put in, I presume I should be entitled to see it. Had you refused the document as collateral merely, I should have nothing to say.

(Chairman.) As you had cross-examined West upon his conduct, we could hardly in re-examination refuse to receive a document which showed that his conduct had been inquired into by his superiors, and for all the judgment was worth he had been exonerated by his superiors.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That is true, but only because of your position here it struck me I should not be doing my duty if I did not call your attention to the fact that the Magistrate, who most peculiarly would know all the circumstances, had not his attention drawn to the exoneration of West, nor was any opportunity given to the Magistrate of knowing what the explanation was.

(Chairman.) I do not know that Mr. Cluer's attention should be drawn to it, or by whom it ought to be drawn.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I think I have called your attention to it sufficiently, and I will not pursue it.

(Chairman.) I dare say Mr. Cluer will give evidence before us. We will now take Wilson's case.

GEORGE WILSON, sworn.

G. Wilson.

15193. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) What is your name?—George Wilson.

15194. Where do you live?—271, Kensal Road, Westbourne Park.

15195. You are a labourer?—Yes.

15196. It is some time ago, but do you remember two years since in August having some difficulty with the police?—On the 3rd August, 1904.

15197. You remember well the circumstances?—I do.

15198. Will you please tell the learned Commissioners what you remember about them. I think you were in the "Jack of Newbury" public-house in the afternoon?—Yes, between 4 and 5 o'clock.

15199. What happened to you there?—I was in the Jack of Newbury between four and half-past four. I came out to go to the urinal, and I saw the constables having a few words with two other men, one of whom I knew.

15200. A man named Mallows?—Yes. I walked over to him and told him to hold up as I did not wish him to get into any trouble. With that the constable left him alone and came for me.

15201. Who was that constable?—Police-constable Worsley. He knocked me about on this arm that I was protecting my head with as well as I could, but I went down after I received one blow on the head. I heard afterwards that I had several blows on the head. I was unconscious. While on the ground the constable beat me about.

15202. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I understood you to say that all you remember about it is that you got one blow on the head, but you were unconscious, and you have since heard that you got several blows?—Yes, from witnesses who were there.

15203. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I think you were taken into custody?—Yes; they locked me up to screen themselves.

15204. You were bailed out that evening?—I was bailed out, and found it necessary to go to St. Mary's Hospital.

15205. You appeared before Mr. Plowden the next morning at Marylebone Police Court?—Yes.

15206. I think you were discharged?—The man who was with me got a month or 40s. My case was discharged.

15207. Did you afterwards want to have some claim against the constable for the damage done to you?—Ten days before that he had kicked me up the backside and said he would lay his f——g staff about my head.

15208. You afterwards wanted to take proceedings against the constable in the county court?—Yes.

15209. Did you have any difficulty in getting his address?—I did.

15210. Or his name?—Yes. I went to the Marylebone Police Court, but I could not get it there.

15211. Did you go to the station?—I went to the station and I could not get it there. I found it necessary to send to the Chief Commissioner of Police.

15212. Did you write to the Chief Commissioner?—Yes.

15213. Is this a copy of the letter you wrote on the 16th August, or caused to be written, because I think you cannot write yourself (handing document to Witness)?—Yes.

15214. This is the letter: "271, Kensal Road, Westbourne Park. To the Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police.—Sir,—P.C. 300 X assaulted and very seriously injured me on the 3rd instant, and I am going to sue him for damages, etc., in the county court. For this purpose I applied at the police station and asked No. 43 X, who was in charge, for the full name and address of P.C. 300 X, which he declined to give me. Will you therefore be good enough to furnish me with it so that I may take out a summons, and oblige, yours truly, George Wilson." You did not get any reply but a bare acknowledgment until the 27th August?—I did not get anything till I got it from the Chief Commissioner of Police.

15215. That is dated the 27th August, but it does not give the address?—No. He furnished me with the name of Worsley, directing me to deliver a letter to Carlton Bridge, and they would see that the man had it.

15216. You afterwards did take proceedings against the constable?—Yes.

15217. The case was adjourned from time to time for the convenience of the Court until the 9th December, 1904, when it came before Judge Stonor at the Marylebone County Court?—Yes.

15218. I think Detective-Sergeant Barrell was there?—Yes. He went to one of my witnesses, who is now dead.

15219. He read a long list of convictions against you. Were they true?—They tried to fetch them up against me.

15220. This is a very important point for the learned Commissioners to consider, because we know now that they were not true. A number of convictions were read against you. Did they refer to you at all?—Yes, they did.

15221. All of them?—None of them.

15222. Do listen to what I am asking you, and do not contradict yourself?—I have been locked up for several offences, but I have always had a fine.

15223. (Chairman.) Did you hear a Detective-sergeant read a list of convictions before the Judge against you?—Yes.

15224. Convictions against a man named Wilson?—I am George Wilson.

15225. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) They were intended to refer to you?—Yes.

15226. (Chairman.) Did those convictions refer to you at all?—No. He fetched one case up against me 20 odd years ago, and I never did a day's imprisonment in my life.

15227. But the list of convictions read out was a list of convictions against George Wilson?—Yes, but it might have been some other George Wilson—not me.

15228. You say it was another George Wilson?—It was not me.

15229. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Twelve convictions and long terms of imprisonment?—I do not know. I have never done them, so it must be somebody else.

15230. The Wilson who was not you who had been convicted several times had been sentenced to several terms of imprisonment?—It was not me.

15231. But the other one had?—I do not know who he was.

15232. But the one he read out had?—It must be so. It was not me.

15233. (Chairman.) Then this matter was dealt with before his Honour Judge Stonor. Was it heard before him alone or heard before him and a jury?—It was tried before Judge Stonor alone.

(Chairman.) What was the verdict?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) £20 and costs on the higher scale.

(Chairman.) Judgment for the plaintiff for £20.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I have here the office copy of the judgment.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Will it do more than tell us that?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I think it will.

(Chairman.) You do not mean the judgment as recorded, but the observations made by the learned Judge when he gave his decision?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Chairman.) Have you a shorthand note of the judgment?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) This comes from the Court itself.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The Judge's notes of his judgment?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did he give a written judgment?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

15234. (Chairman.) The learned Judge gave a written judgment awarding the £20 damages?—Yes.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) One of the most important witnesses—Mrs. Schull—is dead. I do not know whether I can ask the witness anything that Mrs. Schull said to him.

(Chairman.) I do not know that we want to go into details at present.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) It is unfortunate that Mrs. Schull is dead. Mrs. Schull was a witness and a very respectable woman, as the learned Judge says in his judgment.

(Chairman.) Have you the shorthand notes of the evidence?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) No, I have not.

(Chairman.) Do you think you could get the Judge's notes?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I will inquire of the solicitor.

(Chairman.) The learned Judge appears to have reserved his judgment and delivered a written judgment. I apprehend, therefore, that he took a pretty full note of the evidence.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not think Judge Stonor took very full notes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He must have taken a very full note, as appears from the judgment you have produced.

(Chairman.) If the learned Judge reserved his judgment we may take it he took a pretty full note of the evidence.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Very well, Sir. I have Mrs. Schull's signed statement, if that would be of any assistance to the Commissioners.

15235. (Chairman.) Did she give evidence at the County Court?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Have you got the notes of her evidence? That would be quite sufficient for us, probably.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) There was something which Mrs. Schull said which did not very much bear on the question of damages with regard to Wilson, but would very much bear on the question you are now inquiring into as to the conduct of the police. I have in my mind her statement that an Inspector visited her, whom she identified in court, and endeavoured to persuade her not to give evidence on the ground that this man Wilson was a disreputable man.

15236. (Chairman.) We must have strict evidence on a point of that kind. When I say strict evidence, I mean we must have direct evidence. You must call somebody before us who heard the statement or observed the conduct of the Inspector. (To the Witness.) You do not know what became of P.C. Worsley at all? Is he still in your neighbourhood?—The last time that I heard of him (I have never seen the man since) was that he was at Kilburn, shifted from this place, Westbourne Park. That is all I know.

15237. The last time you heard of Worsley he was at Kilburn?—High Road, Kilburn. I was told that. I never saw the man.

15238. Then he had been shifted from your division?—Yes.

15239. You have not seen him since the County Court proceedings?—No.

15240. Have you obtained your damages?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It appears from the Judge's judgment that Mr. Rose Innes appeared, instructed by the Commissioner of Police, to defend in the case, so that no doubt the amount was paid.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) It was paid on the 23rd February, 1905.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any questions, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am not prepared now. There are one or two questions I think I should like to ask him.

G. Wilson
21 Nov. 1906.

(Chairman.) Do you think that Worsley would like to appear before us?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have not really any information about the matter at present.

(Chairman.) Have you asked your client, Mr. Young, for the notes of the evidence taken by the learned Judge?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) My client has not yet arrived, Sir.

(Chairman.) I think it might assist Mr. Bankes if this judgment is read.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I think what you are asking for with regard to the evidence appears in the judgment. Substantially all the evidence appears.

(Chairman.) The judgment had better be read.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) His Honor Judge Stonor says this: "In this case the plaintiff, a labourer, sues the defendant, a police-constable, for £25 as damages in respect of what had better be considered as two separate assaults, both which the plaintiff alleges were wholly unprovoked and unjustifiable, and in any case were excessive, cruel, and even dangerous to life. The counsel for the defendant, Mr. Rose Innes, informed the court that the action was defended by the Police Commissioners, and that they awaited the result of the trial before taking action in the matter, and it clearly demands more particular attention on my part and also a fuller statement of the grounds of my decision than the ordinary actions of assault which at times come before this court. The parties are agreed that the first of the alleged assaults was, in fact, committed by the defendant by his striking the plaintiff on the arm and on the head with his truncheon, and knocking him down on the ground, but the defendant alleges that this assault was provoked and justified by very threatening language and violence used by the plaintiff and others in concert with him and by an assault by the plaintiff in making a running kick at the defendant and injuring his leg. With regard to the second assault the plaintiff alleges that whilst he was down on the ground and helpless the defendant further inflicted on him several violent blows, which the defendant wholly denies. The parties agree that the plaintiff was rendered unconscious for about half an hour whilst another police-constable named Waylett, who was in charge of another man in custody, went with him to the station, some 500 or 600 yards away, and returned with an ambulance. The first question to be decided in this case is therefore whether the assault by the defendant on the plaintiff, which is admitted, was provoked and justified by the plaintiff's conduct as contended by the defendant, and if so, whether it was excessive? And the second question is whether the subsequent further alleged assault on the plaintiff whilst he was on the ground was committed by the defendant. At the trial the plaintiff deposed that on the 3rd August last he was outside a public-house called the 'Jack of Newbury,' in the Kensal Road, and saw the defendant with the other police-constable named Waylett taking into custody a man named Mallows, who was struggling on the ground, and that he walked up to them and said to Mallows, 'Hold up, Mallows,' meaning by that 'Go quietly,' and that the defendant thereupon left Mallows and came to him and hit him with his truncheon, knocking him down; that the defendant afterwards hit him as he lay on the ground several times with his truncheon, and that the next thing he remembered was being helped to the police-station, where his wounds were attended to and he was liberated on bail, and went to St. Mary's Hospital, and that the next day he appeared at the Marylebone Police Court and was discharged. The plaintiff positively denied using any threatening, violent, or improper language, or saying anything except 'Hold up, Mallows,' meaning 'Go quietly,' and that he never made a running kick at the defendant or otherwise assaulted him. Mrs. Emily Schull, a laundress, living in Kensal Road, corroborated the plaintiff's evidence as to both assaults. She deposed that she saw the defendant strike the plaintiff with his truncheon on the arm and on the head, knocking him down, and afterwards struck him three or four times when he was on the ground, and that she halloed, and he stopped, or she thinks he would have killed him; she first saw the defendant strike him from her window on the first floor; there was no crowd then, but afterwards she went out and expostulated with the defendant, and there was a crowd of thirty or forty people then; the crowd was not very angry, and there was no interference with the police. Emily Hicks, a young girl, niece of the last witness, corroborated her evidence as to both assaults. Charles Hopkins, a bootmaker in Kensal Road, also corroborated the evidence as to the second assault; when the plaintiff was on the ground, he added that he suggested to the defendant that the plaintiff should have some water, and the defendant said "Let his pals get it for him," and then a touching incident occurred; a woman came out from the crowd and gave her apron to the police-constable to staunch the blood which was flowing from his head, and when the plaintiff was taken to the station the apron was round his head. Charles William Capp, a labourer, also corroborated the evidence of the foregoing witnesses as to the second assault. He deposed that he saw the police-constable pushing the plaintiff, who fell down, and belabouring him with his truncheon as he lay on the ground. He said there was no crowd to speak of, but that the women were screaming out of the windows. The witness went on to the station, and when he came back he found the constable shuddering with cold or fear, as if he were afraid he had killed the plaintiff, a circumstance which was confirmed in part by George Bond, a police-constable, a witness subsequently called on behalf of the defendant. James Cooper, a greengrocer, living at 252, Kensal Road, about forty or fifty yards from the "Jack of Newbury," deposed that he saw the plaintiff fall on the ground, but did not know whether he slipped or was knocked down; and that he saw the policeman kneel over him and deliver him three distinct blows when he was on the ground, and that the crowd appeared afterwards whilst the plaintiff was on the ground. Dr. Arthur Bradley (who had been called immediately after the opening) deposed that he attended the plaintiff at the hospital, and that he had a cut and bruising on the left arm and sprains at the elbow, and at the back of his head he had a scalp wound about 1½ inches in length, and there was a great deal of bleeding. The plaintiff was treated at the hospital for three months. The defendant's case was as follows:—The defendant, who was first examined, gave his evidence in a somewhat confused and excited manner, and he appeared to me to be of a nervous and excitable temperament. I had considerable difficulty in following his evidence, and I do not think he had a clear recollection of the matter. He deposed that on the day in question he was called to the "Jack of Newbury," which was in a very rough neighbourhood, and found about half a dozen men there, outside, drunk and violent, and using bad language. He took one of them, a man named Mallows, into custody, and whilst struggling with him the plaintiff came up and rushed at him with a running kick, shouting, "Let's —well out him"; then another constable, P.C. Waylett, came up and took Mallows, and the defendant went to take the plaintiff, who was very violent. There were about a dozen persons then present, and his comrades rushed, and struck, and kicked at the defendant, who pulled out his truncheon, but avoided hitting him plaintiff once or twice, and then the plaintiff rushed at the defendant, and the defendant struck the plaintiff on the arm, and he rushed at him again, and the defendant struck him on the head, and the plaintiff fell on the ground. Police-constable Waylett was present at the time. The crowd was very hostile. The plaintiff was drunk, but not helpless. Waylett took Mallows off to the station, and the defendant remained with the plaintiff until they brought the ambulance. The defendant did not show his leg at the station or at the Police Court. Mr. Plowden said "it was not wanted." He said that the plaintiff had been severely punished, and he discharged him. He did not say that the defendant ought not to have used his truncheon. The defendant did not whistle, because it was not necessary. Mr. Oakway (a witness subsequently called) came up, and the roughs thought he was an officer in plain clothes, and went off. There was no woman there, and no woman spoke to him. The defendant was on point-duty near the "Jack of Newbury." The defendant had been in the police force five years. Alfred Waylett, a police-constable, corroborated the defendant's evidence in some particulars, but not in others. He deposed that he was on duty in Kensal Road, and saw the defendant struggling with Mallows, and went to his assistance; and as the defendant and the witness were about to start with Mallows, the plaintiff rushed across and made a running kick at the defendant, saying, "Let's ——well out him"; upon which the defendant released his hold on Mallows in custody. There were about a dozen persons present. The witness came back to take the plaintiff, and found the plaintiff on the ground. The crowd was very angry, and they shouted 'Out with the police,' but they confined themselves to shouting. The witness did not blow his whistle, as he did not think there was danger. He had all his work with Mallows and did not see the defendant strike the plaintiff. John Oakway, who described himself as an insurance agent, was the next witness called on behalf of the defendant. He deposed that on the afternoon in question he was walking along Kensal Road, and saw five or six people outside the Jack of Newbury. He saw the defendant use his truncheon on the plaintiff, who made a running kick at him. The constable used the truncheon on the plaintiff's head; there were 40 or 50 people there; when the kick was made he went to the constable's assistance; the witness did not give evidence at the police court; he had volunteered his evidence when he met the defendant, three weeks afterwards. The witness saw the truncheon used twice. It was after the man was on the ground. He did not see anything to justify the constable using it then. George Bond, police-constable, who was acting as sergeant at the station, deposed that in consequence of what Waylett said to him when he brought Mallows to the station he hastened to the Jack of Newbury. There was a large crowd there shouting 'Let's ——— out him'; that means 'Let us kill him.' The plaintiff was on the ground; the defendant said he had been kicked, and showed witness a mark on the leg of his trousers. There were 50 or 100 in the crowd when he came up. The defendant was there alone, trembling like a leaf. Henry Dellow, a police sergeant, deposed that he was present at the police court. The Magistrate said that Wilson had been severely punished, and that the punishment had been equivalent to any he would have given him. The Magistrate also commented on the use of the truncheon, but did not say the constable ought not to have used it. If the witness's man was on the ground, and he was confronted by a threatening crowd, he should certainly blow his whistle. William Burrill, a police detective sergeant, produced seven convictions between the years 1882 and 1898 against the plaintiff for drunkenness and assaults, and one being for an assault on the police. I have now gone through the material evidence in this painful case as I thought necessary, and have considered it with the greatest care, and I have come to the following conclusions as to the two questions which it is necessary to decide. First, as to that which I have regarded and referred to throughout as the first alleged assault against the defendant in striking him on the arm and head. I find that there was in all probability provocation by word and deed on the part of the plaintiff and others which occasioned and so far justified the defendant in using his truncheon in his defence. The evidence of the plaintiff himself that he had recently been in altercation with the defendant and threatened by him with the use of the truncheon furnishes a reason for such an act on his part, and the strong personal animosity to the defendant which he evidently has and showed at the trial, and the presence of other men idling and drinking during Bank Holiday week, provided sympathisers and allies in a conflict with the police which I believe the plaintiff threatened and engaged. I do not believe, however, that he inflicted any serious personal injury on the defendant. If that had been the case the defendant would in all human probability not only have shown his leg at the police station or the police court, and indeed would have been temporarily lamed, and I therefore find that the first assault was to some extent justifiable, but at the same time I find that it was excessive in the infliction of a blow on the plaintiff's head. The evidence of Mrs. Schull and her niece (in which both gave their evidence very creditably) militates no doubt against the conclusion to which I have come as to the plaintiff having been violent in word and action, but very probably after the sight of the assault they have no very clear recollection of the circumstances which preceded it, and which they may not have seen or given attention to. With regard to the second question in this case—viz., whether the subsequent assault was committed by the defendant on the plaintiff in beating him whilst he was on the ground, I find that it was so committed without any justification, which has been clearly proved by the plaintiff and his witnesses, and even by one of the defendant's own witnesses, and has been contradicted only by the defendant's wholly unsupported evidence. On that point I find for the plaintiff, with £20 damages. Costs on B scale."

G. Wilson.
21 Nov. 1906.

15241. (Mr. Dickinson.) I notice in the judgment that it is stated that Sergeant Burrill produced a list of convictions. Do you remember his producing that list of convictions before the County Court Judge?—He brought up three or four against me, I think.

15242. Did you at that time say that they were untrue?—I told him that I owned to two of them, but they were not serious things. I got fined.

15243. You owned to two of them?—Yes.

15244. That is to say, two that were read out?—Yes.

15245. But the rest of them you say were not true?—Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Is that list available?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) It ought to be. I have seen it, and there were some rather curious discrepancies in the list. They were not all in the name of George Wilson, and there were some in the name of F. Wilson.

(Witness.) Yes, that was the F. Wilson that they referred to.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) They are all attributed to George Wilson.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Cannot we have that list?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It shall be obtained if we have it. I do not want to put this man to the trouble of coming here again, and it does not occur to me at this moment that there are more than two quesions that I should like to put to him.

(Chairman.) Then will you put your questions now?

15246. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The only questions I want to ask are these. I have heard it read, and I have now got a copy of the judgment of the County Court Judge, and I see the Judge states there with reference to the point that the learned Commissioner made that: "Burrill, a police detective-sergeant, produced seven convictions between the years 1882 and 1898 against the plaintiff for drunkenness and assaults, and one being for an assault on the police." What I want to understand is this. Do you dispute that you were convicted at all, or are you disputing that you were sent to prison. Have you been fined?—Yes.

15247. How many times have you been fined?—I might say a dozen.

15248. (Chairman.) A dozen times?—Yes.

15249. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) When you said just now that you disputed the convictions, you meant that you had never been sent to prison?—I have never been to prison.

15250. (Chairman.) For what were you fined?—For being drunk.

15251. And for disorderly conduct?—They always put that down whether you are disorderly or not. They always put that in the charge sheet.

15252. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Does it mean that in all the cases you are speaking of when you say you have been fined a dozen times it was always for being drunk and disorderly?—Yes. I went very quietly and caused them no trouble.

15253. You say you were convicted, but you were fined?—Yes.

15254. Have you ever been charged with an assault upon the police?—Yes, once, and I got fined for that.

15255. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) How long ago was that?—1882, I think.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I did not understand the form in which the question was put to the witness, but, however, we have cleared it up now. There have been as many as twelve occasions on which he has been fined.

(Chairman.) He told me there was no conviction.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, but I think it was put to him in the form of a leading question.

(Chairman.) I certainly gathered from the examination-in-Chief that the list of convictions was a list of convictions against another Wilson.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) From something that this man dropped I thought that might be the explanation.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) The convictions were more serious convictions than being fined for drunkenness, and when the list is produced you will see that.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is what I gathered, and that is what one wants to see. I gathered from something that has been said that the convictions were for offences for which terms of imprisonment have been inflicted.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Now we have got the evidence, and the evidence is: "William Burrill, a police detective-sergeant, produced seven convictions between the years 1882 and 1898 against the plaintiff for drunkenness and assaults, and one being for a assault on the police." That is the evidence.

(Chairman.) That is Judge Stonor's finding.

15256. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. Now there is one other thing. It is the fact, is it not, when you came out of the public-house there was a considerable number of people congregated together outside?—No. There were two constables and two men, one of whom I knew —Mallows. I did not know the other one. In fact, he went away wonderfully quick.

15257. Before the constable struck you had a number of people come up?—No.

15258. I think I caught in the evidence that one of your witnesses said there were 100 people, and another said 40 people, and the constable, 12 people. You do not think so?—I am sure not—not while I was up, before I was knocked down.

15259. Did you authorise the publication of that pamphlet "The Police and the Public. The Marylebone case." (Handing pamphlet to the Witness.) Have you ever seen it? Did you tell anybody they might publish a pamphlet about you?—No.

15260. (Chairman.) Is that what you say: "I never told anybody they might publish a pamphlet about me" ?—No.

15261. You never told anybody that they might publish something about you?—No, not to my recollection.

15262. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That purports to be published by the Police and Vigilance Society, the chairman of which is Earl Russell, the treasurer is Mr. W. Lloyd, and the hon. secretary (pro tem.) is Mr. J. Timewell. I shall ask you, Sir, to look not only at the picture outside, but I shall have to call your attention to the other parts of it, and it is the first time I have had the opportunity of doing so. (To the Witness.) Did the picture represent you lying on the ground being belaboured by a policeman with nobody else there at all? That is quite incorrect, is it not, because, at any rate, there were some men there?—There were the two constables and the two men.

15263. (Chairman.) Did you come to before you found yourself at the police station?—I found myself about 300 yards away from where I was knocked down. They were taking me along, and a conveyance was coming down, and I said, "I do not require that; I can walk." I was not drunk.

15264. That was 300 yards from where you had been knocked down?—Yes, I was as sober as a judge. I had to go to work the next morning.

15265. When you came to was there a crowd round you?—Oh, yes.

15266. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Has anybody asked you to come here to give your evidence before the Commissioners to-day?—I have had a note to certify that I should come up here.

15267. Have you got the note with you?—Yes.

15268. Just let me look at it.

(Chairman.) Do you mean the summons that we issued?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know what it was.

(Witness.) When was this one supposed to be forwarded to me?

15269. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know. I am asking you?—Here is one. (Producing document.)

15270. (Mr. Schultess Young.) If you have more than one will you produce it?—That is the one that came last night.

15271. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you have one before? —This one came last Saturday evening, but I did not know till I got home on Monday night that it was there.

15272. Here are two documents. The first one I should like to read. The second one is a summons signed by the Commissioners telling you to come here. The first one is this: "11, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, W.C., 17th November, 1906.—Dear Sir,—The conduct of the police in your case respecting which you gave evidence before Judge Stonor at the Marylebone County Court comes before the Police Commission on Wednesday next, when you will be required to repeat your evidence. Please, therefore, be in attendance at the Police Commission, Guildhall, opposite Westminster Abbey, on Wednesday next at 10.30. You will be paid for your expenses and loss of time by the Commission. I enclose a postcard, which kindly send back by return telling me that this has reached you, and that you will be there, in order to avoid the necessity of a subpœna.—Yours faithfully, T. Nicholson." Is that the first you heard about the matter?—That is the first.

15273. So that until somebody wrote to you this letter you had heard nothing about the Commission and nothing about you giving your evidence?—No.

15274. (Chairman). Mr. Nicholson is the solicitor, I understand, who instructs you, Mr. Schultess-Young?

15275. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I should like you to explain to me what happened with regard to this list of convictions so far as you recollect. A policeman read out a list of seven convictions. Do you remember that in the trial before Judge Stonor?—He read out several to me, but I do not know how many there were. He condemned me as being a prisoner, and put me down as if I had been in prison.

15276. That is what I want you to tell us. Do you mean he read out the terms of imprisonment?—Yes; he distinctly said one was without a fine, and if it was without a fine I should have to go to prison, would not I? If I was not fined I should have to go to prison, but I have been fined and I have never been to prison.

15277. It did not refer to you because you never have been in prison?—No.

15278. You have been fined, and you have paid the fine?—I have.

15279. I caught something from what you said at the start about this same policeman. There had evidently been some feeling between you and this policeman before?—10 days before.

15280. Was that the first time you knew him—10 days before?—It was the first time that ever I saw the man.

15281. Apparently he threatened you then with his truncheon?—He kicked me up the backside and said he would lay his f——g staff about my head.

15282. What did he kick you for?—I was going home drunk all right, and he wanted a job, I should think. I had had enough or all I wanted for that day, anyhow. It was a quiet turning, and I daresay he thought to himself he would give me one. That is about how I weighed it up.

15283. He did not know you?—No; I never saw the man before.

15284. What did he do? Did he give you a kick?— He kicked me up the backside and then he said, "I will lay this f——g truncheon about you."

15285. I suppose when he kicked you you squared up to him, did you not?—I like to fight shy of all them blokes when sober, and when drunk as well.

15286. Before he threatened you with his truncheon he did kick you?—No doubt I turned round and said to him, "Do not do that again."

15287. And then he said he would use his truncheon? —Yes.

15288. That was 10 days before?—I never saw him before these 10 days. I did not know he was the man then till I went up to this man Mallows, who I knew, to ask him to leave off and go away instead of getting into trouble. With that he left them and came to me. No doubt the man thought I was coming for him.

15289. He thought you were going to attack him?— No doubt. That is the only thing I can put it at. They never had hold of one another. They were only having a kind of argument, which looked like coming to something.

15290. Mallows and the constable?—Mallows and this other man and the two constables.

C. Wilson.

21 Nov. 1906.

15291. They had not got hold of them?—No. I had hardly got the words out of my mouth before he got his truncheon out. Down I went, and that is all I can recollect—one on the head.

15292. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where did he hit you on the head?—Here (pointing at the back of the left ear).

15293. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that the scar that we can see now?—Yes. My ears were all black and blue.

15294. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Although you may not have given any consent to publish the pamphlet which has been put into your hands, as a matter of fact, you actually sold these pamphlets, did you not, when you were ill and out of work?—I tried to sell them, but I got stopped at doing that.

15295. Who stopped you?—The police.

15296. You say you tried to sell these pamphlets which my learned friend, Mr. Eldon Bankes, put into your hands, but you were stopped from selling them by the police?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You do not wonder at that, do you?

15297. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) No. That was before you had the £20 paid you?—Yes.

15298. You did eventually have the whole of it?—I have the papers in my pocket now.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) If it will assist the Commission, I can say that at the time these convictions were put in at the county court there was immediately a frenzied dispute about them. They were entirely denied with the exception of two insignificant ones.

(Chairman.) Were you counsel for the plaintiff on that occasion?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) We must get that from the list of convictions because it does not appear from the Judge's note that any such question arose. The Judge's note has it simply that there were these seven convictions for drunkenness and assaults, and one for an assault on the police.

(Chairman.) It is quite evident that Judge Stonor, even if there had been convictions and terms of imprisonment alleged against Wilson, did not believe he was the man who was convicted.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not think the Judge held an opinion one way or another. When it was denied he brushed it aside, giving his judgment just as though it was a case of great consequence on one side or the other side. He says nothing in his judgment about the convictions being denied, but he did not attach any importance to them as regards his judgment, though it may be of importance now.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I think it is very likely that what the learned Judge did was only to deal with the seven convictions which were admitted.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The best way will be to get the list.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) He did not deal with them in that sense at all. He practically says, "Whether he was convicted or not he has been assaulted now, and I want to deal with the question of assault."

(Chairman.) But he did refer to the drunk and disorderly conduct of the plaintiff on some occasions. That may be relevant to show the character of the man.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) That may be, certainly, but there was only one in 1882 which was supposed to be an assault against the police.

(Chairman.) Do you want to have the witness back on some future occasion, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Not that I know of at present, Sir.

(Chairman.) You can call any witnesses you like about the matter, and we will not ask Wilson to come here again unless you want him.

EMILY HICKS, sworn.

E. Hicks.

15299. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I think you live at 4, South End, Kensington Square?—Yes.

15300. Two years ago were you living with your aunt, Mrs. Schull?—Yes.

15301. She has since died?—Yes.

15302. You were staying then with her at 1, East Row, Kensal Road?—Yes.

15303. That is next door to a public-house called "The Jack of Newbury"?—Yes.

15304. Will you tell these gentlemen what you remember telling the Judge at the County Court two years ago. I do not think anybody has spoken to you about it since?—No. On the 3rd August I was staying with my auntie for a few days, and she came home to tea and asked me to go on an errand. As I went out of the street door I saw two policemen with a man, a prisoner, and there was one policeman on each side of him holding his arms. He was going quietly when I saw him, and as I was going round the corner I saw one of the policemen, P.C. Worsley, let go of the prisoner's arm and come over to Mr. Wilson and draw his truncheon and knock him down. When he was on the ground he hit him several times. It must have been five or six times.

15305. I think you went on your errand then?—Yes.

15306. Did you see anything on your way back?—On my way back I saw the policeman trying to lift Wilson, but he could not do so, he fell down again. I did not stop to see anything more.

15307. Was there anything of a crowd when the constable struck Wilson?—No, there were not many there, but when he was on the ground the crowd gathered up.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask this witness any question, Mr. Bankes? She has given her story very fairly.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, Sir.

(Chairman.) I do not think the Commissioners wish to ask you anything.

CHARLES HARRY CAPP, sworn.

H. Capp.

15308. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Is your name Charles Harry Capp?—Yes.

15309. Were you residing at 110, Southam Street, North Kensington, at the time of this incident?—Yes.

15310. Do you reside there now?—Yes.

15311. Will you tell the Commissioners what occurred two years ago, on the 3rd August, 1904, with regard to Wilson?—I was standing outside the "Great Western public-house, about 40 or 50 yards, I should think, off East Row, lower than the "Jack of Newbury," and my attention was drawn to a policeman and a man, who turned out to be Mr. Wilson, struggling in the road. The constable was pushing him, and he eventually fell down. When the man was on the ground the constable drew his truncheon and struck Wilson. Wilson put up his arm and called out "Oh!" twice, and then he dropped it at his side, and the constable continued for about four blows to strike him. I came to the conclusion that after Wilson halloaed out "Oh!" twice he became insensible. The constable, after he had finished belabouring him, picked him up, and with the assistance of a man, who turned out to be Harry Page, dragged him outside the "Jack of Newbury," and Harry Page got a woman's apron, and it was torn up and made bandages of for his head. He was bleeding profusely. After that another constable came on the scene, who turned out to be the constable who had taken the man named Mallows in custody, but I never saw that part of the affair. I offered to send for a doctor and pay for a doctor myself, but I was told to mind my own business. I never heard any whistle blown. The man was eventually dragged along the ground towards the police-station. I did not think it was right for him to be taken away in that condition, and as I had served a course of instruction in the St. John Ambulance, I told them they ought to send for an ambulance and carry him along, but I was told to mind my own business, and they went away. I did not follow them up to the station, but several people did, who collected after the man had come to his senses and during the time he was insensible.

15312. (Chairman.) Who told you to mind your own business?—The constable who had taken Mallows and come back.

15313. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) The ambulance was actually brought?—I never saw it.

15314. (Chairman.) How far is it from the place where you saw Wilson on the ground to the police station?—I could not say exactly, but I should think it was about 500 or 600 yards. Quite that.

15315. Did you know Wilson before, personally?—Not personally. I had just a passing acquaintance with him. I had known him as "George." We always exchanged compliments when we met one another. We did then, and we do now.

15316. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you see him taken all the way to the station?—No.

15317. I thought it was the fact that he was taken on an ambulance.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I thought so.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Apparently this witness did not see.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I understood Wilson to say he met the ambulance, and he said he was all right and could walk.

(George Wilson.) That is right.

(Chairman.) He said, "I am not drunk, and I can walk."

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I do not know what the Judge has in his notes about that. My impression was that this witness said at the time that he was put upon the ambulance.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is no point in it apparently.

15318. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) No. Did you notice the condition of P.C. Worsley?—Yes; he was shaking and trembling, and I drew the attention of the people to it, and I said, "The police-constable thinks he has killed him," and so did I. He was in a terrible condition.

15319. (Chairman.) Did you see Mallows in the custody of two policemen, as Miss Hicks said?—No, I was round the corner. I only had a view that way towards the right. The "Jack of Newbury" would obstruct my view of that.

(Chairman.) Have you any question to ask, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, Sir.

15320. (Mr. Dickinson.) The first you saw was the constable and the man struggling, both standing up?—Both standing up, and the constable pushing him.

15321. The next thing you saw was Wilson fall down?—Yes.

15322. When that was happening was anybody at all near them?—No, I was the nearest, I think.

15323. You were 50 yards away?—About 50. The "Jack of Newbury" public-house is in the centre of East Row, and I should think it is quite 100 yards down.

CHARLES HOPKINS, sworn.

C. Hopkins.

15324. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) I think your name is Charles Hopkins, and you are a bootmaker in business at 256, Kensal Road?—Yes.

15325. You were living there at the time of the County Court action?—No, I was at another shop—No. 240.

15326. You gave evidence at the County Court?—Yes.

15327. Can you remember what took place on that day two years ago, the 3rd August?—Yes, I was just leaving the house No. 240, Kensal Road. I was at the shop door at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, I think it was. I cast my eyes across the road, and happened to see a man's head. There is a church at the corner of this road, and a mission hall, and I saw a man at the corner lying on the ground, and I saw a policeman strike him on the head once.

15328. Was there a crowd at all there?—No, I could not have seen if there had been a crowd, because the church railings would have obscured it.

15329. Did the constable seem to strike hard?—I only saw one blow.

15330. Where did he hit the man?—On the head or the upper part of the body. The man's head was at the corner, so to speak. I was looking that way, and the man was down the street, with his head towards the corner of the two roads, and the policeman and the man were looking that way. The policeman struck him on his right arm.

15321. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Was the man standing, or was he down?—He was down on the ground.

15332. (Chairman.) Is the public-house at the corner?—At the opposite corner. This occurred at the corner of St. Thomas' Church, where there is a mission hall. Mr. Whitmore knows the corner very well.

13533. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) How far away from where you were standing would that be?—About 30 yards.

15334. You could see perfectly clearly?—Yes.

15335. I think a crowd did gather round then?—I went over, and some women and two or three men came running out. I went across to the place, and some men and women came running out of the houses round, and I saw the man, with his head on the ground. The policeman picked him up, and tried to pull him up towards the station. The station is about half a mile away.

15336. Is that the same policeman who tried to pull him up?—Yes. I did not know it was Wilson at that time, but he collapsed in the middle of the road. He got up, and I said, "It is Charming Wilson"—that is a nickname that he goes by. Worsley said, "We know who he is well enough," and I suggested they should have some water to wash the man and bring him round, because he was unconscious in the middle of the road.

15337. What was the answer to your suggestion about getting water?—"Oh, let his pals do it—there were plenty of them round here just now." The policeman waited with the prisoner in the middle of the road till the other police constable (who had taken another man to the station) returned, and the man brought an ambulance with him. The policeman who arrested Mallows gave the prisoner some first aid, with the help of another man there and a woman's apron, and then they got him on his legs and brought the ambulance up. Wilson, I believe, refused to go on the ambulance, and they took him off.

15338. I think you gave evidence at the Police Court the next day, before Mr. Plowden?—Yes. I had great difficulty in getting into the court, because whenever Mr. Plowden is on the bench there are always a lot of fashionable people in court there listening, and I had to wait outside. When I got inside I saw Wilson and Mallows in the dock. There were labels in front of the dock—No. 1 and No. 2, and so on. I heard Mr. Plowden discharge Wilson, and he said he had been severely knocked about, and the punishment he had received was more than he, Mr. Plowden, could give him.

15339. Can you throw any light on these convictions? I have some recollection of what took place before Mr. Plowden. Was anything said about convictions before Mr. Plowden?—No, not before Mr. Plowden, but there was at the County Court.

15340. There was nothing said before Mr. Plowden that you heard?—No.

15341. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you hear it at the County Court?—Yes.

15342. Can you tell us what it was?—Detective-Sergeant Burrill read out a list of convictions. Some of them were in a different name, and one conviction was nearly 20 years before. It was at a very early date, and Wilson, the plaintiff, then got very excited, and jumped up and protested very strongly in the Court. He really had to be held down.

15343. He protested he was not the man?—For the first conviction. I believe he acknowledged some of the others.

15344. (Chairman.) He acknowledged being fined for being drunk and disorderly?—Yes.

15345. And one is an assault on the police?—No, he would not acknowledge the assault on the police. That took place 22 years before.

15346. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He had been fined, I think?—The assault on the police was very early.

15347. I understood him to say this morning that he had been fined for an assault on the police in 1882?—These convictions that were read out were very early, and he disputed them in the Court.

15348. (Chairman.) He disputed the earlier ones?—Yes.

15349. He disputed the fact that he had ever been in prison for anything?—That did not arise.

15350. (Mr. Dickinson.) What was he charged with at the police court?—I did not hear the charge. I was not allowed in the Court till they called the witnesses.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have the charge-sheet here. He was charged "with attempting to rescue Mallows from the lawful custody of P.C. Worsley, and further with violently resisting the lawful apprehension while on the way to the Harrow Road police station. Drunk when charged." That is on the charge-sheet, and I have read all of it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I did not know before that there was any suggestion of his being drunk.

15351. (Chairman.) No. What time of the day was this?—About 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

15352. (Mr. Whitmore.) What day of the week was it?—Wednesday.

15353. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that the early closing day in that neighbourhood?—No, but that would not affect Wilson, because he is a labourer.

15354. What does he work at?—He is a builder's labourer generally.

15355. (Mr. Dickinson.) You did not see Mallows, the other man, at all?—I saw him being taken in, but I did not know him.

15356. Did you see anything that seemed to you like rescuing Mallows from the police on the part of Wilson?—I did not see that. He was on the ground when I saw him.

15357. Then you did not see the first policeman?—I saw the first policeman. He came from lower down in East Row. Wilson was ten or twelve yards away from the original encounter with the police. He had evidently run away from the police, and then I saw the other policeman and Mallows go up the public-house side of the road to the station. I saw them come round the corner just as I was going over to see what was the matter, and then the policeman tried to help Wilson up to get him along, and he could not get him more than three yards.

15358. (Mr. Dickinson.) But I do not understand what you saw before that. Did you see Wilson trying to rescue Mallows?—No, I did not see that.

15359. (Chairman.) Was Mallows apparently drunk or was he disorderly and resisting?—Mallows was drunk, I think; I did not see any resistance.

15360. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Wilson was charged with being drunk and disorderly and assaulting Worsley?—Whilst I was walking up to see what it was that was on the ground I saw on the other corner—the church is at one corner and the public-house the other—the other policeman and the other prisoner go round the corner. C. Hopkins. 21 Nov. 1906.

15361. (Mr. Dickinson.) You saw nothing before Wilson was on the ground?—No.

15362. Had the constable got his helmet on or not?—He had his helmet in his hand when I got there—in his left hand.

15363. You do not know whether Wilson had attacked him?—I do not know. He was on the ground when I saw him. I went to the County Court.

15364. (Chairman.) Did anything strike you about the policeman when he was belabouring this man?—No, I was not near enough to see the policeman, but I got up to him afterwards, and he had a very wild look in his eyes and was very excited and highly nervous.

15365. Did the blows seem very severe blows?—The one I saw was a very severe blow.

15366. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you see how it was that Wilson had come to the ground?—No, because he was already on the ground when I got there.

15367. Was he trying to get up when you saw him?—No.

15368. I see he is charged here in the charge-sheet with violently resisting lawful apprehension while on the way to the Harrow Road police station. Did you see him violently resisting at all?—No, it was impossible for him to resist after that blow.

15369. (Mr. Dickinson.) You did not see him go to the station at all?—I saw him taken off.

15370. He walked to the station?—Yes.

15371. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You seem to have been at the police court and also subsequently at the County Court. Have you ever heard it stated that this man was drunk when charged?—No.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) It is the first I have heard of it. It comes as a surprise to me.

15372-3. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Mr. Bankes read it to us when we asked him for the charge-sheet. He had not suggested it, but we find it is on the charge-sheet. Mallows was convicted and fined 40s.?—Yes.

(Mr. Muir.) You have got the charge-sheet before you, sir, and you see in the case of Wilson "Dismissed. Summary Jurisdiction Act." That means the charge was dismissed under the 16th section of the Act of 1879, which enables the court of summary jurisdiction where they think that though the charge is proved the offence was in the particular case of so trifling a nature that it is inexpedient to inflict any punishment, to dismiss. That is what that entry on the charge-sheet means, "Dismissed. Summary Jurisdiction Act."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Mr. Plowden thought Wilson had had more than a nominal punishment already.

(Mr. Muir.) Quite so.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) This pamphlet which my learned friend Mr. Bankes has put in rather bears that out. It quotes an extract from what the Magistrate said, and it is no doubt correctly given. From that it appears that that is exactly what Mr. Plowden did say.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I understood that was so.

15374. (Mr. Dickinson.) Was any evidence given before Mr. Plowden as to resisting the apprehension while on the way to the police station?—I do not know. I was not inside the court; I could not get in.

JAMES COOPER, sworn.

15375. (Mr. Schultess-Young.) Your name is James Cooper?—Yes.

15376. You are a greengrocer, carrying on business at 252, Kensal Road?—Yes.

15377. You were there two years ago, were you not?—Yes.

15378. You gave evidence in the County Court with regard to Wilson?—Yes.

15379. Will you tell the learned Commissioners what you recollect of the circumstances of this matter?—I do not know whether it matters about the date. J. Cooper.

15380. No, we know it was Wednesday, the 3rd August?—On the afternoon of the 3rd August I was standing about half-way down East Row, and somebody drew my attention to a man and a policeman almost in the middle of the road, and outside the "Jack of Newbury." As soon as I turned my head I saw the man fall to the ground. Whether the policeman knocked him down or whether the man slipped I could not say,

J. Cooper.
21 Nov. 1906.

but I saw the policeman deliberately stand over him and deliver him three distinct blows in succession, if not more—three I will swear to.

15381. Where did he hit him?—On the head.

15382. While he was on the ground?—While the man lay on the ground.

15383. What did you do then?—I stood back, as I did not want to get mixed up with it. I said to myself "That is Mr. Wilson." I stood back.

15384. Were you a friend of Wilson's?—Not a friend at all. I knew him just seeing him night and morning when I go to market and come back again. I never get in his company.

15385. Did you go near to the place after that?—I went there and stopped there till they led him away.

15386. What did you see?—I only saw another policeman come up, and I saw them lead him off in a helpless condition.

15387. Did you see any resistance on the part of Wilson?—I thought he was dead. His head resembled a calf's head on a butcher's block.

15388. He was covered with blood?—He was covered with blood.

15389. Did you see anything of the man Mallows?—No, I saw nothing of him. I only saw the one policeman—the policeman who hit him.

15390. Did you go to the station?—No, I did not want to be brought into it.

15391. Were there many people about there when you saw the policeman hit Wilson?—There was hardly anybody, only the two in the road, and as I ran they were running in all directions, and there was soon a crowd there. After the man laid on the ground plenty of people soon got round.

(Chairman.) Have you any questions to ask, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Bankes.) No, Sir.

15392. (Mr. Dickinson.) Was the man lying quite lifeless on the ground when the policeman hit him?—I thought he was dead.

15393. And then he hit him?—He deliberately stood over him and delivered him three terrible blows in succession. It was two to three, if not more.

15394. After he was lying lifeless?—I will not say whether the policeman knocked the man down or whether the man slipped, but as soon as the party went by and said "Look at that policeman and the man in the middle of the road," I saw the man deliberately fall to the ground at that moment, but whether the policeman knocked him down or the man slipped I could not say, but I will swear that as soon as the man laid down on the ground the policeman delivered him three distinct blows in succession, if not more.

15395. With his head lying flat on the ground?—With his head lying flat on the ground. His head was like a calf's head on a butcher's block.

15396. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) After the three blows or before?—After he had had the three blows.

15397. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did you see the policeman hit Wilson's head while he was lying quite lifeless on the ground?—No, he hit the man—whether he slipped, or he might have knocked him down before for all I know, but I would not swear to that. I will swear to this, that the man either slipped or was pushed, or by some means or other he got on the ground, and when the man laid flat on the ground the policeman delivered three distinct blows in succession on the man's head. I will swear to that.

15398. (Chairman.) The man was motionless on the ground?—The man could not do much on the ground.

15399. He was motionless?—Yes.

15400. (Mr. Whitmore.) When you used the word "lifeless," that was after the blows on the ground?—If the man had not been hit his head would not have been in that state.

15401. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It was the blows that caused the lifelessness?—A more cowardly act I never saw in the whole course of my life.

15401. (Mr. Schultess Young.) Have you ever seen Worsley, the policeman, since?—No, I have never seen him since (Chairman.) That closes the evidence in Wilson's case.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) Yes. We were not prepared for the suggestion that my friend had thrown out, that the Police were not ready with their case. Therefore there is nothing else for the Commissioners to attend to to-day, so far as I know.

(Chairman.) We will see. I suppose Worsley would like to be called?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have had an opportunity of considering the matter, and the man seems to have made a mistake.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is Worsley still in the Force?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Was there any enquiry into this matter?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, I can tell you that.

(Chairman.) There seems to have been an enquiry held.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I can give you the information I have. I believe it was done after communication with the Home Office—I do not mean to say the actual enquiry, but steps were taken with regard to defending him, paying damages to the plaintiff, and so forth. I understand the result of it was the man was severely reprimanded, and ordered to pay £5 as damages.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is what I want to know. Was that by an order of the Chief Commissioner?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, I am sure it was, but I have not got it here.

(Chairman.) There must have been some investigation before one of the Assistant Commissioners, or somebody in this case.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, there was.

(Chairman.) I daresay you could get us the notes of the proceedings there.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If there was a note. I will get you all the documents there are.

(Chairman.) The enquiry into the conduct of the policeman is what we want to have information about, after he was found guilty of assault by Judge Stonor. There is no doubt he was found guilty of this assault on the man on the ground by Judge Stonor. What we particularly want to know is what took place after that. What was the character of the enquiry the Commissioner made?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Mr. Muskett has certain documents, although I do not know that they are complete. Amongst others, I have got here a shorthand note of the Assistant Commissioner's judgment, or his statement to the constable after the investigation. I can read that.

(Chairman.) If you please.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) This document is dated the 30th January, 1905. "P.C. Worsley, X Division, against whom a judgment for £20 and costs was awarded for unnecessarily using his truncheon when arresting a prisoner." That is what the Assistant Commissioner says: "I have sent for you to convey the decision of the Secretary of State in your case, and to deal with you myself. I think I need not go into the case at all Of the decision of the county court judge you are quite well aware, and in accordance with this decision damages were given against you to the extent of £20 and costs. The case was laid before the Secretary of State inasmuch as there were extenuating circumstances, and we have now got his decision, which is: 'That he cannot sanction the whole payment of the damages and costs out of the Police Fund,' but he leaves it to the Commissioner for the officer to pay a portion of it. I want you to understand quite clearly what the Commissioner's opinion is in this case. It is that you were justified in using your truncheon when attacked; that you were not to blame for having struck this man on the head; an, so far, there is nothing against you; but after having partially disabled this man, you were not justified in continuing to strike him as has been proved to the satisfaction of the Court you did; consequently you were guilty of unnecessarily using your truncheon. For that offence you are now severely reprimanded and cautioned, and you will pay £5 towards the damages and costs. That £5 will be recovered from you by instalments such as the Superintendent thinks you can pay weekly." I am told he has paid it—"I think you have been treated exceptionally leniently from one point of view, inasmuch as the Secretary of State might have held that you should have paid the whole of the damages. I hope you will be exceedingly careful how far you make use of your truncheon on any future occasion."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That seems to be a more severe form of reprimand than the one we had in the case before where we had the expression used "strong caution," in addition to which it was delivered by the Inspector, who told him not to do it again. This, apparently, is by the Assistant Commissioner?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) Was that judgment arrived at, and communication made to the Home Office, before anybody on behalf of the Chief Commissioner had heard Worsley's personal statement, and that of any of the witnesses? Was it simply on the judgment of the county court judge?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am afraid I cannot answer that question.

(Mr. Whitmore.) We wish to have all the information we can with regard to it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You shall be furnished with all the information there is.

(Chairman.) We should like to know all that was done by the Assistant-Commissioner when he found that there was a verdict found against Worsley by the County Court Judge.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Whatever materials there are you shall have.

(Chairman.) Mr. Whitmore suggests, and I think very rightly, that we ought to have Worsley's record from the time he joined the force five years before this.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly.

(Mr. Dickinson.) We also ought to know what took place immediately after the police-court inquiry, because the man said he tried to get the name of the constable, and it was refused.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You shall have it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He wrote on the 16th August, and he got it from the Commissioner on the 27th August. He was charged on the 3rd August.

(Mr. Dickinson.) But before that he said he went to the court to get the name, and it was refused. I want to hear something about that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You shall hear all about it. He knew the constable's number, because in the letter which he wrote to the Commissioner he referred to his number.

(Mr. Schultess Young.) The Commissioner refused to furnish the name.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) My friend, Mr. Muir, who knows all about these things, says the practice is not to give the constable's name or address if it is for the purpose of a civil action, except through the Commissioner.

(Mr. Dickinson.) That is what we want to know.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Therefore the man was told to apply to the Commissioner. He did, and he got the information.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) As I understand, the result of the action was that the policeman had to pay the £5 by instalments, and he was severely reprimanded, but otherwise he continued discharging his duty in the force. That is what I understand took place. The balance of the £15 and costs would have to be paid out of the Police Fund. Is that right?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I presume so.

(Chairman.) The Secretary of State has to authorise it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is why I want to know something about it. I gather it is paid out of the Police Fund, and that the Secretary of State authorises the payment out of the Police Fund. I want to know if you can tell us, or if we can have some information about it, what the Police Fund is, whence it derives its funds, and what is done with the balance.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You can be told that.

(Chairman.) It depends on statute, does it not?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no doubt it does. I think you will find it on your demand note for rates.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you mean that the ratepayers have to pay the balance of the £15 and costs for the man having struck these blows?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no doubt it is regulated by statute.

(Chairman.) I think it all depends on the statute.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I only want to be clear as to what that fund is.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is there any other information you desire?

(Chairman.) No. Unless Worsley wants to come, we do not care to hear him. We have all the facts, and we have the County Court Judge's judgment. I suppose Worsley does not dispute the facts.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have really no information on the point, but inquiry shall be made.

(Chairman.) If he wants to be heard, we shall hear him, of course, with pleasure.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please.

(Chairman.) Is Treshadein here?

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I understand he will be here to-morrow. I understand the case has been arranged to be taken to-morrow.

(Chairman.) Treshadein was summoned for yesterday.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) I only tell you what I am informed.

(Chairman.) Then there are no other witnesses we can go on with to-day. Mr. Eldon Bankes, there is a person named Edward Wells who has asked to be heard by us. We have asked him to attend to-morrow at 11 o'clock. Mr. Leslie will give you all the particulars that we have about the complaint.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Thank you.

(Chairman.) I ought to say we know nothing of Mr. Wells beyond the fact that he came to the office and asked to give evidence.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please. Then do I understand his evidence will be taken to-morrow?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Mr. Schultess-Young.) Is Mr. Wells connected with this case?

(Chairman.) No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Will any other evidence be taken to-morrow?

(Chairman.) No. We shall sit at 11 o'clock, but as it seems there is only, so far as our arrangements are concerned, the evidence of Mr. Wells and his witnesses arranged for, we might put in some other case if it would be convenient to everybody concerned.

SIXTEENTH DAY.

Thursday, 22nd November 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at law).

CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister at-law).

J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-law) (Secretary).

(Chairman.) We will take the case of Edward Wells. EDWARD WELLS, sworn.

E. Wells.

22 Nov. 1906.

15402. (Chairman.) Your name is Edward Wells?—Yes.

15403. Where do you reside?—55, Ambler Road, Finsbury Park.

15404. What is your occupation?—Ladies and gentlemen's outfitter.

15405. You desire to make a complaint against the police in reference to an incident that occurred on the 13th October last, I think?—Yes.

15406. Where did the incident occur?—Kelvin Road, Highbury Barn.

15407. Were you doing some business with some 'busman at Highbury Barn?—Yes.

15408. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon you were talking to a 'bus-driver?—Yes.

15409. Where was he when you were talking?—He was both on the ground and on his seat on the omnibus.

15410. Not at the same time?—The first time I was speaking to him he was on the ground, and I finished talking to him when he was in his seat.

15411. Then he took his seat on the omnibus?—Yes.

15412. It was a horse omnibus, I gather?—Yes.

15413. Then you were standing in the road?—Yes, just below his seat.

15414. You were standing in the road, and he was in his proper seat on the 'bus?—Yes.

15415. Will you tell us in your own way what took place?—I had been at Highbury Barn for about two and a half hours previous to my arrest. I was talking to this coachman about business, and he promised to see me on the Tuesday. I asked him not to disappoint me on the Tuesday, as it would cause me to break other appointments with other men. While I was telling him not to disappoint me, a constable came up and he caught me by the collar and cuff and told me to go away.

15416. Do you know his number?—166 N.

15417. Have you now found out what his name is?—No, I have never heard it.

15418. He put one hand on your shoulder?—On my collar, and the other on my sleeve, and hustled me about and told me to go away. I looked round at him with surprise, and asked him why he was handling me in that manner, knowing I had not convicted myself in any way, when he told me I had been there quite long enough—"Will you go away?" I said "I cannot go away while you have hold of me like this." "Come on," he says, "down you go to the station then." I asked him continually going down what his charge was. I said "You cannot charge me with being intoxicated; you cannot charge me with swearing; I have caused no obstruction; I simply did my business there just the same as I have done it for years." I said "What is your charge?" He said "I did not say I was going to charge you with being drunk or swearing.' I said "Tell me to satisfy me."

15419. You were going quietly all the time and conversing with the policeman?—Yes, he had his hand on my collar and sleeve, which I objected to, and I asked him if he would allow me to walk by the side of him. He said "No, I shall still keep hold of you," which he did. Then when we got to the station, to my surprise, he charged me with disorderly conduct and using obscene language.

15420. What police station was it?—Upper Street, Islington, Police Station.

15421. How far was that from where you had been arrested?—A matter of twenty minutes' walk, I should think.

15422. You say you went quietly?—Yes.

15423. You went into the charge room, I suppose?—I went into the police station, and I was put behind the iron bar, and I was asked my name and address, which I gave, and I said "I feel rather anxious to know what this man is charging me with, and what he is doing this for," and the sergeant said "You will hear all in good time."

15424. There was a sergeant in the charge room?—Yes.

15425. Was he sitting at a table with a book before him?—He was behind a partition with a small window. He was on one side, and I was behind the iron bar, and the constable stood in front of him from the window.

15426. Did you hear what the constable said to him?—I did not hear what he was saying previous to the charge being read out to me.

15427. The police-constable did not speak out—or he whispered—is that your suggestion?—The first part he did.

15428. In the first part he whispered to the sergeant?—Yes. I had to ask him to speak up, as I could not hear what he was saying. The sergeant said "You say he was using bad language. What was it?" "Well," he said, "he was swearing." The sergeant said "Tell me what it was; you are no priest. Was he f——— and b———g?" and the constable said "Yes." The charge sheet was then written out, and he was about to sign it when I stopped him and said "Constable, can you conscientiously sign that charge sheet?" He made no reply, but signed it.

15429. Did the sergeant then read out the charge?—He said "I will tell you what your charge is." Then he told the constable to search me, and I objected, and I said "I think this man has handled me quite enough. I will allow you to search me, but I object to this man searching me." Then he asked me if I had anything on me such as a knife and matches, and I told him yes. He said "Give them to me," and I did so.

15430. That was the sergeant?—Yes. I was then told that I should be detained until my address was found to be correct—I told them they could easily find if my name was correct by looking at the directory. The sergeant looked in the directory for a short time, but he could not find—or he said he could not—but it was still there. I was then told I should have to go into a cell. I said "Surely there is some other place you can detain me in without putting me into a cell." "Oh," he said, "we did not ask you to come here." "No," I said, "and I did not want him to bring me here." I was then put into a dirty, dreary, ill-smelling cell. When I got used to the light I looked round for the cause of the smell. Then I found at the end of a bench or wooden seat an open water closet pan half full of refuse. I looked for some means of sluicing it out, but could not find any. I found a button in the cell, which I pressed, and a man came and opened the little wicket gate, and asked me what was the matter, and I told him. I said "Come and look at this; it is not the sort of place to put a respectable man in."

15431. I understand this w.c. basin was in the cell itself?—It was in the cell itself, with no covering on whatever.

15432. Not in any room opening out of the cell?—No, in the cell itself.

15433. Was it a movable basin?—No, it was a wooden bench just high enough to sit on, and at the end of it was this w.c. pan. Then he sluiced it by some means outside. He shut the wicket door, and I asked him what steps they were taking to get me out of it, and I was told that as soon as it was necessary they would let me go. I was there, I suppose, an hour and a half when I was called out, and it appears a gentleman came down to bail me out at about half-past three, when he was told they could not let me go till a quarter-past four. So I was detained three-quarters of an hour after an application had been made to bail me out.

15434. Who was the gentleman?—I have got him here as a witness—Mr. Carter.

15435. You knew him before, I suppose?—He had known me for many years.

15436. Had he seen the arrest?—Yes. He happened to be at Highbury Barn at that very moment.

15437. And you have had him here to-day?—Yes.

15438. Ultimately, three-quarters of an hour after he came, you were bailed out?—Yes.

15439. Was anything said to you as to when you were to appear in court?—They gave me a paper—the usual form, a pink paper—that I was to appear at the North London Police Court on the following Monday, which would be the 15th.

15440. The 15th October?—Yes.

15441. It is October of this year that you are speaking of—1906?—Yes.

15442. Just a few weeks ago, in fact?—Yes.

15443. Did you appear at the police court?—I appeared at the police court.

15444. What took place?—I showed a constable there my paper. "Oh," he said, "this way." I followed him through the corridor, and was put into a room, and I had to mix with the likes that I had never seen before. I suppose I was there two hours, when my name was called and we formed up into another corridor, with the constables standing opposite each man that they had in custody until our turn came, and went into court. I was asked if I was guilty or not guilty, and I said decidedly not guilty.

15445. Who read the charge?—I believe the Clerk.

15446. The Clerk of the Court read out the charge to you?—Yes.

15447. Was it the same charge that had been read out to you at the police station?—Just the same.

15448. Then you were asked whether you pleaded guilty or not guilty, and you said not guilty?—Yes. The constable then came up and gave his evidence.

15449. That was Police-constable 166 N?—Yes.

15450. What did he say, according to your recollection?—According to my recollection, he said that he was on duty at Highbury Barn at such and such a time, when he found I was causing an unnecessary noise, and he repeatedly cautioned me to go away. That I deny.

15451. At present will you tell us what he said?—He then said I was f——g and b——g with a coachman, and the Magistrate asked him if he charged the coachman. He said no. "Well," he said, "it is very strange; why did not you?" He said: "He was in charge of a public vehicle." "Well," said the Magistrate, "what do you do in that case, when a man is in charge of a public vehicle?" The police-constable said, "We usually summon them." The Magistrate said, "Have you applied for a summons against him?" The policeman said "No." The Magistrate said, "Why not? He has just as much right to be here as this gentleman."

15452. That is what the Magistrate said?—Yes; my recollection is that he said that.

15453. What was the name of the Magistrate?—Mr. Fordham. The constable then said that I tried to get away from him at Highbury Barn. I have told you already what occurred when he put his hand on me. Then he said that I also caught hold of the horses' heads that the driver was driving, and that I would not allow that man to proceed on his journey. That I also denied. The Magistrate then asked the constable if he had got the driver there as a witness against me. He said, "No, your worship." But the driver, who was there, said, "Oh, yes, you have; I am here." But instead of him being a witness for the constable he was a witness on my behalf. I was then asked if I had any further witnesses, and I told the Magistrate the gentleman was there who bailed me out and saw the occurrence at Highbury Barn. He corroborated me.

15454. Did you ask any questions of the police-constable?—Oh, yes.

15455. You were allowed to do that?—Yes.

15456. You asked him some questions?—Yes.

15457. Did anything particular occur during the time you were cross-examining the police-constable?—I asked him, as he said he had repeatedly cautioned me, when it was that he had cautioned me, because I did not remember ever speaking to him before in my life, and I do not think I have. I should have remembered it if I had. He said there was no other occasion but on this occasion. The only other caution he gave me was to grip me by the collar and the sleeve, and tell me to go away, when I said it was impossible, and I thought I could go away when I liked.

15458. You have told us that. When P.C. 166 N finished his evidence, what took place?—The other witness, Mr. Carter, was called.

15459. The case for the police ended with the calling of this one witness?—No; the other witness was called as well.

15460. Who called Mr. Carter?—Mr. Fordham asked me if I had any further evidence, and I told him yes.

15461. Did not Mr. Fordham ask you whether you were going to give evidence yourself, or words to that effect?—I gave that evidence which I have told you.

15462. When P.C. 166 N had finished his story you were sworn, were you?—Yes.

15463. And you gave evidence?—Yes.

15464. Did you tell Mr. Fordham what you have told us to-day?—Yes.

15465. Were you cross-examined by anybody then? Did the police-constable ask you any questions?—None whatever.

15466. Then Mr. Fordham asked you whether you had other witnesses?—Yes.

15467. Then Mr. Carter was called by you?—Yes.

15468. Was any other witness called by you?—No.

15469. Carter is here?—Yes.

15470. Then we shall hear what he has to say, so I need not ask you what he said at the police court. When you finished your evidence, what did Mr. Fordham say?—To the best of my recollection, he told the constable he had exceeded his duty, and that he should have used more discretion; and I believe he said that he had not stopped at telling an untruth to get a conviction. That is what I understood Mr. Fordham to say.

15471. Then the charge against you was dismissed, and you went away?—Yes.

15472. You thought this was a matter of sufficient importance to come and give your evidence here?—Decidedly; knowing perfectly well that I am a life abstainer from intoxicating liquor and swearing, and knowing that I had not convicted myself in any way, I thought it was only proper that it should be investigated.

E. Wells. 22 Nov. 1906.

15473. Is there anything else you would like to tell us? Does anything else occur to you?—Only the condition of this place where I had to go at the North London Police Court was very very vile, and the people I had to mix with. I have forwarded on to the Secretary a cutting from a newspaper.

15474. You were alone in the cell?—Yes, but not in the waiting-room at the North London Police Court.

15475. Was there any particular individual that you objected to?—Yes; there was one who Mr. Fordham would not have in the court on account of his filthy condition.

15476. Who was that? Do you know his name now from what you have heard?—I think his name was Bell.

15477. What happened to him?—He was not allowed to come into Court on account of his filthy condition, and they could not get an ordinary conveyance to take him away because the conveyance would have to be relined, he was in such a vile state, and the gaoler suggested they should have an ambulance which they could wash in order to take him to the infirmary.

15478. What was he suffering from?—They called him a leper in the newspapers.

15479. Who called him a leper?—The newspapers.

15480. Did any of the other people who were waiting for their cases to be called on complain?—Yes, and the constables who had to pass all picked up their handkerchiefs to their noses and said, "Oh, dear, what a terrible smell." That was the remark passing round. He was not allowed to enter the Court.

15481. That is really all you have to tell us, is it not?—That is so.

15482. (Mr. Dickinson.) You said something just now about having been there two hours and a half. What did you mean by that?—I was at Highbury Barn conducting my business for about two hours and a half previous to the arrest.

15483. What is your business?—My business is serving the men with clothing.

15484. Serving the 'bus drivers with clothing?—Yes.

15485. You had been there two hours and a half up to that time?—Yes.

15486. You said the policeman said you had been there long enough?—Yes.

15487. He knew you had been there all that time?—Yes, he must have done, by him making that remark.

15488. What is your process of serving these people. Have you got the garments with you?—Oh, no. I am there to take orders if there should be any. When I take my orders they pay weekly. I think they take three and a quarter hours to do their journey, so that if I arrived at Highbury Barn to meet a certain man, and he has just started on his journey I have to wait there till that man does his journey and comes back again, so that I have got men to see in between. I think there are something like 60 omnibuses on that road, and I have to serve about half of them.

15489. It is not that you canvass anybody that comes up?—No, I never canvass them at all.

15490. You have your clients and you meet your clients there?—That is just it.

15491. You say you had not known this police-constable before?—No, I had not.

15492. But I suppose you had often been at this place before?—Many, many times for years—every week.

15493. Did you know the police who were usually there?—Practically, yes I knew them.

15494. Then this man must have been a stranger?—Yes, he was to me. I did not know the man, although he said he knew me. I am not the only one who does business there in that way. Men do it all round London at every omnibus point.

15495. Are there many of you at the same place?—No, only me on this occasion. I am there on a Thursday, and there are two other men there on Friday. I am the only one there on the Thursday.

15496. When you went to the police-station did the sergeant in charge ask you anything about what had happened?—He asked me why I did not go away when I was told. I said I did not think it was necessary to go away considering I knew I had not convicted myself in any way, and that I had other business to do. Why should I go away? I had as much right to be there as anyone else.

15497. What did he say to that?—He made no further remark.

15498. Did he ask you anything about whether you had been using bad language?—No, nothing at all.

15499. He took that from the police-constable?—Yes, he took it for granted that that occurred. In fact, he suggested to the police-constable what the charge should be, because he put the words in the man's mouth. He asked the constable what the words were that were used, and the constable hesitated, and he said, "Come, you are no priest, what did he swear, what were the words?" And he repeated it properly. The constable said, "Yes, that is what he said."

15500. On the way to the station you asked the constable what he was charging you with?—Repeatedly.

15501. What did he say?—I said, "You cannot charge me with being drunk, I have not been swearing, what is the charge—surely you will satisfy me." He said, "I did not say I was going to charge you with being drunk or swearing, but," he said, "you will know when you get there." He retained his hold on me from Highbury Barn to the station.

15502. You had the omnibus driver present at the hearing?—Yes.

15503. Why did you not call him?—He was there and was called.

15504. Was he called? You stated to the learned Chairman that only Mr. Carter was called?—Mr. Carter and Mr. Hill were both called.

15505. Hill was the driver?—Yes.

15506. Did he give an account of the affair?—Yes, just what occurred.

15507. To the Magistrate?—Yes.

15508. You had every opportunity of calling all your witnesses?—Oh, yes, and I could have had more if it was necessary to have them.

15509. You have no complaint to make about the trial?—None whatever.

(Chairman.) Have you any question to ask Mr. Muir?

(Mr. Muir.) I know nothing of this case, Sir, and I have had no opportunity of inquiring into it.

(Chairman.) Have you the charge sheet?

(Mr. Muir.) Yes. Yesterday afternoon the Secretary asked us to get as many papers as we could, and we have done so. (Producing documents.)

HENRY CARTER, sworn.

H. Carter.

15510. (Chairman.) Your name is Henry Carter?—Yes.

15511. What are you by business?—A coachman.

15512. Where do you live?—31, Hamilton Road, Highbury.

15513. Do you remember the 13th October last?—Yes.

15514. Where were you about three o'clock on the afternoon of that day?—I called at Highbury Barn and I walked into the urinal, and as I walked in there I saw Mr. Wells and that gentleman there, the 'bus driver, and they were talking over business. They went out and left me in the urinal. When I got out, to my surprise I heard them talking, and saw the police-constable put his hand on Mr. Wells's shoulder and take him. I said to him, "What's up?" He said, "Oh, don't you have so much to say, otherwise I shall take you." I said, "Oh, will you?" I said to

Mr. Wells, "Never mind, I will soon go and fetch my receipt and fetch you out." I went off to my house and fetched my receipt and went to bail him out. As I got up to the station, the sergeant said, "You cannot have him yet. If you come again at a quarter past four you can have him." I said, "Very good."

15515. What do you mean by fetching your receipt?—I keep the house at 31, Hamilton Road.

15516. You mean your receipt for rates in order to prove that you were a householder?—Yes.

15517. For the purpose of bailing him out?—For the purpose of bailing him out. I have known this young man for years.

15518. What sort of character has he?—A particularly good one. I have known him and his father before him.

15519. When you saw him talking to the 'bus driver, was he in an excited condition. Was he talking loudly?—Both of them were talking loud.

15520. They were in the street?—They were in the urinal, and then they walked out into the street, and kept on talking as they went out. They were speaking loud, and when I got outside the 'busman was on his box, and Mr. Wells was speaking to him on the side of the omnibus, and I saw the policeman put his hand on Mr. Wells's shoulder.

15521. At the time of the arrest the 'bus-driver was on the box-seat, and Mr. Wells was standing by the side?—Talking by the side of the 'bus, about the middle part of the 'bus when the man drove away.

15522. Had the 'bus driven away when the police constable arrested Mr. Wells?—No, the 'bus stood there. He was by the side of the 'bus when the policeman arrested him.

15523. What did the policeman do?—He put his hand on his shoulder and his cuff, and led him away.

15524. Then the conversation you have mentioned took place between you and the police constable?—Yes.

15525. You went to the station. How long was it before you got to the station?—I was there at half-past three.

15526. At what time was Mr. Wells actually released?—At quarter past or twenty minutes past four.

15527. What was the reason of the delay as far as you could see?—I could not say.

15528. When you got to the police station, to which room were you taken, or to which room did you go?—I merely walked into the main entrance and told them my business.

15529. You told who your business—a police constable?—Yes—the man in charge; I do not know whether he was a sergeant or a policeman. He was there in livery, and he told me I must come at quarter past four, and then I could have him.

15530. Did you go right into the charge-room?—Yes, into the main place.

15531. Is there a passage in the room?—No, I only walked straight into the entrance to the police station.

15532. Who was there in charge—an ordinary police constable or a sergeant?—I could not say whether he was a sergeant or a policeman.

15533. Was he behind the table or a partition?—Yes.

15534. And there was a window opening from the other side of the partition into the room?—Yes.

15535. You saw a sergeant or somebody on the other side of the partition?—Yes, it was the gentleman who released him to me.

15536. Do you know his name?—I do not. I never troubled anything further after it.

15537. You are certain it was half-past three when you got there?—Yes.

15538. How do you know the time when you got there?—Because I went straight into the station, and there was a clock in the station.

15539. You noticed the time in the station?—Yes. I said: "I shall be back here at a quarter past four."

15540. Was any reason given for the delay in taking your recognisance?—I never asked any questions. I went out and came back at quarter past four.

15541. Then, I suppose, you signed the paper?—Yes, and brought the man away. Then I went down to the police court on Monday morning, and little did I think I was going to be called as a witness; but Mr. Fordham asked Mr. Wells if he had any other witness, after the policeman had come down, and Mr. Wells said: "Yes, there is a gentleman in Court who bailed me out." So I walked up and said merely what I have said now.

15542. (Mr. Dickinson.) You said just now that the 'bus-driver and Wells were talking loud?—Yes.

15543. What exactly do you mean by that?—Their conversation. Mr. Wells was demanding his money from the driver. The driver owed him some money, and he was talking to him, and they were both talking in rather an excitable state—loud. But, as regards any obscene language, I never heard a word.

15544. There was some kind of altercation between them?—Yes, between their two selves.

15545. You say they were talking loud. Was it so loud that you could hear it 100 yards away?—No. They were talking out loud, they were not whispering; they were speaking openly.

15546. (Chairman.) I suppose there was a good deal of traffic round about there at the time they were talking?—Yes. They are only allowed to stay two minutes there.

15547. (Mr. Dickinson.) Was it so loud that it would attract people passing by?—No, there was no obstruction whatever. There was no one there, only the police constable, Mr. Wells, and me.

15548. Was it of such a nature that people passing by would have stopped and looked?—No, I do not consider that. They were only speaking loud, the same as I do myself. People say I speak very loud.

15549. You said something to the constable when he took Wells away?—Yes, I asked him: "What is he doing?" and I said: "What are you taking him for?" The policeman said: "Don't you have anything to say about it, otherwise I will take you." I said: "Oh, will you?"

15550. Did you know him?—No.

15551. Are you a 'bus-driver?—No, I am a coachman. I have been a licensed man, but not for some years past.

15551*. Do you frequent that particular place much?—No. I live within about 50 yards of the place, and I have lived there for the last 25 years in that same road.

15552. Are there disturbances about there?—No, it is a very quiet place. The road I live in is quite quiet.

15553. This process of dealing with the 'bus drivers does not create any disturbance there?—No, nothing whatever. This man does his business with them in a quiet kind of manner so that you would not know anything was going on.

15554. (Chairman.) What were they talking about? Was it something about not keeping him waiting on Tuesday?—I think Wells asked the driver for some money for things he had served him with.

15555. (Mr. Dickinson.) Had he not paid?—He promised to pay on Tuesday, and Mr. Wells said, "Don't disappoint me, because it will make it awkward for my other clients."

15556. I suppose the 'bus driver was going to drive away?—He did drive away.

15557. Did Wells do anything which looked like stopping the horses from going off?—The man was never near the horses. He was by the side of the omnibus when I came out of the urinal when the police constable put his hand on his shoulder.

15558. You heard the police constable say in the police-court that he stood in front of the horses' head and would not go away?—I heard him say that, but I do not know anything of that, and the man absolutely said he never had such a thought, and the driver knows that too.

15559. Did Wells deny that when he was before the Magistrate?—I do not think he did say anything about it. I do not believe he did.

15560. When you got to the police station do you know who it was who was in charge? You went there at half-past 3. What time did this event happen?—About 3 o'clock.

15561. You got there half an hour afterwards?—Yes.

H. Carter.
22 Nov. 1906.

it took them a quarter of an hour or 20 minutes to walk up to the station.

15562. What was the first thing said when you went into the police station?—I demanded Wells. I said, "I have come up to bail Mr. Wells out."

15563. What did the officer in charge say?—He said, "You will have to come again at a quarter past 4."

15564. Did he give any reason for that?—No, that is what he said, "You cannot have him till then," and I said, "Very good," and I put my hat on and walked out and went back at the time mentioned.

15565. (Chairman.) Was the coachman using any bad language?—I never heard any bad language going on at all—not on either side.

15566. You are positive that Mr. Wells did not make any movement towards the horses?—Not in my sight. I was in the urinal and I stayed and finished, and when I came out I saw the policeman holding him to take him away. I could not say what happened during the time when I was inside the urinal.

15567. He was not excited?—Not at all. He was talking to the driver and looking up at him when I saw him.

Mr. RALPH HILL, sworn.

R. Hill.

15568. (Chairman.) Your name is Ralph Hill?—Yes.

15569. Where do you live?—15, Delvino Road, Fulham.

15570. Are you an omnibus driver?—Yes.

15571. Licensed?—Yes.

15572. What is the number of your licence?—18938.

15573. In whose employment are you?—The London General Omnibus Company's.

15574. You have known Mr. Wells for some time, have you not?—About 18 months.

15575. And you did business with him?—Yes.

15576. Do you remember Saturday, the 13th October?—Yes.

15577. Where were you about 3 o'clock in the afternoon?—Highbury Barn.

15578. Did you meet Mr. Wells there?—Yes.

15579. Where did you meet him? Were you on duty there?—Yes.

15580. When you saw him were you on the box of your omnibus?—Yes.

15581. Then you got down?—I got down and went into the urinal.

15582. With Wells?—Wells followed me in, and we had a little conversation about a little bit of business, and I promised to meet him on Tuesday. When I came out I got straight up on to the box. We are only allowed three minutes there. To my surprise the policeman caught hold of him and was going to lock him up.

15583. Where did Wells remain?—By the side of the omnibus.

15584. Still talking to you?—Yes.

15585. Was he talking loudly?—There were two motors there, and they had their engines going, and we had to speak loudly to one another.

15586. You were not quarrelling?—No, not in any way.

15587. We have heard it said that there was a talk about meeting you on Tuesday?—Yes.

15588. While that talking was going on what did you observe? What took place with regard to Wells?—I promised to meet him on the Tuesday, and when I came out of the urinal I got on my box and we were still talking. The police constable came up to him and caught hold of him and told him to go away.

15589. Had he told him to go away before he caught hold of him?—No. He put his hand on his shoulder first, and told him to go away.

15590. According to you it is not true that the policeman cautioned him several times?—No, he did not caution him previous to that. As soon as I was on my box the policeman came up to him and put his hand on his shoulder and cuff, and told him to go away. Wells said, "I cannot go away while you are holding me here." The policeman said, "Come on, come with me."

15591. Then they went off. Did Wells go quietly?—Yes, he did.

15592. Is it true to say that Wells was using any bad language?—Not at all.

15593. Were you using any bad language?—No. I can swear that Wells never used a bad word out of his mouth, nor I either.

15594. Then you had to go off with your 'bus?—I had.

15595. And you could not go to the police station?—No.

15596. You went to the police-court on the following Monday?—Yes.

15597. You gave evidence?—Yes.

15598. You have heard what Wells said about what took place in the police-court?—Yes.

15599. Were you there all the time?—I was there all the time.

15600. Is Wells's account of what Mr. Fordham said accurate?—Exactly.

15601. You can suggest no cause at all for the police constable's conduct?—Not at all. I was very much surprised, I am sure. There was no cause for it whatever. I did not know the policeman till that day. I had never seen him. I had been up on that road for about nine months. I believe it was his first day there.

15602. You had been there every day?—Yes, four times a day.

15603. How long had you been on that line of omnibuses?—About nine months.

15604. Had you got to know any of the police-constables at Highbury Barn or about there?—I knew several of them by sight. I did not know this one. He made a remark to one of our conductors. We are in the habit when pulling off from Highbury Barn to stand round the corner, and he went to one conductor and said: "If you stop there again I shall take your number and the driver's." We used to just stop as we pulled round the corner on every journey.

15605. That incident did not take place with regard to you?—No.

15606. Did the police-constable speak to you at all on this occasion?—No, he never spoke to me at all.

15607. He simply took Wells off in the way you have described?—Yes.

15608. It struck you as rather odd, did it not?—Rather.

15609. What was in the police-constable's mind, do you think?—I cannot think what was in his mind. I do not think he knew what he was doing—I am sure he did not.

15610. Was he sober?—The man looked sober enough. There was no disturbance caused whatever. I was simply promising to meet Wells on the Tuesday.

15611. (Mr. Dickinson.) Were there any questions about a debt?—No, not at all.

15612. You were arguing with him about something?—No, there was no argument whatever.

15613. What was being said?—Wells as a rule sees me on a Friday, but on the Friday I was having a day off. He came up on the Saturday, and it was not convenient for me to pay him on the Saturday, and I told him I should meet him on Tuesday, and Mr. Wells consented to do so. He said, "Don't disappoint me." I said, "I won't disappoint you; I shall be here."

15614. Then there was a question of a debt. You did owe this man money?—Yes, but it was paid weekly.

15615. Did he want you to pay it on the spot?—No, he did not want me to pay at all.

15616. You heard what the last witness said—that you were talking rather loud about some debt?—No doubt the other witness thought that Mr. Wells was demanding money off me, but he was not at all. I simply pay him on the Friday, but on that Friday I had the day off.

15617. (Chairman.) You get the goods on the terms of paying by instalments?—Yes.

15618. Had you fallen into arrear in the payment?—No.

15619. Do you generally pay Wells personally, and hand the money to him direct?—Yes.

15620. Has he got a book with him which you sign?—Yes.

15621. That is the way you do business?—Yes.

15622. When was the instalment due?—On the Friday.

15623. That was Friday, the 12th?—Yes.

15624. Had you paid that instalment?—No, I was resting. I had a day off, and I could not see him. He came up to see me on the Saturday, and he had other people to see as well.

15625. Then the conversation was about this instalment?—Yes.

15626. You arranged to pay him on Tuesday?—I arranged to meet him on the Tuesday.

15627. I suppose he wanted the money on the Saturday?—He would have had it if I had given it to him. He would not refuse money.

15628. He was anxious to get it?—No, not at all.

15629. The matter was at all events discussed so loud that the other witness noticed it, and there was no question in his mind that you were not wanting to pay?—I do not see why the other witness should think that. I told Mr. Wells it was not convenient.

15630. What did make you talk so loud?—It was not loud at all.

15631. He followed you into the urinal?—Yes, when I jumped off my 'bus I went straight in, and Mr. Wells came in and spoke to me.

15632-3. You said before the Magistrate: "The prisoner collects debts for us." What did you mean by that? R. Hill. 22 Nov. 1906.

(Chairman.) It must be "from us." There are one or two clerical errors in the depositions.

15634. (Mr. Dickinson.) You did say something about the prisoner collecting debts at the police court?—I do not know about "debts."

15635. I have got here what you said in the police court: "The police-constable told him to go, and gave him no chance, but took him. The prisoner collects debts for us"?—I did not mean debts—I meant instalments.

15636. From you?—Yes.

(Chairman.) That must be a clerical error, and it should be "from us."

15637. (Mr. Dickinson.) Probably that is so. Who asked you to go to the police court?—No one. I went myself.

15638. You communicated with Wells and volunteered to go?—No, I did not communicate with him.

15639. Did you turn up there without having any communication from him?—Wells did not know I was going. I went up by myself.

15640. You knew the case was coming on?—I knew the case was coming on.

15641. How did you know the case was coming on?—I heard up at Highbury Barn from the puller-up that the case was being heard on Monday. I said: "I shall go; it is my morning off." I don't start till dinner time, half-past one, so I thought I would go.

(Chairman.) Have you any other witness, Mr. Wells?

(Mr. Wells.) No, Sir.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know whether he has got the book here, of which he has spoken, in which he enters his accounts and the instalments.

(Chairman.) I will ask him.

EDWARD WELLS, recalled.

15642. (Chairman.) Have you got the book with you?—No, I have not. E. Wells.

15643. You have got it at home?—Yes.

15644. Mr. Bankes has suggested the book might be produced?—Very well.

15645. You have heard what Hill has said about his dealings with you?—Yes.

15646. How many instalments were due on the 13th October?—He might have missed one, but they never make up an instalment they miss. They simply pay what they make arrangements to pay—1s. 6d., 2s., or 1s. Sometimes they make a full week and they will pay 1s. extra, but that is not very often, and I do not press them.

15647. Hill has told us there was an instalment he ought to have paid on the Friday. Is that the case?—Yes.

15648. Will you show your book to the Secretary?—Yes.

15649. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose you were doing something with the other 'bus drivers all those two hours?—Yes.

15650. You were collecting money from them?—Yes. I told you I serve about half of them.

15651. Did you have any quarrel with any other 'bus driver?—None whatever. We never have any quarrels there.

15652. (Chairman.) Had you ever been interfered with by the police in doing this business at all at any time before this 13th October?—Not in any part of London.

15653. You do it to your way of thinking in a way that could cause no kind of obstruction to anybody?—None whatever. I might mention that it is necessary to speak loud to a man when he is on the seat of his 'bus. There is a motor-omnibus in front and a motor-omnibus behind. If the engines are going you cannot speak in a whisper and make a man hear what you say. It is necessary to speak loud, but not necessary to speak so that other people should swear you were quarrelling.

15654. Whether you were quarrelling or not, do you think that a passer-by, whether he is a constable or not, might have thought you were quarrelling with Hill?—I do not think so.

15655. You heard what Carter said?—Yes, but I do not think any passer-by would stop and think we were quarrelling. I do not think so at all. There was no excitement.

15656. You say you were not quarrelling, and if there was any loud talking, it was due to the fact that it was necessary, because of the noise of the traffic. That is your view?—Decidedly.

15657. (Mr. Dickinson.) What do you think was the reason that the police-constable took you?—That is what I was asking him all the way—why he was taking me to the police-station. I could not ascertain what it was for.

15658. (Chairman.) As I understand it, there was no crowd there or anything of that kind?—None whatever. As the man came up, I said: "I am here." He said: "All right, Wells, I will see you in a minute." He gets down, pops in the urinal, and says: "There is 1s. or 1s. 6d." I sign their books, and I get up and wait for another one.

15659. (Mr. Dickinson.) Had this police-constable been on the spot for the two hours?—Yes.

15660. He had seen what you were doing all the two hours?—Yes.

15661. (Chairman.) Had you seen the police-constable 166 N before that during the two hours you were there?—Oh yes, several times I had seen him. I had passed him several times myself.

15662. And he had passed you?—Yes, he came round from Highbury Park into Kelvin Road and looked to see how many omnibuses were there. He passed me I might say 20 times. It might not have been so many and it might have been more. Not a word passed between him and me till he put his hand on my shoulder.

E. Wells. 22 Nov. 1906.

15663. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose you were irritated when he did it?—Yes, I was, knowing I had not convicted myself in anyway.

15664. Did you try to struggle after the arrest?—When he put his hand on my shoulder and sleeve. I said: "What are you doing?" He said: "You clear out of the road." I said: "What have I to clear out of it for?"

15665. (Chairman.) You spoke rather authoritatively?—Just as I am speaking now. He said: "You won't go? Then come with me." And then he took me off. I repeatedly asked him what it was for. "I do not understand what you are taking me for. Surely you will satisfy me and tell me?"

15666. (Mr. Dickinson.) He did tell you to go away, and you refused?—I do not know that I refused, because he had hold of me all the time. I said: "If I wanted to go I could not while you have hold of me like this."

15667. (Chairman.) He did not say anything about your obstructing the traffic in the street or annoying passengers?—No. I was in the road and on the offside of the omnibus just against the offside fore-wheel, because the driver was on his seat when I was talking to him. I was in the road and not on the pavement. That is the side the driver always get up in order to get into his seat. The policeman nearly pushed me down when got hold of me, and what is why I objected. I asked him repeatedly: "What are you taking me for? What is it for?" I was dumbfounded at the man getting hold of me at all. I could not understand it.

15668. (Chairman.) How long have you been carrying on this business?—Twelve years.

15669. (Chairman.) How long have you been carrying on business with 'bus drivers at Highbury?—All that time with different men at different times.

15670. You live in the neighbourhood, as I gather?—Yes, about 20 minutes' walk from Highbury Barn.

15671. (Mr. Dickinson.) You never complained to the police about this afterwards?—Oh, no.

15672. (Chairman.) I think Mr. Dickinson means you did not write to the Commissioner?—No, I wrote straight to this Royal Commission. I had read of cases in the paper, and I thought it was only right that I should bring mine forward.

(Chairman.) The Secretary will direct summonses to be issued to Police-Constable 166N Thomas Dunham, and to Police-Sergeant Robert Hawes. We will have the sergeant and the constable before us and further investigate the matter. At present we have nothing more to ask you.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you tell us what day you desire those witnesses to come, we will see that they are here.

(Chairman.) Yes, I am assuming that course. We shall be sitting on Wednesday next at 11 o'clock, and perhaps they will come then.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly.

(Chairman.) Mr. Muskett has been good enough to hand in the notes of evidence in this case and also the charge street.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If we desire anyone of these witnesses who have been called this morning to come back, might we intimate that to the Secretary?

(Chairman.) Yes. I think it would be well for Mr. Wells to have the books here on Wednesday, and of course he will come back.

(Mr. Wells.) I will come at any time.

(Chairman.) Then Mr. Wells will certainly come, and if between now and Wednesday you want Mr. Hill or Mr. Carter to come, perhaps you will intimate that to the Secretery.

(Mr. Wells.) It will be quite necessary for me to have two days' notice in order to get the omnibus driver here if he is wanted.

(Chairman, to Mr. Hill.) Can you attend here on Wednesday next?

(Mr. Hill.) Yes, Sir.

(Chairman.) Are you on duty on Wednesday next?

(Mr. Hill.) Yes, Sir, but if you tell me to-day that you want me on Wednesday I can get off.

(Chairman.) Then will you come here at 11 o'clock on Wednesday next? (To Mr. Carter.) Is it convenient for you to come here then?

(Mr. Carter.) I can get away.

(Chairman.) Then you will come if you can. That will answer your purpose, Mr. Bankes, if you wish to ask any questions.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly, Sir.

(Mr. Wells.) Has Mr. Hill to bring his book that I supplied him with showing the goods supplied?

(Chairman.) Please bring all the books and receipts.

(Mr. Wells.) It will be only necessary for him to bring his—what I have already signed.

(Chairman.) Yes. We will now take the case of George Mullins. Is there likely to be a conflict of evidence in this case?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Apparently there is. I have just got the notes.

GEORGE MULLINS, Sworn.

G. Mullins.

15673. (Earl Russell.) You are a porter at Covent Garden?—Yes.

15674. You live at 35, Johanna Street, Oakley Street, Lambeth?—Yes. Before you start on this case, Sir, would you exempt my name from the Press? I will give you good reasons for it if you wish it. I do not want this case to be put in the papers.

(Chairman.) That is a matter that might have been decided before you actually appeared.

(Witness.) I did not know I was going to appear until the paper was given to me after I had done work at 11 o'clock last night. I do not mind the case appearing in the papers if they leave my name out.

(Chairman.) It seems almost impossible for us to take a case in public and stop the newspapers from reporting it. That seems an inconsistent line of action.

(Witness.) If you will listen to me I will give my reasons for it. A fortnight last Tuesday a gentleman gave me £100, and I distributed three-parts of the £100, and I have been inundated with letters, and by people chipping me about this £100, and if they hear my name mentioned on the Royal Commission they will do the same. It has been a nuisance to my governor as well as to me and to my household.

15675. Was this £100 given to you for distribution in charity?—No.

15676. (Earl Russell.) I think the witness is referring to an eccentric gentleman who distributed large sums of money among the porters in Covent Garden?—That is quite right. I have had over 200 letters.

(Chairman.) I have no official notice of what appears in the papers about eccentric gentleman. You must tell me what the point is.

(Witness.) The point is that I have been so much annoyed about this £100 and in my own work, too. They thought I should give away £200 instead of £100, and they might think, as I am going before the Royal Commission, they would make a laughing-stock of me again. They have already made a laughing-stock of me for giving the money away. Some tell me I should keep it, and some tell me I should give it away.

(Chairman.) We do not want to inconvenience you, but I do not quite see how some inconvenience can be avoided, nor do I see how your appearing here can produce any of the ill consequences to you that this £100 seems to have done.

(Mr. Whitmore.) It will not lead to people asking you for money.

(Witness.) No, but it will cause any amount of chipping. There are 5,000 men in Covent Garden Market.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know whether it occurs to you to ask this witness whether he desires his case to be brought before the Commission, because it looks as if he has come here against his will.

(Witness.) No, I have not come here against my will.

(Chairman.) There is a middle course that we can take, and that is to take the evidence here in public, and to ask the gentlemen of the Press to be kind enough not to report this particular case, or, at any rate, to report it without giving the name of the complainant. I do not know whether the representatives of the Press will comply with that request, but I think they probably will. Are you content to go on with that, trusting to the representatives of the Press leaving your name out?

(Witness.) Yes.

(Chairman.) Perhaps the representatives of the Press will listen to what I have been saying, and omit the name of this gentleman, and report the case without the name, if possible.

(Earl Russell.) At least, it might be reported without his address and the description of him as a porter.

(Chairman.) He is too well known. (To the Witness.) You have been good enough to come here, and you will find that your name will not be mentioned to any large extent in the Press, so that you can go on and tell your story to us.

15677. (Earl Russell.) You are a married man with a wife and five children?—Yes.

15678. You have never had any trouble with the police?—No, only on one occasion.

15679. Were you for sixteen years employed by Messrs. Jacobs and Messrs. O'Kelly?—Yes.

15680. Do you produce this certificate from Messrs. O'Kelly, which says that you have been in their employment for the last six years, and have always given entire satisfaction?—Yes.

15681. On Sunday the 9th September, in this year, about 11 p.m., you were going home with your daughter?—Yes, I was on my way home with my daughter.

15682. She is about nine years old?—Ten.

15683. On your way did you pass a police-constable whom you knew?—Who I thought I knew.

15684. Did you know his name?—No.

15685. You mean you did not know him before?—No.

15686. But you thought you did?—Yes, I thought I knew him.

15687. Was he speaking to somebody?—He was speaking to two marine store dealers.

15688. Did you know them?—Yes.

15689. Did you know anything about them?—No.

15690. As you passed did you say something to him?—Yes.

15691. What did you say?—I touched the constable on the shoulder, as I thought him to be a constable who I knew perfectly well around the neighbourhood, and I said, "What, at the ear-hole again?"

15692. What did that mean?—It meant a man who was going to take a bribe, but I only said it as a matter of a lark between me and the policeman whom I knew. It was a mistake on my part in saying it. I should not have touched the constable. It was my fault for touching the constable on the shoulder. Had I known he was not the constable who I had taken him for I should not have spoken at all, but it was only as a matter of joke that I made that remark.

15693. Thinking you knew him you put your hand on his shoulder and made a remark that meant that he was taking a bribe?—That is all.

15694. It was intended to be jocular?—Yes, in a jovial sort of way.

15695. As a matter of fact you did not know him?—No.

15696. What did the constable do when you said that?—The constable turned round and punched me in the ribs. My girl started crying. I took her home. I only lived 100 yards from the place.

15697. The constable did not try and stop you going away with your little girl?—No.

15698. He said nothing more to you?—He hit me in the ribs, and I walked away with my girl as she started crying.

15699. Did he say anything to you when he hit you?—He said, "I will give you ear-hole."

15700. Anything else?—Nothing more occurred.

15701. Then he made no attempt to stop you going away with your girl?—No.

15702. Then you went home with your girl, who was crying?—Yes.

15703. And left her there?—I took her to the top of the street and sent her indoors. I went back to the same place and looked for his number. He was by himself then. I asked him for his number. He said, "I will give you number," and he caught me by the collar and took me to Kennington Road Station.

15704. Was that all that passed between you? Did you say nothing more to him than that?—I said nothing more. I only asked him for his number, which I was going to report to the Inspector if I got it.

15705. Do you remember the words you used?—Those were the words I used. I asked him for his number. It is very nearly nine weeks ago now.

15706. He said, "I will give you number"?—Yes, and he caught me by the ear and kept on prodding me with his knee and shaking me till I got to Kennington Road Station.

15707. Was that on the way to the station or before he started taking you there?—On the way to the station. I said: "If you want to take me to the station it is unnecessary to use such violence to me." If I had not had a stud in my shirt which I could pull out there is not the least doubt from the way he had got hold of me by the collar that I would not have got to the station.

15708. That was Kennington Road station?—Yes.

15709. When you got there, what happened?—I sat down on a form, and there were two other policemen in the room at the time. One went through one door—as the dock might be here, there is the door on the right. (Describing.) He went through that door, one of the policemen who was in the station, with some papers in his hand. The other one went into the Inspector's room. There was only me and the policeman in charge of me in the room by ourselves. He walked up to me and hit me in the mouth, and slit all my lip.

15710. Was this in the charge room?—Yes, there was only me and him together at the time.

15711. (Chairman.) Was it the same constable?—The same constable who took me in charge.

15712. There was nobody else in the charge room?—There were two constables in the charge room when we went in, but when we went in there he sat me down on the form. Of course, I was in an excited condition, owing to the way he handled me going to the station. Whatever business these other policemen were doing, one went through one door and one went through the other door, and when he saw there was no one there he walked up to me and hit me, and burst all my lip.

15713. (Earl Russell.) That was before you had been charged?—That was before I had been charged.

15714. How soon after that were you charged?—I could not say, but between five and ten minutes—about five minutes I should say.

15715. Did anything else happen before you were charged?—Nothing else.

15716. You were charged before another policeman—a sergeant or an Inspector?—I was charged before an Inspector. An Inspector took the charge.

15717. Do you know his name.

(Chairman.) Before you go any further I am afraid the suggestion I made in regard to the suppression of Mullins' name cannot be carried out, because I understand that the journalistic regulations are such as not to justify the reporters in doing anything of the sort. (To the Witness.) Do you think it is of any real importance? We are very anxious not to inconvenience

G. Mullins. 22 Nov. 1906.

you, but, on the other hand, we are very anxious to hear your story.

(Witness.) I think it would be very inconvenient for me to have my name in the papers, because my name has been in the papers the last eight or ten days—in every paper published—about this £100, which I wish I never had.

15718. All the evil seems to have been done. You seem to have achieved celebrity?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) I can assure the witness from my personal experience that one soon gets used to it.

15719. (Chairman.) I do not think any harm will come to you?—Well, I do.

15720. In what way?—As I have explained to you, the men of Covent Garden Market will chip me. They will say, "He has got the £100, and now he is on the Royal Commission," and they will think I shall get another £100.

(Chairman.) It is not a case in which we should think of taking the evidence in camera under any circumstances, and you are here now. I am afraid whatever mischief may be done to you has been done, and now that you have got into the box and your name has been given by Lord Russell in public, there is no way of stopping it getting into the papers that I know of. I think you must go on.

15721. (Earl Russell.) You were telling me that you were charged before an Inspector?—Yes.

15722. You do not know his name?—No, I could not tell you his name.

15723. The constable who took you there was P.C. Morgan?—Yes, P.C. Morgan.

15724. Did you hear the charge that he made?—He made a charge of being drunk and disorderly and using obscene language. That was on my bail paper, but unfortunately I lost my bail paper. When I went before the Magistrate I was only charged with being drunk.

15725. Drunk only, and not drunk and disorderly?—I was asked to plead guilty to being drunk. I was asked that by Mr. Coates, the Clerk of the Court.

(Chairman.) We are very particular, Lord Russell, as you will see from our questions, as to the receipt of the exact evidence and what took place in the charge room.

15726. (Earl Russell.) I am trying to get that. I do not want to know what was on your bail paper, but what did you hear P.C. Morgan say to the Inspector when he charged you, or what did the Inspector say when he read the charge over to you?—As far as my knowledge goes, the constable said I was in Oakley Street creating a disturbance and was drunk.

15727. You heard him tell his story to the Inspector?—Yes, something to that effect.

15728. You were there then when he was speaking to the Inspector?—Yes; I appealed to the Inspector to take me to the cell instead of the policeman.

15729. That was after you were charged?—Yes.

15730. I want to know what happened first?—That is all that happened.

15731. The Inspector wrote down something?—The Inspector wrote out the charge.

15732. And read it over to you?—I cannot say for certain, but I expect he did.

15733. Can you remember what he read over to you?—No, not exactly. I should not think I should be able to remember when I had the life of me almost shaken out.

15734. Did you hear P.C. Morgan say anything at that time about obscene language?—He said something about obscene language.

15735. At that time to the Inspector?—I cannot say now for certain that he did. It was on the bail paper "Drunk and disorderly," and some other thing; what it was I do not know. I happened to lose my bail paper.

15736. After the charge you say you asked the Inspector to take you to the cell himself?—Yes; I asked him and not the constable to lead me to the cells.

15737. Did he do so?—Yes; I walked down in front.

15738. Did you say anything to him about your cut mouth?—Yes; I showed him my pocket handkerchief that was smothered with blood. I showed it to the Magistrate as well.

15739. What did you say to him?—I told him while I was in the dock, before the charge was booked—the policeman had just brought me into the station-house—"I had no cut mouth when I came to the station, and now he has been and punched me in the mouth for nothing at all."

15740. Did anything happen after you were taken to your cell?—I asked the Inspector to send for a doctor.

15741. For a private doctor?—No, for the divisional surgeon—the police doctor.

15742. Did you ask for any other doctor to be sent?—Dr. Read, my own doctor, who I was under at the time.

15743. Did any doctor come?—Only the divisional surgeon.

15744. What time did he come?—As near as I can guess, about a quarter to twelve.

15745. He saw you?—He saw me.

15746. Did you tell him what had happened?—He saw what had happened. He stood by the side of me. He saw my mouth all swollen.

15747. Did you tell him how you got it?—Yes.

15748. Was anything said while you were talking to the doctor about being drunk?—There was only the Inspector and the doctor standing together. The doctor examined me, walked me up and down the corridor three or four times, and put me in the cell again, and I did not learn till the next morning that the doctor certified that I was not drunk, but I had evidently been drinking.

15749. You heard the next morning that that is what he reported?—Yes.

15750. Had you been drunk?—All that I had had six weeks previous to that was nothing else but cider, That night I had been to Greenwich with my eldest girl, and when I could not get cider I was having lemonade. I went to the house at the corner of my turning about ten minutes to eleven, and I had a glass of cider there. I said to the chap who used to work there, "I fancy twopennyworth of Irish. I have had nothing for some weeks," and went to another house, where I had come out of when I saw P.C. Morgan, and I had one twopennyworth of Irish. I had a job to get it, because I was the last one that left the premises after having this twopennyworth of Irish—in fact, I was the last one served with that twopennyworth of Irish.

15751. You had two pennyworth of Irish whisky and one glass of cider?—I had several glasses of lemonade.

15752. How many glasses of cider did you have?—One glass of cider previous to that.

15753. That was three or four hours before this happened?—No, it was only a quarter of an hour before this happened.

15754. Did you have anything previous to that in the previous three or four hours?—Only lemonade or ginger beer.

15755. Did anything else happen while you were in your cell that night. Were you left alone the rest of the night?—I was not there about an half an hour before a friend of mine came and bailed me out; an hour or an hour and a half. The Inspector sent where I directed him to send to. At least I believe he did.

15756. Next morning your case was heard in court?—Yes.

15757. Did you see Police-constable Morgan before you went into court?—Yes.

15758. Before I got near the court I went over to the market and told my employer I was locked up last night, and I had to attend at Tower Bridge Police Court, and I came across Waterloo Bridge from Oakley Street and got on the tram, and who should happen to get on the tram but the Inspector who took the charge.

15759. Did you have any conversation with him?—Nothing with regard to anything but the weather, and one thing and another.

15760. You did not speak about the charge?—I spoke to him about how I was ill-used by the constable—that is all.

15761. And he did not say anything?—No, the inspector was a thorough gentleman.

15762. Did you see Police-constable Morgan before the case came on?—Me and the Inspector walked together from the tram to the police court.

15763. I am talking of the one who arrested you—Police-constable Morgan?—I saw him in the corridor of the police court. He told me I was going before a lenient magistrate, and it would be only a matter of a fine. I told him to mind his own business.

15764. That was all that passed between you?—Yes. He said, "You do not want to say this and say that. It is all right, it is a very lenient Magistrate, Mr. Rose, and it will only be a matter of a fine.'" I said, "All right."

15765. You did not discuss what had happened with him any further?—I told him to go, and I did not want any say with him.

15766. You did come before the Magistrate?—Yes.

15767. And you gave evidence?—Yes, I gave evidence on oath.

15768. What did Police Constable Morgan say before the Magistrate, do you remember?—Yes, he told the Magistrate that he was a good half hour or something like that trying to get me away. I have got written out here all that transpired at the police court. (Producing document.)

15769. (Chairman.) Is that in your writing?—It is my brother-in-law's writing.

15770. Was your brother-in-law present in court?—No, he copied it out of a newspaper.

15771. Have you the newspaper report?—Yes, I have the newspaper report of the case—"Police and Public."

(Chairman.) We will look at it in the meantime.

15772. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What is the newspaper from which this report is taken?—The "Daily Telegraph."

15773. (Earl Russell.) Can you tell us what the constable said. What did you hear him say at the police court?—I do not know whether he said he was half an hour or ten minutes trying to get me away, but that I was guilty of disorderly conduct and one thing and another, and I was drunk, and he tried all he knew to get me away. He told the magistrate he warned me twice to go away. When the magistrate asked him whether he had any questions to ask with regard to the assault he said no, and he stood down. Within two or three minutes after that, when he refused to ask me any questions with regard to what I said against him, he said that he simply denied the assault. It is only natural that he would do that.

(Earl Russell.) What was the charge? The witness appears to be under the impression that it was "only drunk."

15774. (Chairman.) You say you heard the charge read?—I cannot say. I come here to tell the truth. I am not going to try and tell a lie, if I can help it.

15775. I am assuming that. I want to know, first of all, whether the charge was read over to you?—My memory fails to tell me whether it was read over or not.

15776. You cannot say?—I cannot say. All I know is that I got the greatest courtesy ever man could wish to have from the Inspector.

15777. I thought you had told Lord Russell that you heard the statement of being "drunk" only?—No. It was on the bail paper "drunk and disorderly." When you are charged at the police court you get a bail paper telling you that you are to appear at the police court at such and such a time, and that you are under the sum of so much. Your charge is on that sheet. It was on my sheet "drunk and disorderly," and something else, but I was only charged with being drunk.

15778. I see on the charge sheet it says "Drunk, disorderly, and making use of obscene language"?—When I was taken before the Magistrate I was not charged with that. I was asked by Mr. Coates, the Clerk, whether I pleaded guilty to being drunk. I told him I could not plead guilty to being drunk.

15779. (Earl Russell.) That is all I understand you were asked?—It was the only question I was asked. I was asked did I plead guilty to being drunk. I said no. There was the evidence of the constable.

15780. (Chairman.) When the case was called on the Clerk asked you whether you wished to plead guilty to being drunk?—Yes.

15781. Then the case went on?—No. Before the charge went on I asked the Clerk to read the certificate of the doctor to the Magistrate, and he read it. That was before the charge was proceeded with.

15782. After that, the Clerk said, "Do you wish to pleaded guilty to being drunk?"—No. Directly I got in the box I was asked whether I pleaded guilty to being drunk, and I said no.

15783. From what you say it seems that the certificate of the doctor had been handed up, and I rather gather that what the Clerk meant to suggest to you was "Do you wish to plead guilty to being drunk?" The charge against you was more serious than that. It was for being drunk, disorderly, and using obscene language on the charge-sheet. The charge was a more serious one?—I was not charged with using obscene language, or being disorderly either. All I was charged with was being drunk. If I had been disorderly and using obscene language no doubt there would have been a conviction.

15784. No injustice was done to you at the Court?—No, I got the greatest justice at the Court.

15785. (Earl Russell.) Did you hear Police-constable Morgan in his evidence say anything about your being drunk?—Yes, he said I was drunk. Dr. Henry did not, though.

15786. Did you hear him say anything about obscene language in his evidence?—No, I do not think he went so far as that.

15787. You say what he said about your being disorderly was that you were there for half an hour, and would not go away?—Yes, he said that at the end of the case.

(Chairman.) I suppose the certificate of the Divisional Surgeon in this case would be entered in the occurrence book.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no doubt it would.

(Chairman.) I suppose the regulations at all the stations are the same?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) At Vine Street Police Station they are written in an occurrence book. You had better get for us the occurrence book.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

15788. (Chairman.) I suppose that is what the Clerk read out. He had the doctor's certificate before him?—He examined me at midnight. I was supposed to be be charged at half-past eleven. He examined me at midnight, and he said, evidently I had been drinking, but I was not drunk. That is what the Clerk read to the Magistrate.

15789. I understand the suggestion you make is that that is not a fair certificate?—I think it is a fair certificate. I own up that I had had two pennyworth of whisky.

15790. (Earl Russell.) Within about ten minutes of the arrest, I understand?—Yes.

15791. (Chairman.) Do I understand from that you admit you were excited from drink?—No, I was not excited from drink. I was excited from the choking sensation—the way I was handled at the station by him. If I was resisting he ought to have called another constable, or two constables. I begged of him to let me go quietly.

15792. You do not admit that you had indulged excessively in drink?—No.

15793. (Earl Russell.) Did you hear the constable say anything more about disorder beyond that he had been about half an hour trying to get you away?—No.

15794. You went into the box and were sworn?—Yes.

15795. Did you tell your story the same as you have told it here?—Yes, in the same words, I believe.

15796. You mentioned that you went back to the constable to get his number?—Yes.

15797. I think, after that, Mr. Rose said he was not satisfied with the case, and discharged you.

G. Mullins.
22 Nov. 1906

Is that so?—He said he was not satisfied with the story of the constable, and he discharged me.

15798. You have never made any complaint about this before, have you?—I have never made any complaint at all. I did not want to have anything at all to do with it. I was satisfied with the way it went on.

15799. You have not written to the Commissioner?—I have written to no one at all.

15800. You were satisfied with the result?—I was satisfied with the result. I do not mind getting a punch in the mouth.

15801. (Chairman.) I do not quite understand it. You made this mistake about the identity of the constable?—I own that right up to the hilt. It was my fault for touching the constable on the shoulder.

15802. Then you take your little girl home, and you go back to the constable?—Yes, and ask for his number. So would you if you had got what I got.

15803. Did you say anything to the constable about your having made a mistake. I do not find that you said that?—I told him: "I am sorry for what I have done."

15804. You went back to the constable?—Before he started hitting me, I said, "I am sorry I made a mistake." He said, "I will make a mistake with you."

15805. You say you had apologised to him before he struck you at all?—Yes, I own I was in fault by touching the constable on the shoulder.

15806. You touched the constable on the shoulder?—Yes, like I might touched that gentleman here.

15807. I understand you made a jocular suggestion about an "ear-hole"—a suggestion of bribery, or that he was being bribed?—He was not being bribed.

15808. You meant that to be a perfectly jocular remark to another constable?—Yes.

15809. Who was the other constable?—I do not wish to say. It was only a kind of a joke. That was all.

15810. I am quite ready to believe it was a joke, but I do not see why you should not say who your friend is?—I refuse.

15811. You are friendly with the constable?—Yes, I am friends with nearly every man belonging to the Water Police, from the P.C.'s up to the Chief. We are friends.

15812. You know them well?—Yes.

15813. I understand that after you found you had made a mistake you did say to Morgan that you were sorry?—I said, "I am very sorry." He said, "I will give you sorry," and he gave me one.

15814. It was not jocular on his part?—No, it was done in about two seconds. I did not want to come here. I had no idea of coming here, and I would rather not have come here at all myself. As I told the people who came to me the next day, I did not want to go further into the matter myself. I was perfectly satisfied. I have to get my living about the streets.

15815. You went back to the police-constable in order to get his number?—Yes.

15816. Do you not think it would have been better, under the circumstances, seeing that you had used a very suggestive remark about a man you did not know, if you had let the matter rest there, notwithstanding that he had struck you?—When he struck me I got out of temper a bit, and I took my girl down home. I only did it more to get the Inspector to give him a severe reprimand, or to say something to him. I had no idea I was coming here, or would hear any more about it until I was charged.

15817. You were a little excited by drink. You had been drinking, I understand?—When?

15818. Before?—Yes, I have just told you I had twopennyworth of whisky about five minutes previously to my being locked up.

15819. Do you not think your excitement was due to the drink you had been having?—To the twopenny worth of whisky?

15820. I do not know. I only ask you what you had been doing on Sunday?—I will tell you from the time I got up, where I had been, and everything else.

15821. Very well. When did you have your dinner?—I got up at nine o'clock.

15822. Nine o'clock in the morning?—Yes. Me and my girl went out into the yard to see to the fowls, and we stopped there till 11 o'clock. At 11 o'clock I washed and went to High Mass at St George's Cathedral, came out of there, went home, and read the paper.

15823. When did you have your dinner?—At half past one. Then I read the paper till about four o'clock.

15824. Did you have anything to drink at dinner?—No.

15825. Nothing at all?—A bottle of ginger beer.

15826. What did you do in the evening?—I went from my house between four and half-past four, walked on to Westminster Bridge round on to the pier, got the express boat to Greenwich, got off at Greenwich, had a walk about Greenwich Park, had a couple of bottles of lemonade there, two glasses of cider I think there, and then came back. I left Greenwich about 25 minutes past 7, I think.

15827. Did you go home then?—I left Greenwich Pier at 25 minutes past 7, and got to Westminster Pier again about half-past eight.

15828. What did you do between half-past 8 and 11? Walked all round Victoria, went up to the right, came right round Waterloo Bridge, and then up Oakley Street, and indoors. Then I had some tea.

15829. At what time was that?—Quarter-past 10.

15830. In the evening?—Yes.

15831. Nothing but tea?—Had some tea and some cold meat and pickles.

15832. In the way of drink you took nothing but tea?—No, only tea.

15833. When did you take the whisky that we have heard of?—At three minutes to 11 at night. I had a cider previously to that in the "Earl Grey" two doors past where I live. They do not sell whisky; they only sell, cider, lemonade, and kola.

15834. Then you had some whisky?—Yes, I had twopennyworth of whisky at a house a little further down—one hundred yards further down.

15835. And that was all?—And that was all.

15836. You say that that was not sufficient to affect you in the least?—Sufficient to affect me?

15837. To make you quarrelsome?—I should not think so.

15838. I am asking you these questions because it does appear that the surgeon who saw you after 12 o'clock, I think——?—He saw me before 12 o'clock.

15839. About an hour after—said you had been drinking?—He said evidently I had been drinking. He is not telling a lie there. If I had not had whisky I might have been drinking water or coffee, or something there. He did not mention the word "intoxicating" liquor. He did not say I had been drinking intoxicating liquor. He said evidently I had been drinking, but was not drunk.

15840. We shall see the exact words that were used. The words "had been drinking" suggest to my mind that you had been taking too much. I am not saying that you did do so?—It is not likely, for I asked for my own private doctor. It is very seldom that the police divisional surgeons (mind you, it is only my opinion) give a point in another person's favour.

15841. When was it exactly you asked to see your own doctor?—I asked the Inspector whether I could see my own doctor.

15842. Was that in the charge-room?—In the cell, or at the cell, I believe, while Dr. Henry stood there. I said I should like to see Dr. Read; he is only down Hercules Road; he is my club doctor.

15843. Was that to the same Inspector you have been talking about?—Yes, but the Inspector thought, in his opinion, according to their doctor, I take it, that it was not necessary to send for my doctor. That is what it was.

15844. There was no refusal on the part of the Inspector or anybody to send for him. You do not suggest that?—No. He thought it was not necessary, as he saw the report of the Divisional Surgeon, to send for my doctor. He had the report in front of him that the doctor said I was not drunk. That put an end to it.

15845. So far as I can see, you do not complain of anything except the action of Morgan assaulting you? —That is right.

15846. First of all, after you had made a mistake and had spoken to him, you complain of that, and you also complain of his assaulting you in the charge-room?—In the charge-room.

15847. Again in the cell?—No, he never went to the cell with me.

(Chairman.) This is a document which emanates, we understand, from the witness, which is sent to us.

(Earl Russell.) That is the best information we can ascertain, but we have not had an opportunity of checking it with the witness for the reason you know.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Might I ask whether a statement has been supplied to you as emanating from this witness? Lord Russell tells us he has never seen the witness.

(Chairman.) I will hand it to you. I understand you wish to cross-examine this witness.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please.

(Earl Russell.) May I point out that this statement of George Mullins professes to be a history of the case on the best materials available.

(Chairman.) Yes, but things do not get invented. I cannot think that you, or anyone who is assisting you with regard to these matters, would invent statements. I am making no imputation against the witness. I am only stating the fact. What I was going to look at is on the second page, at the top.

(Earl Russell.) This is rather an inconvenient practice, because these are the proofs of our witnesses.

(Chairman.) The proofs of your witnesses? You are using language now that applies to actions at law and so forth. This is a statement sent to us by the complainant, I understand.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Pardon me, but you do not understand, with submission. You said that you had a statement purporting to come from the witness.

(Chairman.) I understocd that it was so.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Lord Russell tells you that it does not come from the witness at all. You do not seem to realise that this is put before you as a document emanating from the witness, whereas, in fact, he knows nothing about it, and apparently has never authorised it.

(Chairman.) I used the words "emanating from the witness" as a very general phrase; I did not mean to suggest that Mr. Mullins himself had written this out.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) But it is sent to you, surely, as purporting to be his statement.

(Chairman.) Yes, on his behalf.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) As purporting to be his statement. Now we are told that it is not his statement, and that it has not been sent on his behalf.

(Earl Russell.) May I point out that whenever documents have been handed to the Commission purporting to be witness's statements they have been in the first person, and they, I understand, have never been sent in before being checked by the witness himself. This purports to be a history of the case.

(Chairman.) If I had known that I should have asked the witness to make a written statement to Mr. Leslie before we took his evidence.

(Earl Russell.) The facts were stated as to this witness, and as to the difficulty of getting him to come forward. It has all been sent in to you.

(Chairman.) I know. Lord Russell appears to have taken, and we appear to have taken, this type-written document as being in substance what Mr. Mullins would have told Mr. Leslie if Mr. Leslie had asked him to come to the office.

(Earl Russell.) You understand we have no method of compelling witnesses to give us proofs.

(Chairman.) Nor have we.

(Earl Russell.) One, therefore, can only get the best information available.

(Chairman.) I understand Mr. Mullins is quite willing, except that he does not want his name put in the papers, to tell his story. (To the Witness.) You have been always willing to do that, I understand.

(Witness.) Yes.

(Chairman.) The only point is that Mr. Mullins has not come straight to Mr. Leslie and made a statement, but that he sent to the society, whom Lord Russell represents. That is all.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) But he did not go. That is the point. He has never been there. I do not want to interrupt, but he says he has never been there.

15848. (Chairman.) Have you never seen anybody at all in connection with this matter?—Yes.

15849. Whom have you seen?—Two gentlemen came to my firm, and then they came to my house.

15850. Who are they? Are they in Court; do you see them here?—No, I fail to recognise anybody who came to my house. They came from some society in Gower Street.

15851. Then, so far as you are concerned this type-written document has no importance at all. You have never seen it or heard of it?—I have never written a document out.

15852. Did you give a statement to the two gentlemen?—I gave a statement as to how I was served.

15853. Did they take it down?—They just jotted it down.

15854. In a book?—In a book, I believe, or on some paper or another.

(Chairman.) There seems no mystery about it, Lord Russell.

(Earl Russell.) There is no mystery at all about it. I am making no complaint. The only complaint I make is that that document should be taken as a document by which the witness is bound.

(Chairman.) I am not suggesting that he is bound by it. I have asked my questions, and he has answered them perfectly fairly. This document was handed to me by the secretary this morning, and I naturally concluded that it fairly represented what the witness was about to say. That is all.

(Earl Russsll.) May I say exactly what our view of the matter is, and, if it does not meet with the Commissioners' approval, we shall not pursue it. As to Mr. Mullins' private reason, that is a matter of no importance, and he has to judge for himself as to whether he wished to carry the matter further or not. But the misconduct on the part of the police is a matter which this Commission is investigating, and therefore we thought it right to bring this matter to the notice of the Commissioners.

(Chairman.) Getting this document at the office, and finding that there had been a case, we might have summoned Mr. Mullins, and we could have seen what was done in that case.

(Earl Russell.) All we could do was to put the matter before the Commissioners. We had no power to compel Mr. Mullins to give us a proof.

15855. (Chairman.) Then there is no allegation against anybody. I want to know how many times you were assaulted, and what was the gravity of the assault?—Only once in the police station.

15856. That was in the charge-room I understand?—Yes.

15857. Were you sitting down, or standing?—Sitting down on the form, waiting for the Inspector to come in and take the charge.

15858. Did the constable handle you roughly on the way to the station?—Yes.

15859. I do not understand that he struck you on the way to the station?—He only kept on with his hands and knee, and gave me a jobbing now and again when he thought he would.

15860. You sat on the form, and, without any provocation on your part, he struck you in the mouth?—He deliberately hit me with his left hand.

15861. Did he still seem to be angry at your observation about the "ear-hole"?—Yes.

15862. He still seemed to be very angry?—Yes.

15863. Personally vexed and hurt with you about the matter?—Yes. When you see him you will think he is one of those fellows, too. He always looks angry

15864. If he always looks angry, there is not much point in his looking angry at the time. I wanted to know whether he appeared to be angry in the charge-room in any degree?—He was. He hit me.

G. Mullins.
22 Nov. 1906.

15865. Was he excited?—Yes.

15866. In a temper?—I should think it was more temper than anything else.

15867. Did you mention the assault in the charge-room at the police station?—Yes, I mentioned it. I gave evidence on oath with regard to the matter.

15868. I understand that you mentioned it also to the Inspector when he took the charge?—Yes, I showed the Inspector.

15869. What did he say with regard to it?—He took no notice at all.

15870. Did you mention this asault in the charge-room also to the Magistrate at the police court?—I mentioned it in the charge room to the Inspector, and I mentioned it to the magistrate at the police court.

15871. What did the Magistrate say about it?—The Magistrate said there was a doubt in the case, and he did not quite believe what the constable said, and I would be discharged. He told the constable right to his face "I do not believe your story, and the prisoner will be discharged."

15872. But the Magistrate made no special observation about the assault in the charge-room?—No.

15873. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you made this observation to the constable about the "ear-hole," do you know who the people were with the constable?—Yes, they were marine store dealers, and they walked away.

15874. I suppose that was the point of your joke, that he was with marine store dealers, and you were chaffing him because you suggested he was taking a bribe from them?—Yes. I may mention that the constable told the Magistrate (I do not know whether you have it in detail) that he was with nobody, only by himself—but, according to rumours which came to my ears these marine store dealers had been and signed a statement to the police. The constable said on oath that he was with no one.

15875. When did he say that?—When he was before the Magistrate.

15876. (Chairman.) We shall have the notes of the evidence?—He told the Magistrate that he was with nobody—only by himself.

15877. According to the newspaper report the witness did say he saw Morgan talking to two marine store dealers?—That is the evidence I gave at the police court before the Magistrate. When the Magistrate asked him "Were you talking to anybody," he said "No, Sir." But I live close by there, and I might hear a lot more than what he might think. He told the Magistrate that he was not. I believe they signed some statement or other according to rumours—according to what has been told to me.

15878. The constable denied that he assaulted you at all, did he not?—He did not deny the assault. When the Magistrate asked him, after I had given my evidence, he said, "No, your Worship." Then he turned round to where the Inspector's box is and he came up and said "I deliberately deny the assault."

15879. (Mr. Dickinson.) He denied the assault?—Yes, but he would not say so when the Magistrate first asked the question. He walked toward that way. I suppose he was told to say that.

15880. I want to ask you about the assault. You say you and he were in the charge-room alone together?—When he first took me into the charge-room there were two constables.

15881. They went out?—They went out, one went one way, and one went out the other.

15882. When they went out were you sitting down?—I was sitting down on the form, and he stood over me like that, and said "I will give you one," and he gave me one that made my mouth bleed. When the Inspector came out my mouth was bleeding then.

15883. Have you any idea what made him give you that blow?—No.

15884. You were sitting quite quietly?—Yes, I was sitting quietly.

15885. You must have been in an excited condition?—I was excited going into the station. I did not say anything to him. When he hit me in the mouth I said "What do you want to hit me now for? I have done nothing to you. What is that for?" He said, "I will give you something," grinding his teeth. When the Inspector came in, he shoved me into the dock.

15886. I suppose during the whole time you were walking with him to the station you remonstrated with him?—No, I did not have a chance. He happened to be a stronger fellow than I am, and he almost lifted me along. I said, "For God's sake let me walk quietly with you."

15887. I suppose you protested to him?—I protested to him to let me go quietly. The people we met said "Why don't you let the man go quietly?"

15888. When you got to the station did you still protest?—I protested at the way he handled me.

15889. How soon after do you think did you complain to the Inspector?—Within a minute.

15890. At that moment did you complain to the Inspector?—I complained to the Inspector before I was put into the dock. I said, "Look what he's done to me; I do not know what for."

15891. Did the Inspector look at it?—He glanced over from the desk towards the dock.

15892. Was your mouth bleeding then?—Yes.

15893. Profusely at all?—Not to a great extent.

15894. Would he not have noticed it?—He could see it was bleeding; it was all cut inside.

15895. Did the Inspector say anything about it?—No, he passed no remark at all.

15896. He merely went to the desk, I suppose, and entered the charge?—Yes. Then I said to the Inspector: "I will call upon you to see me to the cell; I do not want this man to see me to the cell." He said, "All right." One independent constable opened the door, and I walked down towards the cell; the constable opened the cell door, and the Inspector stood there while I went into the cell.

15897. When the doctor examined you the Inspector was also there?—The Inspector was there—only me, the Inspector, and the doctor.

15898. Did they see your mouth?—Yes.

15899. Did they talk to you about your mouth?—I said to the Inspector when the doctor came I had been knocked about in this way. I asked for a drink of water. The doctor said, "What do you want water for?" I said "I want a drink of water." They gave me a drink of water, and I rinsed my mouth. Then I was told to walk up and down—in different ways—and count different numbers.

15900. You were asked to walk up and down?—Yes.

15901. I suppose you knew what the reason of that was?—To see if I walked steadily. The doctor passed the remark, "Have you been a soldier?" I said "No, I have never been a soldier."

15902. You were able to walk steadily?—Yes.

(Chairman.) We should like to hear what Police Constable Morgan has to say, and also Inspector Wheeler.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. There are other witnesses I shall probably have to call. I have their reports, but I have not been able to go through them. I shall also want to ask this man some questions.

(Chairman.) Yes. (To the Witness): You will have to attend again, and we will let you know the day.

(Witness.) I am losing a lot of work.

(Chairman.) We will make the loss as little as possible for you by saying we will take you again next Wednesday.

(Witness.) My business is a very peculiar business. I might start work at 8, or at 5, in the morning, and not finish until 11 or 12 at night.

(Chairman.) You, Mr. Bankes, have not Police Constable Morgan and the Inspector here?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, I am afraid not.

(Chairman.) Mr. Leslie tells me that he virtually asked that they should be here.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The position is this. Of course it would have been possible to have had them here if we had known you wanted them.

(Chairman.) I quite understand. Let them come here on Wednesday.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We will bring all the witnesses.

(Witness.) I beg your pardon, but I hear the good gentleman say he will bring all the other witnesses besides the Inspector and the constable. May I inform you that there were no other witnesses there—only the Inspector?

(Chairman.) The marine store dealers?

(Witness.) They might come, but if they do I shall very likely say some more that they will not like. If they take my advice they will keep away. G. Mullins. 22 Nov. 1906.

(Chairman.) We ask you to come here next Wednesday, and we will say not before 12 o'clock.

(Witness.) You must remember the constable in his evidence before the Magistrate said he was with nobody—only by himself—he was not talking to two marine store dealers.

(Chairman.) He appears to have said that?

(Witness.) He did say that.

(Chairman.) We will now take the case of James Baker.

JAMES BAKER, sworn.

15903. (Earl Russell.) You are an ironmonger's assistant, living at 53, Dartmoor Street, Notting Hill Gate?—Yes.

15904. On the 30th September of this year you spent the day at home, did you?—Yes.

15905. That was a Sunday?—Yes.

15906. Until 10 o'clock?—Yes.

15907. What did you do at 10 o'clock?—I went out for a walk.

15908. In what direction?—I went down High Street, Notting Hill, and turned off by the Campden Hill Road, almost into High Street, Kensington, and we returned the same route.

15909. Was anyone with you?—Yes. I met a friend when I got to the top of Holland Park Avenue at the bottom of Campden Hill.

15910. Your friend is a teetotaller?—Yes.

15911. You had some drinks on the way, did you not?—Yes.

15912. How much, and where?—I had two drops of gin in the Windsor Castle at the top of Campden Hill.

15913. How much would that be?—Two two-pennyworths? Only about two tablespoonsful, or something like that. They do not give much.

15914. (Chairman.) What time was that?—It had gone half-past 10 then.

15915. Half-past 10 in the evening?—Yes, half-past 10, or twenty minutes to 11, I could not say to a minute or two.

15916. (Earl Russell.) When you left the public-house you went homewards towards your own house?—Yes.

15917. When you had gone on for a few minutes did you stop to light your pipe?—Yes.

15918. What happened then?—A constable came up, tapped me on the shoulder, and said, "Your name and address, old cock." I said, "What for?" He said, "Never mind what for, I want your name and address, or else you will have to come to the station with me." I said, "If you require my name and address I will go to the station and give it to the officials if it is necessary." He pulled off his gloves, stuck them in his belt, and said "Come on." I went with him. I never shouted, or resisted going at all.

15919. Did you go with him without his laying hands on you, or did he put a hand on you?—He put a hand on me.

15920. He took you into custody?—Yes.

15921. Then you went quietly with him?—Yes.

15922. Was that all that had passed—that he asked your name and address?—That is all that passed.

15923. He did not tell you what for?—No, he would not tell me what for.

15924. Did he not tell you something you had done which you should not have done?—No.

15925. He simply took you to the station?—Yes.

15926.—What did your friend do or say?—He never said anything. He followed down to the station.

15927. Did you have any conversation with the constable on the way to the station?—No, not a word. He squeezed my arm, and said, "Other people can be as funny as what you are."

15928. Had you done anything?—No, I had not been funny at all. J. Baker.

15929. You know now the number of the constable was 312F. Is that so?—Quite right.

15930. Do you know his name?—No.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) William Pittuck.

15931. (Earl Russell.) By the way, did you know this constable? Had you ever seen him before?—I might have known him by sight, but I never passed the time of day with him.

(Chairman.) Have you the charge sheet there?

(Mr Eldon Bankes.) Yes (handing).

15932. (Earl Russell.) When you got inside the station you were taken to the charge room?—Yes, and put in the dock, where the inspector was sitting at the desk.

15933. That is in the charge room Were you taken there without any delay?—Yes, straight in; he shoved me right in.

15934. Who were in the charge room besides the constable and you?—The inspector was there.

15935. Taking the charges?—Yes.

15936. Anybody else?—There was nobody there in particular waiting about. I think a constable went backwards and forwards. He might have gone through the room, but he did not stay where we were.

15937. He was not attending to your business?—No.

15938. Did the constable tell the inspector why he had brought you there?—Yes.

15939. That was in your presence and in your hearing?—Yes.

15940. What did he say?—He told the inspector I was charged with being drunk and disorderly.

15941. Did he tell him what you had been doing that was disorderly?—I asked him what he meant by "disorderly." The inspector said, "I suppose you have been shouting, or something of that."

15942. The inspector said that?—Yes.

15943. Did you hear the constable say you had been shouting?—He simply said I was drunk and disorderly.

15944. You did not hear him say anything about what the disorder was?—No.

15945. Did you say anything to the inspector?—Yes, I said to the inspector, "Are you going to take a charge like that?" His remark was, "The constable charges you with being drunk and disorderly."

15946. Did you tell him anything about what the constable had said to you in the street?—Yes. I said, "He brought me here with the intention of my giving my name and address."

15947. What did the inspector say to that?—He said, "Well, he charges you with being drunk and disorderly." That was all I could get out of him. I said to the constable, "Why do you not speak the truth?" He would not answer me.

15948. He said nothing in answer to that?—No.

15949. Did the inspector read over the charge to you after he had entered it?—I looked over his shoulder, and I could see what was on the paper. I was close to him, just as he might be writing in front of me here.

15950. Did he read it over to you after he had

J. Baker.
22 Nov. 1906.

written it?—Yes, he did read it out. I said, "I am not drunk, and I am not disorderly."

15951. You said that to him when he read it over to you?—Yes.

15952. Did he take any note of that?—He never took a bit of note. He said, "Your bail will be here presently; you will not be here long."

15953. Did he make any note on the charge sheet of what you said?—I cannot say. It was on the bail paper that I had.

15954. You did not see him make any note?—No.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No entry would be made in the charge sheet.

(Chairman.) Of anything said by the defendant.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That would not be the proper place.

15955. (Earl Russell.) Then you were taken out of the dock to the cell?—Yes.

15956. Had you realised that you were going to be locked up?—No, I had no idea he was going to put me in the cell.

15957. What did you do?—I kept knocking at the door, but I could not make anybody hear. In a few minutes he came and said, "Your bail is here." Then I was brought out into the charge room. When I knew the charge I said, "I will see a doctor before I go." The inspector said, "You can see one outside." I said, "I will have one fetched here." They put me back in the cell again.

15958. Although your bail was there you said that?—Yes. My bail was there then.

15959. Who was your bail?—The landlord where I live.

15960. Did you give them the name of any doctor, or did you ask for the police doctor?—I gave them the name of Dr. Barrett, of Bedford Gardens, a doctor I had seen on the same evening.

15961. Did anything happen about him? Did you get any answer to your message?—They came back and said Dr. Barrett was out on a case.

15962. Who told you that?—Another constable came to the cell door and said it through the hole in the door.

15963. Whom did you ask for then?—I said, "I will see Dr. Bagram."

15964. Of Pembridge Gardens?—Yes.

15965. Did he come and see you?—No.

15966. Do you know the name of the constable or the number of the constable that went for him?—139F, I think it was. I could only see him through the grating of the cell door.

15967. He did not come either?—No.

15968. Did the Divisional Surgeon come and see you?—I might mention that they brought the Divisional Surgeon before the constable came back with the message to say that Dr. Barrett could not attend.

15969. Before you got the message about the first of your private doctors they brought the Divisional Surgeon?—Yes.

15970. Did you see him?—Yes. They brought me up into the charge-room again.

15971. You wrote your name and address on a piece of paper?—Yes.

15972. Then the Divisional Surgeon examined you, did he? No. He went to get hold of my wrist, and I said, "I do not want to see you, Mr. Jackson; I will wait till my own private doctor comes."

15973. Did you know the Divisional Surgeon before?—I have known him for years by sight; I have lived round the neighbourhood for years.

15974. Did he examine you at all, or did he not examine you then?—No, he did not do any more. He took the paper to the Inspector.

15975. He did not examine you until after you had got a message back from Dr. Bagram?—The Divisional Surgeon never examined me at all.

15976. That was all that happened?—That was all that happened.

15977. He took hold of your wrist to feel your pulse?—Yes.

15978. Then you said, "I do not want to see you"?—He just got hold of me, and I pulled my hand away. I said, "I will wait for my private doctor to come; I do not want to see you, Dr. Jackson."

15979. (Chairman.) You did speak to the Divisional Surgeon?—Yes. I wrote my name and address on a piece of paper and handed it to him.

15980. Did you speak to him?—Yes.

15981. What did you say to him?—I told him I was not drunk.

15982. Therefore he had had an opportunity of hearing your voice?—Yes. I told him the same as I told the Inspector—"I only came here to give my name and address."

15983. (Earl Russell.) How long did you see the Divisional Surgeon altogether?—I suppose about five or six minutes then.

15984. You were about five or six minutes in the charge-room with him?—Yes. He stood talking to the Inspector when I went out about one or two o'clock in the morning.

15985. Did you write down your name and address at the request of the Divisional Surgeon?—Yes. He brought a piece of blue paper, and I wrote it with pen and ink.

15986. He asked you to?—Yes.

15987 Did you hear anything about what the Divisional Surgeon thought of you?—When I was going home I asked Dr. Jackson what paper he had made out, and if he had made out any paper to certify that I was not drunk. He said, "The Inspector has got the particulars." The Inspector said, "Dr. Jackson certifies that you are recovering from drink."

15988. During the previous twenty-four hours how much drink had you had?—I had had a drop of beer on Saturday night for supper.

15989. That was more than twenty-four hours before?—Yes.

15990. During the Sunday how much did you have?—Not a drop.

15991. Except these two two-pennyworths of gin you have told us about?—That is all.

15992. That is all you had had all day?—Yes.

15993. You had had nothing whatever before?—Nothing whatever before.

15994. When you were told what the Divisional Surgeon said, what did you say?—I do not know that I made any remark at all.

15995. Did you say anything about another doctor?—Yes, I said I would have Dr. Lee. The policeman said, "If you want to go out to-night, you had better go out now."

15996 Because your bail was waiting?—Yes, he was waiting all the time.

15997. You understood that if you were not bailed then you might have to wait till next morning?—Yes.

15998. You let yourself be bailed, and you went out?—Yes. I should have gone up to Dr. Bagram then, but it was getting on for one o'clock in the morning. He would not come because they gave the wrong name there.

15999. That you found afterwards?—Yes, I went to see Dr. Bagram the next morning to know why he did not attend me, because he has known me for years, and has attended me and the children.

16000. The reason was he did not know it was you?—He did not know it was me. They gave the wrong name.

16001. You had to attend the court on Monday morning, the 1st October?—Yes.

16002. You engaged a solicitor to defend you?—Yes.

16003. You heard the constable 312 F give evidence?—Yes.

16004. What did he say?—He said on the previous evening, about 11.30, he was on duty, and he said he saw me make water up against a dead wall, or, he said, in the road. I had made water, but I had done, and I had filled my pipe and was lighting up when he came up. He was over one hundred yards away when I was filling my pipe, and I never attempted to go away or anything.

16005. I want to know what he said?—He said, "Your name and address, old cock."

16006-7. I want to know what he said in giving evidence at the police-court?—He said I was making water, and he wanted my name and address, and, as I refused, he took me to the station.

16008. Did he say anything about your being drunk?—Not a word on the road.

16009. No. In giving evidence at the police-court on Monday did he say anything about your being drunk?—He swore I was drunk.

16010. I am asking you what he said at the police-court?—That is what he did say. He charged me with being drunk and disorderly.

16011. Did he say anything about your being disorderly, or what sort of disorder it was, when he gave evidence?—Yes.

16012. What did he say?—He said I shouted.

16013. Anything else?—He said I was insulting ladies.

16014. Did he say how?—Insulting ladies by my conduct, he said

16015. Were there any ladies about in the road?—No, not a soul about, and no gentlemen either. There is a great high wall against the waterworks about 10ft. high.

16016. P.C. 139 F also went into the witness-box?—Yes.

16017. He was the man who went for your doctor?—Yes.

16018. What did he say?—He said he went to Dr. Barrett, and he came back because he was out on a case. He also went to Dr. Bagram.

16019. (Earl Russell.) You were telling us when we adjourned about the evidence which had been given by P.C. 312 F. I was asking you about P.C. 139 F, whom you sent for a doctor. He gave evidence at the police court?—Yes.

16020. What did he say about the doctor you had sent for?—He said he went for Dr. Barrett, and Dr. Barrett was out on a case and could not attend, and when he came back he went for Dr. Bagram, and Dr. Bagram did not come simply because the policeman gave the wrong name.

16021. Did you hear him say he had given the wrong name? I am asking what you heard P.C. 139 F say?—He said the doctor would not come, and then the solicitor said: "Simply because you gave the wrong name." He asked him what name he gave, and he said: "I gave the name of Barker."

16022. Did you give evidence on oath?—Yes.

16023. You stated what you have told us to-day?—Yes.

16024. Your friend Samuel Porter, who was with you, also gave evidence?—Yes.

16025. And Mr. Garrett the Magistrate said there was no evidence that you were drunk and disorderly, and discharged you?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had you not better ask him what the Magistrate said?

16026. (Earl Russell.) What did you hear Mr. Garrett say when he dismissed the charge?—I heard him say that there was not sufficient evidence to show that I was drunk or disorderly, and therefore he dismissed the case, but he told my solicitor that he believed the man was innocent.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If convenient to the Commission, I could ask this witness a few questions now, because I do not want to put him to the inconvenience of coming here again.

(Chairman.) Very well.

16027. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have a very few questions to ask you. It was about 11.15, was it, when the constable came up to you?—Yes.

16028. On the Sunday night?—Yes.

16029. You had been having something to drink, had you not, in the "Windsor Castle" public-house?—Yes.

16030. Is that in the Campden Hill Road?—That is in the Campden Hill Road.

16031. Did you remain there till closing time?—Yes.

16032. What time was it that you had gone into that public-house?—It was after half-past ten. It must have been twenty-five or twenty minutes to eleven.

16033. Are you in the habit of drinking spirits?—No; I have a drop occasionally, but very seldom. I am almost a teetotaller, if it comes to that.

16034. It is really very seldom that you touch spirits at all?—I cannot afford it, if it comes to that.

16035. I am not asking you the reason, but the fact is it is very seldom you touch spirits?—Very seldom.

16036. And on this particular occasion you had had two two-pennyworths of gin within twenty minutes or so?—Yes.

16037. Then you came out into the open air?—Yes.

16038. Did you walk down the Campden Hill Road into Kensington Place?—Yes, on my way home.

16039. Did you go to make water against the blank wall which is on one side of Kensington Place?—Yes.

16040. Was that within a few minutes of your coming out of the public-house?—Yes, it was. I met two friends outside the public-house, and I stopped and had a talk with them. It was about 11.15.

16041. It was not very many minutes after you came out of the public-house?—No, about fifteen minutes.

16042. The place where you went to make water is in the public street, is it not?—Yes.

16043. And did the constable come to you while you were standing up against the dead wall?—I had not moved very far. I just moved away, and I filled my pipe, and I was lighting it when he came up.

16044. When the constable came up was the first thing he said that you ought to know better, as people were standing on the opposite side of the road, or at the opposite corner?—No, he never passed such a remark.

16045. And did you say to him, "What harm have I done?"—No. The first words I said were "What for" when he asked me for my name and address.

16046. I suggest to you that this took place before he asked you for your name and address, that he told you you ought to know better, and that then you said, "What harm have I done?"—No.

16047. And then he asked you for your name and address?—He came straight across the road to me.

16048. I quite understand the difference between you. You say the first thing he asked you for was your name and address?—Yes.

16049. It is a fact, is it not, that you refused to give it to him?—Yes.

16050. And then did he say you would have to go to the station?—Yes.

16051. He gave you the opportunity of giving him your name and address if you wished to do it?—Yes.

16052. Before he said that you must go to the station, but after you had refused to give him your name and address did you begin shouting out words to this effect: "My name and address—my name and address"?—No.

16053. Did the constable coming up and speaking to you make you feel excited?—No, not at all. He was coming across the road. I thought it might have been a constable who knew me.

16054. You say you did not shout out?—No, I never spoke any louder than I am speaking now.

16055. Is it not the fact that the result of your shouting out about your name and address was that several people collected?—No, there was not a soul about.

16056. Then he said you must go to the station?—Yes.

16057. And you and he went together to the station?—I said: "Very well, I will go to the station and give my name and address if required."

16058. You went quite quietly?—Oh, yes.

16059. And you and he went together?—Yes.

J. Baker.
22 Nov. 1906.

16060. When you got to the station were you taken into the charge room?—Yes.

16061. Was the man on duty there Inspector Mason?—Yes; I did not know his name.

16062. Let us see how far you agree as to what happened in the charge room. Inspector Mason was in the charge room when you got there, was he not?—Yes.

16063. And there was only one other officer in the room?—That is all I noticed. I think he went through the room and back again. I do not think he was standing particularly at the desk.

16064. No, but he was in the room some portion of the time you were there?—Yes.

16065. When you got into the room did Pittuck tell you to stand in the dock?—He did not ask me. He shoved me in.

16066. You have never made any complaint up to now of any undue violence?—No.

16067. Then did the Inspector ask Pittuck what the charge was?—Yes.

16068. And did Pittuck say drunk and disorderly in Kensington Place?—Yes.

16069. And then did the Inspector turn to Pittuck and ask him what you had been doing?—Not that I am aware of. I did not hear it anyhow.

16070. Did the constable then tell the Inspector he found you making water by the dead wall under a lamp, and that young women were about?—No, I did not hear him say that.

16071. And that he crossed the road to ask you your name for the purpose of reporting you for a summons, and that you had refused to give your name and began shouting and creating a disturbance, and that he had been obliged to bring you to the station?—No, I did not hear him say that at all.

16072. Just see if you remember this. When the constable said that to the Inspector did not the Inspector turn to you and ask you what you had got to say about it?—Yes, he asked me what I had got to say.

16073. And did you say "I know I was making water against the wall, but I did not see any women about."—Yes.

16074. You told him that?—Yes, and I also said that I came there to give my name and address.

16075. And did you also say that when the policeman asked you for your name and address you refused to give it, because you did not consider that you were doing any harm?—No, because———

16076. Is that what you told the Inspector?—No, I told him I refused my name and address.

16077. And did you say it was because you did not think you were doing any harm?—No, I did not say that at all.

16078. Why did you refuse your name and address?—Because the constable would not say what he wanted it for.

16079. Now I will go on with what took place between you and the Inspector. After you said that did the Inspector draw your attention to the fact that the policeman had said you were drunk?—Yes.

16080. And did the Inspector tell you that he was of the same opinion too?—No.

16081. But did he say that he would send for the Divisional Surgeon to see you before he took the charge?—No.

16082. Did he not say that?—No, he had already taken the charge.

16083. Had he?—Yes, he had written it.

16084. But at any rate before you were taken out of the dock did he ask you if you would like to see the Divisional Surgeon?—Yes.

16085. That was before you were taken out of the dock in the charge room?—Yes.

16086. So that before you were taken to the cells or anywhere he offered you to see the Divisional Surgeon?—Yes.

16087. And you refused to see him?—Yes, simply because I never thought they were going to keep me in the station.

16088. I am not asking you what the reason is, but I am asking you the fact. I suggest to you (I am not quite sure about this), that it was not until after you had refused to see the surgeon that he entered the charge in the book?—He had already entered the charge.

16089. I am not quite sure about that?—I am quite sure about that because I saw it in writing.

16090. After you had refused to see the surgeon, or said you did not want to see him you were then taken down to the cells by the Inspector himself?—No, by a policeman.

16091. Did not the Inspector come with you?—No.

16092. Did the Inspector tell you that you could be liberated on bail if you knew anybody who would undertake to see you home?—Yes, he told me that beforehand. When I came through the charge room he said "Your bail will be here in a few minutes"?—That was before I went to the cells.

16093. Did you give the name of your landlord?—Yes.

16094. Your landlord came to the station, did he not, soon after 12 o'clock?—Yes, it was rather before 12.

16095. And when he came you refused to be bailed out?—Yes, because I had not seen a doctor.

16096. You said you would not be bailed out?—I did not exactly refuse to be bailed out. I wanted to see a doctor before I went.

16097. Then the doctor was sent for. You do not complain that the first doctor was not sent for as quickly as possible?—Yes.

16098. You do complain?—It was some time before he came back to say that Dr. Barrett was out.

16099. You do not suggest that he did not come quickly to see whether he was there?—I believe he went for Dr. Jackson first.

16100. Do you know that?—I was fetched out of the cell and brought into the charge room and Dr. Jackson was there. A few minutes after I spoke about sending for my private doctor.

16101. With regard to the second doctor, the constable gave your name as Barker instead of Baker?—Yes.

16102. With that exception do you make any complaint about what he did?—Yes.

16103. What complaint do you make?—They told the doctor they did not know how he would go on for his fees, and they said, "We are not responsible," and I had already told them that if they went to Dr. Bragham the fees would be all right as he knew me well.

16104. You complained that the police constable told the doctor that the police officials would not be responsible for his fees?—Yes, and the way he spoke to the doctor—"That there was a drunken man down in the cells, and the man was locked up for being drunk, and he wants you to come and see him; I do not know how you will go on for your fees. We are not responsible." Of course the doctor would not come. He might be fetched out by anybody and never get his money.

16105. Is the doctor coming here?—I could not say.

16106. (Chairman.) What is the doctor's name and address?—Dr. Bagram, Pembridge Gardens, Notting Hill Gate.

16107. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) When these doctors did not come did not the Inspector say that you had much better see the Divisional Surgean?—No, they brought me up to the Divisional Surgeon a few minutes after I said I would have Dr. Barrett, and I wrote my name and address, and when Dr. Jackson caught hold of my wrist I said I did not want to see him, I wanted to see my own doctor.

16108. But when your doctor came did not the Inspector suggest that it would be better for you to see the Divisional Surgeon?—My doctor did not come at all.

16109. Did not the Inspector suggest it would be better for you to see the Divisional Surgeon?—No, he did not suggest anything.

16110. Did not he say "If you want a private doctor the best thing for you to do is to see the Divisional Surgeon first and after you get out to go and see any private doctor you like"?—No.

16111. (Chairman.) When Dr. Jackson, the Divisional Surgeon, had come to the police station, did not the Inspector say you had better see him or you had better let him examine you?—I do not know about the Inspector. A policeman came and took me out of the cell to the charge room and Dr. Jackson was there.

16112. Was nothing said by the constable or by the Inspector to the effect that you had better see the Divisional Surgeon?—No, they said the doctor is here, and I said he is not my private doctor. I said I did not want to see Dr. Jackson.

16113. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had you had anything to drink that evening before the two two-pennyworths of gin?—Nothing whatever.

16114. Had you had anything to eat?—Yes, I had had my tea, and I had had my supper.

16115. What time had you had your supper?—I suppose it was about half-past nine.

16116. Do you remember?—Just about half-past nine.

16117. Did you have supper at home?—Yes.

16118. Did you have anything to drink with your supper?—No.

16119. You really mean nothing at all?—Nothing whatever.

16120. No liquid of any sort?—No.

16121. Do you keep any beer in your house?—Oh, no.

16122. (Chairman.) I think you said in answer to Lord Russell that you had a friend with you when you went out?—Not when I went out. I met him soon after I got out of doors.

16123. When you left your house after supper where did you go to?—I simply went for a stroll down the High Street. The Campden Hill runs out of the High Street, and I strolled up the hill.

16124. That would be about ten o'clock, because you say you had supper about 9.30, and you had nothing to drink with it. Then I suggest you had about half an hour for your supper?—Yes, it was about that time.

16125. Then you went for a stroll at ten o'clock?—Yes.

16126. Then you were arrested soon after eleven?—Yes.

16127. How long after eleven?—About 11.15.

16128. What were you doing between 10.30 and a quarter-past eleven?—I had been over Campden Hill Road for a walk. It had turned half-past ten when I went into the "Windsor Castle."

16129. Then between the time you started on this walk and the time you went into the "Windsor Castle" you had been in no public-house or any other house and had nothing to drink till you went to the "Windsor Castle"?—Quite right.

16130. Had you had a friend of yours with you in the "Windsor Castle"?—Yes.

16131. What was his name?—Samuel Porter.

16132. Is he going to be called?

(Earl Russell.) Yes.

16133. (Chairman.) Did Samuel Porter have anything to drink?—Yes.

16134. What did he take?—He took two glasses of ginger beer.

16135. Did you and he go out together?—Yes.

16136. And did you walk away together?—Yes.

16137. Towards Kensington Place?—Yes.

16138. Was he with you at the time you retired against the wall?—Yes, he stood by the side of me.

16139. Did you meet any other friends besides Porter?—Yes, I saw two friends just as I came out of the "Windsor Castle."

16140. Were they going into the "Windsor Castle," or had they been in there?—They had been in there, and I just had a conversation with them, and wished them good-night.

16141. And Porter was with you at the time you had the conversation with the two?—Yes.

16142. Who were the other two friends?—One's name is Webb and the other's Keen.

16143. Are they young men like yourself?—One is, I think, a little over 40, and the other one is 35. They are both middle-aged men, you may say.

16144. You parted from them?—Yes.

16145. And then you went towards Kensington Place?—Yes.

16146. Porter being still with you?—Yes.

16147. Where did Porter stand? You had been lighting your pipe, you told us?—Yes.

16148. Before you went to make water, or after?—After.

16149. Then did Porter wait for you while you went to make water against this wall?—Yes, he stood by the side of me, and I believe he was lighting his pipe at the same time, but I am not sure.

16150. When you had finished you filled your pipe and lighted it?—Yes.

16151. Had you completely lighted it before the constable spoke to you?—I struck a match, and had got it up like this (describing).

16152. Then it was at that moment that the police constable spoke to you?—Yes, when I was filling my pipe I saw the police constable coming up about 100 yards away, and he came right across the road to me.

16153. There was nothing in the police constable walking as long as he was on the pavement, but you saw him suddenly come across the road when he saw you?—Yes.

16154. Did he appear to be coming across the road with the view of speaking to you?—Yes.

16155. He made straight for you?—Yes, he made straight across the road. I know a good many constables round there by sight, and I thought it was perhaps someone who knew me.

16156. So the mere fact of his crossing the road did not excite your attention at all?—Not at all.

16157. Not as being anything unusual?—No.

16158. The first thing he appears to have said to you was to ask for your name and address?—Yes, he put his hand on my shoulder and said, "Your name and address, old cock."

16159. You saw then that you did not know him?—I saw then that I did not know him.

16160. Why did you not give your name and address?—I did not think it was necessary. I said, "What for?" and he said, "Never mind what for."

16161. Did it not occur to you at the time that it was because you had been making water there?—I dare say it might have been that.

16162. But did it occur to you at the time?—I did not think I had done anything that he should want my name and address for, late at night like that and no one about, and against a dead wall.

16163. That is a matter of opinion. My question to you was this, did it not occur to you when he crossed the road and asked you for your name and address that it was because you had been making water?—I felt that that was what it was.

16164. Then the position was this. You say you were sober, you had a friend with you, and the only thing you had done was to make water against this wall?—Yes.

16165. And the constable asked you for your name and address?—Yes.

16165. Why did you not give it to him?—Because I said, "What for."

16167. But you appear from what you have just told me to have known what for?—I asked him, "What for," and he ought to have told me.

16168. I will not discuss that question with you, but you have now told me that when he asked you for your name and address you thought it was because you had been making water against the wall?—Yes, that is what I did think.

J. Baker.
22 Nov. 1906.

16169. Then why did you ask him, "What for"?—Because I do not see why I should give a constable my name and address when he came and put his hand on my shoulder and said, "Your name and address, old cock—" That is not the proper way to address a man in the street.

16170. I dare say we shall hear whether he agrees with your statement that this is what he did say. It is not a polite or courteous way of addressing you, but it does not appear particularly offensive. It is rather a jocular way of asking?—It did not offend me if you come to that.

16171. You would have preferred him to have said "old man" or "old fellow," or something like that, which would have been more courteous?—Yes.

16172. Apart from the use of the words "old cock," you do not object to anything he said?—No.

16173. And you tell me you thought you had done wrong in making water against this wall?—Yes, and I would rather have given my name and address at the station, which I told him.

16174. You would rather walk in public by the side of a police-constable to the station and give your name and address there than give it right off?—Yes, because I thought I could state the case to the Inspector. If he took my name and address I do not know what rigmarole he might make up and take to the station. He might say I had had my trousers down or something of that kind. You never know what they might say.

16175. But you had got a friend with you?—Yes, I had a friend with me.

16176. How were you better off when you turned round refusing to give your name and address, and you said, "What for?" Supposing he had said, "What for?" how were you better off as far as regards giving your name and address is concerned?—I do not know that I was better off. I would have given it willingly at the station.

16177. Supposing the constable had said to you, "For indecency in a public place," or suppose he had stated specifically, "You are making water here against this wall," should you have given your name and address then?—I might have done. I cannot say for certain. I would rather have given it to the Inspector at the station.

16178. Then when you went to the station you pretty well knew that the police-constable was going to mention the fact that you had been making water against this wall?—That is what I thought—that he was going to take me in to the Inspector to give my name and address.

16179. And he did not say a word about drunkenness to you, as I understand?—Not a word.

16180. You had no idea you were going to be charged with being drunk?—No, no idea whatever.

16181. During the conversation you had with the police-constable were you looking him in the face?—Yes.

16182. He had a full opportunity of looking at you?—Oh, yes.

16183. Was it light enough for him to see your eyes, for instance, and your face?—Yes, there was a lamp on the opposite side of the road.

16184. He could see you nearly as well as I can see you now?—Oh, yes.

16185. Are you quite certain that you did not shout at all?—I am.

16186. Quite certain?—I never spoke any louder than I am talking here at the present time. I talked to him as loud as I talk to anyone. I merely said, "My name and address; what for?" I did not shout. I was not excited.

16187. Did Porter join in the conversation?—No, he never said a word.

16188. Did that strike you as rather odd?—He is a country lad.

16189. Porter is a country lad?—Yes; and I suppose that he was frightened at seeing a police-constable wanting me to go to the station. It was all done in a few minutes.

16190. Did Porter come with you?—He followed to the station, but he did not come in the station.

16191. Nobody stopped him from coming into the station?—No, it is no use anyone coming to the station.

16192. Why do you say that?—Because I have heard of so many cases. If he had come to the station they would have told him that all he had to say he had better say at the Hammersmith Police Court on Monday. They won't hear what anybody has to say in the station.

16193. Then Porter was not stopped from entering the charge room and the station with you?—No, he never attempted to enter the station. When he saw I was taken inside he went back, I suppose. I never looked back to see.

16194. You did not think it was odd that you were deserted, so to speak, by him?—Oh, no, not at all.

16195. Supposing Porter had gone with you, would it not have been a very convenient thing for you to have been able to turn to him and say, "Now, you go and fetch my doctor"?—Yes.

16196. Then you would not be dependent on the police at all?—Yes, I could think of that after, but I was taken aback for the moment, and I did not know what to do. I did not know they were going to keep me inside, and put me in a cell, and search me as though I was a rogue. I thought they would have kept me in the waiting-room till the bail came.

16197. You might have known that before they asked you for bail you would be charged with some offence. You must have known that. You knew you were under arrest?—Supposing I am being taken to the station, I could not turn round and sing out to Porter to come in. I never thought of it at the time.

16198. That, I think, is very likely. You say so, and I see no reason to disbelieve it at all, but I want to know clearly whether there was the slightest reason, as far as you could see, why Porter should not have accompanied you into the charge room. Supposing Porter had not been a country lad, but he had been a man who knew London well?—If he had been a man who knew London well I daresay he might have had more cheek in him to come to the station.

16199. Is that the general idea that it requires cheek on the part of a man's friend to go into the police station with him?—He is only a lad.

16200. Never mind Porter for the moment. Is that the general opinion among you and your friends in this part of London?—It is. If I saw a man locked up I should not attempt to go in the station.

16201. I daresay not if you knew nothing about him, but supposing, for instance, Porter had been the man who was arrested. You have said he is a country lad, and therefore not so experienced as yourself. If he had been arrested, as you thought, simply for that small offence of making water against a wall, and he was taken up by a police-constable, would you not have gone with him?—I should have gone to the station then to hear if they would hear anything I had to say. I should, myself.

16202. You would want to know what was going to be done with him?—Yes; but I should not expect a lad like this to come in.

16203. That is all right, as far as this particular case is concerned. You do not suggest for a single moment that there was anything wrong about his going away, and you were not surprised at it?—Not at all.

16204. There was nothing to prevent him from coming if he liked?—There was no one who stopped him from coming in.

16205. When you heard you were charged with being drunk and disorderly, and not with having been guilty of this act of indecency—because it is an open question whether you were right or wrong in doing it, and whether it was an offence against public order—and it was open to you, as a matter of defence, and you went to the station under the impression that that was what was in the policeman's mind?—Yes.

16206. And you knew it was with regard to that that the charge was being made against you?—Yes.

16207. When you heard you were being charged with being drunk and disorderly you were surprised?—Yes, I was surprised.

16208. Did you express your surprise?—Yes.

16209. To whom?—To the Inspector.

16210. I do not think you told us that in chief. You said you were surprised?—I felt surprised.

16211. What were the exact words you used to the Inspector?—I said, "Mr. Inspector, are you going to take a charge like that?"

16212. That is indirectly an expression of surprise. Then you went on about the doctor and so on?—Yes.

16213. Why did you not go to a doctor after you got out?—I did not want to trouble a doctor at that time of night.

16214. But it was rather a serious thing for you. You were in a respectable position; you are an ironmonger's assistant, and it is rather a serious thing for you to be charged with being drunk and disorderly?—It was a serious charge.

16215. As we know, the magistrate has found you were not drunk and you were not disorderly, but why on earth did you not, feeling the seriousness of the charge, go to some doctor when you came out at 1 o'clock? It is a matter of business, and doctors are quite used to being called on at that time of night. It is simply a matter of money. There is a question of the fee, but it was worth your while if it was such a serious charge to pay the fee?—But when it is getting on to 1 o'clock in the morning you hardly like to go and knock a doctor up. I should have gone to Dr. Bagram, but the constable came back and said that he refused to come. He never told me he had given my wrong name.

16216. I quite follow that. I should probably feel very angry with my own doctor if that was the answer I got under those circumstances?—As Dr. Bagram said he would not come I went then to Dr. Barrett, and he was still out on that case. He was out pretty nearly all night on the case.

16217. You did go to Dr. Barrett?—I went to Dr. Barrett and blew up the tube.

16218. About what time did you get to Dr. Barrett's?—It would be past 1 o'clock then.

16219. And he was still out.?—Yes.

16220. Did you know any other doctor in the neighbourhood?—Yes, I knew Dr. Lee, in Holland Park Avenue.

16221. Why did you not go to him?—At that time of night I did not want to trouble him.

16222. I only want to know what you say. You won your case, so that it does not matter, but I wanted to see what your general attitude towards the matter was?—That was it.

16223. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you were taken up you say that you thought you were going to the police station to give your name and address?—Yes.

16224. When you got to the police station did you say anything about that?—I told the Inspector that was the reason; that the constable had told me I had to come there for my name and address.

16225. You told the Inspector the reason you were coming to the station was to give your name and address?—Yes.

16226. Did he say anything to that?—No, he said, "This constable charges you with being drunk and disorderly." That is all the remark he passed.

J. Baker.

22 Nov. 1906.

16227. I took down, when you were giving evidence, this—I may be wrong, but you will tell me if I am wrong—"I gave the name of Dr. Barrett, who I had seen the same evening"?—Yes.

16228. Where had you seen him?—I went there for some medicine for the child he was attending.

16229. You did not go there for your own health?—No, for the child. He had been to see the child, and I had to go back to the surgery with him to get the medicine for the child.

16230. You were quite well yourself at the time?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) I had a certificate from this doctor as to Mr. Baker's condition at 9 p.m., but it seemed to me not material as to his condition at 11, so I did not put it in.

(Chairman.) No. Mr. Bankes did not suggest he was drunk at 9 o'clock.

16231. (Mr. Dickinson.) What was the reason in your mind that made you object to see the divisional surgeon?—For one thing, Dr. Jackson has not got a very good name round our neighbourhood. That is one thing. From what I have heard—I have never been in front of him myself, but I have read cases in the paper, and it is a well-known thing that divisional surgeons generally certify the man is drunk or recovering from drink, and I thought it best to see my own private doctor.

16232. (Chairman.) Have you heard many people make that sort of suggestion that the words "Not drunk, but has been drinking or recovering from drink," is the certificate always given by divisional surgeons?—No, but I have seen cases in the papers, and I have heard that that is generally the usual thing.

16233. (Mr. Dickinson.) You have never been in a police court before?—No, and never inside a police station before.

16235. (Chairman.) Rightly or wrongly, you suspected Dr. Jackson—suspected him, I mean, in this sense, that you did not think he would give a real and truthful account of your condition. Is that what you mean?—Yes, because I could see that they were trying to make a case against me. The Inspector knew perfectly well I was not drunk. I was as sober as I am now. I should like to mention, gentlemen, that it is not because I am prejudiced against the police that I have brought this case before you, because I am very friendly with the police, and also that I would assist them at any time if it came in my way, but this particular policeman bringing a false charge like that against me, I consider he ought to be punished, so as to check him from locking innocent people up and bringing unjust charges against them.

16236. Have you written to the Commissioner of Police?—No.

16237. You have contented yourself with coming here?—Yes.

Samuel Porter, sworn.

16238. (Earl Russell.) You live at 19, Nelson Road, West Kensington?—Yes.

16239. Your trade is that of a milkman?—Yes.

16240. On this Sunday night, the 30th September, you joined your friend James Baker for a walk?—Yes.

16241. Was it close to his house that you joined him?—About 200 yards I should say.

16242. At about what o'clock was it?—It would be about 10 o'clock.

16243. And then you walked along the Campden Hill Road?—Yes.

16244. You walked together till about when before you went into the public-house?—It would be about half-past 10 or 25 minutes to 11.

S. Porter

16245. At that time you went into the "Windsor Castle" public-house?—Yes.

16246. Are you a teetotaller yourself?—Yes.

16247. But you went into the "Windsor Castle" with him?—Yes.

16248. What did you drink there?—Two half-pints of ginger beer.

16249. What did he drink?—Two twopennyworths of gin.

S. Porter.
22 Nov. 1906.

16250. You stayed in there, we have heard, till closing time. Is that right?—Yes.

16251. When you came out with him you walked along to where this dead wall is?—Yes.

16252. About how far is that from the public-house?—About three minutes' walk.

16253. He made water against this wall as we have heard?—Yes.

16254. And you were still talking to him?—Yes.

16255. Is there any notice up on the wall or anything of that sort?—No.

16256. After he finished, what did he do?—He filled his pipe and was lighting up.

16257. Did you see a constable watching you during this time?—Yes, I saw one across the road.

16258. Did you see him before he crossed the road?—Yes, he went past us, and then he turned round and came back again about 100 yards higher up than we were then. He turned round and he came back across the road to us.

16259. About that time did you notice how far Baker had gone with the filling and lighting of his pipe?—The policeman had got up to us before he lit his pipe. He just struck the match to light it when the constable reached us.

16260. Were you quite close to Baker at that time?—Yes.

16261. What passed between them. Who spoke first?—The constable spoke first.

16262. What did he say or do?—He just touched Baker on the shoulder, and said "Give us your name and address, old cock."

16263. What did Baker say then?—He refused to give it.

16264. What did he say?—He said "What for?" and the constable said "Never mind what for, you give it to me, or else you will go down to the police station and give it to the official."

16265. What did Baker say to that?—Baker said, "I would rather go down than give it to you."

16266. And after that?—He took him.

16267. He laid his hand upon him?—He laid his hand upon him and took him.

16268. And they went to the police station?—Yes.

16269. You followed after?—Yes.

16270. You did not walk along with them?—No.

16271. When you saw them go into the police station what did you do then?—I turned round and went and told his missus.

16272. You made no attempt to get into the police station?—No, none whatever.

16273. Are you quite sure that nothing else except that passed between Baker and the constable?—Yes, I am quite sure.

16274. The constable gave him no reason at all?—No reason whatever.

16275. What condition was Baker in at this time?—He was all right, I think.

16276. Sober?—Yes, quite sober.

16277. Speaking clearly?—Yes, speaking very clearly.

16278. Was he speaking loudly?—No, just as I am now, I expect.

16279. Was he shouting at all?—No.

16280. He did not throw himself about when the constable put his hand on him?—No.

16281. He walked quietly?—Yes.

16282. What about the people in the road? How many people were there in the road at this time?—I could not count them. There was not one, I think.

16283. Did you see any young girls at the corner?—No, I did not see one.

16284. Did you speak to the constable yourself at all?—No.

16285. You did not say a word?—No.

16286. And he did not speak to you?—No.

16287. Then the next thing you knew about it was on the Monday morning?—Yes, at the Police Court.

16288. You attended the Police Court?—Yes.

16289. And you went into the witness box and gave evidence?—Yes.

16290. Did you tell the Magistrate what you have told us to-day?—Yes.

16291. And then the case was dismissed?—Yes.

16292. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) How long have you been in London?—About a year.

16293. How long have you known the last witness Baker?—As long as I have been in London. I lodge with a friend of his.

16294. Did you go to the doctor with him that evening before you went to the public-house?—No.

16295. How soon after supper did you join him?—It was about 10 o'clock when I joined him.

16296. Whereabouts?—At the top of Holland Park on Campden Hill.

16297. Did you meet him by chance or had you made an appointment?—Accidentally.

16298. How do you know the exact quantity of drink he had in the public-house?—I was with him at the time.

16299. There were other men in the public-house whom he knew, were there not?—Yes.

16300. There were a good many people in the public-house, I suppose?—Oh, no—five or six of them.

16301. Were they all friends of his?—Yes, most of them were friends.

16302. Were they drinking one with another?—Yes, they were having drinks.

16303. How do you know exactly how much he had to drink?—I was there to see.

16304. Do you know how much his friends drank?—No, I did not take that particular notice. They all had about the same, I think.

16305. I suppose you have spoken to Baker about this matter since?—Yes.

16306. Did you speak to him about how much drink he had before you gave evidence at the Police Court?—No, I don't think I did.

16307. Then I understand you came out and walked down and got into this Kensington Place?—Yes.

16308. That is a thoroughfare, is it not?—Yes.

16309. It is a street up which numbers of people walk and drive?—Yes, but not so very many.

16310. Is it a place where many people walk on Sunday nights?—No, I do not think it is.

16311. Did Baker cross the street and go and make water against the blank wall?—Yes.

16312. Was there a lamp close to where he was?—Yes, not so very many yards from him.

16313. He was within a few yards of a bright light?—Yes.

16314. So that anybody passing up and down the street could see him?—Yes.

16315. I understood you to say just now that the constable passed you and went some distance past you before he came back?—No, we had gone some yards after that—after the constable had passed us.

16316. You mean that the constable passed you before Baker made water?—Yes.

16317. Where were you standing when the constable passed you?—We were walking.

16318. Walking the same way as the constable?—Yes, very slowly.

16319. You were walking very slowly, and the constable passed you?—Yes.

16320. The constable did not speak to you at all?—No.

16321. He did not molest you, or trouble you in any way?—No.

16322. After he had passed, Baker turned aside to the wall?—Yes.

16323. Then it was the constable came back?—Yes.

16324. Do you think the constable turned back as soon as ever he saw Baker turn to the wall?—No, he did not turn back as soon as Baker turned to the wall.

16325. The constable, I suppose, had his back to you when Baker turned to the wall?—He stood at the corner when Baker turned to the wall.

16326. Who stood—the constable?—Yes. He stood there for a minute or two, and then he did come back.

16327. You were going this way?—Yes.

16328. Is the corner here?—Yes.

16329. The constable passed you somewhere here?—Yes.

16330. Then he went up to the corner and stood here?—Yes.

16331. Whilst he was standing there Baker was against the wall?—Yes.

16332. Then the constable had to come from the corner to him?—Yes.

16333. You say he did not get to him until he began to light his pipe?—No, he had got his pipe filled and was lighting it.

16334. Were there any young women about?—No.

16335. Not at the corner?—No.

16336. Were there any young men or young women about?—No.

16337. Do you mean to say you did not see them, or are you prepared to say that they were not there?—I did not see one.

16338. (Chairman.) If there had been any at the corner you would have seen them, I presume?—Yes, unless I had shut my eyes.

16339. How many yards from the corner were you? About one hundred yards, I should say.

16340. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Then the constable came back, and he asked for his name and address?—Yes.

16341. Did he do that in his usual tone of voice?—Yes.

16342. There was nothing offensive in the way in which the constable spoke?—No.

16343. But in spite of that Baker would not give it to him?—No.

16344. Did the constable say to him that he ought to be ashamed of himself?—No.

16345. Or that he ought to know better?—No.

16346. Nothing of the kind?—No.

16347. Did Baker shout out at all?—No.

16348. Did he seem to be angry when he was asked for his name and address?—No.

16349. What reason was there for refusing it except that he was angry?—I do not know; he thought it was not necessary, I suppose.

16350. He was rather resenting what the constable was doing?—Yes.

16351. Did he not shout out in rather a loud voice "What do you want my name and address for?"—No, he spoke very gently.

16352. Did any people collect close to?—No.

16353. Not whilst he and the constable were talking?—No.

16354. Ultimately Baker said he would give his name and address at the station?—Yes.

16355. So that he preferred to go the station?—Yes, he preferred to go to the station.

16356. The constable did not act roughly towards him in any way, did he?—No.

16357. I mean they just went together?—Yes.

16358. Something has been said about his having been arrested. Did you understand that he was arrested, or did you understand they were going just together?—I understood they were going together to give his name and address.

16359. You did not see anything which led you to think that the constable was rough towards him?—No.

16360. They went together. Then you went to tell his wife?—Yes, I followed on to the police station, and then went to tell his wife.

16361. (Earl Russell.) They went together quietly, but you told us that the constable had his hand on his arm. Is that so?—Yes

16362. Or was he walking quite alone by the side of the constable?—The constable had hold of his arm.

16363. (Chairman.) Did you think it was rather odd that the constable should take him off to the station, keeping his arm upon him?—Yes, I thought it was not necessary.

16364. You knew, in fact, that he was arrested?—Yes.

16365. What for?—I did not know. I had no idea, unless it was for making water. That was all.

16366. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did you give evidence before the Magistrate?—Yes.

16367. You heard the evidence of the witnesses in Court?—No, I stood outside. They called for me.

16368. They called for you. Did you say to the Magistrate what you have said to us?—Yes.

16369. Were you cross-examined at all?—No.

16370. How was the inquiry conducted? Who asked you questions first of all?—The solicitor asked me questions.

16371. That is to say, the solicitor who was appearing for Baker?—Yes.

16372. You told you story?—Yes.

16373. Did the police-constable ask you any questions?—No.

16374. Did the Magistrate ask you any questions?—No.

16375. Were you asked any question as to whether there was any shouting?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Have you the police reports?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) You are going to call the constable?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly. You shall have all the reports, if there are any.

(Earl Russell.) I was not aware that the question of drunkenness was likely to be contested in this case. If the Commission think it worth while I can call this man's landlord, who was at the station soon after midnight to bail him out. He is not in Court now.

(Chairman.) The Commission will summon him if we think it necessary.

(Earl Russell.) If you please.

(Chairman.) One of the great advantages we get from Mr. Eldon Bankes' cross-examination is that we are able to form some idea of what is likely to be said. I think the only suggestion that Mr. Eldon Bankes has made is that this gentleman had taken two glasses of gin, and, going into the open air, was a little excited.

(Earl Russell.) It goes a little beyond that.

(Chairman.) We shall see.

(Earl Russell.) Might I make an application in connection with the cases which have been taken to-day? There is the case of George Mullins, and there is also the case of James Baker. May I be allowed to have copies of the police reports before the cross-examination of the police witnesses? You will recollect I had them in the two previous cases. I have a difficulty in cross-examining the police witnesses effectively if I only see the police reports in Court for the first time just before I cross-examine.

(Chairman.) We can give the depositions.

(Earl Russell.) I did have the police reports in the other two cases.

(Chairman.) The depositions are not put in yet, and therefore I am afraid we cannot deal with that now.

(Earl Russell.) If you please.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Can any intimation be given as to what cases will be taken next Wednesday?

(Chairman.) Not in public. Mr. Leslie will give you private information as to what witnesses we shall be calling on Wednesday.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you intend to take any others than those which have been mentioned to-day we shall have notice?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Earl Russell.) I understand that the witnesses in the Tresadern case are here. Will you take them to-day?

(Chairman.) No, we can take no more to-day.

SEVENTEENTH DAY.

Wednesday, 28th November, 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), Secretary.

(Chairman.) Have you the constable in Wells' case here?

(Mr. Muir.) Yes, Sir, but I understood Mr. Wells was coming back. I should like to ask him some questions. Before I commence I should like to take your opinion and that of your fellow Commissioners as to whether you think that owing to the lapse of time I ought to put a question founded on that document, as marked in blue. (Handing document to the Commissioners, who conferred.)

(Chairman.) I think you may leave this with us, but do not ask any questions about it. The whole matter is too remote from our point of view.

(Mr. Muir.) That was my own feeling, but I desired not to keep it entirely from the Commission.

EDWARD WELLS, recalled.

E Wells.
28 Nov. 1906.

16376. (Mr. Muir.) Do you know Thomas William Young?—Yes.

16377. Was he present when this matter between you and the constable took place?—He told me he was.

16378. You know he was, do you not?—I saw him there.

16379. That is good evidence. Would it be true that in his hearing you said to the driver of the 'bus who you were speaking to: "You f—— b—— twister, you don't mean to pay me"?—Absolutely untrue.

16380. And that you shouted that so loud from the urinal that he could hear you?—It is absolutely false.

16381. Is it true that you were shouting at the driver as he was getting on to his box?—I was talking to him in a loud voice.

16382. Shouting at him?—Certainly not. I was talking to him in a loud voice, as I have already explained.

16383. Would it be true that when the driver was about to pull his 'bus off the rank that you were standing near the horses' heads and shouting: "If I don't b——well hear from you before Tuesday, you see what I will do"?—Certainly not.

16384. That you shouted that at him as he was about to pull off the rank?—I have already told you what I said to the man.

16385. And that it was then P.C. Dunham came up to you and told you to go away and not interfere with the driver while he was at his work?—No, he did not mention anything about work at all. He held me by the collar and sleeve, and told me to go away.

16386. And that you then turned round and shouted at the policeman in a very excited manner: "I sha'n't go away for you, I have not committed a breach of the peace. What have I got to go away for"?—There are several words added to it. Some of them I did use.

16387. Which are those?—That I thought as I had not committed an offence I had as much right to be there as him, and I had other business to do which I intended to stay and do; why had I to go away, and if I wanted to it would be utterly impossible while he had hold of me.

16388. Did about a dozen people gather round while you were shouting out at the 'busman?—I did not see anybody, let alone a dozen.

16389. Did the policeman again order you away?—No, he did not order me away. He took me away. There was no ordering in it.

16390. Did you say to the constable: "Decidedly not—what for?" when he ordered you to go away?—Yes, I believe I did.

16391. Did he then say: "Well if you won't—" and caught hold of you by the collar?—No, he already had hold of me. He never loosed his hand from me the whole of the time.

16392. Do you know George Edward Dawson?—No, I don't.

16393. Let Dawson stand forward. Do you know this man?—No, I do not.

16394. He is the conductor of the 'bus that Young was driving?—I do not know him.

16395. Did you shout to the horse-'bus driver, among other things: "You dirty b—— tyke"?—Certainly not.

16396. As the driver got on to his 'bus: "You dirty b—— tyke, why didn't you pay the money you owed," mean to pay"?—No, I did not.

16397. Did you say to him: "You f——well don't mean to pay"?—No, I did not.

16398. When the constable spoke to you, did you say: "That man owes me money"?—No, I think I made the remark that I was there to ask for my rights. I never mentioned money at all.

16399. "That man owes me money, have I not a right to come and get what belongs to me"?—I did not.

16399*. Did the constable tell you to go away two or three times?—He told me once.

16400. And did you remain, shouting at the top of your voice: "What have I done? I have done nothing"?—I remained because I could not get away. He had hold of me. It was impossible for me to go away.

16401. (Chairman.) Are you quite certain that you did not use any strong language to the driver of the 'bus?—I am positive. I need not be quite sure—I am positive. It is a thing I never do, and never have done.

16402. Why were you talking in a loud voice then?—On account of the noise of the motors. The engines are going the whole of the time, and when a man is in his seat it is really necessary to speak loud. I was speaking no louder on that occasion than I do no any other.

16403. But there are not motors close by always when you are speaking?—There are always motors there. It is an omnibus stand.

16404. You mean you were not speaking louder than you usually speak when you are at that corner?—No, Sir.

16405. Is there anything else you would like to tell us?—No, I have nothing else to add at all.

16406. (Mr. Dickinson.) How long have you known this man Hill?—About eight or twelve months, I think.

16407. You had dealings with him all that time?—Not all that time.

16408. Have you had many dealings with him?—I have supplied him with four pairs of boots—a matter of about £2 odd.

16409. Are those all the money matters that have passed between you—about £2 odd?—Yes.

16410. During the whole of the time you have known him?—Yes.

16411. Has he ever been in arrear before?—Yes, he has been a week in arrear, but then he makes it up. Instead of paying me a shilling he will pay me 2s., or 1s. 6d., or 2s. 6d.

16412. Have you ever had any trouble in getting money from him?—They have to pay me next week, that is the only trouble. I have had no more trouble with him than any other driver. Sometimes they get suspended two or three days and then they can't pay. They pay the following week or a part of the week. A man instead of paying 2s. 6d. will pay 1s. 6d., and if they pay 1s. 6d. they might pay 2s. 6d. the next week.

16413. Has this man, Hill, ever got behindhand?—No more than that.

16414. You have never had any trouble with him about getting your money?—No more than I have with any of the others. They are all about of a muchness.

16415. (Chairman.) How much did he owe you at the time of this occurrence?—About 11s., but he had the usual time to pay it in. There was a balance of about 11s.

16416. The instalment had become due on the Friday?—On the Friday previous to my arrest, which was on the Saturday.

16417. Your arrest was on the Saturday, and the instalment had become due on the Friday?—Yes.

16418. Were there any arrears?—I believe he paid 1s. in the week previous. I have got my book here. (Producing book.)

16419. Whatever the dispute was it was only about a small amount, a few shillings?—That is all, only a few shillings.

16420. What were the weekly instalments?—As much as we could always get—from 1s. upwards.

16421. I think the original bargain was a bargain to pay by instalments?—Yes, but we never get the regular payment.

16422. What was the regular payment?—He paid me 2s., I think, and then he said, "I will endeavour to pay you 1s. 6d. or more if I can." If we get more we think we are lucky.

16423. You had supplied him with four pairs of boots?—Yes.

16424. Amounting to £2 2s. 6d. altogether?—Yes.

16425. He commenced paying on May 13th by a payment of 2s.?—Yes. E. Wells. 28 Nov. 1906.

16426. And the arrangement was that he was to pay you 2s. a week?—1s. 6d., or as much as he could, that means, if they get a full week perhaps they will pay 6d. or a 1s. more. If they have to have a day or two off they will pay less.

16427. On October 4th he paid 2s. 6d.?—There are several two-and-sixpences I believe.

16428. On October 19th he paid 2s.?—Yes, just as he paid so I put it down in that book.

16429. On the 26th, that was the following Friday, he only paid 1s., and on October 8th he only paid 1s.?—That is quite right.

16430. Then it was in consequence of his having only paid 1s. on the Friday that you were seeing him on Saturday?—No, on the Friday he did not pay anything. He promised to pay me on the Tuesday.

16431. On October 4th he paid you 2s. 6d.?—Yes.

16432. And on October 19th he paid you 2s.?—Yes.

16433. The 2s. was paid after you had been arrested and been taken to the station?—After October 13th.

16434. The reason why you wanted to see him on Saturday was that he had paid nothing at all from the Friday before?—Yes.

16435. What was the total balance then due?—You will see it by the book. I think it is 11s. or 12s.—about that. I have not totalled it up.

16436. Were you asking him to pay the whole balance of the debt on the Tuesday?—Oh, no, because I knew he could not do it. It was no use my asking it. I was simply asking for something off it, and he promised to give it to me on the Tuesday.

16437. I should say he had been paying with fair regularity, had he not?—Oh, yes.

16438. If all your customers paid as well as he did you would not have much to say in the matter?—No. As I say, they pay fairly well. Of course, they get into arrears sometimes, but if they get a full week's work they pay a little extra.

16439. Had you any dispute at all with Hill before?—Oh, no.

16440. (Mr. Dickinson.) The first entry in this book here is May. Had you had dealings with him before May?—No.

16441. It was only since May?—Yes.

16442. This happened at 3 in the afternoon?—Yes.

16443. You had been there about two hours?—Yes, just about. As I left Highbury Barn I noticed the clock was 3 o'clock, and when I returned it was five minutes past 5. I had been under arrest all that time.

16444. Had you been in the public-house at all to take any refreshment during those two hours?—No. I am a teetotaller, and a life abstainer

(Mr. Muir.) Would the Commission prefer me to call the police witnesses or the private witnesses first?

(Chairman.) I do not know that we have any preference.

(Mr. Muir.) Then I will call the private witnesses first, so that they may be released.

THOMAS WILLIAM YOUNG, sworn.

16445. (Mr. Muir.) Are you a licensed stage driver, No. 4,003, and do you live at 199, Battersea Bridge Road?—Yes.

16446. Do you drive a motor 'bus?—Yes, for the Road Car Company.

16447. On the 13th October last at 3 in the afternoon were you in charge of your 'bus on the front rank at Kelvin Road, outside the Highbury Barn Public-house?—Yes, I was.

16448. Did you get off your car and go to the urinal?—Yes, I did.

16449. That is in the centre of the road a few yards away from the 'buses?—Yes.

16450. Do you know Mr. Wells?—Yes, I know him perfectly well.

16451. Did you hear his voice?—Yes, I did. T. W. Young.

16452. Where were you when you first heard his voice?—Just going in the urinal.

16453. What tone was it in at that time?—Shouting at another man in there who I knew as a horse 'bus driver.

16454. That was Hill?—Yes.

16455. Did you hear what he was shouting about?—Yes, about money matters.

16456. Did you hear any bad language by anybody?—Yes; Mr. Wells said, "You f—— b—— twister, you don't mean to pay me."

16457. (Chairman.) Do you mean that he used those letters "f" and "b"?—He said the words.

T. W. Young.
28 Nov. 1906.

16458. (Mr. Muir.) Were there any other words besides those?—There were other words of obscene language which I don't remember now.

16459. Did you or they leave the urinal first?—They left the urinal first.

16460. And outside did you hear anything going on?—Yes, when I came out the horse driver was getting on his 'bus. He seemed as though he was getting out of the way of the other man Wells. Wells walked just in front of the horses' noses and he said, "If you do not b—— well pay me before next Tuesday you will see what I will do." He looked very excited, and he shouted. My motor was stationary, and the engines were not working at all. We are not allowed to let the engines work when the 'bus is on the 'bus stand. We have to let it be stationary until we start off again. Those are the police orders. I was the only motor 'bus there at the time, too.

16461. Did you see the constable Dunham?—Yes.

16462. Did you know him at all before that?—I believe I had seen him on the point about twice before.

16463. Did you ever speak to him at all?—Not that I know of.

16464. You saw him. Did he come up?—I believe he was on point duty at the corner. He came round to the front of my motor.

16465. Did you see him do anything?—Yes, he came round in front of my motor and he said to Mr. Wells, "You had better clear out of this; it is not a fit place to come and quarrel with the man, and you had better go away." Mr. Wells said, "I shan't go away for you. What have I done to go away for? I have not caused any breach of the peace." The policeman said, "Go away," and Wells said, "I shall not." The policeman said, "If you won't——" and then he put his hand on his collar and took him down the road. In the meantime the horse 'bus driver had driven round to the front road, and I should not think the driver of the horse 'bus saw the man actually arrested. He did not know he was arrested till he was taken past the 'bus down the road. I remained on foot some time after that and did not see the man taken down the road—only round the corner.

16466. Were there any other persons about at this time?—Eight to twelve. Some may have been 'busmen and the officials. There were perhaps six or eight other people looking on.

16467. Did you hear anything about Wells making a complaint against the policeman at the time or afterwards?—He said, "What have I to go away for? I have done nothing."

16468. That was at the time, but afterwards did you hear him say anything?—I did not hear anything further, because I had to get on my car and get down the street.

16469. On any subsequent date did you hear any thing from Mr. Wells about any complaint of his against the police?—Yes, he wrote a letter to me, asking me to go up as a witness, and then he wrote saying he did not want me as the Commissioners only required two witnesses. I have the letter at home.

16470. As a witness at the police-court or here?—For him on this Commission.

16471. Then you say he wrote again saying he did not require you?—Yes.

16472. Did you see Wells at all about this matter?—No, I did not, but he made it his business to get on the step of my 'bus and speak to me about it.

16473. When was that?—Since his arrest. I could not say what day.

16474. Before he had asked you to come before this Commission or afterwards?—That was the time that he asked me and then he wrote to me.

16475. First of all he asked you to come?—Yes.

16476. Did you say anything to him at that time about whether you would come or whether you would not?—I told him I could not come—that I had got my work to study, and that I was a licensed man.

16477. After you got the second letter from Wells saying he did not require your attendance here, did you communicate with P.C. Dunham?—No, I do not think so.

16478. How did he get into communication with you?—He saw me driving on my car by an off chance, and asked me whether, as I saw it, would I care to come up and give any evidence. I said certainly I would.

16479. Did anything more take place between you?—No, nothing whatever.

16480. Then did you receive a communication from Subdivisional Inspector Smith to go to the police station and make a statement?—Yes.

16481. And did you go there and see Subdivisional Inspector Smith?—Yes, I did.

16482. And did you make a statement to him?—Yes.

16483. Alone?—Yes.

16484. P.C. Dunham was not there?—There was only the Inspector, who I saw personally.

16485. Did you tell the Subdivisional Inspector the name of your conductor?—I told him the name of my conductor, and told him I would tell him to come down if necessary.

16486. Your conductor was not there at the time at all?—No, not at all. I believe he went up later, and took his wife with him.

16487. (Chairman.) How long have you been a licensed driver?—Since September 4th, 1906.

16488. What were you before that?—A cycle and motor-cycle maker by trade, living at Bow, and I had a little business of my own.

16489. Then you started your work as a driver of a motor omnibus?—Yes, for the Road Car Company.

16490. You had only been at the work for four or five weeks?—More than five weeks.

16491. You told me you started in September, and up to the 13th October would make about five weeks, so that you had been on that kind of work for about five weeks?—Yes, but I thought it was longer than that.

16492. Had you ever spoken to Dunham during that five weeks?—No, I did not know him previous to his stopping me on the day he met me on my car.

16493. That was after October 13th, after the arrest?—Yes. I did not know him by name until this morning.

16494. You never spoke to the police-constable at all between the 5th September and the time of the arrest?—No, I never saw him before. I do not believe he was up there on duty previous to that.

16495. You had never seen him even?—No.

16496. Why did you tell Mr. Muir that you had seen him two or three times?—The constable?

16497. Yes?—On the corner on duty, as I drove up and down he was standing there, but I have never spoken to him.

16498. I asked you whether you saw him before October 13th, and you told me a moment ago you had not seen him. I ask you why you told Mr. Muir that you had seen him two or three times?—The police-constable on the corner, I saw him as I drove my 'bus round, but I never took much notice of the man. I had seen him, but never spoken to him before.

16499. (Mr. Whitmore.) You did not know what his name was?—No.

16500. Nor his number?—No. I never took that notice. I saw the police-constable standing on duty there, and that is all.

16501. (Chairman.) Had you ever spoken to Wells?—I might have done.

16502. Of course you might have done so. You are speaking to me, and I suppose you were able to speak then. Had you, or had you not, spoken to Wells before the day of his arrest?—I believe I had. I could not say what about, but I believe I had spoken to him before.

16503. What about?—He told me that I could have some things on the hire system—the tally system. I believe that was the reason he spoke to me at the time, and asked me if I wanted anything in his line. I think that was the only occasion.

16504. You knew Wells's occupation?—I know he was selling goods to the drivers at so much a week.

16505. How many times do you think you had seen him at that corner before October 13th?—Only about once previous to that day.

16506. That was the occasion on which he spoke to you and asked you if you wanted anything in his line?—Yes.

16507. How long did the conversation last?—Perhaps two minutes.

16508. Had you ever spoken to Hill, the driver of the horse 'bus?—No, never. I had seen him on his 'bus and waved my hand to him and nodded to him, the same as 'busmen do to one another.

16509. When Wells spoke to you did he speak in a civil kind of way?—Oh, yes, very civil.

16510. He did not strike you as a particularly rough man?—No.

16511. Or a man in the habit of using bad language?—Not that I know of. I had no occasion to think that.

16512. Was there anything in the way he addressed you which struck you?—No, he struck me as a respectable tradesman. He seemed of a very excitable nature.

16513. You came to the conclusion he was an excitable man?—I did, certainly.

16514. After two minutes' conversation?—Yes, from the way he talked. He talked very sharp and quick.

16515. Then you think everybody who talks sharply and quickly is of an excitable nature?—He did give me that impression. That was his way—very short and sharp and quick in his conversation.

16516. Businesslike?—Yes, you may term it businesslike.

16517. Do you infer from that that he is an excitable man because he is businesslike and does not waste words over a transaction?—I do not.

16518. Is that the only reason you have for saying he was excitable in your opinion?—I have seen him get excited since. I suppose that is why I think it.

16519. That is very likely. Then your view of his being an excitable man is founded on what has taken place since, and not on your two minutes' conversation?—That may be so.

16520. But is it so?—It is very possible.

16521. Of course it is possible, but is it so?—Yes, I should think so.

16522. Then I take it from you that when Wells first of all spoke to you and wanted to do business with you there was nothing in his manner to indicate that he was a rough man in the habit of using bad language?—No, I do not think so.

16523. You never saw him have any altercation with anybody else than Hill?—No, never.

16524. Why do you suggest he was using this bad language?—I do not suggest it, because I heard it used.

16525. You heard it used?—I did, positively. I heard the language used inside the urinal and outside.

16526. Were you surprised at it?—We are not very surprised at what some 'busmen say when they are excited.

16527. You are never surprised at what 'busmen say, but do you think that Wells is a 'busman?—I believe he has been a licensed man. I have heard so since.

16528. You did not say to him "Don't talk like that," or "Be quiet," or give any advice at all?—No, I was not within three yards of him all the time. I stood by the head of my car. I did not address the man or interfere with him at all.

16529. When you first saw him after he had come out of the urinal, where did he go when he came out?—He came out of the urinal on the right as my car was standing here, and walked up towards the centre of the road. I came out of this end of the urinal and walked up to the head of my car.

16530. He had left the pavement?—He was never on the pavement.

16531. He was standing in the middle of the road?—He was in the middle of the road.

16532. Where did he stand in relation to the 'bus when you first saw him?—When I first saw him he was in the urinal, and then after the words in there he came out and walked past my 'bus, and shouted at the man first, and then walked up towards the centre of the road when the police-constable came and spoke to him.

16533. Where was he in relation to the 'bus? Was he close by when Hill, the 'bus driver, got up?—He stood and shouted at Hill, the 'bus driver, as he was getting up—directly he came out of the urinal.

16534. But where was he standing when he shouted at Hill?—Near the horses about a yard away.

16535. Not in front of the horses?—Partly in front of them. Had the 'bus gone on he would have been run over.

16536. He did not move from that place?—Not for about a minute.

16537. Was it there that the constable came to him?—No, as he was moving away. He had to move away as the man pulled his horses out to come out, and as he came out so the constable came up to him and told him he had no business to shout so.

16538. You do not agree that he went and stood near when Hill the driver was getting up and talking to him there?—Yes, he did, he spoke to him as he got up on the 'bus and then he walked to the horses' heads as the driver was pulling the horses out.

16539. A moment or two ago you told me the first place you saw him shouting at the driver after he had come out of the urinal was in front of the horses' heads?—He walked up the side of the 'bus as the driver got up and shouted to him, and then he stood in front of the horses and shouted at him again.

16540. That is not what I gathered from you a moment or two ago. I understood you distinctly to say that when he came out of the urinal he went to a place in front of the horses' heads where he might have been run over?—That is quite right; but he shouted on his way there as he walked to the front of the horses' heads. As he came out he walked away looking back at the driver and shouting after him.

16541. He did not touch the horses, I suppose?—No, not that I know of.

16542. Not that you know of?—I did not see him touch them.

16543. You were in a place where you could see if he had touched them?—Yes, but I was opening the bonnet of my car, and I had to attend to it. I was putting grease in the pump, and that kind of thing, and looking back at the same time at what was going on.

16544. You were doing your work for your employers and attending to your business?—Yes.

16545. You were kneeling down, I suppose?—No. I was standing by the side of my car. Standing upright, as I am now.

16546. You were looking at your car when you were doing your work?—I could take the bonnet off the car and look round like that—(describing) and take the cap off, which I did.

16547. You can take the cap off without looking at it?—Yes.

16548. Is not that the reason why motor 'buses sometimes go wrong?—I could not tell you.

16549. If the man in charge of a motor 'bus is attempting to do his work and looking round at the same time things are very likely to go wrong, are they not?—No, not when you are unscrewing a little nut which you could do in the dark anywhere.

16550. The altercation that was going on was not so loud or noticeable as to induce you to give up your work?—I was listening to it all the while. It induced me to look round and to neglect looking at what I was doing.

16551. Was it after last week when Wells gave his evidence here that P.C. Dunham first spoke to you about this case?—Yes.

16552. You never had any conversation with him before Wells gave his evidence here?—No, not at all.

16553. When was it that Dunham came to you?—Dunham met me by accident I believe near the Angel at Islington. As I was driving along he put his finger up like that as he saw me come up.

16554. He stopped you?—Yes, he asked me if I would come up and give evidence as a witness here. I said I would.

16555. When he stopped you he was in uniform, I take it?—No, he was off duty I believe.

16556. And though he was not in uniform you knew him?—Yes, I did know him, or rather I knew him, but if anybody put their hand up whether I knew them or not I should stop. I took him for a passenger.

T. W. Young
28 Nov. 1906.

16557. Did you stop because you knew Dunham or because you thought he was a passenger?—I stopped the 'bus because I thought he was a passenger at first before I got to him, and then he came in front of the car and I recognised the man. In fact, I hardly knew him in his private clothes, out of his uniform. I should not have known him if he had not stopped me, because I did not know him well enough. He looked so different in plain clothes to what he did in uniform.

16558. You gave me the impression that you saw Dunham and stopped because he was Dunham?—No, I saw Dunham, and he went like that when he saw me. (Holding up hand.) He recognised me being on the 'bus, and then I eased up, and as I eased up I saw who it was.

16559. What did he say to you?—He said "You were a witness when I arrested Mr. Wells were not you." I said "Yes." He said "Will you come up and give evidence, and say what you saw," and I said "Yes, I will." That was about all that passed between us.

16560. He seemed to assume you knew Wells by name?—Yes, I suppose he did. He might have thought I had dealings with him.

16561. His form of address suggests to me that he assumed that you knew Wells by name?—I suppose so.

16562. When Wells was arrested did you know his name?—No, I did not know his name until lately.

16563. How did you get to know his name?—I heard a lot of people talking about him. I heard his name through conversation. The 'busmen up at Highbury Barn were talking about him, and I heard them say his name was Wells.

16564. You did recognise Dunham at once as a police-constable when he stopped your 'bus?—After he stopped my 'bus yes, but not at first. I did not recognise him at first. I wondered who it was when he came on the head of the car. I expected him to go to the steps when I first pulled up.

16565. On what day was it that Dunham stopped you and asked you to give evidence?—I could not say the day. It might have been a week back.

16566. A week back you think?—Last Thursday.

16567. What time of the day was it?—About mid-day, I believe.

16568. Are you sure it was Thursday?—I believe it was about that day. I cannot be sure to the day.

16569. There are not many days for it to be "about." This is Wednesday?—I have forgotten that. We motor 'bus drivers have such a lot to attend to, and a lot of responsibility. You cannot think of little things like that. We have other things in our head that knock that out of it.

16570. You think it was last Thursday?—Yes, Thursday or Friday.

16571. You cannot say which?—No, I cannot.

16572. Cannot you go nearer to it than mid-day Thursday or Friday? Are there so many things that you have to think of that you cannot fix more nearly the time at which you were asked to come and give evidence before us?—I think it was the Friday of the two—about mid-day on Friday I believe, to the best of my recollection.

16573. You made no note of it—No, I did not.

16574. Your work is of such an anxious kind that you cannot charge your memory with certainty as to whether it was Thursday, Friday, or Saturday?—I believe it was the Friday, but our work is like this, that we motor men have to keep on the watch and on the alert for nine hours, because if we do not there is sure to be some trouble.

16575. May I ask why your memory is so exact as to the exact words that passed between the busman and Wells on the 13th of October?—My memory is exact because I stood there a couple of yards off listening to the conversation.

16576. You remember the conversation you had with Dunham but yet, although your work is so anxious, and although it is less than a week since Mr. Wells gave his evidence, and therefore only five or six days ago, you cannot tell me what day it was that Dunham came to you?—It was about Friday that Dunham came.

16577. It must have been about Friday, because Wells gave his evidence on Thursday last?—I did not know that.

16578. I am only testing your recollection. Is your memory a good one?—Yes, it is a good one.

16579. Yet you could not remember whether it was Thursday or Friday last that Dunham came to you?—No, I cannot swear because I have had other things to bother me. I have had trouble with my car two or three times, and on Sunday evening I had a nasty side-slip in Piccadilly, and I have a lot of other trouble which people do not know of. At other times my memory might be more exact.

16580. (Mr. Dickinson.) When was it that Wells first asked you to give evidence for him?—The first time he asked me was after his arrest before he was charged the first time—before the case came on.

16581. You say it was after his arrest and before the case came on?—Yes.

16582. That is to say the arrest was on the 13th October, and he appeared before the magistrate on the 15th. Do you say he came and asked you to give evidence between the 13th and the 15th?—Between the hearings before the magistrate and this Commission was the first time he came to me.

16583. Not before the case came on before the police magistrate?—No, I don't think so.

16584. Before the case came before us?—Yes.

16585. Can you tell us when it was that he came to you?—I saw him at Highbury Barn. I could not say when.

16586. It is between October 15th and November 22nd?—I should think about three days after or something like that.

16587. Two or three days after what?—After the arrest and his coming before the magistrate, I believe. It was about three days after that.

16588. Did he tell you he had been before the magistrate?—Yes.

16589. Did he tell you he had been acquitted?—Mr. Wells used some words and I would hardly like to repeat what his words to me were. He said, "If you will come up and stand by me you will have a chance of getting a bit of your own back against the police."

16590. Let us see what you mean by that. What did you take him to mean by that?—I took him to mean this. At times our work at Highbury Barn, when several 'buses come up on the top of one another, is very awkward, both for us and the police, too. They have to see we get away, and we have to see we get away and not cause any obstruction. Sometimes a little friction arises between us and the police, but we all do our work as well as we can on both sides. Mr. Wells meant to infer that the police made our job hard for us, and that I could get a bit of my own back against them. That is how I took it.

16591. Have you had any friction with the police?—No, no trouble at all, because as soon as I get the word to go, my engines are set going and I am off. I am one of the quickest in getting away.

16592. He said "Come and give evidence for me." Did he tell you where he wanted you to give evidence?—I don't know his exact words, but what he said amounted to this: "You know I have been arrested, and if you come up for me you will do me a good turn; you won't lose nothing by it, because you will be able to have a few things off me." He stood on my 'bus and he rode on the corner of my 'bus talking to me until my conductor rung the bell. I had to drive slowly down Highbury Barn Road about 200 yards, and there he stood jawing, and did not get down till my conductor came round and holloaed to me.

16593. This was at the same place?—Yes, at Highbury Barn.

16594. Two or three days after the case had been dismissed by the magistrate?—Yes.

16595. What did you say to him on that occasion?—I did not want the trouble of coming up at all, but I believe at the time I seemed to agree with him so as to get rid of him.

16596. You did seem to agree with him then?—

Yes, so as to get rid of him, because I did not want the bother.

16597. I think you said before that you said you could not come, that you had your work, and that you were a licensed man?—Yes.

16598. Why should your being a licensed man interfere with your coming?—I believe licensed men always object to coming up and giving evidence against the police.

16599. That was the reason, was it?—Yes, that was my impression. I was told by several that if they were me they would have nothing to do with it.

16600. Other people had told you that?—Yes.

16601. That you had better keep clear of giving evidence against the police?—Yes, better keep out of it altogether on either side. I said if I went I would only say what I saw and heard.

16602. Who did you say that to?—Friends of mine who I had conversed with about the matter.

16603. I suppose he went away with the idea that you would come and give evidence in his favour?—If necessary. Then he wrote to me and said he would not require me.

16604. I understood he wrote you a letter asking you to come as a witness?—I did not give him to understand that I should give evidence in his favour.

16605. What did he say in his letter to you when he asked you to come as a witness?—I forget what he said in it. I believe he only wrote me the one letter. He asked me personally, and only wrote me the one letter, saying he would not want me.

16606. Your assumption is rather against what you have said. You said he wrote you a letter asking you to come as a witness, and then wrote again saying he did not require you. Which is accurate? Did he write you a letter and then write again, or did he not write you a letter, and only write you the once?—I believe he only wrote to me once.

16607. You believe?—I am almost sure.

16608. When did he write to you once?—About two days before the last meeting of the Commission was held. I have the letter and the date of it, but I do not think I have it on me. I have it at home.

16609. Had he spoken to you between that time and then?—Between what time?

16610. Between the time he first asked you, which was about two days after the trial?—No, I don't think he had.

16611. Had you seen him at all?—No, I do not think so.

16612. Not between October the 16th or 17th and November 22nd?—I believe I saw him about twice at Highbury Barn.

16613. Has he ever spoken to you about this?—Yes, when he got on my car.

16614. I mean since then?—No. I have not heard from him since then, only the letter saying he did not want me. I have not heard from Wells or spoken to him since the first Commission.

16615. What do you call the first Commission?—The first inquiry here.

16616. I understand you to say that four or five days after the event occurred he stopped you and stood on the step of your car and asked you whether you would come?—Yes, that is right.

16617. Then about two days before this Commission sat, which was last Thursday, November 22nd, he wrote to you saying he would not require you?—That is right.

16618. Within that interval, an interval of about a month, did you see him at all?—No.

16619. Not at all?—No.

16620. And never spoke to him?—No.

16621. Was he not there at his accustomed place?—He might have been there, but one week I am on in the morning and one week I am on night duty. I do not believe Mr. Wells makes it a practice to go up and sell goods to all the men. There is a man named Cohen and another man who are always there every week. I do not think Wells makes it a practice. I think it is only on the offchance that he has one or two customers amongst 'busmen. He has not got many. He is only picking up a trade. There are two men who are always there.

16622. He has asked you on occasions to deal with him?—On one occasion only.

16623. You have not dealt with him?—No.

16624. I understand Police Constable Dunham spoke to you last Friday?—Yes.

16625. What did he say to you?—He said, "You saw that affair when I arrested that man up at the Barn." I said "Yes." He said, "Were not you the driver of the 'bus in front of the rank there?" I said "Yes." He said, "Will you come up and say what you saw?" and I said, "Yes, I would." He said, "You had better go to the police station and see the Sub-Divisional Inspector about it"; and I went up to see Inspector Smith on Saturday about 9 o'clock.

16626. Is that all that he said to you?—That was all that was said to me.

16627. That is some time ago—that would not be October 13th. Did he not remind you when it happened?—I have not seen the man since.

16628. No, but he came to you last Friday—that is, November 24th, and he asked you whether you could give evidence of what happened on October 13th?—Yes.

16629. Did he say anything to remind you of what did happen on October 13th?—Nothing at all. He simply asked me if I would come up and say what I saw and what I heard.

16630. When and where?—At Highbury Barn.

16631. He said Highbury Barn?—Yes, when he arrested Wells. I believe it was the constable I heard the man's name from.

16632. How did he know you knew anything about the arrest of Wells?—I do not know unless he saw me there on the corner when the 'bus was there.

16633. You say you did not know him?—I had seen the man on duty in the neighbourhood and on the corner, but never spoke to him.

16634. Did he know you?—He saw me there as a 'bus driver, that is all as far as I know. He may have seen me as a driver there, and know me by sight, the same as I know people by sight, seeing them at the corner.

16635. How could he have known that you could have seen anything of it. This was the first time that he spoke to you about it?—Yes, it was the first time he spoke to me about it. He came up to me and said, "I believe you were a witness of the arrest of Wells at Highbury Barn, were you not." I said, "Yes, I was." Those were his words to me.

16636. He said, "I believe you were a witness of the arrest"?—Yes.

16637. Did he tell you what day it was?—He may have done so.

16638. Let us know exactly what he did say. At the present moment you wish us to understand you did not know him on October 13th, and he did not know you?—Not to speak to.

16639. He arrested a man?—Yes.

16640. There were a lot about according to your story?—Yes.

16641. And five weeks after that he comes and speaks to you in the street, and asks you whether you can give evidence?—He got up and said, "Are you the driver of the 'bus that was on the front stand."

16642. Now let us get it. Can you tell us every word of this conversation?—He said, "You are the man" or "Are you the man who was on the 'bus who witnessed the row with Wells when I arrested him at Highbury Barn." He might have said on a Saturday, but I do not recollect a thing like that. I did not know at the time I should be called upon to repeat it, or I might have remembered it.

16643. But this was last Friday. He stopped your 'bus, and he said, "You are the man who was on the 'bus at Highbury Barn on the Saturday"?—Yes.

16644. What Saturday?—He said on the Saturday. I said yes, I was. He did not say the date. On that Saturday—something to that effect he said. He may have put it that way.

T. W. Young. 28 Nov. 1906.

16645. Do you mean to say it was the Saturday that he referred to before?—Oh, no, I do not mean to say he referred to it before—not at all. He said "You are the driver of the motor 'bus that stood on the rank when I arrested a man at Highbury Barn on a Saturday," or on that Saturday.

16646. What did you say?—I said yes, I was.

16647. What was the next thing he said?—He said "Would you care to come up and give evidence before the Royal Commission as to what occurred?" I believe those were his words.

16648. Did you tell him at all what sort of evidence you could give?—No, I did not say anything. I simply said I saw it and I did not mind stating what I saw and heard. I do not believe I hardly stopped my 'bus.

16649. You did not say to him what you had seen and heard?—No, not at all.

16650. Did he know what you had seen and heard?—No, I do not believe so. He could not. I was there, that was all. He seemed to know I was on the 'bus at the corner.

16651. And then he said to you that you were to go to the police station?—He said "Will you call in at the police station in Upper Street and see the Subdivisional Inspector and ask for Mr. Smith?"

16652. When did you call at the police station?—At 9 o'clock on the Saturday.

16653. Was that on the following day?—Yes, after the Friday as I saw him on the Friday.

16654. You have no doubt that it was the Friday that you saw him?—It might have been so.

16655. Was it?—I believe so.

16656. You know now that you went on the Saturday?—Yes, I went round on the Saturday evening. I do remember that, because I had to make a special journey.

16657. You know that was the only day on which you saw him?—Yes.

16658. And you know you could not tell us for certain just now that it was a Friday that you saw him?—I did not think of it at the time.

16659. You went there on the Saturday. Who did you find there?—I spoke to the constable inside and said "I want to see the Subdivisional Inspector." I did not mention the name, and he called to one gentleman inside a window, and then he asked me to enter and said "Will you come inside." He took me round the back into a room by myself. He asked me what I had seen and heard, and I told him. He said, "Are you prepared to write it down in black and white and sign a paper?" and I said "Yes." He said "Very well" and got out some paper, and I told him every word that is on the paper.

16660. (Chairman.) Did you sign it?—I did.

16661. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did you write the paper?—No.

16662. He wrote the paper?—Yes. I told him what to put down, and he said to me distinctly: "Don't say anything only what you want put down here—don't say anything to me only what you want put on that paper," and he wrote down every word I said.

(Mr. Dickinson.) May we have that statement?

(Mr. Muir.) Yes, cerainly.

16663. (Mr. Dickinson.) Was anybody else in the room?—No one at all.

(Mr. Muir.) This is the statement. There are some notes by Mr. Muskett in the margin, which you will pay no attention to. (Document produced and handed to the Commissioner.)

16664. (Mr. Dickinson.) This statement was written by the Subdivisional Inspector?—Yes, 16665. Was it written at your dictation?—Yes.

16666. Before he started writing this had you had any conversation with him?—He might have asked me if I was at Highbury Barn and if I had seen the affair.

16667. Do not say he might have. Let us know what happened. This was only last Saturday?—He asked me if I was there and saw the man arrested, and if I was prepared to make a statement, and if so would I come in the other room and do so, and I went in and did it.

16668. He asked you if you had seen the man arrested?—Yes.

16669. Did he then mention the date and the time?—No, he did not. I do not think so.

16670. You began your statement by saying "About 3 p.m. on the afternoon of Saturday, the 13th October, 1906." When did you first know that it was the 13th October, 1906?—Because it was on the Saturday.

16671. But you do not carry in your memory the dates of the month, do you? When did you first know that Saturday was the 13th October?—After being asked to go up I just remembered the Saturday and saw when it was, how many weeks back, and counted up to see what date it would be on, and I thought it was at 3 o'clock, because in that week I was on morning duty, and always leave about 3 o'clock or five minutes to 3.

16672. You know it was Saturday, and you counted up to the 13th October?—Yes.

16673. When did you go through the process of counting up?—After the constable asked me if I would go up before I went to the police station, so that I should know what day it happened on.

16674. Before you saw the Inspector then you knew it was the 13th?—Yes, I knew it was the 13th.

16675. That you had arrived at of your own accord?—Yes.

16676. Did you make use of any diary to find that out?—No, I did not.

16677. You say in this statement that the 'bus driver was saying little or nothing, but Wells was shouting "You f——g"—using the full word—"b——g twister, you do not mean to pay me"?—That is quite right.

16678. Then according to that there was no altercation between them?—There was a lot of jawing going on. That was only one sentence I heard.

16679. "The horse driver said little or nothing"?—No, he was making use of the lavatory when Wells made that remark. In fact, he looked as though he wanted to get out of the way of the other man. The other man was there, as I took it, showing him up amongst his working friends because he owed him money.

16680. When did you first think of these definite words that were used?—I knew those words were used because I heard them. When the Divisional Inspector asked me to say exactly what I heard and nothing else, I sat there and thought of everything that had been said. I did not write that statement out in a short time; it took me some time to remember what had been said.

16681. You sat there and thought of what was said?—Yes, and told him word for word as it was written down.

16682. All that happened on this occasion when the arrest took place was that the man was arrested, so far as you observed?—I stood from start to finish, and heard everything said.

16683. It was not a very important matter to you on that occasion. You have told us that the 'bus-drivers very constantly use strong language?—I did not say they constantly used strong language.

16684. I thought you said it was very usual to hear 'bus-drivers using strong language?—I said it was not unusual.

16685. (Mr. Whitmore.) You said you were not surprised?—I was not surprised. You do hear it at times.

16686. (Mr. Dickinson.) And yet this language made such an impression on you that you remembered it five weeks afterwards?—All the men were talking about it after he was arrested.

16687. They were talking about it after Wells was arrested?—Yes.

16688. Who were talking about it?—For instance, any 'busman who might have been there, and the two timekeepers.

16689. When they were talking about it did the conversation also turn on these words that he had used?—No, I don't think it did. I don't believe anybody used those words, only the man in question.

16690. You say that afterwards they were talking about it, when this matter was being discussed by the 'bus-drivers and others there?—I don't think any of them said anything about what was said by Wells.

16691. When you sat down at the Police Station to think about what had happened, you remembered these words?—I remembered them all through the piece. I remembered that Wells swore at the 'bus-driver. I remembered that from start to finish.

16692. But you did not charge your memory with the words until you sat down in the Police Station?—I remembered those three words that he used all through plainly.

16693. You remembered these special words?—Yes, I did.

16694. You drove away immediately after this had happened?—Two or three minutes afterwards.

16695. Had you given any thought of this at all between the time the arrest happened and Dunham coming and asking you to give evidence?—Oh, yes, very often I thought about it. I wondered how the case was going on.

16696. Why did you think of it?—I don't know why. It often came into my mind because of what the man said about having goods off him. I remembered that, and I remember the others saying: "Fancy him getting locked-up over it," or something to that effect, and a lot of us kept from time to time mentioning it, and when I saw this 'bus-driver on his 'bus, he waved his hand and made some remark about it which I could not hear as he went by. But things often brought it to my mind.

16697. Among other things, did it come to your mind, may I say constantly, these particular words that were used?—Not particularly constantly, but I was there at the time, and it had come into my mind once or twice in the meantime as to what Wells had said to the man, and I did think to myself at the time that he had no business to talk like that to the man in front of his friends where he worked.

16698. Is this a very usual form of words: "You f——g b——g twister"?—I do not know that I have heard the three words coupled together before.

16699. You never heard those three words coupled together?—Not that I know of.

16700. Was that how it was that you remembered them so well?—It might have been.

16701. You say he used other words of an abusive nature which you do not now remember?—Yes, he did.

16702. If your memory was so good with regard to those words, can you tell me the sort of words he was using?—Yes, I believe he called him a dirty rotten tyke, once.

16703. Has that only just come into your mind?—No, that has been in my mind all along.

16704. When you thought this over in the Police Station, this was in your mind then?—Yes, I knew he called him other words.

16705. Why did you not tell the Inspector that?—If I were to tell the Inspector all the words he said, I could not remember. There was a lot of words. He kept swearing at him for about a minute, and continued swearing and jawing, and throwing these words in now and then.

16706. There are no other words that you remember?—No, I don't think I can remember. I know he called him a rotten tyke.

16707. And all this time the 'bus-driver made no reply?—He might have said something.

16708. But did he say anything?—I cannot tell. Whether he spoke or not I do not know. He said very little at all. He seemed ashamed of himself, and got on his 'bus and went away. It seemed to me the other man was trying to show him up, because he seemed to be trying to make him ashamed of himself, and to make him pay up. That was what I considered.

16709. This torrent of abuse was going on?—Yes, in the urinal.

16710. It is not exaggerating to say it was a torrent of abuse, is it? Is that how you would describe it?—Yes, Wells was very excited, and looked very white and upset. In fact, the man looked ill.

16711. He looked ill?—Yes, he looked white and looked ill; he was so excited over it. As soon as the police constable said the least thing to him, he said: "I sha'n't go—what have I to go for? I have not caused any breach of the peace—I shall not go."

16712. You say that when you came out of that urinal "Wells was shouting at the 'bus-driver who was getting up on his box to get out of the way of Wells as far as I could judge"?—That is right.

16713. To get out of the way of Wells?—Yes.

16714. What was he afraid of?—It appeared to me that if he had not got up there would have been a fight.

16715. Things were so bad as that?—Yes, that was my impression.

16716. The man was clambering up to the box of his 'bus in order to avoid being assaulted?—The other man kept jawing at him, and as he was at the side of the 'bus the other man walked towards the front of the horses and went up to him in such a way that I expected to see a fight.

16717. And yet you went on putting your motor to rights?—No, not at all. I came out at that moment at my end of the lavatory. The lavatory was this way and my 'bus was there (describing). They came out there, and the driver got on to the horse 'bus and I came out at this end and stood looking at them.

16718. (Chairman.) You stood looking at them?—Yes.

16719. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where?—In the end of the lavatory as I came out of the lavatory.

16720. Had there been this violent language used in the lavatory?—Yes.

16721. It was being used as the man went out of the lavatory?—Yes.

16722. When you came out they were on the ground looking as if they were going to fight?—Quarrelling.

16723. Quarrelling on the ground?—Yes.

16724. Then this man clambered up on to his box to get out of the way?—Yes, that is right.

16725. What did you do then?—I went towards the front of my box and started taking off the bonnet. Just at that time the horse 'bus driver, as soon as he was up, pulled his horses out and drew round the front way to go down Highbury Park.

16726. You went to your engine and began to put it to rights?—I opened the bonnet and put some fat in the pump and took a little cap off and put some grease in and put it on again. All the time I was taking notice of what was going on.

16727. Did the man get on to the box before you got to your motor?—Yes, he was on the box as I went by. I looked at him to see what was going on before going to the front of the motor.

16728. Then Wells having failed in assaulting the driver went to he horses' heads, I understand?—I don't mean to infer that he meant to assault the driver at all.

16729. You thought there was going to be a fight?—He looked very excited. Had it been other men besides this man it might have been rather worse, and there would have been a fight, but this 'busman seemed very quiet, and he got on his 'bus and seemed as though he wanted to get out of it.

16730. At that moment Wells must have been quite close to him?—He was close to the side—as close as I am to you.

16731. He got on the box, and was it then that he ran in front of the horses?—He gradually walked that way.

16732. What did he walk to the front of the horses for?—I could not say, but he took a step or two in that direction, and was going on at the man all the time.

16733. I understand you to say he got in front of the horses?—He got about a yard in front of the horses' heads.

16734. Do you mean to suggest that he went to the horses' heads to stop the horses?—I don't know what his intention was, but he went there. I don't suggest anything. I don't know whether he intended to stop them or not.

16735-6. You saw these men there and thought there was going to be a fight?—If he stood there he could have had another say at the man before he pulled away. That was my impression.

T. W. Young. 28 Nov. 1906.

16737. He could have another say by standing alongside?—Yes, but then the man could pull away and be gone. It seemed as though he stood there to hinder him.

16738. To obstruct him getting away —Possibly.

16739. How many people do you say were there?—I think there would be about four or five 'busmen and timekeepers, and four or five other people; there might have been ten or a dozen people standing about.

16740. Do you know any of them?—Yes, I know my own conductor for one, and I know the timekeeper of the London General, I may have spoken to him about the time of day, he stood there, and our own people were a little further back.

16741. Those were the men you knew well?—Yes.

16742. And they could be found, of course?—I believe so.

16743. Were there any others amongst them that you knew?—Not that I know of.

16744. All the rest were strangers?—I believe so, barring our old man who fills the engines up with water.

16745. How many omnibuses were there altogether?—I believe only two—my motor 'bus and the horse 'bus behind us.

16746. The men who were there would be yourself, the conductor, and the two timekeepers who are constantly there?—Yes, and the man who fills the engines with water. There would be five.

16747. Was anybody else there?—There would be strangers who walked by; they might have been males or females; there might have been five or six people there.

16748. There might have been?—About five or six.

16749. Were there any women there?—There might have been.

16750. You know we have been told there was nobody there?—I cannot help that, I can only speak of what I saw.

16751. You say there were women there?—I do not say there were. There was the general public. Whether they were males or females I do not know. There may have been a woman or two passing the road from one side to the other. They watched and hesitated, and saw the man taken into custody.

16752. There was so much noise that it attracted a little crowd?—Quite right.

16753. This little crowd looked?—Yes.

16754. Did they say anything about it afterwards?—Not that I know of; they stood and looked and watched the man taken down the road.

16755. Did you say anything afterwards?—No, I got up and took my car away, I should think about two minutes after.

16756. This man Wells is well-known there?—He may be, I do not know him.

16757. He must be well-known to the timekeepers?—I do not know that.

16758. You have seen him. He was there?—I believe I have seen him chatting to the London General timekeeper.

16759. You have seen him chatting to the London General timekeeper?—Yes, I believe so.

16760. He always appeared to be a respectable man?—As far as I knew him up to that time.

16761. When he was taken up by the policeman was there no observation made upon this rather remarkable event, either by you or by anybody else? You did not drive off at once, I understand?—In about two minutes.

16762. Was there no conversation in the crowd?—I went and spoke to the conductor about it.

16763. You did?—Yes. I said that the man had got nicked—I mean, taken into custody.

16764. Anybody could see that, of course?—Yes.

16765. Was there no observation as to the reason for it?—Not that I know of.

16766. Did they say it appeared quite right of the police, or quite wrong of the police, or anything like that?—I do not think anybody passed any opinion.

16767. Nobody passed any opinion?—Not to me; they may have talked to one another.

16768. They were talking to one another?—Some of them were speaking about it.

16769. Did there seem to be any feeling about it?—Yes.

16770. What kind of feeling?—I cannot tell you.

16771. You were there for two minutes?—Some of them tossed up their heads at his being taken.

16772. What do you mean by that?—I do not know—as much as to say he asked for it, or deserved it.

16773. You were not able to gather what they meant by it?—No, I was not.

16774. They did stay talking about it?—Yes, just a minute or two.

16775. How long were they talking about it?—They seemed to clear away just before I went, I think.

16776. I see you say here, "Wells made a slight struggle against the police constable when he arrested him"?—Yes.

16777. What do you mean by "a slight struggle"?—When the policeman got hold of him he went like that, and tried to pull away.

16778. How often had the policeman spoken to him before he took him by the collar?—I believe he said to him, "You had better get out of this; this is not the place to quarrel with a man." Wells said, "I shan't go away."

16779. The omnibus driver had gone then, had he not—he had left; he had driven off?—Not at all.

16780. He had not driven off?—No, he was on his 'bus pulling his 'bus from the side.

16781. Therefore there was no more risk of any more trouble with him?—The constable came up and spoke to him as he was standing jawing to the man on the 'bus. The constable came up and said, "Come along, this is enough of that; you had better get out of it."

16782. When he was standing in front of the horses?—Yes, partly in front of the horses.

16783. You saw him come up and stand in front of the horses?—About a yard in front of the horses.

16784. Then he came and said, "Come along"?—The 'bus driver had the reins like that to pull out a little like that, and then Wells stood over there.

16785. What did the policeman then say to him?—"Get out of it."

16786. He had not touched him at that moment?—No, not at all.

16787. What did Wells say to that?—He said, "What am I to get out of it for? I have not committed a breach of the peace." The policeman said, "Come along, get out of it." He said, "I shan't get out of it." Then the policeman caught hold of him and took him down the road. Wells said, "I am only trying to get my rights."

16788. Then when Wells said he would not go, the policeman took him by the collar?—Yes.

16789. What did the policeman say to him?—He said, "You had better get out of it." Wells said, "I shan't get out of it." Then a mob round seemed to collect and looked to see whether the man would go when he was told or not. Then the constable, seeing that the man was obstinate, and would not go away, took hold of him by the collar and took him away.

16790. Then came this struggle?—Yes, the policeman, I believe, caught hold of him with the other hand, and took him down the road—pushed him along.

16791. When this was taken down, tell me exactly how it was taken down. The Inspector, I suppose, sat at his table?—He sat at the table.

16792. Where were you?—Sitting on a chair at the police station. He said, "Do you remember the occurrence—what you saw and heard"? I said, "Yes." He said, "Say it and I shall write it down, and you will have to sign it." He said, "Just tell me only what you want on this paper—what you remember; do not say what you do not know."

16793. You then proceeded to speak, I suppose?—I said it was on the 13th, about 3 o'clock. He said, "Yes," and he proceeded to put it down. I may not have said the words in the exact order he put them down. I might have said, "At 3 o'clock on Saturday," or "On Saturday at 3 o'clock."

16794. You may not have told him exactly the words he has written down?—I may not have said it in the exact order in which they are there.

16795. He put it in his own words, and then read it to you?—No, not at all. There is nothing there except what I said. He said to me, "What was it you saw and heard, and when was it?" I said, "It was on Saturday, the 13th October, about 3 o'clock."

16796. He asked you questions, I suppose, as you went on, and you answered the questions, and he wrote down the answers?—I do not think he said very much. I said most.

16797. Did you say this right away through and he simply jotted down what you said?—Very nearly. He may have asked me one or two questions. He did.

16798. He did ask you one or two questions?—Yes.

16799. Just see if you can remember what questions he did ask you?—He wanted to know where it was, and about what time, and I told him. He said, "Get on with it. What do you say?" I said, "I drove my 'bus up to Highbury Barn, I heard a noise in the lavatory; I got down and went in to make water, and I saw Wells and this other man in there quarrelling. They were both rowing. Wells was very excited." He said to the other man "You do not mean to pay me." They walked out of the lavatory. In perhaps half a minute I walked out after them. They were quarrelling all the while. The driver walked up to his 'bus, and got on to his box. Wells turned round and said, "If you do not b——y well let me hear from you next Tuesday see what I will do." Whether he meant he would fight him or sue him I do not know. That is what he said. The driver pulled out his horses, and Wells kept jawing at him all the time. The driver attempted to pull out. Wells was still shouting at him. Then the policeman came up and told him to go away. He said, "I shan't go away; I have committed no breach of the peace. I have a perfect right here; what have I to go away for?" The constable said, "If you do not go I shall take you."

16800. The inspector read it out in the way you have told me now?—Yes.

16801. Only more slowly, I suppose?—Yes. I thought of it just as it happened.

16802. You had thought of it before, so as to put it down as it did happen?—Yes, I thought of it at home when I had to go and make the statement.

16803. I thought you meant you thought of it at the police station?—I had to think of it then as well.

16804. You thought of it in order to see that it was in order?—After I was asked to go up I thought about what did happen.

16805. You thought about it on the day you were asked to go up?—Yes, and on the morning before I went.

16806. When you came and saw the Inspector you put your ideas in order?—I pretty well knew what I was going to say when I got there. I only said what I saw and heard. I did not think a lot of it because I thought I had only to speak the truth, and it does not matter what I say then.

16807. (Chairman.) You had only to speak the truth and you thought it would be all right?—Quite right.

16808. I understand from you, just to sum up your view of the matter, that Wells was noisy?—Yes.

16809. He was abusive?—Yes, he was.

16810. He used the foul language you have mentioned?—Yes, he did.

16811. And his manner was menacing to Hill?—Yes.

16812. You think if the driver had not got up to his omnibus there might have been a fight?—I honestly do.

16813. You think, on the whole, the constable was in the right?—I believe so. I think he was in the right.

16814. Be careful?—Yes, he was in the right.

16815. In your opinion the constable was in the right. I want you to be careful in answering that question?—I have seen other men get more chances to go away than Wells got, but the constable was perfectly in his right.

16816. That is your opinion?—Yes, that is my opinion.

16817. Did you write a letter to Wells in answer to his request to you to come here?—Yes, I did do so.

16818. Now listen to your letter, if it is your letter: "Dear Sir,—Sorry to say I cannot get the day off, I must study my living, I would come if I could get the time off as I witnessed your arrest from start to finish, which I consider unwarranted"?—I did say that.

16819. Is that your letter?—Yes, that is my letter.

16820. A moment ago you told me that the constable was quite right in arresting him?—Yes, so I do think so now.

16821. You think so now?—Yes, I do, and I thought so then. I wrote that to Mr. Wells because he was worrying me to come up, and I did not want to come when I wrote that letter. I was under this impression—I have seen other men get more chances than Wells got, and I thought Wells might have had another chance to get away; at the same time I thought the constable was well within his right to take him.

16822. You have been examined by me at length, and by Mr. Dickinson at length, and you have had every chance to give your version of the facts?—Yes, and I have spoken the truth.

16823. And you have no explanation to give of this letter?—Only that at the time I thought the man might have had another chance to get away, which I did at the time.

16824. You do not dispute this letter?—No, that is my letter.

16825. (Mr. Dickinson.) On what date did you write it?—I do not remember the date I wrote it.

16826. (Chairman.) The date is immaterial?—It was just before the Commission sat.

16827. (Mr. Dickinson.) How soon after the event was it?—When he was first at the Police Court. I believe directly after that he wrote to me, or directly after that he knew he wanted me to go up—about two or three days after he wanted me to go and give evidence, and he wrote to me. Then I wrote back and said I was very sorry I could not go as I had asked for time at the yard, and they said unless I had a note down subpœnaing me they could not spare me.

16828. You remember I asked you some questions about those letters. The result of it was you said there was only one letter and that was a letter asking you to come?—Yes.

16829. Was that letter which we have had read in answer to the first letter?—He must have sent me two letters. That is an answer to the first one.

16830. Now we have got back to two letters?—Yes.

16831. Now we have it that there were two letters?—He did write two letters.

16832. He wrote you a letter asking you to come, and then he wrote you another letter saying he did not want you to come?—Yes.

(Chairman.) (To Mr. Wells.) Do you wish to ask the witness any questions?

16833. (Mr. Wells.) I believe I saw you about two days after I went to the Police Court, when you asked me how I got on, and I told you my case was dismissed you said "I should not think they could do anything else but dismiss it." Did you say that or not?—No, I did not.

16834. Did you also say you volunteered yourself as a witness?—No, I did not.

16835. So that you could get some of your own back from the police as a protection to you in case at any time they had to convict you?—No; I did not say anything of the sort.

16836. It is useless asking you any other question?—You suggested to me that I should have some cheap clothes off you, but I was never favourably impressed, because I thought if I owed you money you would treat me the same.

T. W. Young. 28 Nov. 1906.

16837. I did not ask you for your services as a witness?—Yes.

16838. You told me if I wrote to your company that would ensure you getting the day off to come up on my behalf. Did you, or did you not?—Why did I tell you to write?

16839. You told me to write so as to make sure of your getting the day off; it would be a help, and there was reason for making the application?—Why should I run after you and ask to go up in your favour?

16840. You did not run after me. I did not run after you, or you me, because I stood there?—What interest have I to put myself to trouble on your behalf?

16841. Did you, or did you not, say to me that if the constable had arrested you at the other end, meaning this end, you would have knocked his b——y head off?—Not at all.

16842. (Chairman.) There is one thing I want to be perfectly clear about as to what your view is. When did you first know Wells by name? Did you know him as Wells on October 13th, the day he was arrested?—No, I did not.

16843. I am going to take that down. "I did not know Wells by name on October 13th." You have told Mr. Dickinson with great particularity what took place at the police station when you gave your statement to the Sergeant, have you not?—Yes.

16844. Do you wish to modify anything you said to Mr. Dickinson in regard to the way in which your statement was made?—No, I do not.

16845. Let me read you now the first line of your statement: "A man known to me as Mr. Wells, tallyman, was in a urinal quarrelling with a horse 'bus driver." You say "A man known to me as Mr. Wells"?—Yes.

16846. Do you not see that that is inconsistent with your not knowing him as Mr. Wells on October 13th?—I heard his name from somewhere, but I do not know where.

16847. I asked you whether you wished to modify your statement you made to Mr. Dickinson as to the way in which your evidence was taken at the police station, and you said "No." Almost the first line that caught my eye was this: "A man known to me as Mr. Wells"?—Quite right; I knew him as Mr. Wells.

16848. Not on October 13th: "A man known to me as Mr. Wells, tallyman, was in a urinal quarrelling with a horse 'bus driver?"—Yes; but I did not know him by name when he was quarrelling.

16849. But you said so to the Police Inspector?—I did not say I knew his name on that date.

16850. You told Mr. Dickinson very particularly how you gave your evidence. Now look at the statement the Inspector took down?—I do not follow you.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask the Witness any questions, Mr. Muir?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No.

GEORGE EDWARD DAWSON, sworn.

G. E. Dawson.

16851. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you a Metropolitan Stage Carriage Conductor, badge No. 10243?—Yes

16852. Do you live at 20, Tetcott Road, Chelsea?—Yes.

16853. Were you the conductor of Young's motor-'bus on the 13th October?—Yes.

16854. Do you remember that you were standing at Kelvin Road, Highbury, outside the Highbury Barn Public-house, on Saturday, the 13th October, about three o'clock in the afternoon?—Yes.

16855. Did you know Wells at all before that day?—No.

16856. By sight or otherwise?—Only by seeing a man standing there; I did not know who he was, or what he was, or anything.

16857. Did you know his name at all?—No.

16858. Did you see him there that day?—Yes.

16859. What was it that first attracted your attention while the 'bus was standing there?—A row was going on; a loud voice in the urinal first struck my attention.

16860. Could you hear any words?—Yes.

16861. What did you hear?—Some words I heard. I heard a voice call "You b—— tyke. You f—— well do not mean to pay me."

16862. Was that the word used—"f"——?—He was using the words "f"—— and "b"—— all the way.

16863. You say you first heard a voice in the urinal?—Yes.

16864. Did you see anybody come out?—Yes.

16865. Who came out?—I saw this tallyman.

16866. Wells?—Yes.

16867. That man?—Yes; that is the man.

16868. Who else?—The London General driver.

16869. That is Hill?—Yes.

16870. Did you hear anything said outside after he came out?—He was swearing and shouting at the top of his voice all the while.

16871. Who was?—The tallyman Wells.

16872. What do you say took place after he came out?—When the two came out the London General driver got on his box because his time was up to go away, and his 'bus pulled out from behind mine, and Wells followed round and kept shouting to him all the while.

16873. What took place then?—When the 'bus came to the corner the constable came up and said, "We cannot have anything of that here; get away out of it." Wells said he would not. He said "I am not drunk."

16874. What took place then?—The constable told him two or three times to get away out of it. Wells said "No, I will not," and at the finish he caught hold of him by the shoulder and led him away.

16875. Were there any other people about there?—Yes.

16876. Just tell us about them?—There was the time-keepers, and what we call the puller-up. There were two pullers-up—the London General's puller-up and the old man who looks after our engines and puts the water in, and there were some ladies and one or two children that got into my 'bus when I went away.

16877. Could the ladies in your 'bus hear what was going on?—Certainly. Everybody could hear.

16878. (Chairman.) How long have you been in your present occupation?—Just turned four years.

16879. How long do you usually stop at this corner?—Five or six minutes. It depends sometimes upon how long the next motor coming up behind is.

16880. On this occasion were there any passengers inside your 'bus while you were waiting?—Not while I was waiting. This row was on, and the people were standing looking on.

16881. I have not asked you a question about a row at present. When you drew up there were there any passengers in your motor-'bus?—No.

16882. None at all when you drew up?—Some people had got off and had gone away.

16883. Then there were some people in, or on your 'bus when you drew up?—Yes.

16884. Did all the passengers get out?—There were only two or three left to get out there. They all got out.

16885. Did all the passengers get out?—Yes.

16886. Had any more got in before your attention was attracted by this row?—No.

16887. Then while this row was going on your 'bus was empty?—Yes.

16888. What were you doing? Had you been away from the 'bus at all, or had you stood near the 'bus all the time?—I was standing near the end of the 'bus all the time listening to the row in the urinal. When the man came up I followed along.

16889. Had the row commenced?—Just as we arrived there.

16890. The row commenced just as you arrived?—Yes. My 'bus and the London General 'bus got there just about the same moment. My 'bus went on to the stand first, and the London General 'bus came behind me, and the driver went into the urinal.

16891. You saw Hill get down?—Yes.

16892. Did you know Hill before by name or by sight?—I only knew him by sight.

16893. He got down and went into the urinal, and you heard the row commence?—Yes.

16894. How long did the whole thing take up to the moment when Wells was arrested?—I should think it lasted six or seven minutes; it could not have been more, I think.

16895. It lasted six or seven minutes?—From the time of my pulling up to the time of my going away.

16896. I was asking you how long did the row (I have adopted your word) continue—that is to say, the altercation, or the talking, or call it what you like, which began in the urinal, from the moment Hill went in to the time of Wells' arrest?—We will say about four minutes. It was about three minutes after the arrest when we left.

16897. The row went on for about four minutes, you say?—Yes.

16899. Then the constable came up after the 'bus moved?—Yes. That was the first time I saw him.

16900. You have told us what you heard pass?—Yes.

16901. That took place, of course, on October 13th?—Yes.

16902. You did not go to the police court, did you?—No, I never troubled my head about it.

16903. When did you next hear anything about Wells' arrest from anybody after the 13th?—The next thing I heard about it was my driver said to me: "I am going to give evidence about that affair at Highbury Barn." I told him: "If you like you can tell the police if they want my evidence they can have it. I will tell them what I heard and saw."

16904. Young told you he was going to give evidence?—Yes.

16905. When was that?—A week last Friday—Friday in last week.

16906. Which do you mean?—Last Friday.

16907. Why did you say a moment ago "A week last Friday"?—I meant Friday last week.

16908. What time on Friday last week?—In our working time I told my driver. We were on the morning shift. He told me he was going to give evidence. I told him, "If they like to have mine they can have it with pleasure."

16909. Young while on the morning shift told you he was going to give evidence before this Commission?—Yes.

16910. How long does a morning shift last?—From eight to nine hours—from 20 minutes past 8 in the morning until about 20 minutes past 4 in the afternoon.

16911. Where was it that Young told you this during that shift?—Whether it was at Highbury Barn or at Clapham Junction I could not tell you; I could not tell you the exact place.

16912. Was it early in the morning before dinner time?—I would not like to say for certain. It may have been as we finished work. No, it could not have been then. It must have been at the end of one of our journeys, because on the Friday we did not come home together after we finished, so it must have been during the day.

16913. Did you go to the police station and make a statement?—I got a message on the Saturday night asking me to go up.

16914. You went to the police station and made a statement?—Yes, I went to the police station.

16915. What sergeant or Inspector did you see?—I saw Smith I am told is his name.

16916. Did you tell him what evidence you were prepared to give?—Yes.

16917. And he took it down?—Yes.

16918. When Hill was getting on the box was the police-constable near?—Not when he was getting on the box. The first time I saw the policeman was at the corner. The horse 'bus was behind mine; he could not have been near.

16919. Where were you standing in relation to your 'bus?—I was standing just by the step of my 'bus.

16920. Where the conductor ought to be, in fact?—Yes. The tally man, Wells, was standing in the middle of the road right on the other side, just in front of the horses.

16921. That would be on the off side of your omnibus?—Yes.

16922. And on the off side of you?—Yes.

16923. Was he standing near the horses' heads in such a way that he would have been run over if the 'bus had gone on?—As a matter of fact the 'bus could not have gone on on account of mine. They had to pull up. If Wells had stood there and the 'bus had pulled out the horses must have knocked him over; but he kept following them round and shouting at him.

16924. You do not remember whether the police-constable heard anything before Hill got on the box?—If he was coming along he must have heard. I should think he could have heard the man's voice 30 or 40 yards away the way he was shouting.

16925. You distinctly remember Wells using the expression "You f—— well do not mean to pay"?—Yes, it was all f—— and b—— all the way.

16926. You distinctly remember that expression, I understand you to say?—Yes.

16927. Where was the constable then?—He was coming up at the moment to the corner.

16928. When the expression was used was the police-constable walking towards you?—That expression was made in the urinal by one of them.

16929. You say: "I distinctly remember him using the expression "You f—— well do not mean to pay"?—Yes.

16930. Where did he say that? If you distinctly remember it, probably if you apply your mind to it you will be able to tell me where it was said?—In the urinal he called him "a dirty b—— tyke," and when he came away I heard him say "You f—— well do not mean to pay."

16931. Was that while they were walking together from the urinal to the bus?—Hill, the driver was on his box then when he used that very expression.

16932. And the police constable was walking towards Wells?—Yes, he was coming towards Wells.

16933. So that when this expression which you distinctly remember was used the police-constable was still walking?—He was coming to meet Wells.

16934. He was still walking towards Wells?—Yes.

16935. When this expression which you distinctly remember was used?—Yes.

16936. You have no doubt about that?—I have no doubt at all.

16937. I am asking you because in your statement at the police station you say, after saying that you distinctly remember that expression, "The policeman was then standing close by"?—There would not be a yard separating the two.

16938. But the policeman cannot have been walking towards Wells, and standing at the same time?—It would not take the tenth part of a second for the expression to be said. The constable was coming up Highbury Barn, and while the man was using this filthy expression the constable just got there at the moment.

16939. Yes, but, you see, Wells denies all this; and I am trying partly to test your accuracy and partly to test your capability of giving a correct account of what took place. Mr. Wells absolutely denies that he used this expression "You f—g well do not mean to pay"?—I am positively certain that he did use it.

G. E. Dawson.

28 Nov. 1906.

G. E. Dawson.

28 Nov. 1906.

16940. You say: "I distinctly remember him using it"?—Yes.

16941. A moment ago you told me that when that was taking place the policeman was walking, and in the statement you made at the police station you said: "The policeman was then standing close by." You see what a difficulty you are placing us in. You are giving evidence directly contrary to the evidence given by Mr. Wells, and it seems to me that what you have now stated is not consistent with what you said at the police station. What is your explanation?—The policeman was coming up Highbury Hill. Of course, whether the policeman was standing or walking when certain expressions were used I cannot say.

16942. You say you cannot pledge your recollection as to that?—He was using these expressions all the while the 'bus was pulling out behind mine. Then the policeman was coming up to meet him.

16943. You must hear the expressions a good deal in the streets?—We do, every day.

16944. What made you so distinctly remember this particular expression?—We hear them every day. Some of them can hardly speak without saying "f——g" and "b——g."

16945. There are some people who do not, I suppose?—Yes, there are some, but it is quite common.

16946. Is the reason you distinctly remember Mr. Wells saying this simply from the recollection you have that nearly everybody in the streets is in the habit of using it?—No, I do not say so.

16947. Why should you remember Wells using it particularly?—I do not know why, but I know there was only one man doing the talking; only Wells could have used it at that time.

16948-9. Do you agree with Young, that Mr. Wells was not only noisy, abusive, and using this bad language, but that his manner was menacing?—I should not say menacing, but I agree with Young and the other people who were there. Some people said they thought he was mad, and some said he was drunk.

16950. You did not offer to go to the Police Court to speak on behalf of the policeman?—I never mentioned the case, and I never took any notice of it until last Friday. As a matter of fact I did not know that Wells was a tally-man until that day. I never took any notice of it. I did not know the 'bus-driver's name. I knew him by eyesight.

16951. Apart from the fact of the arrest there is nothing you could suggest to me as being a reason for your distinctly remembering any particular expression, is there?—They are common expressions with some people.

16952. I know, but Wells says: "I am a total abstainer, and I never use those expressions"?—I know the man did use them.

16953. It is the fact that they are so common that makes one suggest that your recollection is playing you false when you say that Wells used them. Are you certain it was not somebody on the pavement using them?—There was only one man doing the shouting, and that was the tally man, and I will swear he was using obscene language.

16954. What sort of obscene language?—"F——g" and "b——g."

16955. If you define obscene language by "f——g" and "b——g," that does not carry it a bit further than you have already carried it. At any rate, until last Friday or Saturday you had not spoken of the case to anybody any more than there may have been gossip at the corner?—That is all.

16956. Do you know Dunham, the policeman, at all?—No, I do not.

16957. Have you ever spoken to him since October 13th till to-day?—I have not spoken to him at all. I do not know him.

16958. (Mr. Dickinson.) Have you heard of any gossip about this between October 13th and last Friday?—No, I have not.

16959. The matter has never been referred to in your hearing?—Not in my hearing. I never heard anything about it, and I never troubled myself at all about it until my driver said he was coming to give evidence about the row at Highbury Barn. These were the words he said: "If my evidence is any good to them they can have it with pleasure."

16960. You have never even referred to it all this time until last Friday?—I have not.

16961. On no occasion?—On no occasion.

16962. Never even talked it over with your driver?—No.

16963. Did you know that your driver had been asked by Mr. Wells to give evidence?—I know Mr. Wells had got upon my 'bus, but what they were talking about I could not say. When the 'bus pulled away from Highbury Barn it was going so slowly that the people inside were complaining. I ran to the front and said "What is the matter? Let us get on."

16964. Did he say what was the matter?—No, he did not say anything. I did not know whether they were referring to the case at all, and I never asked any questions. I only said "Let us get on."

16965. You know now from what you heard in Court that Mr. Wells had spoken to your driver?—I know now that Mr. Wells had approached my driver.

16966. I wish you would explain to me exactly how those two 'busses stood. The motor-'bus came up first, did it?—Yes. This is Highbury Barn public-house; the motor-'bus was standing here, the London General 'bus was there, and the urinal is there.

16967. The motor-'bus had drawn up from that direction?—Yes.

16968. The 'bus had come up precisely behind it?—Yes.

16969. So they were standing like those two books?—Yes. The urinal was about here.

16970. When they came from the urinal they walked from there to the 'bus?—The driver walked from the urinal and climbed up on to the front of his 'bus. Wells was standing there.

16971. Where were you?—Standing here, just by my step.

16972. How much room was there between the horses and the motor-'bus?—A matter of about a yard. There was just room for him to pull round.

16973. When the driver climbed on to the 'bus what did Wells do?—When the driver climbed on to the top of the 'bus Mr. Wells was still shouting at him.

16974. From between the urinal and the 'bus?—Yes; he was standing about here. The urinal was here.

16975. What did he say?—He was shouting at him, "Why don't you pay me the money you owe me?" or words to that effect.

16976. Did he change his position?—He was at the side of the 'bus, was he not?—He was just by the horses' heads. These were the two horses' heads. When the 'bus pulled out Wells kept following on the outside. Wells came round on to the kerb.

16977. Did Wells come right round in front of the motor-'bus?—Wells came right round here, just to where the 'busses stand at the corner.

16978. Walking in front of the omnibus?—In front of the omnibus. As it comes round here, then the 'bus has to come on at like right angles.

16979. While the driver was pulling his horses round there, Wells was walking in front of the horses, was he?—Yes, shouting all the way, walking backwards, and shouting at him.

16980. Until they come close to the front of the motor-'bus?—Yes; my motor-'bus was about a couple of yards away from Highbury Hill.

16981. Where did the policeman come from?—The policeman came from Highbury Grove, away up this way. When the 'bus comes round it comes round like that. The policeman came up this way, and met Wells at the corner.

16982. When was it that he was using this obscene language after the driver was on the 'bus, and while the 'bus was being driven round?—Just as he got to the corner, as he was coming round the corner, I heard him say, "You f—— well do not mean to pay"? At that moment the constable came up and laid hands on him.

16983. Where was he when he said that?—Round the corner.

16984. That is to say, he had come round?—Yes.

16985. Where were you?—I had followed up from here.

16986. What made you follow up?—I heard this going on, and I suppose I was a little bit inquisitive, like all the others, and I wanted to see the finish of it. But my time-keeper called me away.

16987. You at the beginning distinctly saw what happened after they came out of the urinal?—Yes.

16988. Were they fighting?—No, there was no fighting went on. The London General driver seemed as if he wanted to get away. He looked as if he did not want to be shown up; he wanted to get away out of it.

16989. You have heard Young say that this morning, have you not?—Yes, I heard Young say it.

16990. Had you thought of that before you heard him say so this morning?—I thought so at the time, and the people remarked it that he did not like to be shown up.

16991. What people remarked it?—Passengers in my 'bus talked about it. Two ladies were talking about it going down the hill.

16992. What did they say?—They said, "What is it all about? What is it?" I said, "I do not know; somebody wants some money of him, and he will not pay." One of them said, "He must be drunk or mad."

16993. One of them said, "He must be drunk or mad"?—Yes.

16994. What sort of a person was that?—Two ladies.

16995. (Chairman.) You told me there were no passengers in the omnibus?—That was after we came away—when we started the journey. Before we started there were several people standing round. I did not leave there till about three minutes afterwards.

16996. You say there were several people standing round. First of all you told me there were two time-keepers?—Yes, and the puller-up of the London General, and the old man who fills the engines with water. He is called a puller-up.

16997. There was one pulled-up for horses?—Yes.

16998. That is four. What other people were there?—Other people coming from Blackstock Road wanting to get to the West End. I carried several people from there. While the row was going on they were all standing looking.

16999. Where were they standing looking?—Round the 'bus and the policeman and Wells.

17000. There were how many?—I should say a dozen or so.

17001. In addition to these conductors and time-keepers?—Yes.

17002. How many of them got into your omnibus?—I could not tell you exactly how many, but I should think I carried 7 or 8 away. I had above five or six inside and two or three on the top. I cannot say how many there were. My bills, which are at the Road Car's place, will tell you exactly how many people I had on that journey.

17003. I am just going to read to you what you said to the inspector: "The policeman was then standing close by, and could have heard this, I distinctly remember him using the expression, 'You f—— well do not mean to pay.'"—That was at the corner; the policeman had come up Highbury Hill.

17004. After he had pulled round the motor-'bus?—Yes, as he was pulling round the corner.

17005. "The policeman was then standing close by." Where was he standing?—At the corner; he had only just come up.

17006. At the corner of the public-house?—Yes.

17007. That is to say, just close to where the horse omnibus had pulled up, or come round?—Yes.

17008-9. "And could have heard this. The policeman went up at once and ordered the tallyman away." Where was the tallyman standing at that moment?—They were both at this corner. As the London General 'bus driver got round the corner he went away.

17010. Then the horse omnibus was between the motor-'bus and the policeman at that moment?—The horse omnibus had gone away. As soon as he got round the corner, he had gone away.

17011. And you were standing close by?—I was standing close by.

17012. And you could see that?—Yes.

17013. Your driver was standing there too, I suppose?—I do not know what he was doing.

17014. Cannot you charge your memory with what he was doing then?—He may have been standing beside them, or he may have been busy with his engine, or anything.

17015. He could see them as well as you?—Yes.

17016. The horse omnibus then moved off and went round the corner out of sight. Where did the horse omnibus move to?—It went down Highbury Hill.

17017. You being where your left hand is now?—Yes, just at this corner.

17018. You saw the omnibus go down this road?—Yes, I saw it go away.

17019. How far could it go down the road—till it got out of sight?—You could see it in sight for about a quarter of a mile.

17020. "The policeman told the man to go away again." That was after the omnibus had got out of sight?—Yes, the omnibus had gone then.

17021. That is to say, it had gone down the road a quarter of a mile out of sight?—I do not say that. I was not watching the omnibus.

17022. It had gone away?—It had gone away.

17023. "The policeman told the man to go away again and a crowd gathered round"?—Yes.

17024. The omnibus was well out of view?—I did not notice the omnibus, I was watching them. It may have been still in sight. You can see a long way down that road.

17025. "The tallyman replied to the policeman, 'That man owes me money; have not I a right to come and get what belongs to me?' The policeman told him to go away two or three times, but he still remained shouting at the top of his voice, 'What have I done?' The constable then arrested the man, and caught hold of the man by his coat. The man tried to break away from the policeman, and said something to the effect that he was not drunk and went away with the constable." All that happened after the omnibus had gone away?—Yes.

17026. Therefore the driver of the omnibus could not have seen it?—No.

17027. He could not possibly have seen it?—No.

17028. And anybody who says that the arrest took place when the omnibus was there is telling what is not accurate?—They are; they must be. It is not true, because the omnibus had gone, when the policeman took him. Sometimes the omnibus will stop at the church at the corner. Whether he stopped there or not and saw the arrest I could not swear. He had left Highbury Barn public-house I am positive. Whether he stopped at the church I could not say.

17029. Would it be a minute or two after the 'bus had gone when the arrest took place?—It was all done in about a couple of minutes.

17030. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose you are sure that the policeman told him to go away two or three times?—Yes, certainly.

17031. You are sure of that?—Yes.

17032. You have told me that before that happened the omnibus had gone away and disappeared?—Yes. I did not say the omnibus had disappeared. I said the omnibus had gone away, because you can see a long way down Highbury Hill. The omnibus may have been standing at the church. I never took notice of it. The omnibus had left Highbury Barn, but whether it had disappeared or not I cannot say.

17033. Do not let there be a misunderstanding about it. When you made this statement you said "The horse omnibus then moved off and went round the corner out of sight." I asked you what that meant, and you said it was round the corner down the road by the church. You said it was a quarter of a mile away?—Out of sight—out of my sight.

G. E. Dawson.

28 Nov. 1906.

17034. But you can see down the road a certain distance?—If you walk along the middle of the road. Highbury Road runs at right angles to where I was standing.

17035. The omnibus had gone out of your sight at any rate?—Yes.

17036. And I suppose nobody standing there could see it?—The people standing in the roadway might have seen it.

17037. What I want to understand is when, after that had happened, and you say that the policeman told him to go away two or three times, but he still remained shouting at the top of his voice—who was he shouting at then?—He was shouting out "I won't go—what have I done. I won't go. I am not drunk." I am positive he said "I am not drunk." He kept using different expressions. I cannot remember them all; but that was one that I can remember—"I won't go, I am not drunk."

17038. He kept on shouting that out?—Yes.

17039. And the policeman at last took him away?—Yes.

17040. I think you told the learned Chairman that Young told you he was going to give evidence last Friday?—Yes.

17041. Did he tell you what he was going to give evidence about?—He said he was going to give evidence about the row at Highbury Barn before this Royal Commission. As a matter of fact, I did not know the case had been dismissed at the police court. I took no interest in it until Young told me "I have to give evidence before the Royal Commission over this Highbury Barn case—that row that was on the day we were there."

17042. Up to that moment you did not know what row he referred to, I suppose, until he said "the row at Highbury Barn"?—Yes.

17043. Did you know at once what he was referring to?—Yes.

17044. You told us you never thought of it in the meantime. Had it never crossed your mind?—It had never crossed my mind. I never troubled my head about it.

17045. Did he tell you who had asked him to give evidence?—No, he did not say anything. All he said was he was going to give evidence before the Royal Commission, and I said to him, "If they want mine they can have it with pleasure." Those were the words I used.

17046. Where were you when this conversation took place?—It took place in our working time, but whether it was at Highbury Barn or Clapham Junction I cannot remember exactly.

17047. It took place when you got a rest off for a few minutes?—It might have been at the Highbury Barn end of the journey or the Clapham Junction end. I can remember it was last Friday that he told me. It was not after we finished work, but it was during our working hours.

17048. How did you know you had to go to the station?—On Saturday night I was going to bed early and a knock came at my door, and when I went there was a policeman there. I was not sure I would have to come at all. I simply told my driver if he wanted me I would go, and a police-constable came to the door with a message would I go to the Islington police-station as they wanted to see me.

17049. What time on Saturday was that?—I got the message about a quarter to 9, and I would get up there about 10 o'clock.

17050. You went straight up to Islington from Chelsea?—Yes.

17051. Did you go with the policeman?—No, me and my wife went up. She came out with me to keep me company.

17052. You got there I suppose late at night?—10 o'clock I think it was.

17053. What did you say when you got there?—I went in and told the man inside, "I have been asked to come up; someone wants to see me," and he asked me what it was about. I said "It is something about a row at Highbury Barn they want to see me about." The man in charge said "It is Superintendent Smith who wants to see you; he is not in just now; sit down." So I went in, sat down, and waited till he came.

17054. When he came in what did he do? Tell us what took place?—He came in and I believe he enquired if I had arrived. He must have been expecting me to come up, and when they told him I was there he took me in a room at the back. My wife went in with me, and he asked me if I was present at Highbury Barn when this row took place, and I said "Yes." He asked me what I knew about it, so I told him exactly about the bad language that was being used at the time.

17055. When he was taking this statement down which begins: "About 3 p.m. on the 13th October, 1906," did you know at that moment that it was the 13th October?—I did.

17056. How did you know that?—Because upon the Saturday previous I had had a day off. I had been to King's Cross, and that was October 6th. I had the date impressed on my memory, because I had not seen my uncle for ten years, and on October 6th I was at King's Cross to see him off. The Saturday after was the day that took place, and so I knew it was October 13th.

17057. When had you been thinking about all these things so as to bring the date back to your mind—when you were in the police-station?—Before I went to the police-station on the Friday.

17058. You settled it as the 13th?—No, he asked me what the date was.

17059. You had then to consider what date it was?—It did not need any consideration. The date was impressed on my memory that it was the Saturday after seeing my uncle off from King's Cross, and that was October 6th. I was not working on the Saturday previous or the two Saturday's previous.

17060. When the inspector took this down did he simply write out what you said or did he ask you questions?—The inspector said: "Now you arrived at Highbury Barn," and then he said to me, "What do you know?" and I told him. I said I heard a voice going on in the urinal, and I believe he asked me if I heard more than one voice, and I told him I only heard of one—a loud voice going on. He asked me if I could remember the words that were used, and I told him one sentence that I could remember hearing in the urinal, and that was "You dirty b—— tyke."

17061. You have got down here in this statement: "I heard a quarrel going on," that is not what you say here. You say now you heard voices?—I heard voices—I heard a quarrel.

17062. Did you say you heard a quarrel?—I told the inspector I heard a quarrel going on.

17063. You used the word "quarrel" to the inspector but you used the word "voices" to me?—I believe I used the word "quarrel" in front of the inspector I heard loud voices.

17064. You used the word "quarrel." What else did you say? I want to test your memory?—The inspector asked me if I heard more than one voice, and I told him no, that this man's voice was above anything else, and that that was the only one I did hear, and he was f———g and b——g, and one thing and another and, when they came out of the urinal the driver got on his box and pulled away behind me, and the tallyman followed him round, and I heard the tallyman say, "You f———g well don't mean to pay." The constable must have been coming up Highbury Hill just at the moment that the two of them met, the constable and this man Wells, and the constable told Wells two or three times to go away.

17065. When you told the inspector of this expression and that you distinctly remembered Wells using this expression, did he ask you then what expression he used, or did you simply volunteer that?—I volunteered that. I told him the expression that was used—that it was just at the moment the policeman told him to go away. It happened at the same moment when he used that expression.

17066. Did you tell him about any other persons being present?—Yes.

17067. Who did you tell him were present?—I told him there were two or three passengers in my 'bus, and when the 'bus left there they said, "What is it all about"?

17068. You told us to-day there were two timekeepers and the pullers-up there. Did you tell the inspector that?—No, I did not tell the inspector that, because they are always there.

17069. Did he ask you whether you could mention anybody else who was there?—No.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any questions, Mr. Wells?

17070. (Mr. Wells.) Yes, Sir. (To the witness.) Did you know me previous to this occurrence?—No, I did not.

17071. You had not an opportunity of recognising my voice at all?—I recognised you when you came out. There was only one speaking.

17072. How did you know it was me swearing in the urinal if you had never spoken to me before, or had the chance of recognising my voice?—The voice that was going on when you came out of the urinal was the same voice that was going on inside the urinal, so it must have been you.

17073. That is what made you believe it was me?—Yes; it was your voice all the time.

17074. You also said that your omnibus was in front of the horse 'bus?—Yes.

17075. You also said that when you drove up you heard a row and swearing going on in the urinal. How did you come to get your omnibus in front if you came up behind the horse 'bus?—No, I did not swear that.

17076. Yes, you did?—I said that our omnibus and the horse omnibus got there at the same time.

17077. You have not forgotten that you have to go round three roads before you get there, and that omnibus was there previous to your arriving?—Yes, but then these London General drivers when they pull up there take it very easily. They like to get behind the motor-'buses so as to shove us off.

17078. That all depends on how many are there. They like to have the best position, no doubt, but they do not do it very often?—One of our motor-'buses had just that moment gone.

17079. With regard to these motor-omnibuses, there are three roads, one Kelvin Road, by the side of the church, and then they go round a by-road which is called Mentone Road, and then they come up Kelvin Road. The Kelvin Road goes in a horse-shoe fashion right round, and they have to go through these roads on account of there not being sufficient room to turn the omnibus round and set the people down, and therefore they must come up behind the urinal before they can pull into a position on their left hand side behind whatever 'buses they are following. You had to do that, had you not?—Yes.

17080. How did your 'bus get in front. You distinctly said you stood in front of the horse-'bus and heard and saw everything?—Because the London General omnibus driver must have taken it easily so as to keep behind us. We both arrived there together.

17081. But he was there?—I did not say he was there.

17082. But I say he was there?—He was behind me, because he pulled round behind us.

17083. Then I will leave the driver to state what position he had when he came up?—He was behind me, because he had to pull out to get in front.

17084. You also said that while I and the driver were talking the constable was coming up Highbury Hill. Do you know where Highbury Hill is?—I do not know whether it is Highbury Grove or Highbury Hill. It is Highbury something.

17085. You ought to be careful. Highbury Hill is a matter of 300 yards away from Highbury Barn, and quite in another direction to the right. Where this occurrence took place that you are speaking about was not Highbury Grove or Highbury Hill, it was in Highbury Park. How far was the 'bus pulled round in Highbury Park out of Kelvin Road. The arrest occurred in Kelvin Road, did it not?—Yes, at the corner of Kelvin Road.

17086. This is your own illustration of the 'bus. Highbury Barn is here and the omnibus is here, the urinal is here. Is that so? (Describing.)—Yes.

17087. We, you say, were there? (Describing.)—Yes.

17088. The horse omnibus was here, and therefore if the horse omnibus was here, I stood there, did I not?—What is the name of the place here?

17089. Highbury Park?—Highbury Park runs at right angles to Kelvin Road?

17090. Look at this sketch which I have made. Perhaps that will help you? (Handing sketch to witness.) That is Highbury Park. I understood that the name of that was Highbury Hill. I did not know that was Highbury Park. I always understood that was Highbury Hill or Highbury Grove. That is where the arrest took place at that corner. (Pointing on the sketch.)

17091. In the centre?—I should say that is where the urinal is.

17092. This is the side of Highbury Barn, and the urinal is right opposite?—It is right opposite the saloon bar of the public-house.

17093. Perhaps it is; I will not be sure to a yard or two, but there is not much distance between either, because the urinal would be only 6 feet wide, and I take it that the saloon entrance is about the same, so that the 'bus would cover the two entrances. Is that right?—Yes.

17094. How did you come to discover that the constable was coming from Highbury Park when you were in Kelvin Road?—The constable must have come up this way, because I moved down that way to go into Highbury Park, as you call it.

17095. Are you not aware that the omnibus you were conductor of and the horse 'bus passed me in Highbury Park when I was under arrest?—Will you repeat your question?

17096. Just attend to the question before you answer it, because I only want you to answer it correctly. That omnibus of which you were conductor passed me while I was under arrest in Highbury Park? After the constable had arrested me your omnibus pulled out and passed me in Highbury Park?—You had been taken away about two minutes. I saw half a dozen people following you past the clock on Highbury Hill.

17097. Don't you remember the horse omnibus passed me with the man I am supposed to have been swearing at driving it?—The horse 'bus had gone away before you were arrested, but whether he pulled up round this Highbury Park or not I don't know, because I was called back along this Kelvin Road.

17098. (Chairman.) Did your motor-'bus pass Wells after he was arrested?—No, it could not have done. He had gone away and I saw a little crowd following. A clock stands in the middle of the roadway on Highbury Hill, and the crowd was past there. The passengers in my 'bus were looking out of the window and saw Wells going away.

17099. (Mr. Dickinson.) Which of these 'buses had come up first?—They both came up simultaneously. If a London General Omnibus comes up there I believe they have got orders to push on behind us and shove us off. There is only a stand for three. If three come on the stand the first one has to go away. If a horse 'bus comes up, and he sees a motor coming up at the same time, then he lets that motor come round so as to be first on the stand, so that he can pull behind and get him off.

17100. The driver of the horse 'bus had got off his box before you came up?—We both arrived there together. He got off and went into the urinal just as we arrived there.

17101. He got off his 'bus before you came up?—Yes.

17102. He was in the urinal before you came up?—No, we had arrived there. We had got upon the stand as he was pulling round. He pulled round directly behind us, and went straight in, and then the row started.

17103. When did your engine stop working?—As soon as we arrived there. When we arrived there we take the first place on the stand. Our timekeeper says, "Stop that noise," and the engines are not working at all. They won't let the engines work, because the people who live in the houses round about have complained about it.

(Mr. Muir.) Sub-divisional Inspector Smith can give you some information with regard to the two timekeepers and the two pullers-up if you desire it.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Are we not going to see those two timekeepers?

(Mr. Muir.) No, Sir. I can tell you why, but I had better call the Inspector.

Sub-Divisional Inspector SIDNEY SMITH, sworn.

Sub-Divisional Inspector S. Smith.

28 Nov. 1906.

17104. (Mr. Muir.) Are you Sub-Divisional Inspector of the N Division?—Yes.

17105. What is your station?—Islington.

17106. Have you interviewed the two timekeepers who have been mentioned by the driver Young?—Yes.

17107. With a view to seeing whether they could give evidence before this Commission?—That is so.

17108. Would you tell the Commission in your own way what the result has been?

(Chairman.) That is very much hearsay evidence, is it not?

(Mr. Muir.) Entirely. It is only to account for their absence from the Commission.

17109. (Chairman.) Why are they absent?—They state that they cannot give any definite information with regard to the occurrence.

17110. (Mr. Muir.) With regard to the two men who are called pullers-up. What do you say with regard to them?—I did not take statements from them because I considered they were too ignorant.

17111. (Chairman.) Who are the pullers-up?—Rather a low class of men who carry water to the motors. At one time they baited the horses.

(Mr. Muir.) Of course, those men can be physically brought before the Comission if desirable.

17112. (Chairman.) You did not think it was worth while taking their statements?—That is so.

17113. (Mr. Dickinson.) You did not take their statements because they were too ignorant?—That is so.

17114. Did you ask them anything about the occurrence to test their ignorance?—I asked them if they knew anything about it, and there was no definite reply at all.

17115. Do I take it that it is usual, and is supposed to be the proper thing, for a Sub-Divisional Inspector to decide as to whether witnesses should be called or not?—No, but there was no evidence to call in this case. They gave me no evidence.

17116. Did you see them?—Yes.

17117. Did you ask them anything?

(Chairman.) I hardly think it would be fair to Mr. Wells to ask what they did say, because it is really hearsay evidence. If what they said is of the slightest importance they ought to come here to say it.

17118. (Mr. Dickinson.) I was not going to ask you what they said. I want to know what course you took which assured you that their evidence was not desirable. Did you ask them?—Yes, I asked them, and got nothing from them.

17119. Do I understand that you asked the two timekeepers?—Yes.

17120. And you came to the same conclusion?—I came to the conclusion in their case that they did not want to give any evidence.

17121. (Chairman.) Will you kindly give their names to us?—I have not their names with me, but they can be easily found.

17122. (Mr. Muir.) You can get the names?—Oh, yes, easily.

17123. (Chairman.) You will send their names to the Secretary, and if you can get their addresses you will send them also, and the Commission will consider whether it is worth while calling them?—Certainly, Sir.

(Chairman.) That applies also to the two pullers-up. Are you going to examine this witness as to what took place at the police station?

(Mr. Muir.) No, Sir.

17124. (Chairman.) You took the evidence of the two men Young and Dawson?—I did.

(Mr. Muir.) May I point out with regard to that that those are simply instructions taken for the purposes of the Commission here to-day. The Commissioners desired to see them, and I supplied them with those witnesses proofs. I did not propose to tender you evidence, and it appeared to me most unusual to tender you evidence, as to the circumstances attending the taking of those proofs.

(Chairman.) Certainly it would be unusual for you to tender that evidence, but they are statements signed by the witnesses, and the Commission has asked for them.

(Mr. Muir.) I do not wish to controvert that in any way at all, but I only point out they are proofs, and they are not like ordinary reports made in the course of duty at all.

(Chairman.) We quite understand that these were not reports taken by the Inspector in the ordinary discharge of his duty. We quite understand they were taken because the Commission was to investigate this case, but they are statements taken by Inspector Smith from the witnesses and signed by the witnesses.

(Mr. Muir.) Certainly, Sir.

(Chairman.) They are clearly documents that are sufficiently relevant for us to receive, and we have got them.

(Mr. Muir.) I do not in the least know where the inquiry will stop if we are to investigate the circumstances under which every proof given on behalf of the Commissioner of Police is taken. I do not in the least know what it will lead to or where it will lead to. It is quite out of the ordinary course.

(Chairman.) The Commission will determine that.

(Mr. Muir.) Quite so, but the Commission will, I presume, hear any views I have on the subject before they determine the matter, I am sure.

(Chairman.) No, we do not hear speeches of counsel.

(Mr. Muir.) No, but the submission I should make to the Commission, I am sure they would desire to hear, and that is that no court that I know of would investigate the circumstances under which a statement of this kind was taken unless it was tendered on behalf of the party who took the statement.

(Chairman.) I have often heard a witness for the plaintiff cross-examined by counsel for the defendant upon the question of whether or not he had given a written statement to the solicitor for the defendant.

(Mr. Muir.) Certainly.

(Chairman.) And counsel takes his risk whether that evidence is put in or not.

(Mr. Muir.) This witness is in the position in an ordinary litigation of a solicitor's clerk who takes the proofs. I have never heard of any instance of a solicitor's clerk being called.

(Chairman.) I do not know what is in your mind at present, because we have got the written statements.

(Mr. Muir.) Quite so.

(Chairman.) I do not want to ask any question about it, because the witnesses have told us how they came to make these written statements, but Mr. Dickinson wants to ask a question of the Inspector about it.

(Mr. Muir.) That was prefaced by a suggestion that I had put this witness into the box for the purpose of proving the circumstances under which those statements were taken. That was not my object.

(Chairman.) No, it was put in the other way; I understood that was stated in answer to Mr. Dickinson.

(Mr. Dickinson.) No, I did not say anything about that.

(Mr. Muir.) I rather suggested that because I gathered from what you said when Inspector Smith was first called that you intended merely to question him in the way you have done, and that you were not going to ask him any questions as to the conditions under which the statements were taken.

(Chairman.) I never imagined Mr. Muir was going to ask him any questions about the statements at all. I understood you were going to call him simply to explain the absence of certain witnesses, but still, if Mr. Dickinson wishes to ask the Inspector any question about the statements——

(Mr. Muir.) Mr. Dickinson is entirely beyond my control.

17125. (Mr. Dickinson.) The question I was going to ask, first of all, has nothing to do with this. I was going to ask whether you were the Inspector on duty when this man Wells was charged?—No.

17126. You had nothing to do with that at all?—No, nothing at all.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose we are going to have the Inspector who was at the station when this man was charged.

(Mr. Muir.) Certainly.

(Mr. Dickinson.) We have never had his name, and that was the reason I thought it was this witness Inspector Smith.

Sub-Divisional Inspector S. Smith.

28 Nov. 1906.

(Mr. Muir.) The whole of my protest was founded entirely on a misunderstanding on my part. I thought you were asking the Inspector questions about the taking of the statements of Dawson and Young.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I thought he was the man who had taken the charge.

(Mr. Muir.) No. He will be called.

Police-constable THOMAS DUNHAM, 166 N, sworn.

P.C. T. Dunham.

17127. (Mr. Muir.) Are you Police-constable 166 of the N Division?—Yes.

17128. Have you been eleven years in the Police Force?—Yes, just over eleven years.

17129. You joined on the 1st July, 1895?—Yes.

17130. Where have you served while you have been in the Police Force?—Islington, Stoke Newington, and Cheshunt.

17131. On the 13th October were you on point duty at that point—I do not mean on that day, but for how long before that day?—I think about seven days before the 13th. I am not positive.

17132. Continuously for seven days?—I was warned to take the point up for seven days during a man's absence on annual leave.

17133. Had you been doing it for seven days up to the 13th?—Yes, about that time.

17134. During that time had you seen Wells at all?—No.

17135. Before the 13th you had not seen him at all?—No.

17136. On the 13th when did you see him for the first time, and what attracted your attention to him?—He was quarrelling.

17137. When?—On the 13th.

17138. At about what hour?—About 3 p.m. He was quarrelling with a 'busman.

17139. What was it you first saw or heard that makes you say he was quarrelling with the 'busman?—He was holloaing and shouting and using the most filthy language to this 'busman at the urinal.

17140. Where were you at that time?—Standing on the corner against Highbury Barn, on the fixed point.

17141. Is Highbury Barn the name of the public-house?—Yes, the corner of Kelvin Road.

17142. How far is that from the urinal?—It might be about 20 yards or something like that.

17143. You heard this holloaing and shouting in the urinal?—Yes.

17144. Did you hear any words?—I heard him using the most filthy language—f——g and b——g.

17145. What did you do first?—I took no notice of it until they came out.

17146. Who came out?—The two men came out—the 'bus-driver and the man named Wells.

17147. The 'bus-driver is Hill?—Yes.

17148. Up to that time had you seen Wells at all?—Not that day.

17149. Had you seen him before that day?—I had seen him before that day.

17150. When had you seen him before?—I saw him about eight years ago. I knew the man by sight eight years previous.

17151. (Chairman.) Wells?—Yes.

17152. (Mr. Muir.) Did you know his name eight years ago?—No.

17153. Had you seen him at all during the period of eight years?—No.

17154. When he came out with Hill what took place?—He was using the most filthy language and called him a f——g twister, and said he did not mean to pay him. I spoke to the 'bus-driver first, and told him he had better get on his 'bus, and I also spoke to the man named Wells, telling him to leave off using such language and to go away, that he ought to know better coming and quarrelling with a 'busman during his employment, he ought to know better, being a licensed man himself at one time.

17155. You knew he had been licensed?—Yes.

17156. A licensed 'bus-conductor or driver?—The man named Wells had been a licensed driver on that rank, and I knew him by sight, but not to know his name.

17157. What did Wells say to that?—He said, "I am not f——g well going for you, I am not drunk, I am on the road." The 'busman got on his seat and he placed himself in front of the horses' heads with the intention, as I thought, of preventing the horses from going on.

17158. Who did?—Wells. I asked him to go away again several times, and he kept saying, "I am not drunk, I am not going for you." I told him if he did not go away I should take him away. He said, "I am not going away, I am not drunk."

17159. What did you do?—As he refused to go away after I had asked him several times I caught hold of his arm and told him I should take him away. He threw himself round and was very wild, as if he resisted, and tried to get away, and I caught hold of his collar.

17160. What took place then?—He said: "Leave go of my collar." I released his collar.

17161. What took place then?—He shouted to the driver: "I shall see you again." We went down Highbury Grove, and as the 'busman passed he put his arm up and said something which I could not understand as to letting him go—that was the 'busman he was quarrelling with at Highbury Barn.

17162. Where did you go?—I took him to Upper Street.

17163. Before you left the place where you arrested Wells were there any people there?—Yes.

17164. Any people round about?—Yes.

17165. About how many?—I should say fifteen to twenty standing all round looking and wondering what was the matter.

17166. You took him to the station?—I took him to the station.

17167. Who was in charge of the police station?—Sergeant Hawes.

17168. What took place when you got in front of Sergeant Hawes?—I told him the charge was disorderly conduct and using obscene language.

17169. Did your prisoner, Wells, say anything?—The prisoner, after the charge was taken, said: "I am not drunk; and, now I come to think it over, it was not me who used the language; it was the other man."

17170. That was on the Saturday?—Yes.

17171. When the charge had been taken what did you do? Did you remain in the station or go back to your point?—I remained in the station till the prisoner was charged, and then went back on my point.

17172. The charge having been taken, you went back to your point?—Yes.

17173. On the 15th did you attend at the North London Police Court?—Yes.

17174. Did you give evidence yourself?—Yes.

17175. You were the only witness for the prosecution?—Yes.

17176. And for the defence the driver, Hill, was called?—Yes.

17177. And Carter was called?—Yes.

P.C. T. Dunham.

28 Nov. 1906.

17178. Did Wells himself give evidence on oath?—No.

17179. Did you hear what Mr. Fordham said?—Yes.

17180. He dismissed the charge?—Yes.

17181. Did you hear what Mr. Fordham said in dismissing the charge?—Yes. He said there might have been a mistake as to which used the language, and that the driver ought to have been charged as well. He said: "I discharge you this time," and he told him that he had better be careful in the future not to interfere with the men and transact business affairs amongst them during their employment. He said: "I shall discharge you this time."

17182. Did Mr. Fordham tell you that you had exceeded your duty or that you should have used more discretion?—No.

17183. Or that you had not stopped at telling an untruth in order to get a conviction?—No.

17184. Is there any truth in saying that Mr. Fordham said any of those things?—No truth whatever.

17185. Did Mr. Wells at the station say anything about being drunk?—Yes; he said he was not drunk.

17186. Had you accused him of being drunk?—No.

17187. (Chairman.) What time had you gone on duty at this point on Saturday?—From 9 to 5.

17188. Those are the times on which you had to be on duty? At what time did you go on duty?—I went on duty from 9 o'clock in the morning till 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

17189. Did you actually go there at 9 o'clock in the morning?—Yes.

17190. Had you been there for six hours uninterruptedly?—Yes. I had been there for six hours.

17191. Not gone away for refreshment at all?—No.

17192. Tell me exactly, if you please, where, in reference to the public-house, which has been called, I think, Highbury Barn, your point was?—Right at the corner—at the opposite corner, I think—of the road facing the Barn.

17193. That does not tell me much at present. Is Highbury Barn public-house at the corner?—It is at the corner of two streets—Kelvin Road and Highbury Park.

17194. Do they meet at right angles?—Yes, they run right up to the corner.

17195. You know what I mean by right angles—right across?—Yes.

17196. Do the roads continue on in the same direction?—Kelvin Road only runs into Highbury Park, and then it turns right and left.

17197. Standing at your point you look down what may be called three roads, and if you look one way you see Kelvin Road?—Yes, you stand at the corner of Kelvin Road.

17198. You see Kelvin Road?—Yes.

17199. Then you see Highbury Park as well?—Yes.

17200. That runs in two directions?—Yes.

17201. So that Kelvin Road runs into Highbury Park and stops?—Yes.

17202. Is there a refuge or anything in the centre of the road?—Yes, there is a urinal in the centre of the road with a post to stop anyone from running into the urinal. That is the only thing there is in Kelvin Road.

17203. Is there no lamp-post?—Yes, there is a lamp-post at each corner to light the urinal up at night-time.

17204. How far is the lamp-post near the Highbury Barn public-house from the Highbury Barn public-house?—The one that stands by the side of the urinal?

17205. Yes?—I should say about twenty yards, or something like that. There is an electric lamp on the opposite side which throws a light right down. That stands in Highbury Park.

17206. Is not this refuge together with the urinal accommodation in Kelvin Road?—Yes, in the centre of Kelvin Road.

17207. But not in Highbury Park?—No, not in Highbury Park.

17208. Where is the electric lamp-post?—In Highbury Park—on the opposite side—on the reverse side to Highbury Barn.

17209. I suppose the public-house has two frontages—one frontage in Highbury Park and the other frontage in Kelvin Road?—Yes.

17210. When the motor 'buses come up in what direction do they come?—They run round Kelvin Road. They go down the Kelvin Road—it is a road which has two outlets to it—it might be forty or fifty yards farther down the road there they run round there and come along another cross-road, and then up Kelvin Road into the other road and on to the stand ready to go away.

17211. Does Kelvin Road go out of Highbury Park and then back again into it?—Yes, farther down.

17212. I think one of the witnesses called it a horse-shoe kind of shape, but it is semi-circular?—It has like four corners; it goes round, and there is another road which comes into it.

17213. The motor-'bus at one point arrives at Highbury Park, then it goes into Kelvin Road, and ultimately it draws up at the Highbury Barn public-house?—Yes.

17214. Where do the motor-'buses draw up—between the urinal and the public-house?—Yes, they draw in between the urinal and the public-house.

17215. How many 'buses are allowed to stand there at the same time?—Three.

17216. Did you notice the arrival of the horse 'bus, and of the motor-'bus on this Saturday afternoon about three o'clock?—No, I did not notice their arrival. There were only three on the stand, I did not take notice of their arrival.

17217. When you heard this loud talking, and looked towards the public-house, you saw two 'buses standing there?—There were two 'buses standing there. A third 'bus came on the rank when the bother was on the go. When these two men were quarrelling another motor-'bus came, and the horse 'bus was between two motors.

17218. When did you first move towards the horse 'bus?—When Wells and this man came out of the urinal.

17219. The moment they did?—When they came out using most filthy language I moved towards them.

17220. At once?—Yes.

17221. Did you speak to the 'bus driver?—I spoke to the 'bus driver, and told him he had better get on his seat.

17222. Then what you have told Mr. Muir took place?—Yes.

17223. The effect of it was you arrested Wells, and took him to the station?—Yes.

17224. You have a note-book, of course?—Yes.

17225. Had you got it about you?—You do not record a note in the book when you take a man in charge.

17226. I did not ask you that. You had a note-book about you?—Yes.

17227. Have you got it here now?—Yes.

17228. Did you make any note of the arrest of this man in that book?—No.

17229. Let me look at the book, please. What are the papers you are taking out of it?—Only police court papers, and just the names of people when I call them in the morning. These others are all clean papers. (The book was handed to the learned Commissioner.)

17230. What do you put in this book?—Anything that occurs.

17231. Anything that occurs?—Anything that occurs, barring a charge; if you take a charge it is not recorded.

17232. (Mr. Whitmore.) That is recorded in another way?—Yes, that is recorded in another way.

17233. (Chairman.) You tell me you had been there for six hours on that day at the time the occurrence took place. Had anything unusual happened that day at all?—No—yes, a motor broke down in Mentone Road.

17234. About what time did that take place?—That was in the morning, I could not say the time exactly. I took the particulars.

17235. I see you did make a note of that?—Yes, it was supposed to be reported.

17236. Do I understand that you do not make a note in this book, when you charge a man, to refresh your memory?—No.

17237. That is the custom, is it?—Yes.

17238. It does not apply only to yourself, but it applies to all constables, as far as you know?—Provided they make any statement, or anything of that sort, it is required to put it down—provided the prisoner makes any statement in the station.

17239. Are you supposed to put down in this book anything that a prisoner says at the station?—If it is volunteered, or if he likes to say anything we put it down, if it is worth putting down, as you think.

17240. Did you hear nothing on that occasion at the station said by Wells that was worth putting down?—No, not as I thought.

17241. You were not here when he was examined by us, were you. I understand you were not. Wake up, please?—I was against the door.

17242. I mean last Thursday?—No, I was not here then. I thought you meant to-day.

17243. Last Thursday I meant. When you got to the police court did you find the Inspector in charge there?—There was an Inspector in charge.

17244. Who was that?—He was a stranger to me, but I believe he was an Inspector from Stoke Newington. I did not know his name. I did not know the Inspector.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you speaking of the police court, or of the police station, because I think the officer may be confused?

17245. (Chairman.) I mean the police station?—You said the police court. There was a sergeant there.

17246. What was his name?—Sergeant Hawes.

17247. You knew him before?—Yes.

17248. Where was he when you got into the charge room?—He was in the office.

17249. Not in the charge room?—No.

17250. Did you say or do anything?—I told the sergeant the charge.

17251. Do you mean by the sergeant the sergeant in charge—Sergeant Hawes?—Yes, Sergeant Hawes was in charge of the station.

17252. No, not in charge of the station, because he appears at this time to have been in an office?—He was not in the charge room when I went in.

17253. Did you go into the office to fetch him?—No, he came out.

17254. Before you had spoken to him at all?—I spoke to him. He lifted the window up. I said "I have a charge here for using filthy language at Highbury Barn."

17255. Did you say that out loud?—Yes, I spoke it out loud.

17256. Did the sergeant then say "You say he was using bad language. What was it"?—Yes. That was when he came into the charge room. He came into the charge room then and heard what it was.

17257. Did you then say to the sergeant "He was swearing"?—I said to the sergeant he was using the word "f——g." He said "Say it out loud so that the man can hear." I told him then the language so that the man could hear plainly what took place.

17258. The sergeant told you to speak up so that the man could hear?—Yes.

17259. Did you hear Wells ask you to speak up?—No, I never heard Wells say so.

17260. Do you say Wells did not ask you to speak up?—No.

17261. Still, the sergeant did tell you speak up?—The sergeant told me to speak up loud as to the language so that the man could hear it.

17262. Is it not the fact that Wells had to ask you to speak up?—No.

17263. You say he has spoken untruly when he told us "I had to ask him"—that is you, Police-constable Dunham—"to speak up as I could not hear what he was saying"?—That is wrong.

17264. What made the sergeant tell you to speak up?—Because he wanted to hear what the language was, so that the man could hear it, and there could be no misunderstanding.

17265. But why should the sergeant ask you to speak up if you were not speaking in a very low tone?—I told the sergeant what the charge was. He said "Go on, and speak out loud, so that the man can hear the language."

17266-7. He did that without Wells asking you?—Yes.

17268. Why should he do it?—It is the natural thing to speak up so that a prisoner or other witnesses can hear what the charge is.

17269. Why were you speaking so low?—I did not speak low.

17270. Then why did the Sergeant tell you to speak up?—So that the man could hear it.

17271. As I understand it, according to your account, although you were not speaking low, you were speaking in such a tone that Wells could not hear you?—I was speaking all right, the same as I am now.

17272. Why did the Sergeant tell you to speak up so that the man could hear you?—So that the man could hear it.

17273. Although you were speaking as loudly as you are now?—Yes; there was no need to say anything as to saying it out loud.

17274. Then the Sergeant ought not to have spoken to you at all?—It was unnecessary.

17275. The Sergeant appears to have said something to you like "Speak up, so that the man may hear what you are saying"?—Yes.

27276. "Tell me what it was." Did he tell you that?—He said: "Speak out so that the man can hear the language."

17277. Did he say, "You are no priest"?—No, he did not.

17278. Are you sure of that?—Yes.

17279. Did not the Sergeant go on to say: "Was he not f——g and b——g"?—No, he did not.

17280. I put it to you. This is what Mr. Wells has sworn—that the Sergeant told you to speak up, and then you said he was using bad language. "What was it?" "Well," you said, "he was swearing." The Sergeant said. You are no priest. Was he f——g and b——g"?—No; that is wrong.

17281. You say Wells has spoken untruly?—I say that is deliberately false.

17282. When the charge-sheet was written out, did Wells say anything?—He said nothing. Only after the charge was taken he said: "Now I come to think it over, it was not me using the language, it was the other man. I am not drunk."

17283. You did not enter that in your book?—No.

17284. Why did you not? You told me that if a prisoner said anything in the charge-room when he was charged, you might enter it in the book?—I did not think it was necessary.

17285. Before you signed the charge-sheet, did not Wells say: "Constable, can you conscientiously sign that charge-sheet?"—No.

17286. Took it as a matter of course?—He never said anything.

17287. Had you said anything at all to Wells up to that moment as to what the charge was?—No.

17288. Did you search him?—Yes.

17289. Have you told us all that Wells said in the charge-room?—Yes.

17291. But where?—In the cell, I expect.

17292. Did you take him to the cell?—No.

17293. Who took him to the cell?—The man on reserve—the man on the door.

17294. Is that the ordinary course?—That is the order.

17295. I said is that the ordinary course. I did not

P.C. T. Dunham.

28 Nov. 1906.

say anything about the "order"?—Yes; that is the ordinary course—for the man on reserve to take the man down to the cell.

17296. Ought not the warder or the gaoler to take the prisoner from the charge-room to the cell?—Gaolers, when they are in court, take the man to the cell; but not the man in charge of the case.

17297. You were in charge of this case?—Yes.

17298. You did not take him to the cell?—No.

17299. When you left the station was he still in the charge-room?—No; he was taken down to the cell by the other man—by the man on the door.

17300. Did you hear the Sergeant say anything further to Wells?—No; only to ask him his name and address.

17301. Is that all?—That is all.

17302. Nothing further about the name and address?—No; he got a directory and looked at the directory. That is all I saw.

17303. Was the name there?—I could not say. I left.

17304. Did you hear the Sergeant say to Wells that he would have to go into a cell?—I never heard him say he would have to go into a cell. He was taken down by the man on the door.

17305. How long after the charge was read did you remain in the charge-room?—About a minute or two—not more. As soon as I signed the charge I was gone.

17306. When a constable arrests a man as you arrested Wells in this case, and you leave your point, is no other constable left at the point?—The first constable who comes on the scene takes up the point for the present.

17307. Did you meet another constable on your way?—I saw several that were on point themselves, regulating the traffic in Upper-street, on account of the cars.

17308. Did you tell them your point was left?—No; they could not leave their point to go to another point. Their point was of as much value as any other.

17309. But was there nobody left on point at Highbury Barn?—No.

17310. You went back there as fast as you could?—I went back.

17311. Is no provision made for getting some other constable to come to the point in case of an arrest?—Not unless he happens to see you, and knows you have come from a certain place.

17312. If you had met a constable on duty, you would have told him to go to your point?—I should not have told him. He would have gone without speaking to me.

17313. How long were you away on this occasion?—About an hour, or something like that.

17314. Then you were away for an hour in this case, and the point was left quite unattended to?—Yes.

17315. You had been on duty for six hours at the point?—Yes.

17316. It is rather a relief to go off, is it not?—No; it is far enough to go there when you have to walk, without having to go with anybody else.

17317. You say you would have preferred to spend an hour—from 3 to 4 o'clock—at your point than to take the man away?—Certainly.

17318. Did you tell Wells what you arrested him for?—No.

17319. Did you think he was drunk?—No, not the slightest.

17320. Do you agree with the last witness that this language—"f——g" and "b——g"—is quite common in the streets?—No. They do not let policemen hear it. If they use it themselves they get on one side, or somewhere where the policeman does not hear, or they would be summoned for using this language.

17321. All 'bus drivers, 'bus conductors, and so forth, the moment you come near them, moderate their language, and you never hear anything of this kind?—They know better than use it in the hearing of a policeman. They know they would be reported for summonses for using the language.

17322. Because they are licensed persons?—They know they must not use the language during their employment.

17323. Do you conceive it your duty to arrest anybody for using bad language in the streets?—It is not natural to arrest them for bad language, provided they are licensed persons.

(Chairman.) Under what section was this charge of disorderly conduct and obscene language made?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is under two sections, one relating to disorderly conduct and the other relating to obscene language. At the moment I cannot give it to you. In the course of this enquiry it has been given.

(Chairman.) Yes, it has.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I will find it for you. I think Section 54 of the Police Act is one of them.

17324. (Chairman.) At any rate, in your view, disorderly conduct and obscene language is a charge that is frequently taken?—Yes.

17325. I want to know from you whether if two men are quarrelling in the street and you overhear language such as is alleged to have been used by Wells in this case you would conceive it your duty to arrest them?—I might arrest one. You cannot take two provided they turn awkward.

17326. Supposing two people are quarrelling in the street and are using bad language, and supposing they are swearing in the correct sense of swearing, which is not necessarily obscene language. An oath is not necessarily obscene language. Supposing a man used the word "damn," do you call that obscene?—No.

17327. Supposing a man is not only swearing during the course of conversation in a public place, but is also using this offensive language which has been called "f——g" and "b——g," do you think it your duty to arrest him?—Certainly.

17328. Even although nobody else complains?—They draw a crowd round.

17329. I say even if nobody else complains, do you still think it your duty?—If a crowd gathers, and the two refuse to go away.

17330. What I gather from your evidence here is that you hear voices, and you hear this offensive language being used. Then a 'bus driver comes out of the urinal and the other man comes out, and he uses this bad language. The 'bus driver gets on his 'bus?—After being spoken to.

17331. Why did you speak to them. No crowd had gathered round?—There was. They were looking at where the sounds came from, and they were standing on the road and on the pavement looking.

17332. A great many people are usually standing there, are there not, waiting to get into the omnibuses?—They might be standing on one side but not all about the road in different places.

17333. This is the first we have heard of men standing all about the road?—There were some in Highbury Park and some in Kelvin Road.

17334. Very likely, but do you mean to say that before you moved from your point upon hearing these sounds coming from the urinal a crowd of people had stopped and gathered round the urinal?—A crowd had gathered looking to where the sounds were coming from.

17335. But before Wells had come out and the 'bus driver, do you say a crowd had gathered?—They were standing all round there—not round the urinal, but they were all standing close handy, about five or six or perhaps twelve yards away.

17336. Listening to the language?—Listening to the language and to the noise that was in there.

17337. People who otherwise were going about their business were stopping in order to listen to this sound coming from the urinal?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The section is Section 54 of the 2nd and 3rd Victoria, one of the Metropolitan Police Acts. It is Chapter 47, Section 54, Sub-sections 12 and 13. Sub-section 12 says: "Every person who shall (among other things) use any profane, indecent or obscene language to the annoyance of the inhabitants or passengers." Sub-section 13 says: "Every person who uses any threatening, abusive, or insulting words, or behaviour, with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, or whereby a breach of the peace may be occasioned"—then in any of those cases "it shall be lawful for any constable belonging to the Metropolitan Police Force to take into custody without warrant any person who shall commit any such offence within view of such constable."

(Chairman.) Thank you. (To the witness.) I think that is all I wish to ask you now.

17338. (Mr. Dickinson.) I noticed you said just now that you spoke to the 'bus driver first?—Yes, I spoke to the 'bus driver, and told him to get on his seat.

17339. What was the 'bus driver doing to make you speak to him?—He was quarrelling with the other man.

17340. Still quarrelling?—Yes, he was quarrelling.

17341. What was he saying?—He was using very high words, and I told him to get on his seat, and he got on his seat.

17342. He was using very high words?—Yes, he was.

17343. Did the magistrate ask you why you did not summon him?—He said that he thought that the busman also ought to have been charged.

17344. Did he ask you why you had not taken the driver?—I told him it was not necessary to take the man off his seat.

17345. Because he was in charge of a public vehicle?—Yes.

17346. Did the magistrate say to you: "What do you do in that case when a man is in charge of a public vehicle"?—No, he did not ask me that.

17347. Did you not say you usually summoned him?—No, I told him it was not necessary to take him off a public vehicle, because he was a license holder, and he could be summoned.

17348. You told him it was not necessary to take him off a licensed vehicle, because a summons would meet the case as well?—Yes.

17349. Did he ask you: "Have you applied for a summons against him"?—No.

17350. Do not say no in every case unless you are quite certain about it. We have got this statement: "The magistrate asked you why you had not summoned him." That is Mr. Wells' evidence. Did he not ask you that?—He did not, Mr. Fordham wanted to know why he was not charged. He never said anything about a summons. He did not ask me if I had summoned him or reported anything.

17351. Then I ask you why you did not summon him?—Because he got on his seat when I spoke to him after his quarrelling with this other man. I was not certain that the man Hill used the language.

17352. You told me just now you thought he was. I asked you just now when you spoke to the driver what you did it for, and you said he was using violent language?—I said he was quarrelling with a man named Wells. I spoke to him and told him to get on his seat, and he did so.

17353. Did you take his number?—No, it is not required—not when he did what he was told. He never abused me.

17354. When this happened did the horse 'bus driver move away or not?—The timekeeper put his arm up for the horse busman to pull out. He turned his horses out a slight triangle, and Wells was in front of the horses' heads to prevent him coming out.

17355. You say he was there to prevent his coming out?—Yes, and he was still shouting at this man.

17356. Did he make any effort to prevent the horses coming out?—He stood there in front of them; no doubt if the busman had gone on the horses would have knocked him down.

17357. He was there, in your view, intentionally to prevent him coming out?—Yes.

17358. He did not touch the horses' heads?—No.

17359. Then this 'bus drew away?—Yes, it drove away.

17360. And drove away?—It drove out into Highbury Park.

17361. Had the 'bus disappeared before you arrested this man?—It went into Highbury Park, but it had not disappeared altogether.

17362. It was going into Highbury Park?—It was in Highbury Park picking up passengers.

17363. Tell me how it was you say that the bus passed you when you had Wells in custody?—Because this 'busman picked up passengers as soon as he got round into Highbury Park with me and Wells together in front of him.

17364. You passed the 'bus first walking with Wells?—Yes.

17365. While the 'bus was waiting?—While the 'bus was picking up passengers.

17366. Then the 'bus caught you up?—Yes.

17367. What was it the 'bus-driver said to you then?—I could not say. He said something, but what he said I could not say, but the motion of him was to let him go.

17368. Appealing to you to let him go?—Appealing to me to let him go, after I had got him in custody.

17369. You have just told us that whilst you were there a third 'bus came in?—Yes, there were two 'buses and a third one came up, while we were talking, while I was telling Wells to get out of it. The other 'bus man had got on his seat ready to go away.

17370. Then, another 'bus drove up, was that a motor-'bus?—The third 'bus was a motor'-bus.

17371. That motor-'bus was making a noise?—It had not stopped properly it had simply drawn on the rank and had not stopped.

17372. Therefore, when we are told that there was a motor-'bus making a noise, that is accurate?—It was making a noise for a minute or so, but that was not during the time this language was uttered.

17373. But the motor-'bus was coming up?—It was coming up—it was some distance in Mentone Road.

17374. How long did this noise last?—It might have been three, four or five minutes; I took no notice of it at first.

17375. Before the horse 'bus moved to drive away, the other motor-'bus came up?—Yes, the other motor-'bus came up, behind it.

17376. When you arrested Wells, did anybody remonstrate with you?—No, no one said anything.

17377. Did no one come to you?—To me?

17378. Did no one come to you and say, "What is up"?—No, no one came.

17379. Do you know Carter?—I know him by sight now, but not before I did not.

17380. How do you know him by sight?—He came as a witness before Mr. Fordham.

17381. You say he did not come up to you and say, "What is up"?—No, he did not; he came up and he said, "Let him be; he has cause to quarrel with that man; he owes him some money."

17382. I asked you just now whether anybody remonstrated or spoke to you, and you said no?—Not as to his arrest. This man Carter came and said, "Let him be; he has cause to get on to him; he owes him money."

17383. Then, what did you mean by telling me just now that nobody came up and remonstrated with you?—No one remonstrated with me.

17384. Do you not call a man saying, "Let him be," remonstrating with you?—He said, "Let him alone; he has cause to quarrel with that man; he owes him money."

17385. What did you mean by saying to me just now no one spoke to you?—No one spoke—not from the time I arrested him.

17386. Carter came up?—I do not know whether he was there before or not; he put himself forward.

17387. And spoke to you?—Those were the words he said.

17388. I again ask you why did you say just now that no one came and spoke to you?—There was nobody, only him, and that is all he said.

17389. Then, there was somebody?—He was the only one.

P.C. T. Dunham.

28 Nov. 1906.

17390. What you were telling me just now was not true that no one came and spoke to you?—I know Carter put himself forward and said, "Leave the man alone."

17391. Did you say to him, "Don't you have very much to say, otherwise I shall take you"?—I did not say that to him.

17392. You did not say that?—I told him to mind his own business.

17393. That is much the same thing. You say you did not say, "Don't you have very much to say, otherwise I shall take you"?—No, I did not.

17394. As Wells was going to the station with you, did you have any conversation with him at all?—No, I only told him to be quiet.

17395. Do you mean to say he never asked you what you were charging him with?—Yes, he said, "What are you going to charge me with." I told him, "You will have to wait and see when you get to the station." It is not for me to tell him what I am going to charge him with.

17396. Did he say, "You cannot charge me with being intoxicated"?—No, he did not. In Kelvin Road he said he was not drunk. He said nothing about being drunk or anything on the way to the station.

17397. You say he did ask you what was the charge?—Yes, he asked me what the charge was, and I said he would have to wait and see when he got to the station.

17398. You did not say to him, "I am going to charge you with being drunk or swearing"?—No.

17399. That you are perfectly certain of?—Yes.

17400. All this time you simply said to him you would not say what you would charge him with?—I told him he would have to wait and see.

17401. I understand it is the fact, as the learned Chairman has asked you, that when you got to the station you did speak in a low voice?—No lower than I am speaking now; it was loud enough for anyone to hear. They always like you to speak loud, so that there is no misunderstanding as to the language, so that the prisoner or witnesses can hear.

17402. What did you say when he asked you to speak up?—I said he used the language "f——g twister."

17403. Have you ever had to charge other people with a similar offence?—Yes, several.

17404. Have you ever had, in making a charge, to say that they have been using the same words?—No, I I do not know that I have ever heard anyone using them before.

17405. I think this is the first time we have heard that anybody used the word "twister" at the police station?—Yes.

17406. You say you used the word at the police station?—Yes.

17407. And the words, "f——g" and "b——g." In making a charge of this nature have you ever said before that they used those words?—Not "twister."

17408. Not "twister" but "f——g" and "b——g"?—Yes, I have.

17409. It is a common charge, I suppose?—Yes, it is a common charge.

17410. You would use the full language. You only use the first letter to the Magistrate. You put the full language out at the police station or at any other place where you can tell them?—Yes.

17411. You have often had to charge people with using these words?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Mr. Wells, do you wish to ask any questions?

(Mr. Wells.) The questions have been already asked, so it is no use my asking them again.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I said there were two sections. The section I read to you was the one which deals with indecent and obscene language. There is also one dealing with a breach of the Peace. Section 64 is the one that by name deals with disorderly persons. It says: "It shall be lawful for any constable belonging to the Metropolitan Police Force to take into custody without a warrant all loose, idle and disorderly persons whom he finds disturbing the public Peace."

(Chairman. Why I was talking about that was this. Listening to what Constable Dunham says, Mr. Wells does not appear to have done anything except use bad language, which could be called disorderly.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is so. "Threatening and abusive" are in Sub-section 13.

(Chairman.) I know that. "Every person who shall use any threatening, abusive, or insulting words or behaviour, with intent to provoke a breach of the Peace, or whereby a breach of the Peace may be occasioned." I have been following what Constable Dunham has said. He said improper words were used. There seems to be very little evidence of any use of words or behaviour with intent to provoke a breach of the Peace; I mean they are quite consistent with what we know from other witnesses, that the 'bus-driver owed money to this man.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Will you please read the words again as to "obscene language."

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) "Every person who shall use any profane, indecent or obscene language to the annoyance of the inhabitants or passengers." The words come immediately before the words read by the learned Chairman.

(Chairman.) Dunham strengthens the case by saying that when he first heard these words a crowd had gathered in the sense that various passers-by had stopped listening to the sounds coming from the urinal. That, of course, we have not had from the other witnesses.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) To some extent, we have.

(Chairman.) To some extent, we have, but it was not put quite so specifically as Dunham put it. That is enough for my purpose.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Dawson speaks of passengers going into his 'bus.

Sergeant REUBEN HAWES, 58 N, sworn.

Sergeant R. Hawes.

17412. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are a sergeant, 58 N, stationed at Islington?—Yes.

17413. Were you in charge of the Islington Police Station at 20 minutes past 3 on the afternoon of the 13th October last?—Yes.

17414. When police-constable Dunham brought Wells into the station?—Yes.

17415. Will you tell us exactly what took place with regard to the constable making the charge?—Yes. He brought Wells into the station. I was in the office at the time, but came to the window. He said, "I have a charge here of disorderly conduct, making use of obscene language." I went into the charge-room. I said, "What did you see him do?" He said, "I saw him having a heated conversation with a 'bus-driver at Highbury Barn, Kelvin Road." I said, "Yes." He said, "Making use of filthy language," I said, "What did you hear him say?" He said, "I heard him call the driver a 'f—— twister.'" He lowered his voice when he said the word "f——." I said, "Speak up, so that the prisoner can hear." He said, "I cautioned him two or three times to go away, but he refused, and then I took him into custody." Then Wells said, "I am not drunk; I am not f—— well going away for you." He said, "The driver went on," and he took him into custody. I accepted the charge. I read the charge over to him. The prisoner replied, "I am not drunk. Now I come to think of it, it was the 'bus-driver made use of bad language." He was searched and placed in a cell.

17416. Who took him to the cell?—The man on reserve. You can call him a gaoler or a reserve man—the man who attends to the prisoners.

17417. Is he commonly called the man on the door?—Yes.

17418. Is it his duty to take prisoners charged to the cell?—Yes.

17419. Before Wells was taken to the cell was anything said about bail?—I was about to let the prisoner out on his own bail as soon as I had verified his address, but in the meantime the man Carter came in.

17420. Was anything said between you and Wells about bail before Wells was taken to the cell, or was he taken before anything was said?—I said, "I shall let you out as soon as possible; I shall verify your address, and let you out on your own bail." In the meantime Carter came in, and said, "My friend has been locked up; can I be bail for him." I said, Yes. Are you a householder?" He said, "Yes. I said, "Have you anything to prove to me that you are a householder?" He said, "No; but I can soon slip up home and fetch my rent-book or receipts," I forget which he said now. I said, "Will you do so?" He said, "Yes." I said, "How long will it take?" He said, "About half an hour. I said, "If you come in half an hour's time I will take your bail." That is all.

17421. (Chairman.) Are you quite certain that the account you have given to us is a full account of all the conversation between yourself, Wells, and Dunham in the charge-room?—Yes, to the best of my recollection. Nothing out of the ordinary took place.

17422. I daresay nothing out of the ordinary took place, but have you told us all that was said either by Dunham, by Wells, or by yourself in the charge-room?—Yes.

17423. Did not Wells ask Dunham to speak out?—I told Dunham to speak out.

17424. Yes, but did not Wells ask him?—No.

17425. Are you certain of that?—Quite certain.

17426. I must put it to you, because Wells probably could not examine you himself. Wells has sworn that you went on to say, "You say he was using bad language. What was it?" Did you use those words?—No; I told him to speak out, and to say the language that he actually used—to repeat the language that was actually used by Wells, the prisoner.

17427. Are those the exact words you said?—Near about.

17428. Therefore, they are not the exact words?—Yes, we will say they were. I did not put them down for word what I said.

17429. Those were not quite the words you used in answer to Mr. Muir. I am not suggesting that you are endeavouring to mislead us. What were the exact words used?—I said to him, "What did you see him do?" Then he repeated what I said just now—that he saw him having a heated conversation with a 'bus-driver.

17430. A heated conversation?—Yes, he called him a "f——g twister."

17431. Did not you say to him, "Tell me what it was; you are no priest"?—No, I did not mention the word "priest" at all.

17432. I put it to you, because Wells has deposed to that it was you who suggested the "f——g" and the "b——g" to the constable?—I suggested nothing.

17433. When the charge was read over, did not Wells say something?—He said, "I am not drunk. Now I come to think of it, it was the driver made use of bad language, not me."

17434. Was that said after the charge had been signed by the constable or before it had been signed by the constable?—After it had been signed by the constable.

17435. Had Wells said nothing before the charge had been signed by the constable?—He was very excited. He continued to shout that he was not drunk. I explained to him nobody suggested that he was drunk.

17436. Wells was distinctly excited, although not drunk?—He continually said he was not drunk. He seemed to me to be under the impression that a charge of drunkenness was going to be made against him. I tried to soothe him by saying nobody suggested he was drunk.

17437. I thought a moment ago you told me in the account you gave to Mr. Muir that that was all that was said?—But as you go on you can keep thinking of things that happened.

17438. If you were going to think of further things that happened, you ought not to have told Mr. Muir that that was all that was said. Have you told me now all that was said?—Yes, I think so.

17438*. I understand Wells was talking a good deal?—No.

17439. He repeated that he was not drunk more than once. You have just told me that?—Yes; he kept saying that; but that would not make me speak to him.

17440. I am asking whether Wells said anything?—Yes, he said he was not drunk.

17441. And he said it several times?—And he said it several times.

17442. Ten times?—I did not count how many times he said it. He said it several times.

17443. He said it continually. May I put it in that way?—Yes; continually. That was the main point—that he was not drunk.

17444. Did he not ask Dunham, the constable, this: "Can you conscientiously sign that charge sheet?"—I did not hear him.

17445. You will not swear he did not?—I will swear he did not.

17446. Why did you say a moment ago you did not hear him?—He did not say it. If he had I should have heard him.

17447. He did not say anything of the sort?—No.

17448. Did you say anything to Wells beyond what you have just told us; and again I ask you to be particular. As a sergeant you are quite accustomed to being in the witness box and answering questions?—I told him I should liberate him as soon as possible—I would verify his address and let him go.

17449. That was to Carter?—That was to Wells. Carter came in afterwards.

17450. Was there anything further that you said?—That is all.

17451. Do you remember his being searched?—Yes.

17452. Did you say "I will tell you what your charge is"?—I had already read the charge. I did not say that to him.

17453. Are you prepared to swear that you did not say it?—Yes.

17454. Did you not make any observation before reading the entry in the charge sheet?—After I heard what the constable said I said: "You are charged on this constable's evidence"; and he was placed in the dock.

17455. That is exactly what I asked you. You told me you said nothing of the kind. I asked you a moment ago whether you did not say "I will tell you what your charge is," and you denied positively that you said anything of the kind?—I did say that, now I come to think of it.

17456. You did say it?—Yes.

17457. I thought it was such a proper thing to say that you must have said it?—Yes.

17458. I do not think I need put all to you that Wells said. Did he complain of being put into a cell?—No.

17459. Did he say: "Surely there is some other place where you can detain me without putting me into a cell"—No; he did not say that to me.

17460. You are perfectly clear about that?—Perfectly sure—in fact, he was only in the cell about thirty-five minutes.

17461. You have varied your account of what took place several times, so that I think I had better put it to you. Wells, on oath, like yourself, told us the other day that he, on being told that he would have to go into a cell, said: "Surely there is some other place you can detain me in without putting me into a cell"?—He did not say that to me.

17462. You had been looking at the Directory, had you not?—We always verify the address as soon as possible, and let them out.

17463. You had been looking at the Directory?—Not before he was in the cell.

17464. Do you mean to say that Wells did not see you looking in the Directory. Just carry your mind

Sergeant R. Hawes.

28 Nov. 1906.

back?—The only way I can think of it would be like this: As the man was placed in the cell I might have taken up a Directory and looked at it. I know the man resided at the address given.

17465. I am putting to you now whether, in fact, Wells did not give you his name and address, and see you looking in the Directory?—I do not think he did.

17466. You will not say he did not?—I will not say he did not, and I will not say he did. I only wish to speak the truth.

17467. Wells told us: "The sergeant looked in the Directory for a short time, and he could not find it, or he said he could not find it, but it was still there. I said 'Surely there is some other place you can detain me in without putting me into a cell'"?—No, I do not remember that.

17468. Supposing you had found his name in the Directory, you would not have put him in a cell at all, I suppose?—The Directories are not always right. A man might leave, although his name and address was there. I should send a telegram and verify his address.

17469. I think you said you knew Wells lived in that neighbourhood?—I do not know that he lived in that neighbourhood. I sent a telegram to verify his name and address.

17470. Did you find his name and address in the Directory?—Yes, in the Islington Directory.

17471. You found it there?—Yes.

17472. And he was present at the time?—I did not think he was. I went into the office to do all this.

17473. Where is the Directory kept?—In the office.

17474. Is there a door from the office into the charge room?—Yes.

17475. When you went to fetch the Directory I suppose if you partially turned round you could see the prisoner in the dock?—Yes.

17476. He was in the dock at this time?—No, he was out of the dock at this time.

17477. Was he when you went to fetch the Directory?—Yes.

17478. You did go to fetch a Directory?—I do not know that I went for it in his presence. I know it is my business as soon as a prisoner is charged to let him out as early as possible; and, in fact, he would have been out earlier but for his friend Carter calling.

17479. Why was that?—When his friend came and said he would be bail for him he said he would go home and fetch his receipt book.

17480. Having found Wells's name in the Directory, did you not telegraph off?—No, because his friend said he would come at once.

17481. His friend did not come at once?—He said he would be back in about half an hour.

14782. I gather you had looked at the directory before Carter came in?—Yes.

17483. And had found the name and address of Wells?—About that time—Carter was not long afterwards—he was in there very shortly afterwards.

17484. Carter said: "I went off to my house and fetched my receipts and went to bail him out." How long was it before you got to the station?—I was "there at half-past three"—Mr. Carter.

17485. Yes?—The charge was only brought in at 20 minutes past 3, so it was not long.

17486. At the time when Carter arrived you are certain Wells had been taken away from the charge room to the cell?—I would not swear to that. I was very busy at the time, I remember that. There might have been other people there.

17487. Were you pretty busy that day?—Fairly. We get a number of callers at Upper Street.

17488. Who is responsible for keeping the cells clean at this police station?—Each officer as he takes over the charge of the station every four hours is responsible that it is all clean.

17489. Wells's account of the cell is rather a serious one. He calls it dirty and dreary, and then he says: "I found at the end of the bench, or wooden seat, an open w.c. pan half-full." Who was responsible for that state of things?—It is flushed every time. The flush is pulled every time a man goes down there; and if a man was liberated on bail the flush would be pulled before anybody went into the cell. The cell was clean enough. I do not say about being dreary.

17490. You say it was clean?—Yes.

17491. Had you, in fact, gone over the cell that day?—I did when I went on duty at two o'clock.

17492. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Had anyone been in the cell other than Wells while you were on duty?—Not during my turn on duty.

17493. You went over the cell at 2 o'clock; it was then clean, and Wells was the first man to go into it after that?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is the evidence.

(Chairman) Was any Police Inquiry held in this case that we have just been dealing with?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No.

(Chairman.) This is a case in which the Magistrate dismissed the charge?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Chairman.) It seems that in some instances an Inquiry is directed when that takes place.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is only if the Magistrate makes any adverse comment on the conduct of a police officer.

(Chairman.) In this case there was no inquiry?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No.

(Chairman.) I am not suggesting that there ought to have been. I only want to know the fact.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) According to our case no adverse comment was made on the conduct of the police officer, otherwise it would have been reported, and if it was reported either by the Inspector at the police court, and it would be his duty to do it, or if it appeared in the public press, then notice of it would be taken at the Central Office.

(Chairman.) I gathered that that was the practice from the preceding cases. I simply wanted to ascertain the fact as to whether in this case a report had been called for or not.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No report was called for.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand that the Inspector records the fact?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Was the Inspector on this occasion Inspector Smith.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) If you will look at the charge sheet you will find who the Inspector was. I am told that it was Inspector Scarffe who was on duty.

(Chairman.) Hawes was the police sergeant taking the charge.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Who was the Inspector whose duty it was to report?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Inspector Scarffe. The Inspector on duty at the police court during the hearing of the charges might have nothing at all to do with any of the charges other than simply to sit in court and listen. It would be his duty to report any adverse comment made on the conduct of a police officer.

(Chairman.) You, Mr. Wells, have no fresh witnesses you wish to call before us?

(Mr. Wells.) No, only the witnesses who have been called.

(Chairman.) They have told us their story. Mr. Muir, when I said that to Mr. Wells I did not mean to commit the Commission to not calling the two timekeepers, and the other persons who have been referred to, and who are not of sufficient importance in the opinion of your witnesses to be called. We reserve the power to call them, of course. We shall sit at 11 to-morrow morning to go on with Mullins's case and with Baker's case. There are several witnesses you wish to call Mr. Muir?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Chairman.) We will begin at 11 o'clock with Mullins's case, and then we will take Baker's case. You will have your witnesses here in Baker's case?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) You desire them to be in attendance?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Earl Russell.) May I renew the application I made the other day, that I may be supplied with the reports made by the police before I cross-examine witnesses?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Those reports are confidential documents passing from superior officers to superior officers. This Commission will have every document before them if they like to call for them, but as to placing such documents in the hands of such a society as is represented by Lord Russell, I respectfully submit ——

Sergeant R. Hawes.

28 Nov. 1906.

(Chairman.) We will take our own course without the benefit of argument for or against.

(Earl Russell.) The same objection was taken in Altfuldisch's case, in which I had the documents. I did not ask that they should be handed to the society.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

Thursday, 29*th November* 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).

Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).

J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Secrétary).

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I understand, Sir, you have asked for some reports in Wilson's case, which was the case of the man who was hit by the police-constable on the ground.

(Chairman.) The police-constable's name was Worsley.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. I understand you have asked for the reports. We have got them all collected together, but I have to press that the Commission would at any rate treat those as confidential reports until you have had an opportunity of seeing them, because they are of a different class to the others. They were reports which were got together for the purpose of the County Court action in the main, and they constitute the communications between the solicitor of the Commissioner and between the Commissioner and the Home Office. They are not of the same character as the others. I will hand them in, but with the request that the Commission would please treat them as confidential, at any rate.

(Chairman.) The Commission asked for the reports, and we have taken the evidence on both sides in this case. We will take them, and we will use them in our own discretion.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Quite so. You understand the application I have made, and the reason of it.

(Chairman.) Quite so. We give no undertaking. We have the right under the statute to call for any document that we like, and we shall use our discretion as to the publication of any documents with a view to the general public convenience.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I will ask for no undertaking. When I have once explained to you the nature of the documents I am sure they will be properly dealt with.

(Chairman.) In substance, you say they were documents provided for the purpose of pending litigation

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Mainly.

George Mullins, recalled.

G. Mullins.

29 Nov. 1906.

17494. (Chairman.) Do you apply to cross-examine this witness, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please, Sir. (To the witness.) I have not many questions to ask you. I understand you to say that when you came out of this public-house you spoke to a constable, thinking you knew him?—Yes.

17495. I understood from your evidence last time that you made an observation to him which now you think it was wrong of you to have made to a stranger?—Yes.

17496. And that you consider you are yourself to some extent to blame for what happened?—To a certain extent, yes.

17497. I understand your complaint is that the constable ought not to have taken you into custody, and that he ought not to have ill-treated you afterwards. I understand that is your complaint?—That is my complaint, because when I found I was mistaken I apologised to him. I said, "I am very sorry, old man."

17498. You think that you yourself were to some extent to blame for what followed?—I have just answered that question.

17499. Did you desire of your own motion to bring this case before the Commission? If nobody had come to you should you have brought the matter before the Commission at all?—I do not think so.

17500. I understand two gentlemen did come to you and ask you questions about what had happened?—Yes.

17501. Did those two gentlemen explain to you who they were?—No.

17502. Were you under the impression they had been sent to you by the Commission?—I was under no impression at all as to who sent them. I had no idea of the case going on so far.

17503. And did they tell you what they wanted your statement for?—They said they would like me to apply for a summons against the constable, and I said no, I was already very well satisfied with the case.

17504. And did they ask you for a statement with reference to the possibility of taking out a summons against the constable?—It is so long ago, just ten weeks ago, and I cannot say yes or no.

17505. But did they not explain to you who they were?—I cannot answer that question.

17506. Did they say anything to you about the Commission at the time they were talking to you?—No.

17507. And at the time you made the statement to them you had no idea that it was going to be put before the Commission?—I told them then, as I have told you just now, that I did not want anything at all to do with the case. I was done with it.

17508. You do not quite understand, and I am sure I did not make myself plain. At the time you made a statement to them they did not explain to you, did they, that they were going to put your statement before the Commission?—Oh, yes. They said, "If you do not care about coming we will bring you." I told them I did not want to have anything more to do with it, and they told me that they would bring me.

C. Mullins.
29 Nov. 1906.

17509. Did they ask your permission to put your statement before the Commission?—No, I do not think so.

17510. We know that on the last occasion a document was produced which purported to be your statement which had been put before the Commission?—I never said anything about that. The only thing I made a statement about was with regard to the way I was served—in a rough sort of way.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Might we know when this happened?

17511. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Can you recall at all when this was that they came to you?—I was tried on the Monday, and on the following Wednesday they came to my work.

17512. Did the gentlemen tell you what their names were?—No, not to my knowledge.

17513. And the next thing you heard was that you received a summons from the Commission to appear here?—Yes, last Wednesday night. I was done at 10 o'clock, but my missus give it to me after I had my supper about 11 o'clock, and it said I was to appear on the Thursday. Two nights previous to that I was only flattering myself that the case was all done with.

17514. So far as you personally are concerned you are here unwillingly. You did not desire to come?—That is rather a difficult question to answer.

17515. Perhaps you can answer it if you think a little. So far as you personally are concerned you say you had done with the matter, and were congratulating yourself that you would not hear any more about it?—I was at the time, until I had further advice about what happened to me, and what would very likely happen to me, so I thought to myself I might as well go and say what I have to say.

(Chairman.) Mr. Mullins told us he greatly desired to have no publicity.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Quite so; but I think it is desirable that you should know how this evidence is brought before you.

(The witness.) As I told you last week, the only grievance I have got is against the policeman, and no one else, and I congratulated the Inspector who took the charge, as I told you last week.

17516. I am going to deal with that in a moment. Now a few words about the occurrence. You told me a moment ago your only complaint is with regard to this particular constable?—Yes, that is right—for striking me, and for the way he handled me. Nothing else. When I made the complaint to the Inspector I got more than justice from the Inspector.

17517. You work in Covent Garden, and there are a number of constables employed there, are there not?—Yes.

17518. In the course of your work you have constantly to come in contact with one or another of them?—Yes.

17519. Speaking generally, you have no complaint against the police at all except with regard to this particular man?—No, not so far as I am concerned. I have a lot of dealings with the police in Covent Garden Market with regard to speaking to them from being there a number of years. We have one man in particular in the Floral Hall who has been stationed there nine months and twelve months at a time.

17520. You constantly come in touch with the police, and you have no personal complaint against them for the way they do their work, except this particular man?—Not that I know of.

17521. With regard to the Inspector, I think you said last time that he treated you as a perfect gentleman?—Quite so, and so he did. When I asked him to see me to the cells he saw me to the cells.

17522. Was that Inspector's name Wheeler?—Yes.

17523. He was the man who was in the charge room when you were taken in?—He was not in the charge room; he was in the office.

17524. He was the man who took the charge?—He was the man who took the charge. When he came out I complained of the way I was hit by the constable in the charge room, and showed him my lip.

17525. I will come to that in a moment. Now a word about what happened in this room. The constable charged you, did he not, with being drunk and with fighting?—No.

17526. And with using obscene language?—He charged me with being drunk and disorderly and using obscene language—I do not know who to—but no fighting.

17527. When the constable made that charge to the Inspector did you say "Yes, I admit all that, but I complain of the man striking me in the mouth"?—Decidedly not. That is false, whoever said it. I will soon get over that difficulty. If I pleaded guilty in the charge room to being drunk and disorderly and using obscene language, what did I want to send for a doctor for?

17528. We will see. You say you did not say that to the Inspector?—Decidedly not.

17529. But you have told the Commission the Inspector is a man who up to the present has treated you thoroughly well, and he is a man in whom you have confidence?—If I had been the King of England I could not have been better treated by that Inspector who took the charge.

17530. You went before the Magistrate on the day following?—Yes.

17531. Did you then describe to the Magistrate what had taken place in the charge room?—I did. I gave evidence on oath.

17532 Do you complain now that the policeman struck you once or more than once in the charge room?—He struck me one punch with the left hand.

17533. Only one?—That is all, because the Inspector came in as he punched me, as I sat on the form in this way (describing). He stood over me and hit me with his left arm on the lip.

17533*. You are quite sure about that, that he only struck you once?—In the charge room.

17534. How came you to give this evidence to the Magistrate. Is this what you said before the Magistrate: "In the police station I sat down"?—That is right.

17535. "He stood over me, and said 'You'—something—'I know who you are'"?—That is right.

17536. "You are one of those bleeders"?—That is right.

17537. "And he struck me in the mouth"?—Yes.

17538. "And then a second time. My mouth bled"?—I said no such thing. I only said once. You do not want to be hit twice to make your mouth bleed, if you are hit at all.

17539. If you did say that before the Magistrate you said something that was not true, according to your own view?—I did not say that before the Magistrate. That has been added.

17540. That is what happened before the Magistrate. Now let me go back to the charge room and ask a question or two about that. When you got into the charge room there were no other prisoners there, were there?—No.

17541. But there were two other constables there?—As I went in, yes.

17542. Would you recognise them?—Yes, I should recognise them.

17543. Will Hunt and Saunders stand forward?—Yes, these are they.

17544. I have a plan of the station here. (Handing plan to Witness.) The charge room is on your left?—Yes.

17545. That is the room you were taken into?—Yes, and the form was just here. (Pointing.)

17546. That is the room in which Hunt and Saunders were when you were taken in by P.C. Morgan?—Yes.

17547. They were both of them there?—Yes, I do not know which is Hunt, but the one with the greyish hair when I was taken to the charge room went through a door over here, and the other one went towards the Inspector's office. I am still along with the policeman in the charge room by ourselves.

17548. You say so, and we shall see. I will take your evidence about that, and the Commissioners will have to judge. I suggest to you you were never left alone?—I was not left alone, but me and the constable were together.

17549. I accept the correction. You were never left in the room with P.C. Morgan?—Yes, I was for a few moments, and that is when it occurred.

17550. What do you mean by a few moments?—Say a minute or so. Put it down as a minute. I cannot exactly tell you the time, but I know they left for some reason on their business transactions as I was brought in and sat down on the form. They were doing their ordinary business, I expect.

17551. The Inspector came into the room there shortly after you came in?—From the time I was in the charge room, taken to the station, the Inspector came in within about as near as I can guess (it is a long while ago) about five minutes, I should think.

17552. When he did come in you complained that the constable had hit you?—Yes, directly I was put in the dock I said to the Inspector as he passed alongside——

17553. You complained to him that you had been struck?—Yes.

17554. Did he then say to you, "Why did you not shout out if you were struck?" or words to that effect—"why did you not call out"?—No, not that I know of.

17555. As a matter of fact, you did not call out, did you?—I holloaed out when he hit me, and so would you holloa if anybody hit you, would not you?

17556. You did holloa?—Yes.

17557. Did you holloa so that anybody could hear you?—Of course I did. I only said "Oh," I never holloaed for assistance or anything like that.

17558. You holloaed loud enough to let anybody hear who was anywhere close to?—I could not tell you.

17559. Now I suggest to you that when the Inspector asked you why you did not call out, that you said you had not thought of it?—I never said anything of the kind.

17560. Now I am going backwards to the time when you were being taken to the station. What was the name of the public-house you came out of—the Duke of Sussex, was it not?—Yes. Five minutes previous to that I was in the Earl Grey.

17561. Did anybody assist the constable to take you from the Duke of Sussex to the station?—I had come out of the Duke of Sussex and the police was about——

17562. We do not want to go into the whole story. The constable took you from the Duke of Sussex?—Not from the Duke of Sussex.

17563. Near the Duke of Sussex?—Yes, about fifteen to twenty yards from it.

17564. Did anybody help the constable to take you?—Not at all. He did not want any help. I did not resist anything.

17565. Did anybody go with him or walk alongside him?—Not to my knowledge. I could not say. My coat was up almost like that—(describing)—and my arm stretched out.

17566. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is Cameron here? (No response.)

17567. You say that nobody helped the constable?—Nobody at all.

17568. Nobody accompanied you?—No, nobody.

17569. Do you know a man named Cameron?—No.

17570. Now I am coming to the events in the public-house. You told the Commission that you had been in a public-house before the Duke of Sussex?—Yes, and had a glass of cider.

17571. And that you went on to the Duke of Sussex?—Yes, about three minutes to eleven.

17572. You stayed there till closing time?—They were halloaing out closing time then.

17573. Do you remember what you did as you came out?—Yes, I walked out.

17574. Did you speak to the landlord or the landlady?—Nothing at all; I only said "Good night, Mrs. Cole," and she said "Good night, George."

17575. Did you shake hands with them as you went out?—No.

17576. Are you quite sure?—Quite positive.

17577. It would not be your usual practice to shake hands with the landlord in going out unless you were rather under the influence of drink, would it?—I would shake hands with anybody whether I was sober or whether I was in drink if I thought they were worth shaking hands with.

17578. You are quite positive you did not shake hands with the landlord or landlady as you left the place?—No. "I said "Good night, Mr. Cole—Good night, Mrs. Cole," and they said "Good night, George."

17579. Had you taken your little girl into the public-house?—No, she was outside.

17580. When you went outside you say there was a constable standing there talking?—The constable and two marine store dealers, and a gentleman with a straw hat and a light dust coat, were talking together—the four of them.

17581. How near the public-house?—There is a mantle shop next door to the public-house, and there is an ice cream vendor's shop, and then Sims's shop.

17582. Is Sims the marine store dealer?—Yes.

17583. At that time they were standing three shops away from the public-house?—Not quite three shops. They were standing between the three—in the centre of the three.

17584. Then it was you say you spoke to the constable, thinking you knew him?—Yes. When I spoke to him the two Sims's walked away—right away out of it.

17585. You say that after you spoke to the police-constable he turned round and punched you in the ribs?—Yes.

17586. Could the Sims's have seen that if the constable had done it?—It is no use my saying that. If I said that they would only come here and say they did not see it.

17587. In your judgment, if the constable had punched you in the ribs then the Sims's could have seen it?—If they had looked they could have seen it.

17588. And after that you went away some distance?—Yes, I went to my turning, just about forty yards away, and I said to my little girl, "Run down, Katie, I will see to this."

17589. Then you came back?—Yes. The constable was still talking to a man with a straw hat and a light dust coat—who he is I do not know. Then I came up and said to him "Can I have your number?" He said "Go on—give him one."

17590. When you came back was there any disturbance between you and another man?—There was not a soul there near the constable and this young gentleman, or old gentleman—I could not see his features, because it was very dark—but whoever it was.

17591. Did the constable tell you to go away?—Not at all. He caught hold of me and dragged me to Kennington Road.

17592. Your suggestion is that he took hold of you then without any sort of provocation at all?—On that occasion he did.

17593. And that he took you to the police station without any rhyme or reason. There was no reason for his taking you to the station at all?—Only that he was vexed at the remark I passed on him. I suppose that was the reason.

17594. When you made the remark to him did you make it in a loud voice, or did you speak low?—In a low voice.

17595. You know the constable has always said that he never heard what you said to him about being at the ear-hole?—He might have said he never heard it, but he must have heard it.

17596. You admit you spoke in a low voice, and he had got his back to you?—I did not shout it out. I only spoke to him the same as I am speaking to you, so that he must have heard it.

17597. You were passing along the street, and he had got his back to you, according to you?—Yes.

17598. And according to you he had no notion that you were going to speak to him?—No.

17599. And it was in a busy street when he was talking to some other people?—A busy street?

17600. It is a thoroughfare, and one of the main streets there?—Yes.

17601. People passing up and down at the time, and he was engaged in conversation with other people?—Yes.

G. Mullins.
29 Nov. 1906.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Those are all the questions I want to ask. I have several witnesses to call.

17602. (Earl Russell.) You have been asked several questions as to how you came to make that statement. Is this a correct summary of your position that you were not unwilling to tell the Commission about the case, but you did not want any more publicity?—That is what my idea of the case was.

17603. Did you tell the people who tried to see you that you were afraid of what might happen to you from the police afterwards?—Yes.

P.C. JOHN MORGAN (383L), sworn.

P.C. J. Morgan.

17604. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you a Police-constable—383, of the L Division?—Yes.

17605. You are attached to the Kennington-road station?—Yes.

17606. On the 9th September, at 11.15 p.m.—— Is that the right date?—That is right.

17607. Were you on duty in Oakley-street?—Yes.

17608. That runs between the Waterloo-road and the Westminster Bridge-road?—Yes.

17609. Did you see George Mullins there?—Yes.

17610. Tell us what you first noticed with regard to him?—At ten past 11 on the evening of the 9th September last I was on duty in Oakley-street when I saw Mullins, with several others, having a heated altercation which led to blows, Mullins taking part. I went to disperse the crowd, and requested them all to go away. They all went away with the exception of Mullins. I again advised him to go away, and he did so. Five minutes later he returned, running up the road with his hat off, several persons following behind, shouting out "Where is he?" I again went to him and asked him what was the matter. He said "What has it got to do with you?" I told him to go away home. He said he would f——g go when he liked—"you and 20 other policemen would not take me." I arrested him. He became violent at first for a few yards, and then went quiet. I got him to the station.

17611. What view did you take from his behaviour as to his sobriety?—Drunk.

17612. At the station what did you do?—Sat him on the form.

17613. In what room?—In the charge room.

17614. Was anybody else there at that time?—There were two reserve police-constables.

17615. What took place?—The Inspector arrived a minute after I took the charge in. The man (Mullins) accused me of assaulting him by striking him in the mouth. The Inspector asked me if that was right, and I told him it was a falsehood. He asked me then what the charge was. I told him it was drunk and disorderly and making use of obscene language in Oakley Street. He asked me what he was doing. I told him he was fighting with another man and using obscene language. I told him to go away, and he said he would f——g well go when he liked. The charge was taken. When read over to him he said "I admit all that, but," he said, "this man struck me in the mouth in this room," which I denied. He was put back in the cell, and I went back on my beat.

17616. Do you remember whether he said how often you had struck him, or did he simply say you had struck him in the month?—That is what he said. He simply said I had struck him in the mouth.

17617. That is your recollection. Then you went back to your beat?—Yes.

17618. What day of the week was this?—Sunday evening, the 9th September.

17619. The next day did you go to the Tower Police Court?—I did.

17620. The case was heard before Mr. Rose, and you gave your evidence?—Yes.

17621. And then the defendant was called and gave evidence?—Yes.

17622. Do you remember the learned Magistrate saying anything to you about asking Mullins questions?—Yes.

17623. Just tell us how that came about?—He asked me if I had assaulted him, and if I had any questions to ask which I denied at the time.

17624. The learned Magistrate asked you if you had any questions to ask?—Yes.

17625. What did you say?—I said no.

17626. Do you know two men named F. and J. Sims?—I know them.

17627. Did you see them that night?—I do not remember seeing them.

17628. You do not remember seeing them?—No.

17629. Do you know a man named Cameron?—I know he comes from Waterloo Station occasionally. I know him by sight, but I don't know him personally.

17630. Did you see him that night?—I saw him when I had got the prisoner in custody. He asked me if I wanted any help. I said "I think I can manage," and he walked down as far as Westminster Bridge Road with me, and then he left.

17631. (Earl Russell.) May I have a copy of the Magistrate's Clerk's notes? (Copy handed to learned Counsel.) With regard to this first disturbance that you say you saw about Mullins when he was having a heated altercation, you did not think it necessary to take him into custody for that?—I gave him a chance to go away, which he did.

17632. About how many others were there with him at that time?—About 10 or a dozen.

17633. Did you notice when he first appeared in the street did he come out of the public-house at closing time or not?—I could not swear he came out of the public-house, but I put it down as such because he was outside.

17634. Was that the Duke of Sussex?—Yes.

17635. You think that this crowd you saw came out of that public-house at closing time?—I think so.

17636. You were within what distance?—Fifteen yards.

17637. You saw them all suddenly appear on the pavement talking loudly and squabbling and fighting?—Yes.

17638. Actual blows?—Yes.

17639. All you did was to tell them to move off?—I told them to go away and they did so. I was satisfied.

17640. And Mullins went away too?—Yes. I advised him a second time and he went.

17641. What exactly did you say to Mullins?—I requested him to go quietly and not get himself into trouble.

17642. Did you say "You had better go home quietly or you will get into trouble"—that kind of thing?—Yes.

17643. What was Mullins doing at the time you spoke to him?—Do you mean the first time?

17644. Yes?—Fighting.

17645. The other people were still there?—Yes, they were looking on.

17646. I thought you told me when you spoke to him all the others went away except Mullins?—They did.

17647. Then you were left alone with Mullins?—Yes.

17648. No one else was near you at all?—All the others went away.

17649. No one else was near you at all at that time?—No.

17650. What did Mullins say to you then or what was he doing then? After the others had gone away and you asked him to go, Mullins still remained behind. What was he doing then?—Standing here.

17651. Saying nothing and doing nothing?—He was very excited.

17652. Shouting?—Not altogether shouting.

17653. Was he saying anything at all?—He said he was not going away; he had not done anything. I told him again to go and he went.

17654. And the others went away. You do not complain of his conduct except that he stood still and did not move off?—I was satisfied when he went away.

17655. The only thing you complain of is that he did not move off after the others had gone?—I had occasion to speak to him, and I wanted him to go away then as I told him, and he went away.

17656. The others went away, and Mullins remained behind?—Yes.

17657. But Mullins at that time was not shouting or doing anything, and what you complained of was that he did not move on when he was told?—He went when I told him the second time.

17658. There was no disorder that you complain of after the others had gone?—The disorder was when I spoke to him first.

17659. After the others had gone was Mullins shouting?—Very excited. I don't say he was shouting.

17660. How did he show his excitement?—By throwing his arms and shouting.

17661. Throwing his arms?—From the effects of the drink.

17662. And shouting?—Yes.

17663. What do you mean?

(Chairman.) A moment ago you said he was not shouting.

17664. (Earl Russell.) Which was it? Was he shouting or not shouting?—There was not much. He was throwing his arms about and very excited. I don't know whether he was shouting. I did not take particular notice of that.

17665. Do you prefer to say that now, that you do not know whether he was shouting or not?—(No answer.)

17666. Well?—I could not say he was shouting, but when I told him the second time to go away he went.

17667. You could not say for certain whether he was shouting or not?—No, I could not say for certain.

17668. Were the Sims's in the street at that time?—I could not say. I did not see them.

17669. They might have been?—Yes.

17670. They might have been near you without your seeing them?—They might have been.

17671. You were standing about opposite their shop?—Within about 15 yards of the public house. That would be near their shop.

17672. Have you known them some time?—Yes, I have known them by sight some time.

17673. They are marine store dealers?—Yes.

17674. Both of them?—Yes.

17675. At the time when the rest of the crowd had gone and you were telling Mullins to go away for the second time, who else was in the street that you saw at all?—I did not take particular notice. There were a lot of people in the street. They had just turned out of the public-houses.

17676. Was there anybody close to you?—There was nobody close to me then.

17677. Nobody with Mullins?—No, no one with Mullins at all.

17678. Not a soul at all?—No, I am quite sure.

17679. Not his daughter?—No.

17680. You never saw her?—No.

17681. You never saw any young girl of 10 close to you?—No.

17682. Then Mullins went away the second time when you told him, and you say he came back again?—Yes, five minutes later.

17683. You had not seen where he had been to in the meantime?—No.

17684. When he walked off, was he accompanied by a young girl or not?—No.

17685. You never saw one?—No, he was alone.

17686. How far did you watch them for—100 yards?—No, about 15 or 16 yards.

17687. Did he not go straight along the same street as you were in?—Yes.

17688. He was in your view for 100 yards?—I did not watch him. He went away at that time, and I was satisfied. I did not watch the man after he went away.

17689. You did not watch to see whether he only went 15 yards and stopped?—I could not tell you how far he went.

17690. Did not you watch him for 30 or 40 yards at least?—No, he went off out of my view, and I went on my beat.

17691. Was it out of your view?—Yes. I turned and went on the opposite side.

17692. You paid no attention to him?—No.

17693. The next thing you saw was that Mullins came running back?—Yes.

17694. You do not know where from?—No, I could not tell you that.

17695. Did he come back from the same direction that he had gone in?—I could not say. He came running up.

17696. You can tell me whether he came running from the same direction as you saw him walk off in?—He crossed the road. I could not say in what direction he came from.

17697. You cannot say whether he came back from the same direction as he had gone?—No.

17698. Do you say he was without his hat?—Yes.

17699. What was he doing as he ran?—Shouting out "Where is he?"

17700. Did you take that to mean you?—I could not tell you who he meant.

17701. And there were other people with him, do you say?—Some running up behind.

17702. Attracted by his shouts?—I could not tell you that.

17703. Did you know any of the people who were with him?—No.

17704. How many were there—about?—Seven or eight following up behind.

17705. As far as you know they may have been merely people in the street who were attracted by the shouting?—They might, I should think.

17706. You are quite clear there were seven or eight following up behind him?—I should say so. I did not count them.

17707. Was he doing anything besides shouting "Where is he"?—Running and shouting "Where is he?" That is all.

17708. Without his hat—and he ran on where to?—He ran on to me and I spoke to him and he stopped.

17709. Did he stop or did you stop him?—I stopped him and I asked him what was the matter.

17710. How did you stop him?—I went to him and asked him what was the matter, and he stopped.

17711. You walked up to him?—Yes.

17712. And said, "What is the matter"?—Yes.

17713. What did he say?—"What has it got to do with you?"

17714. What did you say then?—I advised him to go away home.

17715. What did he answer to that?—He said he would f——g well go when he liked.

17716. Did he shout that out or speak to you in a quiet voice?—He shouted it out, and I could hear it plain enough.

17717. Shouted loud?—Yes.

17718. What had happened to the other seven or eight people who were running after him or following after him?—They stopped around to see what was going to happen.

17719. Around you and him?—Yes.

17720. How close round you—Quite close?—Yes.

P.C. J. Morgan.
29 Nov. 1906.

17721. A yard or two?—Quite close.

17722. The whole seven or eight of them?—Yes.

17723. Had you ever seen any of them before?—I did not stop to look who were there. I saw the people there, but I could not tell you that I knew who they were. I don't say that I knew any of them. I did not look.

17724. There may have been people there who you knew by sight?—There might have been.

17725. They might have been useful witnesses for you, might they not?—I could not compel them to be witnesses.

17726. Surely you could if you knew who they were?—I did not say I knew who they were. There might have been people who I knew.

17727. You tell us you did not take the least trouble to look at these seven or eight people?—No.

17728. Not even so much as to say whether you knew them or did not know them?—That is right.

17729. Although they were within a yard or two of you?—Yes, quite close.

17730. Then you took Mullins into custody on that?—Yes.

17731. You formed the opinion that he was drunk?—I did.

17732. When you saw him for the first time did you also form the opinion that he was drunk?—Yes. We don't take up everyone we see drunk if they will go away when we tell them.

17733. Was he very drunk the first time you saw him?—He was drunk.

17734. Had he reached the stage of being drunk and incapable or would you call him drunk and excited, or drunk and disorderly?—Drunk, I said.

17735. Just a little fresh, or very drunk should you say?—I say drunk. He was either drunk or sober, and I don't see there is anything in between the two.

17736. You cannot say whether you think he was very drunk or only a little drunk?—He was drunk.

17737. Was he so drunk as not to know what he was at?—I could not say that.

17738. At the time you arrested him it was about 20 minutes past 11?—A quarter past 11.

17739. Quite a quarter past 11 by the time you actually took him in charge?—Yes.

17740. Do you know what time you reached the police station with him?—25 minutes past 11.

17741. And the doctor came to see him about 11.45, did he not?—I was not there and I could not tell you the exact time.

17742. Did not you at the police court give evidence about the doctor seeing him?—I told the magistrate the doctor was called.

17743. You are stated to have said at the police court, "The doctor saw him at 12 o'clock, and said he was not drunk." You do not remember that?—No.

17744. You do not know of your own knowledge that the doctor saw him or when he saw him?—No, not to my own knowledge.

17745. When you got into the station with him you agree with Mullins that the Inspector was in the Inspector's office?—Yes.

17746. And that two other constables, whose names we have heard this morning, Hunt and Saunders, were inside the charge room?—In the charge room.

17747. It is correct to say, is it not, that these two other constables were moving about on their business. They were not seated in the charge room or standing by all the time?—They were standing in the charge room when I came in.

17748. But they did not stand still in the charge room all the time you were there with your prisoner, did they?—They were standing by. I don't think there was anything particular to do at that moment.

17749. Did they leave the charge room during the whole time your prisoner was there?—No, they were there the whole time.

17750. Where were they standing?—Each side of the desk.

17751. Each side of the Inspector's desk?—The charge room desk.

17752. The desk that prisoners are charged at?—Yes.

17753. They continued to stand there the whole time?—Yes.

17754. From the time you first came in with Mullins up to the time he was taken to the cells?—That is right.

17755. They never left the charge room?—They were there the whole time.

17756. They were standing alongside the Inspector's desk, one on each side?—Yes.

17757. Were they doing anything there?—They were standing there.

17758. They were doing nothing at all?—No.

17759. Were they talking to each other?—No.

17760. Standing straight upright and doing nothing?—That is right.

17761. Were they writing?—Nothing at all.

17762. You say their names are Hunt and Saunders?—Yes.

17763. I put it to you that Hunt was busy writing?—He was standing in the charge room when I came in.

17764. Do you say he never wrote a word the whole time the prisoner was there?—I did not see him writing.

17765. You think he stood straight upright all the time?—Yes.

17766. And if Hunt himself says he was busy writing during this time, that is wrong?—I did not see him, anyhow.

17767. You told me you did see him standing there?—Yes, when I came into the charge room they were both standing there.

17768. You do not agree he was busy writing?—No.

17769. There is a door in the charge room as Mullins described it, is there not?—Yes.

17770. Did you hear Mullins give evidence last week?—No; I was not here.

17771. Let me read you this: "Whatever business these other policemen were doing, one went through one door and one went through the other door." He is quite right in saying there are two doors in the charge room that they might have gone through?—Yes; there are two doors.

17772. You say neither of them left the room at all?—No.

17773. Did one of these constables who was in the charge room have some papers in his hand?—I did not see them.

17774. Did one of them go into the Inspector's office?—No.

17775. He never moved?—No.

17776. Is it true that you forced Mullins down on the seat in the charge room?—No.

17777. Did you use any force to keep him there after he was on the seat?—No.

17778. Did you not hold him down on the seat after he was there?—No.

17779. You never held him on the seat?—No.

17780. When Police-constable Saunders says it was necessary for the police-constable to hold him on the seat, that is not true, is it?—I don't know. I could not say that.

17781. You can say whether it is true you held him on the seat or not?—When I came in the man sat down.

17782. Is it true you held him on the seat, or not?—I did not hold him on the seat.

17783. When Saunders says it was necessary for you to hold him on the seat, that is not the case?—He might have been mistaken, very likely.

17784. You need not explain about Saunders' mistakes. That is not the case?—He sat out there, and he sat down.

17785. It is not the case that it was necessary for you to hold him on the seat?—No; it was not necessary.

17786. Have you made a written report?—Yes.

17787. I ask to see that report.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is a confidential report from this officer to his superior officer.

17788. (Chairman.) To whom did you make your report, and what report was it?—A report of the occurrence in the street and the proceedings at the police court.

17789. Was it made after the police court proceedings?—Yes. I made a report out the same evening and one the next day of the proceedings in the police court.

(Chairman.) We will cross-examine, if necessary, upon the reports, Earl Russell. I think that would be quite as convenient a course to take.

(Earl Russell.) If you please, Sir. You have reminded counsel that we have no rights at this enquiry, but I only submit it would be useful for me. You appreciate the constable says there are two reports, and you have them both, I suppose.

(Chairman.) Yes.

17790. (Earl Russell.) When did you make the first report?—On the evening of the occurrence.

17791. On the Sunday night, do you mean?—Yes.

17792. Who told you to make a special report that night?—The Inspector in charge of the police station.

17793. Why?—Through the alleged assault.

17794. That is, the cut on the lip in the police station?—Yes.

17795. You wrote that out the same night?—Yes.

17796. Before you went back on duty?—No, later on, when I came off.

17797. In the small hours of Monday morning?—Yes.

17798. Did you make any note in your note-book?—I took the name and address of the prisoner at the time of the charge. That is all I have got in my book.

17799. (Chairman.) Have you got the book here?—Yes.

17800. Will you show it to me? (Book handed to the Chairman.)

17801. (Earl Russell.) The only note you made there is the name and address of the prisoner?—That is all.

17802. Where did you make that note?—At the police station.

17803. That is, during the time Mullins was being charged?—Yes.

17804. Did you make any note in that book of the expressions he had used?—No, I remembered them.

17805. You trusted to your memory?—Yes.

17806. Or any note of the other people who were about?—Nothing at all.

17807. When did you make the second report on this case?—On the Monday after the proceedings in the police court.

17808. How came you to make that second report?—By order of Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer.

17809. Was that also because of the alleged assault?—No, because of the proceedings at the police court.

17810. Because the charge had been dismissed?—Yes.

17811. Because the charge was dismissed at the police court you were ordered to make a further report?—Yes.

17812. Have you made any further reports besides those?—No.

17813. No other written statement by you?—No other report at all.

17814. You formed the opinion he was drunk, and the disorder was what you have told us—the shouting?—That is right.

17815. Did the shouting consist of anything besides "Where is he?" the second time he came back?—Nothing more than that. He said, "Where is he?" That is what he said first when I stopped him.

17816. And he kept on shouting "Where is he?" Did he shout anything else?—No, he did not shout anything else then.

17817. That was the disorder?—And the crowd following up behind, and all collecting. It all constitutes disorder.

P.C. J. Morgan.

29 Nov 1906.

17818. Was the obscene language which you complained of used on the second occasion, or the first?—On the second occasion. There was no obscene language on the first occasion.

17819. He was charged at the police court with riotous behaviour?—Drunk and disorderly, and making use of obscene language.

17820. I have it here, "Charged this day before me for that he was found unlawfully drunk in Oakley Street, and while so drunk was guilty of riotous and disorderly behaviour."

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) We have the charge-sheet here.

(Chairman.) We have the charge-sheet, but Earl Russell is quite right in pointing out that at the police court, according to the notes of evidence, the charge was not the same as the charge made in the police station.

(Earl Russell.) The charge-sheet is the same as what we have heard, I suppose—drunk and disorderly, and obscene language.

(Chairman.) The charge-sheet enters the charge against Mullins thus: "Drunk and disorderly, and making use of obscene language in Oakley Street, in the Parish of Lambeth." According to the notes of evidence taken by the Clerk of the Court, the charge was "For that he was found unlawfully drunk in Oakley Street, and while so drunk was guilty of riotous and disorderly behaviour." I do not suppose the constable is responsible for the variation.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It must have been the Magistrate himself or the Magistrate's Clerk.

(Chairman.) I suppose the charge was taken before the evidence commenced.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) As I understand from Mullins' evidence, the doctor's certificate was produced almost at once, which was to the effect that he was not drunk.

(Chairman.) I do not know how the certificate was evidence if the doctor was not called.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The Magistrates, as a rule, do take those certificates, and act upon them.

(Chairman.) That is to say, if not objected to by the other side.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) If not objected to by the accused.

(Earl Russell.) It was in favour of the prisoner.

(Mr R. D. Muir.) Yes; the alteration of the charge must have been the act of the Magistrate. The police would have nothing to do with that.

(Chairman.) I am not suggesting any blame to the police. I am only trying to ascertain what the facts were.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I should say, from my experience, that that is what must have happened.

17821. (Earl Russell.) Are you able to say from your memory what charge was read out to him at the police court when he was charged?—Drunk and disorderly, and using obscene language.

17822. That is what you think?—Yes.

17823. Mullins thinks that all he was asked was whether he would plead guilty to being drunk. Do you remember whether that was so or not? Do you think he may be right, that the Clerk may have said to him, "Are you guilty of being drunk"?—The Clerk would be sure to say "Drunk and disorderly."

17824. Anyhow, you did not hear this charge of riotous and disorderly behaviour read out?—No.

17825. What did Mullins say when the charge was read out to him?—Do you mean at the police court or the police station?

17826. The police court?—He pleaded not guilty.

(Chairman.) I think the matter of the doctor's certificate is made clear by Mullins' evidence. At Question 15,780 I asked him: "When the case was called on, the Clerk asked you whether you wished to plead guilty to being drunk. (A.) Yes." He had previously said: "I was asked by Mr. Coates (the Clerk) whether I pleaded guilty to being drunk. I told him I could not plead guilty to being drunk." Then he answers my question in the affirmative. Then I asked him: "Then the case went on? (A.) No; before the charge

P.C. J. Morgan.

29 Nov. 1906.

went on, I asked the Clerk to read the certificate of the doctor to the Magistrate, and he read it. That was before the charge was proceeded with. (Q.) After that the Clerk said: 'Do you wish to plead guilty to being drunk?' (A.) No. Directly I got in the box I was asked whether I pleaded guilty to being drunk, and I said no."

17827. (Earl Russell.) Probably, to save time, they start with the doctor's certificate? How long were you giving evidence at the police court yourself?—About five minutes.

17828. Did you tell the Magistrate practically everything you have told us?—Yes.

17829. You told him about fighting in the first instance?—No, because that happened on the first occasion. I did not arrest him on that. He went away on that. I arrested him on the second occasion.

17830. Therefore you gave no evidence of what happened on the first occasion?—No.

17831. But you did begin your story with his running towards you without his hat on?—Yes.

17832. You are stated in the notes of evidence to have said: "At 11.30 p.m. yesterday I saw the prisoner in Oakley Street." Was that a mistake in the notes or a mistake of yours?—I do not remember saying that. It was 11.15.

17833. The notes say 11.30?—I cannot account for that at all.

17834. You do not think you said 11.30. You could not have said 11.30, because you got into the station at 11.25?—Yes.

17835. You are sure of that?—Yes, the charge was taken at 11.30.

17836. According to this, you saw Mullins running towards you without his hat on, and he at once refused to go away, and you almost at once took him into custody?—I asked him what was the matter first.

17837. But he never left you again after that?—No.

17838. From the time you went away with him in custody?—That is right.

17839. At that time it would not be correct to say that you sent him away and that he came back?—Not at that time.

17840. At that time he came to you and would not go away and you arrested him?—That is right.

17841. Are you quite sure that you began the story in the police court where you begin it now, because in the police court note there is, "I sent him away, but he came back and refused to go away, and used obscene language"?—I requested him to go away. That is the start.

17842. Then, you did not start with the time you told him when he came hatless to you. You started with the time you first saw him?—I requested him to go away, but he came back again five minutes later.

17843. That is your story, but I am asking you did you tell the whole of that story at the police court? You must have done?—Yes, I told the whole story.

17844. Then you began further back than you told me just now?—I told the Magistrate that I requested him to go away.

17845. You told him about the first crowd?—Yes.

17846. You think so now. (No answer.)

17847. This is what you are reported to have said: "I sent him away, but he came back." That would only refer to your having begun telling the Magistrate about the first crowd?—Yes.

17848. Now think it over again. Do not you think you began by telling him about the first crowd?—I remember telling the Magistrate that I requested him to go away and he came back again, and that would be right—he did.

17849. That would not be true of the second time when he came after you hatless?—No, because he refused to go away then.

17850. You told the Magistrate, did you, about the first crowd?—I told him in the evidence that I arrested him.

17851. I am asking you perfectly fair questions, and if you cannot remember, you can say so. Did you not tell the Magistrate when you were giving evidence in the police court when you first saw him with this disorderly crowd fighting—you told the Magistrate that?—Yes, I told the Magistrate that he refused to go away after me telling him.

17852. You told the Magistrate the whole story? You told him about the first time you saw him with this crowd who were fighting?—I might have done.

17853. Cannot you remember?—It is quite likely I did.

17854. That is all you can say?—Yes.

17855. You think it is quite likely you told the Magistrate about the first crowd. When you told him about the first time that you saw the prisoner did you tell him these people had come to blows?—No, I said nothing about fighting at the police court.

17856. You never said a word about fighting?—No; that is quite right.

17857. You never made any complaint against him on your evidence that he had been fighting with other people?—No.

17858. Or quarrelling with them?—Yes; I told the Magistrate he was quarrelling.

17859. When you were talking of the quarrelling which incident were you referring to—the first time you saw him, were not you?—When he came running back shouting "Where is he?"

17860. Who was he quarrelling with then?—I do not know, I am sure.

17861. Do think. Do you say you told the Magistrate he was quarrelling the second time when he came running back without his hat on?—(No answer.)

17862. Well?—(No answer.)

17863. When you gave evidence did you say he was quarrelling the second time when he came back?—No; I do not know that I did then, but I told him the whole story from the start.

17864. Did you tell the Magistrate that the prisoner Mullins had been quarrelling the second time he came back to you without his hat on?—I told the Magistrate he was having a heated altercation. I did not say anything about quarrelling.

17865. Do you mean you never used the word "quarrelling"?—I do not think so, to the best of my recollection—I do not think so.

17866. You are quite sure you said nothing about fighting?—I am quite sure of that.

17867. And nothing about quarrelling?—No.

17868. Are you quite sure of that, too?—Quite sure—well, I am not quite sure, but to the best of my recollection.

17869. If you had said anything about quarrelling would it refer to the first time that you saw Mullins or the second time?—The first time.

17870. Did you tell the Magistrate there was an interval of about five minutes between the first time you saw him and the second time?—I could not tell you whether I told him there was an interval of five minutes. I said he came back shortly afterwards.

17871. Did you tell the Magistrate that he was shouting "Where is he?"?—I could not say whether I said that or not.

17872. When you reached the station with Mullins was he still without his hat?—I could not say. I think he had his hat in his pocket at the time when he came up the street. I fancy he had a hat on when he came to the station.

17873. What kind of hat?—I could not say; I think it was a cap.

17874. You said he had it in his pocket?—I think it was a cap. He had no hat on when he came running up the street the second time.

17875. Did you notice when he put it on?—No, I did not notice that.

17876. Did he have a chance to put it on after you had taken him into custody?—Yes.

17877. How?—Because he had got his hands free.

17878. If he had dived them into his pockets you would have noticed it and wondered what he was pulling out?—I might have done, but I did not notice it.

17879. But you do not want to tell me that when you are taking a man to the station and he puts his hands in his pockets you would not watch to see what he is pulling out?—It might be a knife?—It might have been.

17880. Do you wish us to believe that on the way to the station, while you had him in custody, he could put his hands in pocket and put his cap on his head without your noticing it?—He might have done.

17881. That is what you wish us to believe?—He had got both hands free.

17882. You wish us to believe he might have done that without your noticing it?—I say he might have done.

17883. Are you quite sure he was not wearing a hat of this sort—a bowler hat?—I fancy it was a cap, but I am not quite sure.

17884. You are not sure it was not one of these hats?—I could not say for certain.

17885. Not quite certain?—No.

17886. He could not put a hat of that kind in his pocket, could he?—Not very well.

17887. He could not be holding it in his hands while he was waving his arms about and gesticulating?—He could take his hat off, I expect, and hold his arms up with his hat in his hands.

(Chairman.) Why could he not be waving his arms with his hat in his hands?

(Earl Russell.) Certainly he could, but I suggest to the witness if that was so it is curious he did not notice it—a man who was waving his arms with a hat in his hands.

(The Witness.) He had his hat off when he came running up the street. I could not say that he had not got a hat.

17888. Where was it?—I did not see.

17889. If he was waving his arms about you would be bound to see it if it was in his hands?—Yes, I should think so.

17890. Did you mention in the reports you made what you have told us this morning, about the first crowd that was fighting and quarrelling?—Yes, I mentioned it in my report.

17891. Did you mention about his being without his hat?—No.

17892. Did you mention that at the police court?—I do not think so.

17893. Why not?—I thought it was not necessary.

17894. Surely, it is a sign of disorder if a man runs about a London street without a hat?—That would not be disorder—not that alone.

17895. Not by itself, but it would be a sign of it. Now, I want to ask you about what he says happened in the police station and before. Did he ever say anything to you about "At the ear-hole again" when he saw you in the street?—No, I did not hear it.

17896. Are you quite sure that you were not chatting to the two Sims's when he first saw you?—Positive.

17897. Did he put his hand on you when he first saw you?—No.

17898. He never took hold of you at all?—No.

17899. Have you ever heard the expression, "At the ear-hole"?—No.

17900. You do not know what it means?—No.

17901. How long have you been in the Force?—Seven years.

17902. And you have never heard it?—No.

17903. And if it was used to you you would not know what the man meant?—I should not.

17904. No idea?—No idea.

17905. Did you turn round and strike him?—No.

17906. Nothing of the kind?—Nothing of the kind.

17907. You were not annoyed by his speaking to you in the street the first time?—He did not speak to me at all.

17908. He never spoke to you?—No.

17909. You spoke to him?—That is right.

17910. Did he never answer you the first time when you spoke to him?—I advised him twice to go away, and he said he would not go away.

P.C. J. Morgan.

29 Nov. 1906.

17911. He said he would not go away, with an improper expression?—No, he was very civil the first time.

17912. That is all that passed?—That is all that passed.

17913. When he came back to you you have told us he was shouting out, "Where is he"?—Yes.

17914. You had no idea who he wanted?—No idea at all.

17915. When he came up to you did he ask you for your number?—No.

17916. If he had asked you for your number, would you have given it to him?—He could have taken it off my collar if he wanted it.

17197. Would you have given it to him quietly and in a friendly way if he had asked for it?—Most decidedly.

17918. It would not have annoyed you at all?—No.

17919. Are you sure you did not say to him, "I will give you number"?—No.

17920. Nothing of the kind?—No such thing passed.

17921. You were not irritated?—No.

17922. I suggest to you, when he asked you for your number, you took him into custody?—No such thing.

17923. On the way to the station how did you hold him? Did you hold him by the scruff of the neck, or by the collar?—By the collar.

17924. Both hands, or one hand?—One hand.

17925. In his collar?—That is right.

17926. Screwing it tight?—No.

17927. Quite loosely?—Tight at first, because he was violent at first, and afterwards he went quietly, and I loosened his collar.

17928. You did not take hold of either of his arms?—No.

17929. You took him along in front of you in this kind of way?—Yes.

17930. Did you assist his progress by putting your knee in his back at all?—No.

17931. Nothing of the kind?—It was not required. He went very quiet after he went a few yards.

17932. Just at the beginning, did you have to help him a little?—He threw himself to the ground at the station.

17933. Did he fall right down to the ground?—On his side.

17934. His full length on the pavement?—On his side in the roadway.

17935. His full length?—Over on his side. I saved him from falling his full length.

17936. Very nearly his full length?—Yes.

17937. When did you first mention that? Have you told anyone before to-day?—I mentioned that he was violent and threw himself over.

17938. Have you mentioned to anyone before to-day that he threw himself on the ground?—I could not say.

17939. You say this man Cameron accompanied you part of the way?—Yes.

17940. Who is Cameron?—I do not know.

17941. You never saw him before?—I have seen him before, but I do not know him personally.

17942. Do you know what his occupation in life is?—A stonemason.

17943. Was Cameron wearing a straw hat?—I did not take that notice.

17944. That is another thing you did not notice?—Yes.

17945. Was Cameron with you the first time, when Mullins came up to you?—No. Cameron came up to me after I had the man in custody—just after I arrested him.

17946. Was he one of the seven or eight who had been running after him the second time?—I could not say that for certain.

17947. He just appeared in the crowd, did he?—Yes,

P.C. J. Morgan.

29 Nov. 1906.

seeing the man was rough he wanted to know if he could do any good.

17948. You have known him by sight?—I had seen him before.

17949. You knew his occupation?—No, and I did not know his name then.

17950. You did not ask him to assist you?—No. He asked me if I wanted any help.

17951. He came up by himself?—Yes.

17952. He accompanied you about what—a quarter of the distance to the police station?—To the top of Oakley Street, in sight of the station.

17953. Is not that the whole way?—Very nearly the whole way.

17954. Did Mullins see him, or did he walk behind?—He walked behind. I do not think Mullins could see him. He was in front of me.

17955. You were helping Mullins like this?—Yes.

17956. Did you have any conversation with Cameron on the way?—No.

17957. Did he ask you what the man was in custody for?—No.

17958. And you did not tell him?—No.

17959. When you got to the station is it true that you walked up to Mullins and hit him in the face?—I did not walk up to him. I was with him the whole time, and sat him on the seat.

17960. Did you hit him in the mouth?—No.

17961. He had a cut lip?—He had a little blood by the side here on the lip.

17962. If you did not hit him very hard that is about what he would get, is it not?—I did not hit him at all.

17963. I know you say so, but it was an injury which was consistent with a hit from a fist on the lip?—It might have been.

17964. When did you first notice it?—I noticed blood on one of his handkerchiefs.

17965. You were there when he complained to the inspector that you had done it?—Yes.

17966. He made that complaint to the first person he saw?—To the inspector, as soon as he came out.

17967. Do you say it was there before he came into the station?—I could not say.

17968. It is quite untrue to say you were annoyed by him when you took him into custody?—No, I was not annoyed.

17969. Nor cross with him in the station?—No.

17970. It is quite untrue to say you walked up to him and gave him a blow?—That is untrue.

17971. When you saw the inspector at the station you have told us what you said to him. Did you tell him about the first crowd?— You did, I think, did you not? You told him about the prisoner coming back, did you not?—Yes.

17972. Did you tell the inspector he was calling out "Where is he?"?—I do not think I did; I could not say.

17973. Did you tell him about a large number of other people in the street?—I told him a crowd assembled.

17974. Did you hear Mullins give any account to the inspector of what you had been doing?—All he said was that he accused me of assaulting him, and after the charge was read over to him he said, "I admit that, but this man struck me in this room," pointing to me.

17975. Did you not hear Mullins tell the inspector that he had come back to ask you for your number?—No.

17976. Did you hear him say anything about the "ear-hole"?—No.

17977. Not a word?—Not a word in the station.

17978. When did you first hear him tell the story about the "ear-hole"?—At the police court.

17979. Not a word to the inspector?—Not a word.

17980. You are sure you did not hear him say: "Never mind about that; what I want to complain of is the constable striking me in the station." Are you sure he did not say: "Never mind about that"?—I am quite sure what he said.

17981. Did you hear him tell the inspector he had his daughter with him?—Not that evening, he did not.

17982. When did you hear him say that?—At the police court.

17983. Was there a man with a straw hat there when Mullins came back to you?—No one.

17984. There was no one with a straw hat?—Not that I noticed; there may have been, but I did not see them.

17985. Did you hear anybody say: "Go on, give him one"?—No.

17986. You were asked by the Magistrate at the police court if you wanted to ask him any questions, were you not?—Yes.

17987. When you heard him make this statement about your assaulting him, did you ask him any questions?—I did not ask Mullins any questions at the court. I denied the assault.

17988. That was afterwards, was it not?—That was at the time.

17989. At the time you were asked if you had any questions to ask, you said no, did you not?—I said no.

17990. And stepped back for a minute or two?—No, I did not step back. I denied the assault.

17991. You stepped back for a minute or two, and then came back and said: "I deny the assault"?—No.

17992. That is not true, is it?—No.

17993. Are the Sims's here?—I could not say.

17994. Have you seen them since about this?—I have not seen them.

17995. Do you not know whether they are here?—No, I could not say.

17996. Is Cameron here?—No.

17997. Do you know his address?—Yes, I know his name and address.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any questions, Mr. Muir?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, thank you.

17998. (Chairman.) Just take this book, and look at the entry about Mullins. (Handing book.) The entry is in pencil, I observe?—Yes.

17999. It gives the name and address of Mullins?—Yes.

18000. When did you take his name and address?—When he gave his name to the inspector.

18001. In the charge room?—Yes.

18002. Mullins was present then?—Yes.

18003. Did he see you writing?—Quite likely he did.

18004. In whose handwriting is the date put which is written in ink?—Which date?

18005. 9/9/05?—It does not appear to be written in ink here.

18006. I may have looked at the wrong entry. It looks to me as if it were written with very faint ink, but you think it is written in pencil?—All in pencil.

18007. Is that your entry?—Yes.

18008. It does not look like the same handwriting?—No.

18009. Is it your custom to take a note of the name and address of a prisoner whom you have arrested in the charge room?—Exactly, every man I arrest I enter his name and address.

18010. I only ask what your practice is, because another police constable who was called yesterday told us he did not make any entry of a case in which he arrested a man?—I always make an entry and generally the result.

18011. You have not put the result in that note?—No.

18012. Why did you not put the result there?—I do not think of it always, but as a rule when I think of it I put the result under the name to refer to at any future time.

18013. That is your custom?—Yes.

18014. Is that a custom you have followed according to your own bent, or has somebody told you to do that?—No, it is what I have always done.

18015. You have been seven years in the force?—Yes.

18016. How long have you been in this division?—The whole time.

18017. How long had you been on the beat in September when this occurrence took place?—Exactly a week.

18018. Had you ever seen Mullins before?—Not to my knowledge; he was an absolute stranger to me.

18019. Are you sure he had no little girl with him when you first saw him?—I did not see the girl; I could very nearly swear he had not.

18020. You have said that you saw several people—a crowd in fact. Were there any women in the crowd?—There might have been.

18021. Of course there might have been, but were there according to your recollection?—I could not say now; there was a crowd; I could not say there were any women.

18022. You know Mullins says that he had got a little girl with him when he came out of the Duke of Sussex, and that he took her home and came back?—I did not see any little girl there.

18023. I understand that you made a report on the Sunday night late or early on the Monday morning?—Yes.

18024. And you made a second report after the police court proceedings?—Yes.

18025. Do you recollect whether in your first report you said anything about fighting or not?—Yes.

18026. About Mullins fighting?—Yes.

18027. You did say so?—Yes.

18028. Did you say anything about it in the second report?—I could not say about the second report, I think that was after the proceedings at the police court.

18029. You cannot recollect whether you said anything about fighting in your second report?—No; I could not say.

18030. At the police court Mullins was charged, I suppose, was he not, in your presence?—Yes.

18031. Who read out (the Magistrate or the Clerk of the Court) something to him?—The Clerk of the Court always says, "Do you plead guilty to being drunk or disorderly," or whatever the charge might be.

18032. And that was done in this case?—Yes.

18033. Were you asked questions by anybody after you had taken the Book and been sworn? Were you asked questions by any other constable, or did you tell your own story?—I gave my own story, my own evidence, and then I had finished.

18034. You were not in any way stopped from telling what was necessary for the purposes of justice at the moment?—No, I gave my evidence, and I stepped from the witness box and the next witness came up.

18035. Never mind what happened afterwards for the present. You told your story?—Yes.

18036. Did you say anything about Mullins fighting with another man?—I did not say that at the court.

18037. Why not?—Because I thought it was not necessary. I arrested him when he came back the second time. I gave him a chance to go away the first time.

18038. There was apparently no charge against him of actually assaulting another man?—No.

18039. Then in beginning your story to the Magistrate leading up to the charge you might have said you saw, might you not, without any danger of the charge being increased against Mullins?—Yes.

18040. I understand you are suggesting that you omitted to mention the fighting in the interests of Mullins?—No, I did not think that was necessary. The man went away then, but then he came back again.

18041. I am coming to that. I am now asking you a question about the police court. You had said in your first report, had you not, this: "I had occasion to arrest George Mullins for being drunk and disorderly and using obscene language"?—Yes.

18042. "He was fighting with another man, and I requested him to go away, which he did, but shortly afterwards returned and repeated his conduct." Was that what you said in your report?—Yes.

P.C. J. Morgan.

29 Nov. 1906.

18043. First of all on that I ask you why did you not say that to the Magistrate?—(No answer.)

18044. You do not answer that question. Is this a correct report of what you did say to the Magistrate: "I saw prisoner in Oakley Street, drunk and quarrelling, surrounded by a crowd"?—Yes.

18045. That is what you told the Magistrate?—Yes.

18046. Does not that strike you as a different kind of story from that which was told in your report?—A little different.

18047. What I am putting to you is this. Looking at the report, and reading it, I should have thought it meant that Mullins and another man were actually fighting in the street. Is that what you meant by it?—Yes.

18048. Mullins and another man actually engaged in using their fists one against the other?—Yes.

18049. Why did you not say that to the Magistrate? The importance of it to my mind is this, I tell you at once. Mullins says there was no kind of crowd, no fighting, and that he was passing with his little girl, and tapped you on the shoulder?—No.

18050. That is his account?—No such thing happened

18051. I know you deny that. Am I to understand now that you say that when your attention was first called to Mullins he was actually engaged in fighting another man?—Yes, there was an altercation, coming to blows.

18052. I am not dealing with an altercation coming to blows. Do I understand that when you saw Mullins he was actually using his firsts against another man and that the other man was using his fists against him?—Yes.

18053. Why did you not tell that to the Magistrate?—As I say, the man went away then, and I had finished with the case, and then he came back again.

18054. Very likely, but that is no reason why you should not have told the Magistrate the way in which the row, or call it what you like, commenced, as far as you were concerned. Why did you not tell him?—I should have told him.

18055. But what you did tell the Magistrate was that Mullins was drunk and quarrelling, surrounded by a crowd?—Yes, there were about eight or ten persons about him the first time when I requested them all to go away.

18056. Mullins being drunk and surrounded by a crowd does not necessarily mean fighting, does it?—No.

18057. However, that is the explanation you give of that. You thought it was unnecessary to mention the fighting to the Magistrate?—Yes, because the man went away, and they all went away when I told them, and the fighting stopped.

18058. When you saw Mullins coming back followed by seven or eight people what did you think he was coming back for?—I really could not tell. He said, "Where is he?" I again told him to go away. He said he should f——g well go when he liked. Then I arrested him. A crowd was there by that time.

18059. You have told me, Mr. Muir, and Lord Russell, everything that Mullins said?—Everything that I can recollect.

18060. Everything that strikes you as being of importance?—Yes.

18061. Do you think it was fair to found upon that alone a charge of using obscene language?—Yes.

18062. As far as I can make out only one word could possibly be described as obscene?—That would be obscene language.

18063. Then you think if a man, who is in an excited condition, who is arrested by you, and taken to the police station, uses one single word that could be described as obscene, it is right to found a charge of obscene language?—To my idea.

18064. And that is what you meant by charging Mullins before the Inspector at the police station with being guilty of using obscene language?—Yes.

18065. Did you press that charge at the police court? Yes, I told the Magistrate what he said.

P.C. J. Morgan.

29 Nov. 1906.

18066. There is no note about it, and the charge that the Magistrate ultimately heard was not a charge of using obscene language, but it was a charge that he was found unlawfully drunk in Oakley Street, and whilst so drunk was guilty of riotous and disorderly behaviour?—I gave in my evidence what he said, that he would f——g well go when he liked.

18067. That is not in the note, although it is quite possible you said that. But you did not press the charge of obscene language?—It would be pressing the charge when I told the Inspector what it was.

18068. You were the prosecutor in the case?—Yes.

18069. You did not call the Magistrate's attention to the obscene language apparently to found the charge upon?—It is not my place, it is the clerk's—about the obscene language.

18070. I am not saying you are to blame because the clerk does not take everything down, because I know how the proceedings are conducted, and I see nothing wrong in the way the proceedings were conducted here. The only word he used was the word you have used?—Yes.

18071. You did not press the charge?—No, I told the Magistrate what he said.

18072. I do not quite understand the story. You say the man had blood upon his lip?—I noticed that in the station first.

18073. Mullins has sworn on oath before us that you did give him a hit in the police station, and cut him in the mouth?—Yes, I deny that. I did not touch him at the station.

18074. Can you explain to me how his mouth came to be cut?—It might have been done in having a fight before.

18075. I thought of that, and that is why I was asking you a few minutes ago so particularly as to whether the two men were actually fighting?—That is the only way I can account for it.

18076. Then the position is this. You say Mullins and another man were fighting in the street, that there was a crowd there, that you dispersed the crowd, and that you ultimately arrested him and took him to the station, and his lip was then bleeding?—Yes.

18077. And although you heard him say you hit him in the station you never told the Magistrate one single word about his fighting. How do you account for that?—I did not tell the Magistrate he had been fighting because I did not think it was necessary.

18078. You heard Mullins say "He stood over me and said 'You ——,'" and then he used a foul expression, I presume, because it is left in blank by the Clerk of the Court, "I know who you are, you are one of these bleeders,' and hit me in the mouth, and then a second time, my mouth bled"?—No, no such thing passed.

18079. Did you hear him say that in the Magistrate's Court?—Yes, I heard that.

18080. How came it that when he said that you never told the Magistrate that he had been fighting with a man if, in fact, he had been. You know the magistrate said at the end there was a circumstantial account, and that he dismissed the charge?—Yes.

18081. If it was true that Mullins and another man had been fighting, why on earth did you not say that to the Magistrate? (No answer.)

18082. If the story is true, it seems a complete answer to the suggestion that you hit him at the police station, does it not?—I do not know.

18083. Does it not seem an answer?—I know I did not mention it because the man went away, and they all went away.

18084. That is how you account for his cut lip?—That is the only way I can come to the conclusion that he had a cut. I could not say he had it there.

18085. Does it not strike you as odd that you did not say so to the Magistrate when he was dealing with the case? (No answer.)

18086. (Mr. Dickinson.) I just want to get the exact time when this thing occurred. You were at the police station at half-past 11?—Twenty-five minutes past 11.

18087. How far is it from Oakley Street to the police station?—A matter of seven or eight minutes' walk.

18088. Then you could not have left Oakley Street much before a quarter past 11?—About that, yes.

18089. How long, according to you, was Mullins away?—About four or five minutes, to the best of my recollection.

18090. The first time he went away would be not later than 10 minutes past 11?—Yes.

18091. Before he went away you had asked the crowd to disperse?—Yes.

18092. And they had gone away?—They all went away.

18093. That took a little time, I suppose?—A minute or so; not long.

18094. I suppose we should not be wrong in saying that this fighting which you saw take place had taken place about five minutes past 11?—No, 10 minutes past was the first time I saw him at all. The first time I saw the crowd was 10 minutes past 11.

18095. How do you know that was the time?—There is a clock there, and I had a watch in my pocket.

18096. Do you mean you looked at the time?—Yes.

18097. We will take it that it was not earlier than 10 minutes past 11. What had you been doing before that—before you saw that crowd?

(Chairman.) As I cross-examined in my discretion from the reports, it is only fair that Lord Russell should see them. (The reports were handed to the learned counsel.)

(Earl Russell.) I am afraid I cannot make use of them now.

(Chairman.) If you wish you can make a request to the Commission.

(Earl Russell.) I am much obliged.

18098. (Mr. Dickinson.) What had you been doing before you saw this crowd with these people fighting?—I had been working the beat for an hour and ten minutes. I came out at 10 o'clock.

18099. You came out at 10 o'clock. How long had you been in Oakley Street?—Four or five minutes, I daresay. I went there when they turned out of the public-houses.

18100. You so arranged your beat that you would be standing near the public-houses at the time they were closing?—Yes.

18101. That is 11 o'clock?—Yes.

18102. Did you arrive there before closing time?—No, I arrived there about 11 o'clock.

18103. When this fighting took place you, I understand, were standing not far from Sims' shop?—About 14 or 15 yards from the public-house.

18104. You know the Sims's?—Yes, I only knew them by sight. They have been about there a long time.

18105. You do know them by sight?—By seeing them standing at the shop.

18106. By being about there?—Yes, I have had occasion to speak to them about their vans standing outside.

18107. I understand you had only been seven days at this station?—Seven days on that beat, but I had been on it before.

18108. You have been in this district for how long?—Seven years.

18109. During that time you have known the Sim's?—Yes.

18110. Do you remember speaking to the Sims's at all on that night?—No, I do not; I do not remember seeing them, let alone speaking to them.

18111. You often saw them standing at the door?—Yes, I often saw them.

18112. You have seen them standing at the door?—Yes.

18113. And you would have seen them on this night if they had been standing at the door?—The shops are all closed on Sunday night; they do not live there.

18114. I suppose on Sunday evening those places are closed?—All the shops are closed.

18115. So that if they had been there you would have seen them?—I should have seen them if they had been there. The whole place was in darkness.

18116. There was nobody there?—No.

18117. And the place was in darkness?—Yes.

18118. With regard to this fighting that was going on, about how many people were there?—I should say from nine to a dozen.

18119. Did it involve noise?—They were talking very loudly.

18120. It was what you call a heated altercation leading up to blows?—Yes.

18121. Which did lead up to blows?—Yes, I was there on the spot, and it did not last many minutes

18122. But you could not get eight or ten people having a heated altercation leading up to blows without everybody in the neighbourhood hearing it?—No.

18123. I understand you to say to Lord Russell that some of the people there you knew?—No, I said I thought there might have been somebody there I knew.

18124. (Earl Russell.) He said he was unable to tell?—I did not see anybody I knew there.

18125. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you not think it would have been useful if you could have got somebody to come and say there was a fight going on?—No one seemed to know 18126. Did you ask anybody?—I did not ask, but inquiries have been made since.

18127. Inquiries have been made since?—Yes.

18128. Did those inquiries find no one who would know anything about it?—Not many people would be there, as the public-houses were closed.

18129. There was nobody there to see it?—No.

18130. I suppose inquiries in a street like that two or three days after the occurrence would result in some information?—They do not take very much notice of a fight, or of anything else, in that street; it is a very rough street.

18131. You know this place very well. Do you mean to say that on Monday or Tuesday if the police had gone down the street and said, "Do you remember there was a fight in this street on Sunday night?" you would not have found anybody?—They would have forgotten all about it. They take very little notice of a fight in that street. Nobody seemed to know anything about it.

18132. Are you perfectly certain about your story?—Yes.

18133. Afterwards you found the inquiries failed. You say there is no doubt about it?—There is not.

18134. I just want to ask you what, in your own mind, made you arrest that man? You had not arrested him for fighting; he had gone away quietly?—Yes.

18135. What made you arrest that man?—Because I requested him to go away and he refused, and said he would f——g well go when he liked. A crowd had gathered by that time.

18136. Although you say this place is very well known, and there are very often fights in this street, do you mean to say that if any man uses that expression, and says, "I am not going away," or "will not f——g well go away for you," it is the usual and recognised thing to take him to the police court?—Yes.

18137. Everybody who says "I will not go away for you" is to be taken to the police court?—After I advised him to go away, and he said he would f——g well go when he liked, I think it is the duty of the policeman to take him then.

18138. Am I to understand that that is a common occurrence?—With people round that neighbourhood. It is a very low part.

18139. It is a very common occurrence that people speaking like that would be taken to the police court?—It is not uncommon.

18140. Would he be charged in this particular form with being drunk and disorderly and using obscene language?—Yes, that would be the wording of the charge.

18141. I do not want to repeat anything that you have been asked by the learned Chairman, but I want to understand this. When the case came on before the Magistrate did you see Mullins first?—I saw him when he came in the passage to go through.

18142. Did he say anything to you?—I think he said "Good morning"; I would not be sure.

18143. When he said "I saw him—Police-constable Morgan—in the corridor at the police court," that is quite correct?—That is right, I told him where to wait. P.C. J. Morgan. 29 Nov. 1905

18144. Did you say anything more to him?—No.

18145. Charge your memory, because he has told us what was said. What did you say?—I told him where to wait until the charge came on.

18146. You said nothing about the case?—No.

18147. Did Mullins know who the Magistrate was?—I could not say. If it was a Monday morning I would not know myself until I went into the court.

18148. Did you know who the Magistrate was?—No, not until I went into court.

18149. Who is the Magistrate who usually sits there?—There are different Magistrates.

18150. Who are they?—Mr. Rose and Mr. Chapman are the usual ones, but sometimes there are others.

18151. Is there any difference between the Magistrates who sit in that court in the way in which they treat prisoners?—I think there is always a difference. They are not all the same.

18152. Is one of them looked upon as very severe or more severe than the other?—No.

18153. Is either of them looked upon as a lenient Magistrate?—There are lenient Magistrates, but I could not say who they are.

18154. Does Mr. Rose appear to be lenient?—I think so.

18155. Did you, or did you not, say to Mullins, "It is all right, it is a very lenient Magistrate, Mr. Rose"?—No.

18156. Are you sure of that?—Quite sure.

18157. Did you say to him "It will be only a matter of a fine"?—No.

18158. That you deny too?—Yes.

18159. That is what he says he was told by you?—No; I did not know who the Magistrate was myself until I got into court.

18160. Then it is quite impossible that you should have said Mr. Rose was the Magistrate?—Yes.

18161. Did he say to you "Mind your own business"?—No.

18162. You say all that is an invention?—It is a pure invention.

18163. No such communication passed between you at all?—No.

18164. You only told him where to sit and that was all?—Yes, where to wait.

18165. You made two reports as we have heard?—Yes.

18166. The second report which was made on the 10th September I presume was made in pursuance of some order or request from your superior officer. Is that so, or not?—Quite right.

18167. That was because they wanted some explanation of what had happened at the police court?—Yes; that is right.

18168. Do you know at all what reason they had for asking for a further report. Can you imagine at all?—The prisoner got discharged.

18169. Is it always or generally the case that when a prisoner is discharged the police constable who has made the charge has to make a report?—Only when a complaint is made against him.

18170. Did the Magistrate say to you what we have been told he said right to your face: "I do not believe your story, and the prisoner will be discharged"?—Certainly not.

18171. You would know if he had said it, would you not?—I would.

18172. You say that is not true?—Those were not the Magistrate's words at all.

18173. It is only fair to you to say that that is what Mullins said the Magistrate said: Then the second report being given in accordance with some request from your superior officer, why did you make the first report?—I made the report in the station.

18174. You went out on duty again, I understand, after that?—Yes.

P.C. J. Morgan.

29 Nov. 1906.

18175. And you came back late at night after your duty was finished?—Yes.

18176. At what hour would that be?—Two o'clock in the morning.

18177. At that time you sat down and made this report?—Yes.

18178. Was that entirely upon your own responsibility?—It was entirely on my own.

18179. Nobody asked for that?—No. The Inspector ordered a report.

18180. When did he order that report?—When I came off duty.

18181. He was still there?—Yes.

18182. What did he say to you about it?—He asked me to make a report out re the alleged assault at the station.

18183. Would this be the usual course. Supposing no assault had taken place at all, and you had brought in a man who was drunk and disorderly, would it be the usual course to ask you to sit down and write a report immediately?—No.

18184. Therefore you knew that you were asked for this report because there was some question about an assault by you?—Quite right.

18185. When you had written this report did you show it to the Inspector?—I took it in to the Inspector.

18186. Did he speak to you about it at all?—He read it. That was all.

18187. I suppose he read it out?—No.

18188. He must then have read what you said about Mullins having been fighting with another man?—Yes.

18189. He must have read that?—Yes, he read that.

18190. Is the Inspector responsible for, or does he have anything to do with, the presentation of the case before the Magistrate?—He attended the police court.

18191. Why, if you were giving evidence before the Magistrate and had made a report, did you not give your evidence in the same words as the report?—Giving evidence and making a report are two different things.

18192. You look upon them as two different things?—Yes.

18193. You thought the report was simply a question for your superior officer as regards assault and you were giving evidence irrespective of that report?—Yes.

18194. When you go to give evidence before a police Magistrate in this way, do you give any consideration to what you are going to say? Do you think over what you are going to say?—No. You state the pure facts.

18195. You state the pure facts at the moment?—Yes.

18196. You are not asked to write out anything for your superior officers or anybody before giving evidence at the police court?—No.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I should like to call your attention to the regulations as to arrest.

(Chairman.) I am much obliged. I was going to ask you as to that.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) In the White Book, at page 215, the thirtieth direction is as to the common assault. You know, of course, that a common assault can only be proceeded with on a complaint by the party aggrieved. The police cannot prosecute for common assault if the party assaulted does not come forward. That lies at the root of the direction. Direction 30 is: "The police are not to interfere between a man and his wife." Rule 31 says: "The police are not authorised to arrest or assist in arresting a person charged by another for a common assault when the assault was not committed in the presence or within view of the police. The person complaining is to be referred to a Magistrate to obtain a summons." Then on the next page, Direction 35, is as to "Assaults—general instructions." "When the residence of a person is known it can rarely be a proper step for the police to take him into custody during the excitement of an affray or disturbance, and when resistance by others as well as by the person himself may be caused by the attempt to take into custody. This does not apply to those cases in which it is necessary to take persons into custody in order to put an end to a disturbance or prevent acts of violence being committed." Probably the effect of these rules would be to make the police chary of arresting in cases for mere assault.

(Chairman.) I want to interpose a witness at this point. I understand Mr. Ryan wants to say something. He had better go into the witness-box, but he need not be sworn.

PATRICK JOSEPH RYAN, called.

P. J. Ryan.

18197. What is your full name and address?—Patrick Joseph Ryan, 55, Hall Place, Paddington.

18198. You have made an application to the Commission to hear a complaint that you have got against the police?—Yes, Sir.

18199. I thought I would like you to come and state publicly what your complaint was, although I am afraid that it goes outside the sphere of our inquiry. Will you just state it shortly?—It is a case in which I and another man were sentenced to three months' hard labour through Detective-sergeant Rose, and it was proved afterwards we were not there.

18200. Where were you arrested?—London Street, Paddington.

18201. On what occasion?—The visit of the King and Queen of Portugal.

18202. You were charged with what?—Attempting to pick pockets.

18203. Who was with you?—Henry George Baxter.

18204. He also was charged?—Yes.

18205. Were you convicted on a charge of pocket-picking?—Yes, and sentenced to three months' hard labour.

18206. At the police court?—Yes.

18207. What has happened since?—We were released after a week, and since then we have had a free pardon.

18208. You and Baxter have received a free pardon?—Yes. I have it here if you wish to see it.

18209. You rather thought you ought to be allowed an opportunity of coming here to make your application, and I did not stop you; but I have told you it is not one of those cases with which we are able to deal. You appear to have had a free pardon, and so nothing more is to be said about it as far as we are concerned?—But the Magistrate and the solicitor said there was no reflection whatever on the police, but there was.

(Chairman.) We cannot go into that.

(Earl Russell.) May I say, Sir, Mullins' wife and daughter are here? I do not know whether you would like me to call them now or wait until the police evidence is finished.

(Chairman.) The daughter is the only witness we want, I suppose.

(Earl Russell.) I want to call the wife to show the condition of Mullins' lip when he paid the first visit to the house.

(Chairman.) Then, I suppose, you had better call them before we go on with the police evidence.

KATIE MULLINS, sworn.

K. Mullins.

18210. (Earl Russell.) Is your name Katie Mullins, and are you 11 years old?—Yes.

18211. Do you remember a Sunday in the early part of September when your father had some trouble with the police?—Yes.

18212. Were you coming home with him from Greenwich?—Yes.

18214. And returned home over Waterloo Bridge?—Yes.

18215. Do you remember when you were nearly home your father going into a public-house?—Yes.

18216. Which public-house was that?—The Earl Grey.

18217. Then do you remember he went into another? Yes.

18218. What was the name of that?—The Duke of Sussex.

18219. Where were you while he was in the Duke of Sussex?—I was standing outside.

18220. Do you know how long he was in the Duke of Sussex—about?—About three minutes.

18221. What happened when he came out?—There was a policeman and two rag-shop men standing outside and another man.

18222. When your father came out from the Duke of Sussex did he come out alone or with other people?—Alone.

18223. Nobody else with him?—No.

18224. Where were you?—I was standing outside.

18225. Did you go with him?—Yes.

18226. How close to him were you?—About as far as I am from here. (Indicating about half a yard.)

18227. Not holding his hand?—No.

18228. You say you saw the policeman talking to two rag-shop men?—Yes.

18229. What did you see happen then?—Daddy spoke to the policeman, but I do not know what he said, and the policeman struck daddy.

18230. Who spoke to the policeman?—Daddy.

18231. Did you hear the policeman speak to your father first?—No.

18232. Was your father talking to any other men when he came out of the public-house?—No.

18235. What did you notice about him?—He had a white straw hat on.

18236. Then you say your father said something to the policeman which you did not hear?—Yes.

18237. And the policeman you say struck him?—Yes.

18238. Will you show the Chairman how and where?—He struck him like that (describing) on the eye there (indicating the left eye).

18239. Did you hear the policeman say anything?—The policeman said to him, "You get away," and daddy said to me, "Come on, Katie," and we both went down home.

18240. You started crying out, did you not?—Yes. He said: "Come on, Katie," and Daddy took me down home, and said to mother: "I am going back to take that policeman's number;" and Daddy said to mother: "Come on, Kate," and mother went with Daddy, and that is all I know.

18241. You say your mother went with your father?—Yes, mother went with Daddy.

18242. Where did you go?—I went down home.

18243. You stayed there?—Yes.

18244. Where did your father meet your mother?—Mother was down home.

18246. Did you know those two rag-shop men?—Yes—Mr. Sims.

18247. You had seen them before?—Yes.

18248. Would you know the policeman again if you saw him?—I do not think so.

18249. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Is your house in Oakley Street?—No, it is in Johanna Street, Oakley Street.

18250. How far is that from Oakley Street?—Not far.

18251. Is it a turning out of Oakley Street?—Yes.

18252. How far are you down Johanna Street?—Three doors down.

18253. Where did you leave your father to go home? Where did you part with him?—He took me right down home, and he called mother, and mother went.

18254. Right indoors?—Yes.

18255. Did your father go indoors too?—Yes, because he called mother.

18256. He went right indoors?—Yes.

18257. Into what room did he go?—Into the parlour.

18258. How long did he remain in the parlour?—About ten minutes.

18259. And then did your father and mother go out?—Yes.

18260. Leaving you alone indoors?—Yes.

18261. You saw the policeman strike your father?—Once; that is all I saw.

18262. How often did the policeman strike your father?—Once; that is all I saw.

18264. Just point out again where he struck him?—On his eye.

18265. The left eye?—Yes, because when Daddy came home from the police station I was just going into bed, and I saw a bruise there. (Pointing to the left eye.)

18267. Did you see the policeman strike him on that left eye?—Yes.

18268. Where you saw the bruise?—Yes.

18269. You are quite clear about that?—Yes. It was not much.

18270. (Chairman.) What time did you go out on that Sunday with your father?—I went to Mass first, and I came home and had dinner.

18271. Was your father with you at Mass?—Yes, he took me.

18273. About what time did you go out?—About 4 o'clock, it was.

18274. Do you remember where you went that afternoon with him?—Yes, to Greenwich.

18275. Where did you have tea?—We had tea after we came home from Greenwich; between 10 and half-past 10 it was when we came home.

18276. At night?—Yes.

18277. It was very late?—Yes.

18278. How was it you were so late getting your tea?—I do not know, Sir.

18279. You went all the way to Greenwich?—Yes, we stayed in the Park a long while, and walked right round the Park.

18280. Where did you go then, when you had been round the Park?—We came by the boat then, and came home.

18281. I suppose you sat down in the Park?—Yes.

18282. How long were you there altogether do you think?—About three hours.

18283. Do you mean that you had nothing to eat or drink from 4 o'clock, when you went out, until you got back to London?—Daddy bought me some milk and cake.

18292. He had no beer or anything?—No.

18293. Are you quite certain of that?—Yes. Daddy went in the "Earl Grey" and had a glass of cider, which I had a drink out of.

18294. That was when he got back to London?—Yes.

18295. You left Greenwich about 8 o'clock?—Yes.

18296. And got on the boat?—Yes, and we came home.

K. Mullins.
29 Nov. 1906.

18297. Which pier did you get off at?—Waterloo—— Big Ben, I mean.

18298. You mean Westminster?—Yes.

18299. You are certain it was Westminster Pier?—Yes.

18300. How far from Westminster Pier is Oakley Street, do you think?—About 10 minutes' walk.

18301. Where did you walk to when you got off at Westminster Pier?—We came right over the Westminster Bridge and daddy took me right round, and we came over Waterloo Bridge and then we had tea.

(Mullins.) We went right round Victoria way.

18302. (Chairman.) You must not interrupt the evidence. You went from Westminster Bridge. Do you mean you went along the Embankment?—Yes, past Westminster Bridge, right round the Embankment, and then we came out of the Embankment and then went round Waterloo Bridge and came home by Waterloo Bridge.

18303. You walked along the Embankment. I suppose you went up the steps?—Yes.

18304. Are you sure you went up the steps?—Yes.

18305. And got on to Waterloo Bridge?—Yes.

18306. Then, when you got over Waterloo Bridge, where did you go?—We came home and had tea.

18307. You went home?—Yes.

18308. Right to Johanna Street?—Yes.

18309. Are you certain of that?—Yes.

(Mullins.) She has made a mistake.

18310. (Chairman.) Do not interrupt. (To the Witness). You went over Waterloo Bridge with a view of going home, I understand?—Yes.

18311. Your father took you home?—Yes; we had tea and then daddy went in the Earl Grey and had a glass of cider and I went in with him.

18312. What time did you get home, do you think?—Between 10 and half past 10.

18313. Was your mother at home when you got there?—Yes.

18314. Did you have a regular tea, do you mean. Did you sit down at the table?—Yes.

18315. What did you have with your tea?—Winkles and watercress.

18316. Just an ordinary tea?—Yes.

18317. At what time did your father go out after that?—About a quarter to 11 it was when he went out.

18318. Did the tea only take a quarter of an hour after all that long day's walk?—Yes, because we had something out in the park.

18319. But still you were pretty tired, were you not?—Yes.

18320. Do you mean to say you only sat down to tea for a quarter of an hour with your father?—Yes.

18321. Why did you go out with him so late at night?—Daddy told me to come.

18322. Does he generally take you out so late at night?—No, he don't generally take me out so late.

18323. You had been out with him for over six hours?—Yes.

18324. Then you came home and had tea. Are you quite certain that he asked you to go out again that night?—Yes. He said, "Would you like to come out again with me, Katie?" and I said "Yes, daddy."

18325. You are sure it is not some other night you are thinking of?—No. It was the first night that daddy took me out.

18326. Had he never taken you out before?—No.

18327. Never taken you to Greenwich or any place like that in the afternoon?—No. It was the first time I ever went to Greenwich.

18328. What is your age?—11.

18329. It was because you were getting a bigger girl that he was taking you out?—Yes.

18330. This was the first outing of the kind that you ever had with your father?—Yes.

18331. Were you tired?—Not very tired.

18332. Then he said "You come out with me again"?—Yes.

18333. Were not you surprised at that?—Yes.

18334. Why did he ask you, do you think?—I do not know.

18335. However, what you say is that he asked you to go out again with him?—Yes.

18336. When he went out, where did he take you to?—We went into the Earl Grey.

18337. Is that a public-house?—No, it is a beerhouse.

18338. How far is that from Johanna Street?—It is only two doors up.

18339. When he got out did he go straight to this beerhouse?—Yes, he came out and went straight to the beerhouse, and then he came out of there and then he went right on.

18340. Did you go into the beerhouse with him?—Yes, because I had a drop of cider out of his glass.

18341. Then he went to the Duke of Sussex?—Yes.

18342. How far off is that?—Six doors down.

18343. Six doors down Oakley Street?—Yes.

18344. Therefore only a minute's walk?—Yes.

18345. Did he go straight to the Duke of Sussex from the other place?—From the beerhouse we went down to the Duke of Sussex.

18346. The beerhouse is only two doors down from your place, I understand?—Yes.

18347. The Duke of Sussex is about 10 houses down?—Yes.

18348. In Oakley Street?—Yes.

18349. How long did you stay in the beerhouse with him?—About 10 minutes he was there.

18350. And then he took you straight to the Duke of Sussex?—Straight to the Duke of Sussex.

18351. Did he ask you in there?—No.

18352. What did he tell you to do?—He said "Will you wait outside, Katie?" and I said "Yes, daddy."

18353. And he went in?—Yes.

18354. When he came out were other people coming out too?—No. Daddy was the last one in and the last one out.

18355. Then closing time had come?—Yes; about three minutes he was in there.

18356. What time was it then?—He was about three minutes in there. He came out about three minutes to 11.

18357. Did you take his hand when he walked away from the Duke of Sussex?—No; I never took his hand.

18358. Did you see him pass the constable, or was the constable standing where you would have to pass him in order to get home?—Oh, yes, we had to pass the constable.

18359. He was talking to Sims?—Yes.

18360. You had seen Sims before?—Yes.

18361. Are there two Sims's?—Yes.

18362. Were they both there then?—Yes.

18363. Was anybody else talking to the constable?—Yes, a tall man. There were four of them altogether—the two Sims's and another man and the policeman.

18364. What kind of coat had the tall man on?—I could not tell you. I did not notice.

18365. Did you see your father tap the constable on the shoulder?—Yes, I saw that, and then the policeman struck daddy.

18366. Did you see the blows actually given?—Yes.

18367. And saw where they struck your father?—Yes, because when he came home from the police station I was just going to bed and I saw it.

18368. But you told one of the learned gentlemen you saw that when he came back from the station?—I saw him strike daddy.

18369. You said on the eye?—Yes, so he did.

18370. Are you certain it was not in the back or the side?—No, it was on the eye.

18371. Then you told us you went home. What kind of hat had your father got on that day?—The same hat as he has got on now.

18372. What kind of hat is that?—A bowler hat.

18373. You are certain he had not a cap on?—No, he had a bowler hat—his Sunday hat.

18374. When he went out the second time with you had he the bowler hat still on?—Yes.

18375. When he and your mother went out afterwards?—He had his same hat on.

18376. Was he carrying it in his hand?—I do not know.

18377. Did he seem angry?—Yes.

18378. Did he take anything in the house after coming back?—No—he brought his hat in.

18379. But I mean did he take anything to drink?—Oh, no.

18380. When he went out of the house with your mother, the next time you saw him was when he came back from the station?—Yes.

18381. That was very late for you to be up?—Yes.

18382. Had you gone to bed?—I was just going to bed, but I wanted to stay up.

18383. Why did you want to stay up? Was there anything unusual about your father's behaviour or his appearance?—I stayed up because I thought daddy would get into more trouble, because the policeman struck daddy and I stayed up till daddy came home.

18384. When your father went out the second time you thought there would be more trouble?—Yes.

18385. And you stayed up because you were anxious?—Yes.

18386. Were you in court this morning when your father was giving his evidence?—No.

18387. How did you come to the court to-day? Who asked you to come?—Daddy came home as I was just going to school.

18388. This morning?—No, this afternoon.

18389. What time did you get out of school this morning?—12 o'clock.

18390. What time was the school going to begin again?—2 o'clock.

18391. When did your father come home for you?—It was just 1 o'clock when we came out of the door.

18392. And he asked you to come here?—Yes.

18393. Have you seen anybody else except your father this morning to talk about the case?—No.

18394. Your mother came with you, I think?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I saw something with my own eyes when I came through the corridor.

18395. (Chairman.) Did any people talk to you outside in the corridor of this court?—Only Uncle Joe.

18396. Is Uncle Joe in the court now?—Yes.

18397. Has anybody besides your Uncle Joe spoken to you?—No.

18398. You told us your father and mother brought you to the court here?—Yes.

18399. And you have not been in the court until you were called, I understand?—No, I have not.

18400. You came straight from outside the court into the witness-box?—Yes.

18401. Had anybody spoken to you besides your father and mother outside?—No.

18402. Now are you sure of that?—Yes—oh, I spoke to that gentleman there (pointing).

18403. Who is that gentleman?—The one with the beard (Mr. Timewell).

18404. What did he say to you?—He asked me all the questions.

18405. Were they like the questions that Lord Russell has asked you?—Yes.

18406. Much the same questions?—Yes, he wrote them on a piece of paper.

18407. Who wrote on a piece of paper?—That gentleman (Mr. Timewell).

18408. Until you came here with your father and mother nobody has spoken to you about this case except your father and mother?—No.

18409. You are able to read, I suppose, because you are 11 years of age and go to school?—Yes.

18410. Did you read anything in the papers about this matter?—Yes. K. Mullins. 29 Nov. 1906

18411. Did you read what your father said to us on Thursday last in any newspaper?—I read something about daddy in the papers.

18412. That was last Friday?—It was one day last week.

18413. In what paper was it?—It was in the "Evening News."

18414. That would be on Thursday, perhaps?—I do not know.

18415. One day last week?—Yes.

18416. Has your father told you to say anything particular to-day?—No, because I was there when it happened.

18417. Did your father on your way to come here tell you what to say?—No.

18418. Did he go over the whole case with you?—No.

18419. Did he ask you what you remembered?—He asked me what I remembered, but I never told him.

18420. On the way here now?—Yes.

18421. Did he use those words—"What do you remember, Katie, about it?"—Yes.

18422. Those exact words?—Yes.

18423. He did not say "Do you recollect what took place?"—No. He said "Do you remember them things what happened on the Sunday?"

18424. He did not tell you what you were to say, and say, "Now mind you say that"?—No, Sir.

18425. Are you sure he did not?—Yes, Sir.

18426. Your father took you out, and you seem to have had a very nice day with him?—Yes.

18427. Do you get on well with your father?—Yes.

18428. Does he often have too much to drink?—No.

18429. Is he never rough in the house?—No.

18430. Nor quarrelsome?—No.

(Earl Russell.) I should like to hand in the proof that was taken in the passage of this court, if anything turns upon it.

(Chairman.) So far there is absolutely no impropriety shown at all, but there is the fact that Mr. Timewell had an interview with the young lady.

(Earl Russell.) I should prefer to put it so that there should be no question about it. (Handing in document.)

18431. (Mr. Dickinson.) You told us that your father gave you a little cider that evening?—Yes.

18431*. Have you ever been in a public-house before with him, and had a drop of cider?—No.

18432. Never at all?—No.

18433. Did you like the cider?—Yes.

18434. Had you never tasted it before?—Yes, I have tasted it indoors.

18435. Your father drinks cider indoors?—Yes.

18436. After you came off the steamer, do you remember how long it was you were walking about before you got home?—About half-an-hour.

18437. You next walked along the Embankment, and round by the bridge, and down to Oakley Street?—Yes.

18438. Did you stop anywhere on the way?—No, Sir, we came straight home.

18439. You have told us you thought your father was angry?—Yes.

18439*. Was he angry when he came out of the public-house?—No.

18440. When was it he became angry?—When he came down home and went back again.

18441. What made you cry?—I thought daddy would get locked up.

18442. Why did you think he would get locked up? What had he done wrong?—Because the policeman struck him.

18443. Do you think that the other three gentlemen who were there saw that happen?—Yes, Sir.

18444. You are sure that they saw that happen?—Yes, because they were talking with the policeman.

K. Mullins.
29 Nov. 1906.

18445. Who else was there in the street? Were there any other people in the street?—No.

18446. You are sure of that?—Yes.

18447. Was the street empty?—Yes.

18448. Were there many people coming out of the public-houses?—No, because daddy was the last one in and the last one out.

18449. When you were waiting outside the public-house, was the policeman and those three gentlemen talking there all the time?—No, they had been in the "Duke of Sussex," and they came out, and then the policeman came up to them.

18450. The two Sims's?—Yes, the two Sims's, and the policeman came up and spoke to them.

18451. You saw them come out of the door?—Yes.

18452. They came close to you, did they?—Yes.

18452*. You were standing by the door?—Yes.

18453. Where did the other gentleman with the straw hat come from?—He came up with the policeman, and the man said: "Give him one," and then the policeman did give daddy a blow.

18454. The man said: "Give him one"?—Yes.

18455. Which man said that?—The man with the straw hat.

18456. What had your father done then to make him say: "Give him one"?—Daddy had just tapped the policeman on the shoulder.

18457. You saw him tap him on the shoulder?—Yes.

18458. And then the other said: "Give him one"?—Yes.

18459. Who did he say that to?—To the policeman.

18460. And then the policeman did give him one?—Yes.

18461. Did he give him more than one stroke?—Not when I was there.

18462. You saw him hit out, and you say he hit him in the eye?—Yes.

18463. And that made you cry?—Yes.

18464. Did your father seem hurt by the blow?—I think so.

18465. When he came back in the evening, what did you see on his face?—The bruise.

18466. Did he show it?—I called out to daddy, "Look at that bruise on your eye."

18467. Your mother had gone out with him?—Yes.

18468. Had she come back before your father?—No, they both came back together.

18469. And all that time you were waiting, thinking that something was going to happen?—Yes.

18470. Have you any brothers and sisters?—I have some sisters but no brothers.

18470*. Were they awake all that time?—No, they were all abed.

18471. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) May I ask a further question. (To the witness.) You spoke to your father about his eye when he came home?—Yes.

18472. What did you say to him about it?—I said to daddy, "Look at your eye."

18473. What did he say?—Then he looked in a looking-glass.

18474. What did he say?—He did not say anything then.

18475. He said nothing at all?—No.

18476. Was your mother there?—Yes.

18477. Did she say anything about his eye?—No.

18478. There was nothing more said about it?—No.

18479. Did your father at any time say anything more about his eye?—No.

18480. (Chairman.) Are you quite certain that your father came with you all the way home after the policeman struck him?—Yes; we came right indoors, me and daddy did.

18481. You are quite sure of that?—Yes.

18482. Quite sure that your father did not say at the top of the street, "Now go indoors"?—No; because he brought mother out.

18483. Then if your father told us that he took you to the top of the street and sent you indoors, that was not what took place?—He took me right indoors.

18484. Then if you father told us "I took her"—that is you—"to the top of the street and sent her indoors," that is not true, is it?—No.

18485. How far is your house down the street?—Two doors. There is the public-house and then another house, and then there is our house.

(Earl Russell). May I ask two questions of Mullins himself to show how these witnesses came here, and when they were sent for?

(Chairman.) Yes, I see no reason why you should not.

GEORGE MULLINS, recalled.

G. Mullins.

18486. (Earl Russell). Did you go home this morning by my directions in order to fetch your daughter here?—Yes.

18486*. At what time was that this morning?—A quarter to one.

18487. Had you any intention up to that moment of calling her as a witness?—I had no wish of bringing her into such a place at all. I told you last week, and that gentleman Mr. Timewell, that I had no wish to bring my daughter or my wife into the case, or anybody else, and up to a quarter to one to-day I had no idea that I was going to bring my daughter here.

18488. And you only brought her because I asked you?—Under your direction I went and brought her. I did not bring her of my own free will. She has come here against my will.

18489. (Chairman.) She came here under your guardianship?—She came here under my guardianship because I was advised by Lord Russell to fetch her. That is the reason I brought her, and I told the gentleman I did not want to bring her into it.

18490. She has told us the story of the afternoon very much as you have told us?—Quite right. It is only the truth. The only mistake she has made is with regard to saying she went over Westminster Bridge. She did not go over Westminster Bridge.

18491. She corrected that at once. But how about the left eye?—She might have made a mistake with regard to the eye. I did have a little knock, but I took no notice of that at all. I got a two-handed hit.

18492. What do you mean by a two-handed hit?—I was hit with one hand and hit with the other at the same time when I was first hit.

18493. This is what you said, "He hit me in the ribs and I walked away with my girl as she started crying"?—I take no notice of little slight things. The only thing I took notice of was the punch I got inside the station on my lip. As for the constable saying that I was fighting I had no more idea of fighting than anyone else. Of course, that is his defence.

18494. You have said all that before. You also told us that you left the little girl at the top of the street and told her to go home?—I said "Go on, Katie, and tell your mother, quick. Go indoors." I saw her go to the passage. It is not further from the corner of the street to where my house is than that wall of the court. They are only small houses.

18495. Your daughter has been clear about it, and she has no doubt that you went back right into the house?—I may have gone into the passage.

18496. You were there 10 minutes, according to the little girl?—The child is not able to judge what time it is. She might be a minute and say it was half an hour, or she might be half an hour and say it was two hours.

18497. I asked her about the story of the afternoon, and she agreed with you as to every moment almost?—Yes.

18498. If she is so sound in her recollection of time at Greenwich and on the way home, why is she unsound about time when she says 11.15? She says you were 10 minutes in the house. It might be nine or eight minutes?—It may have been a few minutes, but very few minutes.

18499. It cannot even have been a few minutes if you did not go into the house at all, but sent her indoors and then went back for the constable's number?—I said to my wife, "I am going to take this constable's number," and she came with me.

18500. That is in accordance with the story the little girl tells us now, but what you told us last week was, "I took her to the top of the street and sent her indoors. I went back to the same place and looked for his number." I am not necessarily saying you were speaking falsely, but I am only calling your attention to what you did say on the last occasion. Which is the right account—the girl's account or the account you give us last Thursday?—I would rather rely on the girl's account, saying that I went indoors at the time, because I was a little bit upset with regard to the way in which I was served.

(Earl Russell.) There is no statement in his evidence that he did not go indoors, because he begins by saying he went home.

(Chairman.) There is not, I entirely agree, but he did say "I took her to the top of the street and sent her indoors."

(Earl Russell.) That is immediately after an answer saying that he went home.

(Witness.) I believe I said in my first answer that I went home.

18501. (Chairman.) In answer to another question you said "When he struck me I got out of temper a bit and I took my girl down home." Is that all you wish to say about it? You think now, having heard Katie's evidence, that she is right?—What she said she said of her own conscience and not with mine or her mother's. Her mother is here, and if you would like to hear her evidence with regard to accompanying me to get the constable's number she will give it to you. She followed me right to the station, and I asked her the question this morning—I had not asked her till I heard the policeman's evidence—"Was there another man assisting the policeman, and did he want any assistance?" She was walking at the side of me to the station.

18502. It is the first suggestion we have had that Mrs. Mullins was there at all?—I let her alone. I did not want her to have anything to do with it at all, and I did not want to bring my child into such a place as this. She has never been in such a place before.

18502*. That is what you told Mr. Bankes. You explained your position fully?—Yes.

(Chairman.) What does Mrs. Mullins say? If you think it worth while to call her we will take her evidence.

(Earl Russell.) I think I should prefer to call her, Sir.

Mrs. Katherine Mullins, sworn.

18503. (Earl Russell.) You remember your husband coming home on this Sunday night?—Yes.

18504. Had he been out most of the day with your little girl Katie?—He had been out since dinner time with my eldest girl.

18505. When did he first come home after dinner time?—About half past 10.

18506. What did he do then?—He came in and just had a little tea. He did not want much because he had refreshments during the day.

18507. And after that what did he do?—He went into the Earl Grey.

18508. Did you know that. Did you see him go in?—I stood at my street door and saw him.

18509. He went out of the house with your girl?—Yes.

18510. You saw him go into the Earl Grey?—Yes.

18511. Did you see what happened after that?—Did you see where he went next?—No.

18512. When did you next see your husband and Katie?—When my husband brought my Katie in.

18513. What time was that?—That was five to seven minutes past 11.

18514. He brought her back?—He said, "You take Katie and come back with me; I have been insulted by a constable, and I want his number."

18515. What sort of state was he in when he first came home at half-past 10 to tea?—He was sober.

18516. When he came home the second time about seven minutes past 11 what sort of state was he in?—He was sober.

18517. Quite sober?—Quite sober.

18518. He asked you to come to the station, did he?—Yes.

18518*. What did you do with Katie?—I sent Katie to bed. My other four girls were in bed.

18519. Did you go with your husband or behind him?—I went with my husband as far as Sims's shop.

18520. You followed your husband?—Yes, I walked by the side of him.

18521. How was your husband dressed? Had he a hat on or not?—He had a hard hat, the same as he always wears on Sundays.

18522. Are you quite clear he had it on his head?—Yes, he generally wears it on Sunday, but he wears a cap for his work all the week.

18523. Was he walking or running?—Walking.

18524. Fast?—No, not fast.

18525. How far is it from your door to Sims's shop?—About twelve or fourteen doors down. They are all shops right the way down.

18526. What did you see when you got there?—He said, "I want your number."

18527. Who was there to begin with?—The Sims's were gone then, and he was in the company of another gentleman wearing a straw hat.

18528. Who was?—The constable was in the company of a gentleman wearing a straw hat with a black band on it.

18529. Do you know that man?—No, I never saw him before or since.

18530. When your husband reached P.C. Morgan, how close to your husband were you?—As close as I might be to this gentleman. (Indicating about a foot.) I stood at the side of him.

18531. Did you hear your husband say anything?—He said, "I want your number," and the gentleman in the company of the constable said, "Go on, give him one," and with that the constable struck him and arrested him, and took him right along Oakley Street. I followed behind.

18532. Did you hear the constable say anything at all?—He said, "I will give you number. I will show you whether you will have my number or not," and he took him by the collar.

18533. He took him by the collar at the same time as he said that?—Yes, explaining those words.

18534. What other people were there in the street near by at that time?—At that time, an unusual thing, there was hardly anybody in Oakley Street—only a few neighbours in the street where I lived, and they were rather surprised to see Mr. Mullins being taken by the top.

18535. What do you mean by the "top"?—By the top of the street. One said to the other: "Fancy—Mr. Mullins is locked up.

18536. At the time that Mullins and the police constable were speaking to each other, was there a crowd round them at all?—None whatever.

18537. Not seven or eight people round them?—I do not suppose there was a dozen in the "Duke of Sussex" that very night.

18538. This was after the public-house had been shut?—About seven minutes.

18539. Did you hear your husband use any bad language?—No.

Mrs. K. Mullins.

29 Nov. 1906.

18540. Then the constable, you say, marched him off?—Yes, right along Oakley Street.

18541. Did you go with them?—I followed up to the station.

18542. Alongside the constable?—Behind him.

18543. Was there any other man there with him?—None whatever.

18544. Did you hear your husband say anything on the way?—No.

18545 Did you go right into the station or not?—No, only as far as the door.

18546. Did you see any constable on duty at the door?—No, I saw nobody.

18547. Why did you not go in?—You are not allowed to go in.

18548. Did you try?—I did ask outside, and one or two who were there said: "It is no good your trying, you would not be allowed to go in," and I went back home.

18548*. Who were the one or two who you asked? Were they casual loafers or policeman?—One or two who had followed up.

18549. Not policemen?—No.

18550. You did not try to go in and any policeman stop you?—No.

18551. What did you do then?—I came home, and I asked one of his friends if he would go to the station and ask if there was any bail allowed, and he went, and the Inspector on duty said my husband had not been there long enough, and he must come later on. The bail went later on, after he had seen the doctor, and he was allowed out on £2 bail, and he came straight home and went to bed.

18552. Is there anything more that you can tell the Commission about what happened in the street, or is that all that you can recollect about it?—I did not see any more. Had he not brought my girl back I would not have known anything about it, because I was sitting indoors, and putting my other four girls to bed.

18553. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Did your husband appear to be very angry when he came back?—He was rather vexed to think such a liberty was taken with him uncalled for.

18554. Did he tell you what the liberty had been that had been taken with him?—He said the constable was speaking to the two Sims's, and he passed a remark to the constable, and the constable turned round and struck him.

18555. Struck him?—Yes.

18556. I thought you told the learned counsel a moment ago that he said he had been insulted by a policeman?—That is an insult I should think.

18557. Is that what he said—that he was insulted?—Insulted by the policeman.

18558. That is what he said to you?—Yes. And he wanted his number, and would I go back with him, and I went back with him.

18559. Where was this said to you? Where were you when he told you about having been insulted by a policeman?—In my own place.

18560. Where in your own place?—In the parlour, I suppose you would call it.

18561. You were in your parlour?—Yes.

18562. There was no doubt about that?—No. He came in with the girl.

18563. How long did he stay in?—A matter of a few minutes, it might be five or ten minutes. I did not take that much notice.

18564. Did he calm down at all while he was there in the five or ten minutes?—He was not out of temper to a great extent at all. He did not seem to me to be terribly upset.

18564*. Did he get calmer or more excited towards the end of the ten minutes?—Calmer of the two. I said, "Very well, you know what to do."

18565. What were you doing during those ten minutes?—Some domestic work of my own indoors. I could not exactly tell you now.

18566. So that he waited until your domestic work was over before he went back to get the policeman's number?—He explained the case to me first, and then it was that he went back.

18567. Tell us what his explanation was?—He said he came out of the Duke of Sussex, and the policeman was speaking to the two Sims's, and he made a remark, and a constable deliberately hit him, and he would see what he could do with it by taking the constable's number. That was all he said to me.

18568. Did he say where the constable hit him?—He did not mention particularly where he hit him, and I was not there, so I don't know where he hit him.

18569. Did he say how often the constable had hit him?—No.

18570. He did not take ten minutes to tell you that?—It might be a matter of five minutes. I felt rather upset, the man being out all day enjoying himself and coming home solid and sober. I thought it was a liberty.

18571-2. What was the reason of the delay. Why should he not have gone out at once, and you with him, to get the policeman's number. The policeman might have gone out of sight altogether?—He could hardly have gone out of sight, because he was on Oakley Street duty.

18573. You knew the policeman, did you?—Of course, we know where they are on duty.

18574. He knew this policeman, did he?—Not his name.

18575. But he knew him by sight?—Yes.

18576. Did he tell you he knew the man?—No.

18577. How did you know it was the man who was on Oakley Street point duty?—I should suggest that no other constable would have done such a thing, only the man who was on duty.

18578. Only a man who was on duty would do such a thing in Oakley Street?—Yes, at that time. There are plenty passing to and fro, but I dont' think they would take the liberty of striking a man for nothing the same as he did.

18579. When you came up there was a gentleman with the constable?—Yes, wearing a straw hat.

18580. Was anybody else with the constable?—Not then.

18581. Was anybody round about?—There was not a soul round about. It was rather quiet for Sunday night, particularly for Oakley Street.

18582. This was just after 11 o'clock?—Five or seven minutes after.

18583. Oakley Street on Sunday night five or seven minutes after the public-houses had closed?—It was rather quiet.

18584. Not a soul in sight except this policeman and the man with the straw hat?—Yes.

18584*. And you and your husband?—Yes.

18585. From one end of the street to the other?—There were a good many in the street, but not round about this spot.

18586. So far as this occurrence is concerned nobody about at all?—No.

18587. That was just close to the Duke of Sussex?—Yes.

18588. Do you remember what it was the gentleman said?—The gentleman who was with the policeman?

18589. Yes?—He said, "Give him one," when my husband asked for the policeman's number. He directly said, "Go on, give him one." With that the policeman did so again in my presence, and took him by the collar along Oakley Street.

18590. The policeman gave your husband one in your presence?—Yes.

18591. Where?—At the side.

18592. Which side?—This side—that way. (Describing). I think it was the left side, if I am not mistaken.

18593. A hard blow?—Hard enough for him to feel it.

18594. Did it make a noise?—I did not hear the sound.

18595. Still, he obeyed the instructions of his friend, and gave him one?—Yes.

18596. Do you remember which hand the constable used?—No, I could not tell you.

18596*. You could not remember whether it was the right or the left?—I don't know. I could not remember. He knows that himself I daresay.

18597. Was it hard enough to make your husband feel it?—Yes, decidedly so.

18598. What did your husband say when he was struck like that?—"All right," he said, "I will see to this to-morrow. I am not drunk."

18599. You are sure he said all that?—Yes. "Very well," he said, "you need not upset yourself, I will go along quietly, I am not drunk, I will see to this to-morrow."

18600. By that time was your husband in custody?—The policeman had taken him then. He had him by the collar in this fashion. (Describing.)

18601. He hit him first, and then took hold of his collar?—Yes.

18602. Did he hit him with the same hand that he took hold of his collar with?—That I could not say.

18603. You are sure he only hit him one blow in your presence?—In my presence he only hit him once.

18604. In the ribs?—Yes.

18605. And you and the man in the straw hat were the only witnesses?—That was all who were there then.

18606. Did he start to walk your husband off towards the station?—Yes, right along Oakley Street.

18607. Did your husband go quietly?—Yes, there was no violence whatever.

18608. Perfectly quietly?—Perfectly quietly.

18609. No violence at all?—There might have been had he been intoxicated, but he was not intoxicated. He was sober.

18610. Is he the sort of man that would be violent if intoxicated?—I daresay he would be if anybody was going to take a liberty with him, he would take his own part quick enough, but at the time he was sober.

18611. How do you know he would take his own part if he was intoxicated?—I know it so far that if ever he has had occasion to he has always been man enough to take his own part.

18612. When was the last time you remember that happening?—Years ago now—about eight years ago, and then it was not with a constable, but with a man.

18613. It was not a constable?—No, it was a lodger of mine.

18614. Was it indoors or in Oakley Street?—In Johanna Street, where I have been 25 years.

18615. Where did it end?—Only outside the door. It was the man's fault.

18616. There were no subsequent proceedings?—No, no police proceedings at all.

18617. Was your husband the victor?—There was no victor. They settled it between them. The man paid the rent he owed, and that settled the matter.

18617*. On the way to the station was there any violence at all?—No. The constable on one occasion put his knee in that position into my husband's back.

18618. How far had they got when that happened?—Just opposite the Oakley Arms.

18619. How far would that be from the point of arrest?—About 150 doors, or something like that.

18620. That would be very nearly the length of Oakley Street?—Very nearly the length of Oakley Street.

18621. They walked very nearly the entire length of Oakley Street before the constable did anything. Did your husband say anything upon that?—Yes; my husband said "You need not use any violence; I will go quietly."

18622. The constable did not use any violence?—Not until he put his knee into his back.

18623. Having got almost to the end of Oakley Street, that was almost his only chance of doing anything?—Yes. He did the rest when he got inside. When my husband left me he had no mark whatever. When I went for bail from the station his lip was bleeding, and over the eyebrow.

18624. Had he not anything the matter with his eyebrow before?—Not when he left me.

18625. That was something quite fresh?—To me it was to see him bleeding in that manner.

18626. It must have been done after he got to the station?—I expect it was; I do not know.

18627. It would not have been done on the first occasion before he came home with the little girl?—No. There was no mark of violence whatever.

18628. There was no scratch on him then?—No, not when I saw him.

18629. No mark at all. Was what you saw on his eye when he got home pretty bad?—The eye was swollen, bleeding a little, and the inside of the lip.

18630. It was swollen and bleeding a little?—Yes, bleeding a little. I was in the station when he was bailed out, and I was rather surprised to see it.

18631. You saw that in the station?—I saw the state of him in the station when I took the bail over. I did not see it done.

18632. Would it be right to say that your husband took the little girl to the top of the street and sent her indoors and then went back again?—He came a little further than the top of the street. He was a little excited. He came as far as my house—that is two houses down Johanna Street.

18633. He came into the parlour and stayed five or ten minutes talking to you and giving you a description of what had happened?—Yes.

18634. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did you get bail for him?—I got a friend of his to bail him out on £2 bail.

18635. What made you do that?—I did not wish him to stay there all night.

18636. You followed him to the police station?—Yes.

18637. Then did you go away?—I went away for some minutes.

18638. You did not bring the bail till five minutes to 1, did you?—I was speaking to the Inspector on duty, and he said he would not take any bail just then, and I was to come again.

18639. You waited at the police station?—Yes.

18640. Did you say you were the wife of this man?—Yes.

18641. Did you tell the policeman that?—When I went in with the policeman I told him I was the wife.

18641*. At the moment you first arrived you went into the station with your husband?—No.

18642. I thought you said you followed him?—No; I told that gentleman I did not go into the police station.

18643. Then what did you do?—I came back home again to get the bail. I did not go to my own house until my husband came with me.

18644. You did not say anything to the policeman about bail?—No.

18645. Why should you do that?—I did not wish my husband to stay there all night.

18646. But why did you not speak to the policeman? I suppose there was a policeman at the door of the station. You say you went straight away because you knew bail would be required?—Yes, it is always required.

18647. Have you had to do it before?—No, I have not, but my husband has gone bail for people often and often.

18648. So you went to fetch somebody?—Yes.

18649. You went back?—Yes, and stood at the top of the street with my mate.

18650. You got somebody there?—Yes.

18651. How soon did you get back to the police station?—As quickly as possible I got back. I went in with the bail and my rent book. The Inspector said my bail was no good, but he would accept this other man, and he took his bail.

18652. You said just now that when you went with your husband to the police station the policeman was standing with a tall man with a white straw hat on?—Yes.

18653. You say that man said "Give him one"?—Yes. Directly he said "Go on, give him one," when my husband asked for his number.

18654. Your little daughter was there before you, was she not?—I know nothing about it.

Mrs. K. Mullins. 29 Nov. 1906.

18655. You have heard her tell her story that when she was there there was a tall man with a straw hat on and a policeman?—Yes.

18656. And that the tall man with the straw hat said "Give him one"?—Yes.

18657. He said that in the presence of your daughter, she says?—Perhaps he said it twice. He said it in my presence.

18658. I suppose this matter has been a matter of conversation between your husband and yourself?—Not with me. I am very bad; in fact, I should not be here now. I have just got over an attack of influenza. I assure you it was not this case that was troubling me at all; in fact, I was rather disgusted with it altogether.

18658*. Have you not been talking about this at all in your own family?—We may have had a few words about it; in fact, I think the people in the parish have been speaking about it—it has been in everybody's mouth.

18659. I suppose it was in everybody's mouth—"Give him one"?—No; I heard that direct with my own ears. My husband said "I will take your number." The man said "Go on, give him one," in that tone of voice. He did so. Then he took him by the collar right along Oakley Street.

18660. You think when your little girl said the same thing happened on the former occasion she must be also telling the truth, and that he struck him twice?—I cannot say; I was not there. All I know is that when my husband went into the station he had not any marks on him, and when he came out he was bleeding from the eye and mouth. I know that much; and I know he was not intoxicated at all—he was sober.

18661. I suppose you cannot say whether he had any marks on him when he first came to your house?—He had no marks on him. He was sober. He came in as lighthearted as possible, having enjoyed himself with his eldest girl. She is the eldest of six.

18662. He had no marks on his eye at that time?—Not at that time. He had no mark on him any more than I have at present.

18663. Your little girl said he had a hit on the eye?—He very likely might, and perhaps it might not have marked him. He might receive a blow on the eye and it might leave no mark.

18664. But there was a mark on the eye afterwards?—Yes, when he came out of Kennington Road Police Station there was.

18665. On the left eye. That mark was not there the first time?—Not when I saw him. What violence he received I think he received at Kennington Road Police Station by the hand of Constable Morgan.

18666. (Chairman.) You saw the constable arrest your husband?—Yes.

18667. What did the constable do?—When my husband and I returned to the station he said "I will take your number."

18668. We have had all that. After the conversation what did the constable do? How did he use his hands?—He struck him in that manner, I should think it was (illustrating), and he took him by the collar and took him right along Oakley Street.

18669. Did your husband struggle then?—No; he said "I will not struggle; I am sober; but I will let you see what I will do to-morrow."

18670. Did your husband fall upon the ground?—Decidedly not.

18671. Or throw himself round?—No, nothing of the kind.

18672. He went quietly?—He went quietly.

18673. Did you see any man come up to the police-constable and say something about offering him help, or say anything to him?—The only man who spoke to that constable was the man with the straw hat.

18674. Who was there when you first went there?—When I first went to the constable?

18674*a*. The police-constable has told us that a man did come up and offer his help, and that he declined it, and that the man did walk part of the way with him to the station. Did any man walk any part of the way to the station with him?—Decidedly not. I will tell you what did happen. Outside the Oakley Arms public-house there were several men and women, and they cried shame on the constable. If he had said that he would have said right, but as regards any man following him up, it was no such thing.

P.C. JOHN MORGAN (383 L.), recalled.

P.C. J. Morgan.

18674*b*. (Chairman.) I want to make it perfectly clear upon the notes what you said at the police court in reference to Mullins' charge against you of having struck him. I did not put it quite as clearly, perhaps, as I ought to have done. Did you hear the Magistrate ask you whether you would like to ask the prisoner any questions?—Yes.

18674*c*. He did ask you that question?—Yes.

18674*d*. What did you answer?—I said "No."

18674*e*. Is that all you said?—I said "No," and I denied the assault there and then.

18674*f*. You said "No, only I absolutely deny having in any way assaulted him"?—That is quite correct.

18674*g*. Did the Magistrate then say: "He makes a very serious accusation against you, and his story is rather circumstantial as to what took place in the street"?—That is correct.

18675. Did you say these words: "I was standing alone when this row started; I was 10 minutes trying to get him away; I used no more force than was necessary in taking him to the station"?—I did.

18676. You see the Magistrate had got in his mind that the charge of assault made by the prisoner was serious?—Yes.

18677. Knowing that it was serious, and knowing also that Mullins had a cut on his lip, why did you not tell the Magistrate that he was fighting with another man if that was the case?—I had given my evidence then.

18678. But this is after Mullins had given his evidence. Mullins having given his evidence, the Magistrate turns round to you and says, "Would you like to ask him any questions?" and you said "No," and denied the assault?—Yes.

18679. If your story is true that Mullins was fighting with a man that might very likely account for his lip being cut, might it not?—It might have done; it is quite likely.

18680. You told the Magistrate you had not hit him at all?—Yes.

18680*. You knew that Mullins had been fighting; at least, so you tell us?—Yes.

18681. Then why was it that you did not tell the Magistrate that he had been fighting?—(No answer.)

18682. You do not wish to add anything?—No.

18683. I think you have told us to-day that the Sims's were there?—I do not know whether they were; I did not say they were there. They might have been, I did not see them.

GEORGE NICOL HENRY, sworn.

Dr. G. N. Henry.

18684. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are the Divisional-surgeon for the district of the Kennington Road Police Station?—That is so.

18685. Were you called in the very early morning, in fact at midnight on the 10th September?—Yes, I was called just before midnight—on the 9th that would be. At 12 a.m. I made the entry in the book.

18686. Were you called in to see Mullins?—Yes.

18687. To examine him as to his sobriety?—That is so.

18688. Did you examine him accordingly?—I did.

18689. Did you record the result of your examination in the Occurrence Book?—I did.

18690. You signed it, and it is before you?—Yes.

18691. Will you read the entry?—Yes. "At 12 a.m. attended and examined George Mullins, who denied being drunk. He had evidently been drinking, but was not drunk at the time I examined him." Then I signed my name.

18692. Did you examine him for any marks of violence at all?—I did. He said he had been hit in the lip, and he had a small abrasion on the lip.

18693. On the lower lip?—I think it was on the upper lip.

18694. It was on the upper or lower lip?—That is so. He had a slight abrasion on the lip.

18695. Was there any other mark of violence upon him otherwise?—He made no other complaint of being injured. He said he had been hustled to the station by the constable, but I did not examine him for anything else.

18696. As far as his face was concerned, was there any mark of violence?—Not at all.

18696*. You have heard the description given by the wife and the daughter of the left eye being bleeding?—That is not correct.

18697. (Earl Russell.) It is a regular phrase: when a man is not drunk, if he smells of drink at all, you say he has been drinking, do you not?—I do under certain circumstances. In this case I made the entry in the book that he had been drinking, because his breath smelt very strongly of very stale drinking. He had been drinking I should say for some time, not quite immediately before. But I say the man was quite sober when I examined him.

18698. Of course his story is that he had a glass of cider at about 10 minutes or a quarter to 11 and some whisky just at 11 o'clock?—Yes, he told me so. He went through the whole day with me with regard to what he had been drinking.

18699. That would be consistent with the appearance you noted?—It would with the exception of the stale drinking which he smelt of. I do not say that he had been drinking to excess recently, but he may have been drinking more than was good for him for a day or two, but not to make him drunk.

18700. (Chairman.) He had been drinking for a day or two do you say?—I should think so from the stale smell of his breath.

18701. (Earl Russell.) Do you suggest that if you smell a person's breath at midnight you are able to tell from that whether he has been drinking a day or two previously?—I think I could.

18702. That is rather a strong assumption to make, is it not?—There is a particular stale smell of drink that is very frequently smelt at a police station from people who have been drinking quite recently.

18703. Are you quite sure it was not about his clothes?—I am quite sure it was not about his clothes.

18704. Are you prepared to go so far as to say from your examination that the statement that he had a glass of cider and a whisky about 11 o'clock, and no more on that day, must be untrue?—No, I do not say so for a moment.

18705. Did you put him through some sort of examination?—I simply had a conversation with the man and was quite satisfied that he was sober.

18706. You did not inquire more than that?—No, I did not think it was necessary.

18707. Are you able to fix exactly when you saw him—whether it was before 12 o'clock?—It was before 12 o'clock; I should say it was probably about 10 minutes or a quarter to 12. Then I made my entry in the book. I put the time down as I was practically leaving the station.

18708. It was about a quarter or 10 minutes to midnight when you saw him?—Yes.

18709. At that time you had not any doubt, without going through any prolonged test, that he was sober?—I had no doubt of it at all.

18710. Would that be consistent with his having been violently drunk at 11 o'clock?—It is very difficult to say. I should say that it was unlikely he was violently drunk at 11 o'clock.

18710*. And it would be still less likely at a quarter or 20 minutes after 11: that would be about half an hour before you saw him?—That is so. I remember I saw him soon after he was brought to the station.

18711. Did anything strike you as to his being in an excited state when you saw him?—He was excited when I spoke to him first of all, but he got quite calm and collected during conversation.

18712. He was rather excited and upset?—He was.

18713. Did he seem rather glad than otherwise to see a medical man?—I could not say. He talked very sensibly. I took him over the whole of his day, and he had very correct ideas of time and place as regards everything that had taken place practically to the moment when he was brought to the station.

18714. Your presence had a soothing and rather reassuring effect upon him?—I do not know. I say the man was not drunk, and I did not see any evidence of his being drunk from the moment I saw him.

18715. Was his excitement consistent with that of a man labouring under a considerable sense of injury?—I should think so.

18716. He did tell you that he had been hustled to the station?—He did.

18717. But he made no complaint of any specific injury in consequence, and you did not look for it?—With the exception of the lip, I did see there was an abrasion on the lip.

18718. That was consistent with a blow on the lip from a fist?—It might have been consistent with a blow, but certainly not a strong one.

18719. And it was of recent origin?—Quite recent.

18720. Did he make a statement to you as to how he had acquired that?—He said the constable had hit him in the mouth.

18720*. In the station?—He said so to me in the station.

18721. That is what he told you?—Yes.

18721*. (Chairman). I gather from you there was nothing to suggest that he had been on that Sunday drinking excessively?—No, and from his conversation I should judge he had not been drinking excessively on the Sunday.

18722. Therefore to all intents and purposes he was a sober man at 11 o'clock?—He must have been—yes, certainly.

18723. Who asked you to come to him—which of the constables?—I am in telephonic communication with the station, and I got a telephone message from the Inspector. I saw the Inspector, and he told me the man was being charged with being drunk and disorderly. I examined him

18724. He was in the station on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He denied the drunkenness, and you examined him?—Yes.

18725. Then you went through the process you have described to the learned Counsel?—Yes.

18726. Do you think it quite fair to a prisoner to put the certificate in that exact form in which you gave it?—I do.

18727. You say it is a form which is commonly given?—That is so; and it is to a certain extent compatible with previous excitement.

18728. But supposing, without your explanatory evidence, I came across this entry in the Occurrence Book—"At 12 a.m. attended and examined George Mullins, who denied being drunk. He had evidently been drinking, but was not drunk at the time I examined him"—would it be an unfair inference for me to draw from that that George Mullins had been drunk?—I should think it would be unfair without further evidence.

18729. Then in that case why do you not content yourself with saying "sober"?—The reason I put it there was because I had heard of his excitement, and I considered it possible that the man might have been excited from the recent drink that he had had. He said he had had, I think it was threepennyworth of whisky at some place, and it is possible, that even threepennyworth of whisky, to a man who may have been drinking previously, may cause excitement of the man.

Dr. G. N. Henry.

29 Nov. 1906.

18730. I quite agree about all that, but I am calling your attention to your entry. You say, "He had evidently been drinking, but was not drunk at the time I examined him." That looks as though you thought he had recently been drunk?—I did not intend to convey that idea.

18731. But you now see, do you not, that the form of words is a little unfortunate?—In one sense I do see it.

18732. (Mr. Dickinson.) What was really in your mind when you put these words that he had been drinking. For what purpose do you put those words. You are called in to certify as to whether a man is drunk, and you find he is not drunk. I want to know with what object in your mind do you put the additional words, that he had been drinking?—I put the expression down that he had been drinking because of the history, and excitement previously, which may have been due to drink; but I did not think it was excitement caused by drink.

18733. (Chairman.) You had no evidence of excitement before you. You did not know what had taken place in the street. You were called in as a medical man to give an expert opinion?—I was told so by the prisoner himself.

18734. (Mr. Dickinson.) I am speaking rather more generally. I suppose it is not an unusual thing to put not "drunk," but "has been drinking"?—It is not an unusual thing.

18735. I daresay I should find a good many such cases in this book?—I do not think you would find very many because I should say that fully 90 per cent. of the cases to which one is called at the station are cases in which persons are so obviously drunk, when they deny being drunk, that "drunk" is put down.

18736. That is precisely what I want to get at. When you have a person who is drunk you certify him as being drunk?—Yes.

18737. When you have a person whom you cannot certify as being drunk what purpose is served by putting in the additional words, "but has been drinking"?—It is rather difficult to say.

18738. I want to know what is in your mind. Why do you put it?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) If I may look at that book I will try to find you a case.

18739. (Mr. Dickinson.) I think it is common knowledge that the words, "Not drunk, but has been drinking," are not uncommon in the mind of Divisional Surgeons of the Police, and having got a Divisional Surgeon here, I want to know what in his mind is the object which is intended to be served by putting down that additional fact which, of course, he is not asked to put down. You are only asked to certify whether a man is drunk. When you find a man is not drunk, what object have you in view generally in putting in the additional words. Is it that they may be used on a future occasion, or what?—Yes, I should say it is. If I am called to a man who is suffering from some sort of disease like epilepsy, I say the man is not drunk, but is suffering from epilepsy or from the effects of epilepsy. A man may be suffering in the same way from the effects of drink, but still is not drunk. This man had been drinking, and I understood he was charged with being drunk and disorderly. The fact of his having been drinking might account for his having been disorderly before.

18740. Therefore in your mind you are aiming at a situation in which a man will be charged with being disorderly and in which the question of whether or not he has been drinking might be of importance?—Yes, perhaps you might put it like that.

18741. You think the interests of justice might be served by knowing that in your opinion the man had probably been drinking?—I think so.

18741*. Do you think, with all the knowledge you have at the moment, you are justified in putting down something which could be used afterwards in evidence in that way. Being called upon to certify whether or not a man is drunk, and finding he is not drunk, do you think you are justified in putting down additional words which undoubtedly may be used afterwards in a way that may not for the moment be realised?—I do it in this sense. This man was smelling so strongly of drink at this time that it is quite possible that condition may have given rise to excitement, and I put an entry in that case. If I examined a man, and he was merely smelling of drink, I should not put down that he had evidently been drinking. I do not put it in that sense at all. I put it in the sense of a man who has been drinking, to my mind, to excess, because of the condition of breath this man had.

18742. (Chairman.) In coming to a judgment on the problem whether or not a particular man is drunk, do you allow any extraneous circumstances to affect your mind?—No, not with regard to the question of whether he is drunk or sober.

18743. Then dropping everything—even if he had not been in a police station at the moment, or wherever he had been—you are perfectly certain he was sober?—I am perfectly certain he was sober.

18744. Then why do you add anything to that? You are called in, as I understand, as an expert?—That is so.

18745. You are called in to decide the question as to whether the man is or is not sober, and not for the purpose of making evidence for or against the prisoner. Why do you not content yourself with giving your expert judgment when it is asked for on the question on which you have to certify?—One puts it down in connection with the charge. That is all I can say.

18746. If the man had had a fight at 11 o'clock would that affect your judgment in coming to a conclusion at midnight on the question of whether he was sober or drunk?—No.

18747. You would exclude that from your judgment altogether?—I should.

18748. (Mr. Dickinson.) You know that these certificates of the divisional surgeon as a rule influence the mind of the Magistrates?—That is so.

18749-50. Therefore, as far as the Magistrate is concerned, he has no opportunity of investigating the question of what you mean by these rather vague words?—If the Magistrate is not satisfied he always sends for the divisional surgeon to come, and he asks him questions if he wishes.

Inspector THOMAS WHEELER, sworn.

Inspector T. Wheeler.

18751. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you an Inspector of the L Division, stationed at Kennington Road Police Station?—Yes.

18752. Were you in charge of that station at and before midnight on the 9th of September last?—Yes.

18752*. When P.C. John Morgan brought John Mullins to the station?—That is so.

18753. At what hour was he brought in?—Half past 11.

18754. What charge was made against him?—The charge made against him by the police constable was one of drunkenness, and he said he found him fighting at Oakley Street and making use of obscene language.

18755. Did you see the constable and his prisoner come in?—I did.

18756. Where were you at that time?—Sitting at the desk in the Inspector's office.

18757. Can you see into the charge room from your desk in the Inspector's office?—Part of the room—about half the room.

18758. You saw enough of the room to see them come in?—That is so.

18759. Did you then go into the charge room?—Yes.

18760. How long after?—One minute perhaps may have elapsed.

18761. When you got into the room who was there?—Police-constable Morgan and the prisoner, and Hunt, the constable on reserve duty, and Saunders.

18762. What was said when you got into the room, and who said it?—I asked P.C. Morgan what was the charge, if any, against the prisoner. He told me he was drunk, he found him fighting at Oakley Street, and making use of obscene language; he had requested him to go away, which he did for a short time, but returned and commenced to fight, and he took him into custody.

18763. What did the prisoner say?—The prisoner said "He has struck me in the mouth since I have been in this room."

18764. Was that after P.C. Morgan had made his charge?—After P.C. Morgan had made his charge.

18764*. Did you look at his mouth?—I did.

18765. What state did you find it in?—I found on the lower lip a slight abrasion inside, not bleeding, and a little swollen on the outside.

18766. What did you say to Morgan?—I asked Morgan if it was true that he had assaulted the prisoner, as he alleged. He said "No." I asked P.C. Hunt and Saunders if they had seen the alleged assault take place, and they said "No."

18767. Was that all said in the presence of the prisoner?—That was so.

18768. Did you then take the charge?—I then took the charge.

18769. Did you say anything to the prisoner when he said he had just been struck?—Before the charge?

18770. Yes?—The prisoner told me, "The constable has just struck me in the mouth inside this room."

18771. Did you say anything to him then? Did you ask him any questions?—I questioned Morgan and Hunt, and examined the prisoner's lip.

18772. Do you remember whether you said anything to the prisoner?—I do not recollect that.

18772*. You made a report upon this, did you not, almost at once?—Yes.

18773. Look at the second paragraph of that report. It says: "On their arrival at the station." Just read that to yourself, and then I will ask you a question about it. (Handing report.) Do you remember saying anything to the prisoner?—Yes. I asked him why he did not shout or call out.

(Earl Russell.) May I have this report now?

(Chairman.) As it has been given to the witness, I think you may look at it now.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is not in accordance with the ordinary rule.

(Chairman.) Yes, it is. You showed a document to the witness.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Just to refresh his memory.

(Chairman.) The cross-examining counsel can ask for it.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) He is not cross-examining at present.

(Chairman.) If that is the point, Lord Russell must wait. But is it worth while, Mr. Muir? I should have thought Lord Russell might have it now.

18774. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Very well, sir. (A copy of the Report was handed to Earl Russell.) Is it true that it was five minutes after the arrival of Morgan in the charge room, or about five minutes after, that you went into the charge room?—That is not true; it would not be more than one minute.

18774*. Is it true that Mullins holloaed out "Oh." while he was in the charge room?—No. If he had I must have heard him.

18775. You took the charge, and we have the charge sheet here?—Yes.

18776. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly and with using obscene language. Did you read over the charge to Mullins?—Yes.

18777. What did he say?—He said, "I will admit all that, but this man has struck me in the mouth inside this room."

18777*. At that time did he deny being drunk?—No.

18778. At any time did he deny being drunk?—After being placed in the cell.

18779. How long after he had been placed in the cell?—P.C. Hunt and myself placed him in the cell and closed the door. Immediately it was closed he knocked. I opened the door. He said: "Can I be allowed to see a doctor? I do not think I am drunk." I said: "Yes, the divisional surgeon will see you."

18780. It was immediately after he had been placed in the cell that he denied being drunk, and he asked to see the surgeon?—That is so.

18781. Did you telephone for the surgeon?—Yes.

18782. I think he came almost at once?—It must have been a lapse of nearly a quarter of an hour.

18783. Did you bail Mullins at five minutes to 1?—That is so.

18784. (Earl Russell.) Is this the only report you have made on this case?—I made one after the appearance of Mullins at the police court. That is the first one.

18785. You say you made another after the appearance of Mullins at the police court?—That is so.

18786. Is your recollection fairly clear as to what passed between you when the man was brought into the station?—Yes, fairly clear, I think.

18787. Do you think you can charge your memory with pretty well everything that was said?—I think I can.

18788. Just let me ask you again what you say Morgan told you. As I understand Morgan said the man had been drinking and disorderly, and fighting with other people in Oakley Street?—That is so.

18789. Morgan told you then that he had gone away when requested, but had returned?—Yes.

18790. Then I understand Morgan went on to say that after his return he commenced to fight again?—Yes.

18791. And would not go away?—Yes.

18792. Did Morgan tell you with whom he commenced to fight on his return the second time?—He did not say with whom.

18793. Did he say anything about there being a large number of people there either on the first or on the second occasion when he saw him?—When I questioned him with reference to disorder he said Mullins had been fighting, and with reference to the number of persons present he said probably there were from ten to a dozen.

18794. Just in a vague way. No importance was attached to that?—No.

18795. You did not go into the question of how many people were present carefully at all?—Not farther.

18796. And then he said he came back a second time and began to fight, and therefore he had to arrest him?—That is so.

18797. He did not tell you with whom, or how, or why?—No.

18798. The fighting is the disorder?—That is so.

18799. Did you say anything at that time about the use of obscene language?—He said on the last occasion when he requested Mullins to go away Mullins said he would f—— well go away when he liked.

18799*. Then it was on the second occasion he used the obscene language?—Yes.

18800. You told Mr. Muir just now that when you read the charge over to the prisoner he said "I admit all that, but what I complain of is the assault at the station," or of something at the station?—He said "I admit all that, but I have been struck in the mouth inside this room."

18801. Why did you not say that when you wrote out this report on the 9th September? Let me remind you of what you say here: "The prisoner was charged with being drunk, disorderly, and making use of obscene language, and when read over to him said 'I admit all that.'" There you stop. You do not say anything in your report on the 9th September about his saying he had been struck in the mouth?—Mullins said so. That was Mullins' answer when I read the charge to him.

18802. What was?—When I read the charge he said "I admit all that, but I have been struck in the mouth inside this room."

18803. When writing this report you give that answer: "I admit all that," and you leave out the last part about "I have been struck in this room." Why did you leave that out when you wrote this report?—I had no specific reason.

18804. With regard to these times on the charge sheet which you write down when a person is brought in and charged, I suppose they would be accurate within five minutes or so—I suppose you write them down within five minutes?—No—accurate time.

Inspector T. Wheeler.
29 Nov. 1906.

18805. You mean the exact time by the clock?—Yes.

18806. You mean if it is 11.31 you say 11.31 and not 11.30?—Yes.

18807. Do you not simply take the nearest five minutes?—No.

18808. If it was 11.29 or 11.31 you would not call it 11.30?—That is so.

18809. You would put it down 11.29 or 11.31?—Yes.

18810. This charge against Mullins is said to have been taken here at 11.30 p.m. That really means 11.30. It does not mean 11.28?—No.

18811. And not even 11.29?—No.

18812. You heard Morgan say he came into the station at 11.25?—I did.

18813. That makes five minutes before he was charged?—Yes.

18814. And not one minute. You told us just now one minute.

(Chairman.) 11.30 is not the hour at which the person is charged. It is "Date and hour brought to station."

(Earl Russell.) Yes, I see it is so marked here.

(Chairman.) That rather seems to help your suggestion, because if the man was brought there at 11.25 this entry is wrong.

18814*. (Earl Russell.) You wrote this charge sheet?—That is so.

18815. The hour you put down on it is the hour at which you write it down with your pen. You look at the clock?—No. I was sitting in the Inspector's office with the clock in front of me, and immediately Morgan and the prisoner came in I glanced at the clock. It was just then 11.30.

18816. You mean the man was actually brought in at 11.30?—That is so.

18817. (Chairman.) At that minute?—At that minute.

18817*. I dare say that is the intention, and I dare say it may be accurate in this case, but it does seem to me odd that there should be four prisoners charged on one charge sheet, and that each one of them should be brought in either at 11.30 or at 11.55. Anybody reading the charge sheet would certainly think you put down as near to five minutes as you could?—No. There are times when two or three prisoners come into the station in succession—almost at the same time.

18818. There is an instance here. Prisoners 3 and 4 on the charge sheet both came in at 11.55?—That would be correct.

18819. Not one at 11.54 and the other at 11.56?—No. Two prisoners might possibly be brought in one after the other, and there would not be a matter of three or four seconds between their arrival at the station.

(Chairman.) Anybody reading the charge sheet would think the entries were made at intervals of about five minutes, or rather that the five minutes on the clock was taken as the convenient time.

18820. (Earl Russell.) You say it is the exact minute?—I do.

18821. Then Morgan has made a little mistake when he says he got there at 11.25?—I believe Morgan has made a little error in that.

(Chairman.) I am afraid, Lord Russell, we must break off now, as the Commissioners have other important public duties to attend to.

(Earl Russell.) Mr. Mullins desires me to ask you whether you wish him to be present on Monday.

(Chairman.) No, Mullins need not come on Monday. We are obliged to him for his attendance.

NINETEENTH DAY.

Monday, 3rd December 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-law).

Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-law).

J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-law) (Secretary.)

Inspector Thomas Wheeler, recalled.

Inspector T. Wheeler.
3 Dec. 1906.

18822. (Earl Russell.) There is a plan of the police station that has been handed in that I should like the witness to look at. (Plan handed to the witness.) The place where you were when the charge was brought in, is that in the room marked "Inspector's office"?—That is so.

18823. Is that separated by a passage from the charge room?—Yes.

18824. Has it got ordinary walls, or has it got glass walls?—Ordinary walls. There are glass doors between in the passage.

18825. When you are in the Inspector's office you can see into the charge room through the two doors across the passage and not otherwise?—That is so.

18825*. Whereabouts is the place where you sit or stand to do your work in the Inspector's office?—Immediately opposite this door. The desk is just about here.

18826. Where is the prisoners' bench in the charge room?—Between the fireplace and the left-hand corner.

18827. Running along that wall?—Yes.

18828. Then, when the prisoner is on the prisoners' bench, he would not be in sight from your Inspector's office?—No.

18829. Did you notice this prisoner being brought into the station?—I did.

18830. Had you got a good view of him at that time?—I had a good view from the doorway.

18831. I forget whether there was any other constable besides Morgan bringing him in?—No, there was no other constable.

18832. Was he struggling in any way when you saw him, or not?—No, he was walking quietly.

18833. Were you able to see his face at all?—No. Immediately he came into the passage he turned to the left, and his back would be turned to me at the time.

18834. How was Mullins brought into the charge room?—He turned to the left.

18835. What were you engaged in?—I was sitting down at the desk not doing anything.

18836. Not writing any reports?—No.

18837. Nothing in particular?—No.

18838. Did you see the other two constables, Hunt and Saunders, who were in the charge room?—When I went in.

18839. But not before you went in?—Not before.

18840. You say about a minute elapsed before you followed them into the charge room?—Not more. Immediately Morgan came in with Mullins, I left my seat, went round to the desk to the left-hand corner, and took a charge-sheet out of the little case in which they are kept, and then followed in.

18841. You got up and provided yourself with the charge-sheet and then followed in?—Yes.

18842. Could you see what Mullins was doing with his hands when he came in?—I did not notice.

18843. You did not notice either of his arms?—No.

18844. Did you hear anything at all from the time you left your desk to the time you went in?—No.

18845. When you went into the charge room where were Hunt and Saunders?—Saunders was at the desk in the charge room.

18846. Whereabouts is the charge desk on that plan?—In the centre. The back of the desk is facing the fireplace.

18847. Hunt was standing by the desk?—Yes.

18848. Where was Saunders?—Saunders was on the right-hand side of the desk, between the dock where the prisoner is placed, and the desk looking towards Morgan and Mullins.

18849. Did you notice what they were doing? No, I do not think they were doing anything. I am sure that Saunders was doing nothing. He was between the desk and the dock.

18849*. What duty were these two men on at the time?—They were both employed on reserve duty. The duty of Hunt is to attend to the telegraph and telephone, and Saunders has to assist in putting away the prisoners, and to take telegraphic or telephonic messages when they are received.

18850. In fact, they were on duty in the station to make themselves useful as they were wanted?—Yes.

18851. (Chairman.) Who was at the door of the station?—There was a third man outside.

18852. (Earl Russell.) What was his name?—I really could not tell you for the moment, but his name can be found.

18853. Where is the telephone and the telegraph which you have spoken of?—There is a room on this plan marked "Stores," and the telephone instrument is fixed in this room. This is the back room, and the telephone instrument is fixed on the table in this corner. (Pointing on the plan.)

18854. In the Inspector's office?—In the Inspector's office.

18855. Which door would a man leave the charge room by to go and attend to either of those instruments?—He would come back by the main door and into the Inspector's office.

18856. The same way as you went into the charge room?—That is so.

18857. Did you see or hear anything of any violence at all in the station on the part of the prisoner?—No, I did not.

18858. You heard no complaint of his being violent in any way?—Not other than what the constable said, that he struggled with him when he was arrested, but not inside the station.

18859. In the street?—Yes.

18859*. But nothing was said at that time by anybody about the prisoner having struggled inside the station?—No.

18860. You heard nothing of that at all?—No.

18861. The prisoner said nothing and Morgan said nothing?—No.

18862. And neither of the reserve men said anything?—No.

18863. Although only a minute elapsed before you came in, that is to say, we will say a minute, quite a short time. Of course you do not quite agree with Morgan about that, because Morgan says he brought Mullins in at about 11.25, and you took the charge at 11.30?—I do not agree with that time.

18864. But you think it was less than five minutes?—Yes, it would not be more than a minute, at the outside.

18865. The moment you went in the prisoner appealed to you, and said he had been hit?—I inquired of Morgan first what was the reason he had brought him there.

18866. It was not that you had a conversation with Morgan, that he said that?—No.

18867. I thought that was the first thing that happened when you went into the charge room?—The first thing that would happen would be to inquire of Morgan the reason why the man had been brought there.

18868. That may be what you mean, but let me read a passage from your report: "On their arrival at the station I immediately followed them into the charge room," and then you say later in the report about the one minute having elapsed, and that is what you mean by "immediately"?—Yes.

18868*. "When the prisoner said, 'This man" (pointing to Police-constable Morgan) 'has just struck me in the mouth inside this room'"?—That is so. The inference from that is that that was after Morgan had preferred the charge against Mullins.

18869. That is what you meant by that?—Yes, that is so.

18870. It reads as if it was the first thing that happened when you went into the room?—Yes.

18871. The first thing that happened was that Morgan told you why he had arrested this prisoner?—That is so.

18872. You told us last time what Morgan said?—Yes.

18873. Did you start writing down the charge when Morgan told you why he had arrested him?—No. As soon as Morgan had told me the cause of his arrest, Mullins complained of his being struck in the mouth.

18874. The minute Morgan had finished speaking?—Yes.

18875. Before you asked him if he had anything to say about it?—When Morgan had concluded preferring the charge, Mullins spoke with reference to being struck in the mouth. I said to Mullins, "Why did you not shout or call out?" and he said, "I did not think of it." The two constables of reserve, Hunt and Saunders, both denied that Mullins had been struck as had been alleged, and also Morgan.

18876. That was before you had reduced the charge to writing in the charge-sheet?—That is so.

18877. Of course you do not invite a prisoner, if he has anything to say, until you have taken the charge down?—With regard to inviting, I should not invite him.

18878. You do not invite him to say anything until you read the formal charge over to him. This was before you got the formal charge down, and the minute Morgan had finished speaking, Mullins said, "This man struck me in the mouth inside this room." You noticed his mouth then and saw it was bleeding?—Yes, it was swollen, and there was a little blood on the inside.

18879. And there was a bloody handkerchief, was there not?—He had a handkerchief, but there was no blood on it.

18880. Up to his mouth?—No, he had it in his hand.

18881. And a little blood on his face?—No, I did not see any blood on his face.

18882. None at all?—No.

18883. He was quite close to you, was he not?—Yes, I was standing quite close to him, within a foot.

18884. Closer to you than he was to Hunt?—Yes, he would be.

18885. Hunt, in his evidence at the police court, said there was a little blood on Mullins's face?—I did not see any blood.

18885*. You do not agree with that?—No, because I was quite close to him. I must have seen it when I examined his handkerchief.

18886. When the prisoner made this statement about being hit you first asked him why he did not call out?—Yes.

18887. Did you then ask Morgan about it?—Yes.

18888. What did Morgan say?—Morgan denied having in any way assaulted him. I asked Morgan if

Inspector T. Wheeler.

3 Dec. 1906.

it was true, as alleged by Mullins, that he had struck him inside the room, and he said, "No, sir."

18889. Then you asked Hunt and Saunders?—That is so.

18890. You asked them if they had seen it?—Yes.

18891. Did you ask them if they had left the room at all?—Yes.

18892. You asked them if they had been there all the time?—Yes.

18893. And they said they had?—Yes.

18894. Never left the room at all?—Yes.

18895. Did Hunt tell you what he had been doing in the charge-room?—No.

18896. Did you make any inquiries as to how the injuries to the prisoner's mouth had been obtained?—After Morgan had explained that Mullins had been fighting and Mullins did not deny that fact, I concluded that it was possible that it was done in the street.

18897. That is what the next paragraph in your report says: "P.C. Morgan again repeated that prisoner had been fighting with another man at Oakley Street and refused to go away"?—That is so.

18898. Then he repeated that again, and there was this conversation about the mouth?—Yes.

18899. You did not ask Morgan whether he had obtained that mouth there; you took it for granted?—Yes, I took it for granted, as Mullins did not challenge him on the point that he had been fighting.

18900. But Morgan did not say that he thought that it must have been obtained in a fight. It was your own inference?—It was my own inference. Morgan did not suggest that.

18901. Did you ask Morgan whether he had that wound on his lip when he was arrested?—No.

18902. Did you inquire of either Morgan or the two reserve men whether there had been any struggle in the police station at all, or as to any way in which he could have obtained that injury there?—No, and furthermore, there could not have been a struggle. I should have heard if there had been the least struggle taking place.

18902*. It was because you thought you would have heard it yourself that you did not think it necessary to ask the question. Is that so?—Yes.

18903. But you did not ask any of them whether the prisoner had struggled at all in the station?—No, I did not.

18904. Did you ask him if he had tried to get up or get away or refuse to sit down, or anything of that sort?—No.

18905. No one volunteered any statement about it?—No.

18906. Do you think if he had been so violent that he had to be held down in his seat you would have heard the scuffle?—Most certainly I must have heard that.

18907. If it had been necessary for Morgan to hold him on the seat by force you are sure you must have heard it?—I should certainly say so.

18908. Saunders was one of the reserve men, was he not?—Yes.

18909. Do you know he said at the police court, "It was necessary for the police constable to hold him on the seat"?—He might have said so. I could not say he did not.

18910. So that that apparently did happen, if it did happen, and Saunders, of course, was in the room when you were not, if Saunders is right that did happen without your hearing it?—That is so.

18911. Was Mullins, in your opinion, drunk when you saw him?—Yes, when I saw him he was.

18912. How did he show it?—He smelt very strongly of drink, and he was very unsteady on his feet, which, to my mind, indicated that he was drunk.

18913. Those were the only indications?—Those were the only indications.

18914. Nothing more than that?—Nothing more than that.

18915. And the fact that Morgan told you he had been drunk and fighting, I suppose, that influenced your mind to some extent?—No, I have to be governed by the facts as they are placed before me when the person is brought to the station, irrespective of what Morgan or any other officer has to say.

18916. If a man had been held rather tightly by the back of the neck or marched rather uncomfortably to the police station he might be a little unsteady on his feet when he got there, might he not?—Not necessarily so.

18916*. You do not think that would upset him at all?—No.

18917. It was not more than half an hour, rather less than half an hour after you had seen him that the doctor saw him and certified that he was not drunk?—That is so.

18918. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) When you charged him with being drunk what did he say?—He said, "I admit all that, but I have been struck in the mouth by this man."

18919. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly and using obscene language?—Yes.

18920. (Chairman.) Were you here when Mrs. Mullins gave her evidence on Thursday last?—Yes.

18921. You remember that she said then that she followed the constable Morgan and her husband to the police station?—Yes.

18922. Was there, as far as you know, anything to prevent her from coming into the station?—Nothing whatever.

18923. There was a constable there, I understand?—There would be a constable posted at the door.

18924. "There would be" is not an answer to my question. Was there, as far as you know, a constable there?—Yes.

18925 Are you certain of it?—There was a constable there four or five minutes before, but actually at the moment I could not say whether that man might not have been called away.

18926. It was the duty of some constable to be at the door?—Yes.

18927. You do not remember his name?—No, I do not remember his name, but his name could be obtained.

18928. Was the constable there under your orders at the time in the sense that it was your duty to see whether he was doing his duty or not?—Yes.

18929. You were in charge of the station from 10 to 2, I suppose?—Yes.

18930. Had you given any special instructions on that night to the constable at the door?—No.

18931. Are there any general instructions issued to the constable who is stationed at the door of a police station?—The duties change monthly, and in that instance being night duty on the first night the various constables receive certain instructions, one of which, and the most important, is to the man who is on the door, that should any person call or wish to see the officer on duty their business is not to be inquired into, but they are allowed to come in and see the officer on duty.

18931*. Is that the only general instruction given as to the conduct of the policeman at the door?—I would not say it is the only one, but that is a very important one that is impressed on the mind of the constable who is posted on the outside of the door.

18932. Have you in the course of your experience in the Force been posted at the door?—Yes.

18933. What instructions did you receive then in addition to the general instructions you have mentioned?—I have been instructed by my inspectors that at any time should anyone call at the station they are not to be stopped at the door, they are not to inquire their business, but they are to be shown in to see the officer on duty.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I am told the officer was 37 LR Ripping and I can send for him.

(Chairman.) It is unimportant as far as I am concerned. I only want what are the instructions or the special instructions.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Then I need not send for him.

18934. (Chairman.) No, not as far as I am concerned. (To the witness.) But supposing a person comes to the door, and says, "I want to come in and hear that man"—pointing to a prisoner—"charged"?—That person would be allowed to enter.

18935. Any constable then according to you and your experience who prevented anybody who wished to go into the charge-room from coming in would be exceeding his duty?—He would.

18936. So much for that. You have heard the evidence of P.C. Morgan given the other day?—Yes.

18937. And you have read the report you have made?—Not since the time I made it.

18938. Your recollection of the arrest of Mullins has been refreshed?—Yes, it has.

18939. I want you to tell me according to the best of your recollection, thus refreshed, what exactly was said by you and the other parties concerned when you went into the charge-room on this occasion. We have it according to you that Hunt and Saunders were there?—That is so.

18940. Mullins was of course there?—Yes.

18941. And P.C. Morgan?—Yes.

18942. Who spoke first?—Morgan.

18943. What did he say?—Morgan said, "I have brought this man," meaning the prisoner Mullins, "in for being drunk, fighting, and using obscene language."

18944. Anything else?—"At Oakley Street."

18945. Anything else?—That was all that was said then. Mullins immediately said, "This man," pointing to or meaning Morgan, "has struck me in the mouth." I said, "Why did you not shout or call out." He said, "I did not think of it."

18946. Who spoke next?—The next thing that was done was that I looked at Mullin's lip, the lower lip, which was red and swollen very slightly, and there appeared to be a slight abrasion on the inside of the lip. I said to Morgan, "You hear what this man says, that you have struck him in the mouth." I said, "Is that so," and he said, "No, sir." I also asked police constables Hunt and Saunders, who were also in the room if they had seen any assault committed on Mullins, and they also said, "No, Sir."

18947. What then took place?—Morgan again repeated that he had found Mullins fighting, and that he was drunk and using obscene language. That was not denied by Mullins, and he was charged.

18948. Did you write that in the charge sheet?—Drunk and fighting.

18949. You said Morgan repeated that he had found Mullins fighting, drunk, and using obscene language?—Mullins said, "He has struck me in the mouth"—he repeated that again. Then Mullins was charged, and I read the charge over to him.

18950. Before reading the charge you must have written it?—Yes, I beg your pardon, the charge was entered on the sheet.

18951. When Mullins said the second time that Morgan had assaulted him did you sit down and write on the charge-sheet?—Yes.

18952. Have you told everything that took place before you wrote down the charge?—To the best of my recollection I have, Sir.

18953. I am not pinning you down to the exact words, but have you said in substance what took place before you read the charge?—Yes.

18954. When you had written down the charge what did you do then?—I read it over to Mullins.

18955. What did he say?—He said, "I admit all that, but I have been struck in the mouth."

18956. Did anything further take place?—Not at that time. He was then placed in the cell.

18957. You have told me all according to your recollection that took place?—To the best of my recollection. I do not recollect any other statement being made. (After considering.) Yes, that is all, to the best of my recollection.

18958. Do you think it was right to take a charge against a man of being drunk, fighting, and disorderly ("disorderly" is the word in the charge-sheet) and using obscene language after such an examination as you made into this case?—Yes.

18959. I need not ask you, Inspector, who have risen in the Force, whether you know what are the general instructions and regulations contained in the White Book?—I do not know that I am thoroughly conversant with the whole of them.

Inspector T. Wheeler.

3 Dec. 1906.

18959*. But you have the book, I presume, or have had it?—I have it.

18960. How long have you been inspector?—One year and ten months.

18961. How long have you been in charge of this police station from time to time?—Between seven and eight months.

18962. Do you recollect paragraph 199 in the White Book. "The officer on duty before receiving a charge is to ascertain that there is reasonable ground for preferring the complaint against the accused, and unless the circumstances be such as to entitle the accuser to be believed, the charge is not to be taken." Then 200, "The greatest care is to be exercised in the investigation of charges, as it has occasionally been noticed that even where there have been suspicious circumstances the officer on duty has shown great readiness in accepting the statement of the constable making the charge without giving the case that close personal attention which is imperatively demanded." Do you consider that you complied with those instructions in this case?—I do.

18963. Let us see. The charge you took was one of being drunk, being disorderly, and using obscene language?—Yes.

18964. Were you at the Police Court on the Monday morning?—Yes.

18965. Is it not a fact that the defendant was there charged under the Licensing Act simply with being drunk, and while drunk behaving riotously, or words to that effect?—That is the method of the Police Court, and that is in accordance with the wording of the section—drunk, disorderly, and using obscene language is the method we adopt for shortness.

18966. I can quite understand that it simplifies your work, but what I am calling your attention to is the fact that in the Police Court there was no charge of using obscene language made against Mullins?—On the original charge there was.

18967. There was no charge at the Police Court, apparently?—That is a matter for the magistrate. If he thought there was no obscene language used, he has the discretion of altering the charge in accordance with the evidence.

18968. P.C. Morgan was the prosecutor in the case, was he not, according to our forms?—That is so.

18969. I suppose it is the custom for the Inspector who is on duty when the charge is made to attend the Police Court?—The reason that I attended in this instance was to answer any question that might be asked by the magistrate referring to the complaint about the assault.

18970. I do not suggest that you are responsible for it, but I do not quite understand how the charge came to be made against Mullins in the form in which it was made at the Police Court?—If you would kindly look at 2 & 3 Victoria, Chap. 47, Section 58, that will give the Police Court wording of the charge.

18970*. The whole charge?—I believe so.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Section 58 says: Every person who shall be found drunk in any street or public thoroughfare within the said district, and who while drunk shall be guilty of any riotous or indecent behaviour"——

(Chairman.) Those are the words in the Licensing Act, I think, as well.

(Mr. Muir.) That may be so, Sir, but that is the Metropolitan Police Act, Section 58. The other section under which Mullins was charged at the police-station was Section 54—the words I read before. Somebody, presumably the magistrate, altered the charge from Section 54 to Section 58.

(Chairman.) I should have thought the Police Court notes or documents ought to show the alteration.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) To show that it is an alteration?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The only way in which you could get that is by comparing the charge-sheet with the charge on the notes.

Inspector T. Wheeler.

3 Dec. 1906.

18971. (Chairman.) My point was not so much about the propriety of the form in which the charge was made, but as to your caution. You took a charge against Mullins that he had used obscene language?—Yes.

18972. Except by the use of the word "obscene" by the police constable in what seems to be a general formula, there was nothing before you as to the obscenity or the use of improper language when you took the charge?—The obscene language placed before me was that when the constable was requesting Mullins to desist, he said, "I will be f—— well away when I like."

18973. I had asked you particularly, and I took a note of it, whether you had, having refreshed your memory, told me in substance all that had taken place before you wrote in the charge-sheet?—Yes, I had, to the best of my recollection.

18974. I put you on your guard about it. I asked you specially whether that was all that had taken place?—Yes, you did, Sir.

18975. You have been asked questions by Earl Russell as well, and now, you see, we are harking back, and saying that the particular expression was used?—That was in answer to your question to me in reference to the obscene language.

18976. I know. It is no use my reading what I have got down, but I wrote down as you were speaking what you said about what took place in the charge-room before you read out the charge on the charge-sheet to Mullins, and when I had finished asking you, I asked you, "Is that all?" or words to that effect, and you said, "Yes"?—I quite follow you, Sir.

18977. Now, you remember something, or you say that something was said, which had a distinct bearing upon it?—The obscene words as alleged to be used by Mullins must have been told me, otherwise I should not have entertained the charge of obscene language.

18978. That is arguing that you necessarily did your duty, and that is just the question which is at issue. But, however, there it is. You say before you took the charge you now recollect that there was an obscene expression stated by the constable to have been used by Mullins?—Yes.

18979. It is a pity you did not tell me that before?—I did not quite follow the question as put to me. It was quite an oversight.

18980. You cannot call it an oversight after the caution I gave to you that I wished to have everything that was said by you, or by Morgan or anyone else, in your presence before you took the charge. You cannot call that an oversight?—Probably not, Sir.

18981. Did you take down what Mullins said in writing?—No.

18982. Is it the custom to take down what the accused states in answer to a charge when made?—No.

18982*. Did you make any note of what Mullins said?—No.

18983. And nothing was written down at the time?—No.

18984. Then I call your attention again to the White Book, paragraph 198: "The statement made by a prisoner when charged at the station is to be accurately written down at the time by the officer on duty, and reported to the magistrate who hears the case." You know that is in the book?—Yes.

18985. You did not follow the book, then, in this case?—Not in cases of drunkenness I do not follow the book. In any case of felony or other serious matters, whatever is mentioned by the prisoner is taken down.

18986. I quite follow the distinction you are making, but the distinction does not appear to be made in the book?—No; perhaps not.

18987. Then, again, in paragraph 209, I notice: "The charge as entered upon the sheet is always to be read over to the prisoner, not with a view to extracting an answer, but to inform him of the nature of the offence with which he is charged, but any observation he makes is to be noted and attended to"?—That is so, Sir; and in this case that was noted.

18988. You read that to mean not noted in writing, but to be noted by the Inspector in charge?—Yes.

18989. You say you did note it here?—Yes.

18990. And you did attend to it?—Yes.

18991. You have been rather altering the account you gave to me, and I think I ought to call your attention to the report which you made on September 9th. You say in your report: "I immediately followed them into the charge room," which is as you have described to-day, "when the prisoner said: I read that as saying before Morgan spoke at all—'this man (pointing to P.C. Morgan 388 L) has just struck me in the mouth'"?—Yes.

18992. That is not quite consistent with what you stated to me after being cautioned by me?—That is so.

18993. Then, again, I should like to point out that in your report I do not find that you noted or attended to any expression of an obscene character—there is not one word in the report about an allegation that the prisoner used obscene language?—I think you will find that there is, Sir.

18994. No, the report is very much in accordance with what you gave me to-day before you afterwards thought of the expression alleged to be used by Mullins—"Charged with being drunk and disorderly and making use of obscene language at Oakley Street." Those were the words you told me this morning were used by Morgan, and they are the same. In your report there is not one word about using any obscene expression by Mullins?—When I inquired into the circumstances of the case as to the nature of the disorder ——

18995. It is somewhat unfortunate if you take a charge in that way that you should not have mentioned in your report the grounds upon which you took the charge. Was Mullins searched in this case?—Yes.

18996. Why was he searched?—The object of his being searched was previous to putting him in the cell to ascertain that he had nothing on him whereby he might possibly cause an injury to himself.

18997. Had you any reason to suspect that he had got a deadly weapon on him?—No reason to suspect.

18998. Let me call your attention again to the White Book: "Any prisoner may be searched if it be suspected that he has upon his person any deadly weapon or any article which has been stolen or unlawfully obtained." There was no suggestion of any larceny in this case?—No, not this case.

18998* You have told me you had no reason to think he had anything upon him that would harm him?—I had no just reason. On the other hand, if he had not been searched and he was placed in the cells, and he had committed an injury to himself, there would have been trouble. Of course, the persons are searched as a safeguard to prevent them doing injury to themselves.

18999. It may be that the rule you are suggesting should be the rule might be a proper rule, but I am only pointing out to you that the instructions are that a prisoner should be searched if it be suspected that he had upon his person any deadly weapon. You do not seem to have had any suspicion of that?—No particular suspicion.

19000. You have told us this morning that you think Mullins was drunk?—Yes, I thought so.

19001. The only ground that you have for saying so is that his breath smelt of drink and that he was unsteady on his legs, or something of that kind?—Yes, that is so—unsteady on his feet.

19002. Did you look at him with a view of forming a judgment on the question of whether he was or was not drunk?—I did.

19003. Your judgment was wrong, apparently, was it not?—It was.

19004. When you first saw him he had got a cut on the lips, you have told us?—Yes.

19005. Did it not occur to you it was a case in which you ought to have obtained the opinion of the Divisional Surgeon at once?—The cut that has been mentioned was merely a swelling of the outside of the lip and a slight abrasion on the inside.

19006. Did it seem as though it had been caused recently?—It did.

19007. You thought that Mullins was drunk?—Yes, I honestly thought so in my opinion.

19008. Do not you think it would have been better if you had sent for the Divisional Surgeon under those circumstances?—I had no reason to send for him at that time. If Mullins had then said: "I am not drunk" I should have immediately sent for a doctor.

19009. Then if he had denied being drunk you would have sent for a doctor?—Immediately.

19010. Is that the practice?—That is so.

19011. And that ought to be done by all inspectors?—I think so. If a person denies beink drunk they should send at once to get medical opinion.

19012. Mullins was injured, was he not?—He had a slight injury. You may term it an injury.

19013. Then, again, I draw your attention to the White Book: "If prisoners appear to be ill or injured in any way, although they do not complain, the Divisional Surgeon is to be sent for immediately"?—That is so.

19014. Why did you not send for the Divisional Surgeon?—That generally applies to a person who might be found in the street lying down, or something of that sort.

19015. No; excuse me, it says: "If prisoners are insensible or appear to be ill"?—That is what I was referring to.

19017. There is a rule as to that which seems to me a very proper rule indeed, and which, as far as our inquiry has gone, appears to be faithfully performed by the police. But there is another rule: "If prisoners"—that means if a man being a prisoner—"appear to be ill or injured in any way, although they do not complain, the Divisional Surgeon is to be sent for immediately." Please do not think I am unnecessarily censuring you?—No, decidedly not.

19017* I am only trying to ascertain what did take place on this occasion, and whether the conduct of all concerned came up to the requirements mentioned in this book?—Quite so, Sir.

19018. At any rate, you did not interpret the injury in this case as being one that made it necessary for you to send for the Divisional Surgeon?—That is so, Sir.

19019. You see now it is a pity you did not?—Yes, it is a pity.

19020. Had you sent for the Divisional Surgeon, who ultimately did have to come, and said that Mullins was not drunk, Mullins would never have been put in the police-court?—That is so.

19021. And all this bother about it would not have arisen?—That is so, I admit.

(Earl Russell.) I ought to have asked two other questions, and perhaps you would put them for me, Sir. I did not ask the inspector why he did not mention the cut lip in his report, and whether he did make any other report or note in a note-book of any sort or kind?

19022. (Chairman.) Inspector Wheeler has given his evidence very fairly, and he has frankly admitted that he was wrong about one point in the report. (To the Witness.) You hear what Earl Russell suggests. Why did you not mention the cut lip in your report?—There was not a cut. I say now there was no cut.

19023. There was an abrasion?—Yes; but it could hardly be described as a cut.

19024. (Mr Dickinson.) When Mullins asked you to send for a doctor, did he first of all ask you to send for Dr. Reed?—He did not.

19025. He has told us that when he asked for a doctor he asked for Dr. Reed—"My own doctor, who I was under at the time"?—That is quite untrue. What absolutely took place was this: As I closed the cell-door—in fact, the bolt had been shot back—he knocked. I opened the door, and he said, "Inspector." I said, "Yes." He said, "I don't think I am drunk. I should like to be seen by a doctor." I said, "Very well, I will send for the Divisional Surgeon," and upon that the door was closed. There was no mention of any other doctor.

19026. Let us see what did happen. I understand that the moment the door was closed he tapped, and called you?—That is so. Inspector T. Wheeler. 3 Dec. 1906.

19027. And asked for a doctor?—Yes.

19028. That was the moment the door was closed after he had been put into the cell?—Yes.

19029. Who was there at the time?—The constable on reserve, Saunders—no, I think it was Hunt. I will not be positive, but it was one of the two officers on reserve. I believe it was Hunt.

19030. You and Hunt and Mullins were the only three at the cell-door?—At that time.

19031. How had you gone to the cell, do you remember—in what order?—I had got Mullins by the arm, he was in front of me, and Hunt—if it was Hunt, as I believe it was—was following up.

19032. Is it usual for you to go to the cells with the prisoners?—Yes; I make it a practice to see all the prisoners to the cells when I am on duty.

19033. You took Mullins to the cells?—Yes.

19034. You say you always take all prisoners to the cells?—Yes; I don't go so far as to say that I take them all, but I go with the constable who does accompany them to the cells, and see them safely to the cells.

19035. Is there a gaoler there?—Yes; he is one of the officers I refer to. We term him the reserve man.

19036. Did Mullins ask you to take him to the cells?—No, he did not.

19037. That you are perfectly certain of?—I am perfectly certain on that point.

19037*. You took him to the cells, because you were on duty, and it was usual with you?—I was in charge of the station, and that is my usual practice.

19038. What was it exactly that you took down when you took the charge? I do not know that we have seen that. Is it only what is on the charge-sheet?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is all.

19039. (Mr. Dickinson.) When the charge is taken, do you take it down on the charge-sheet?—We write it down on the charge-sheet.

19040. The same document that goes into court the next day?—That is so.

19041. All that you read out to the prisoner are the words that are on the charge-sheet?—That is so.

19042. The words on the charge-sheet on this occasion being that he was accused of being drunk, disorderly, and using obscene language?—Yes.

19043. When you say in your report, "When that was read out to him he said, 'I admit that,'" that means that he admitted what was on the charge-sheet?—That was the inference that I gathered.

19044. You took it that all he was asked at that moment to admit if anything was what was on the charge-sheet?—Yes.

19045. Was that all that happened—that the three words on the charge-sheet were read out to him, and he said, "I admit all that"?—Yes.

19046. That you are perfectly certain of?—Yes, at that time.

19047. You made three reports on this matter?—One at the time, and the others after Mullins appeared before the Magistrates.

19048. You made one on the 9th September, which was the night of the occurrence?—Yes.

19049. You made one on the 10th September, which was after the case had been heard by the police magistrate?—That is so.

19050. In the second one you say: "I further beg to report that, on investigating the charge made by the police constable against the prisoner, who said in prisoner's hearing 'That he (prisoner) was drunk, and had been fighting with a man at Oakley-street; he dispersed them, when they again commenced to fight, and prisoner was arrested, prisoner said, 'Yes, I admit all that; but he (police constable) struck me in the mouth inside the station.'" Now, I want you to tell me how those two statements can be consistent. The first statement was, as you told me just now, that you read out to Mullins what was on the charge-sheet?—Yes.

Inspector T. Wheeler.

3 Dec. 1906.

19051. And which he said, "I admit"?—Yes.

19051A. Now, in the later report, you say that the statement that he had been fighting with a man at Oakley-street was made, and he then said, "I admit all that." Did he say it twice, or is it your account of one transaction?—After Morgan had preferred the charge in the first instance of being drunk, disorderly, and making use of obscene language, I inquired as to the nature of the disorder and the obscene language. The police constable explained exactly what transpired in accordance with that report, and Mullins was accordingly charged. He did not deny what the constable said, and the words read over to Mullins would not be the words of the report, but the words on the sheet.

19051B. To which he said, "I admit all that"?—Yes, although he has heard what was mentioned in the report, he heard Morgan relate to me the history of what had taken place in the street, but I did not read Morgan's words to the prisoner but only merely what was on the sheet.

19052. But your first report is perfectly clear, "The charge was read out, and he said, 'I admit all that'"?—Yes.

19053. Now I understand you to say he only used the words, "I admit all that" once?—Yes, that is so.

19054. Then in making the report to your superior officer you stated all this that I have read out to you that he was drunk and had been fighting with a man at Oakley Street?—That is so.

19055. And then he said, "Yes, I admit all that"?—That is referring to his first admission when the charge was read over—not that "I admit all that" had been said twice.

19056. It is rather important. Taking it for granted that you had this long explanation of what had been going on, you assume that when he said, "I admit all that" to a definite charge, that he meant that he admitted everything else that had been said in that conversation?—I took it for granted that he admitted, or he did not deny that he was drunk, or that he was fighting, and that the words he used did mean that.

19057. You took it for granted that the words he used could be extended to an admission of all these facts that had been related by the constable?—Yes.

19058. And that you put in the report to your superior officer?—Yes.

19059. What was the object of this second report?—The object of that report was that the Superintendent might be made aware of the whole facts in connection with Mullins' complaint.

19060. One of the facts being that he had been fighting with a man in Oakley Street?—Yes.

19061. And that from the investigation you made on that occasion you thought it was correct?—Yes, I did.

19062. You had no knowledge of it except the statement that you say the police constable made?—I had no knowledge more than Morgan's statement of the fact that Mullins did not deny that he had been fighting.

19063. He did not deny what you had stated and the words were that he admitted it?—Yes.

19063.* I want to ask you one question about these reports which are made after the hearing at the police court, this report on the 10th September, 1906, in which you stated in detail what happened at the police court. How did you arrive at that report? Have you got any means of taking down in shorthand what is said at the police court?—No. It is to the best of my recollection of what transpired at the time after I returned back to the station.

19064. You wrote it at once?—After my return to the police station—not at the police court.

19065. You wrote it at once after the hearing at the police court at the police station?—Yes.

19066. How soon afterwards did you get back to the police station?—From half-an-hour to three-quarters of an hour—from Tower Bridge to Kennington Road.

19067. And then you would write it out. Is that a matter of course? Do you do it in every case?—Only in cases where it has been alleged there is a complaint against a police officer—not in all cases, but only in cases of complaints.

19068. You only do it in cases of complaints?—Yes.

19069. Are there any instructions to that effect?—There are instructions, of course, to the effect that if the conduct of any police officer is in question, the facts shall be brought to the notice of the Superintendent and the Commissioner.

19070. That is what I want to get at. There is a definite instruction, am I right in saying, that whenever the conduct of a police officer is called in question at the court, it is the duty of someone to call it to the attention of the superior officer?—That is so.

19071. But you told us just now you would not, under ordinary circumstances, have been at the Police-Court?—No.

19072. You went there for this particular reason because of this complaint of an assault?—To answer any question that the Magistrate might put to me with reference to the case.

19073. Who, then, would be the proper person to make this report to the superior officer?—At all police courts there is an inspector from the division in which the police court is situated who attends to all the police business and reports all observations made by magistrates irrespective of from what division the case may come.

19074. Would he in this case have been Inspector Fergusson?—Yes.

19075. Then Inspector Fergusson's report which he made on the 10th of September, was the report which had to be made in accordance with this instruction?—Yes.

19076. If it was his duty to make this report, why did you make this report of the 10th September yourself. It was not your duty to do it, was it?—It was my duty, to an extent.

19077. How?—Because I attended the police court and I could be asked any question by the magistrate, and I had the whole dealing with the case.

19078. You did not give any evidence?—Yes, I gave evidence.

19079. Before the Police Court?—Yes.

19079.* It was because you had given evidence that you thought it was your duty to return this report to your superior officer?—Yes, I thought it would be more effectual to tell the Superintendent what the observation of the Magistrate was.

19080. Have you ever seen this report which was made by Inspector Fergusson?—No.

19081. Have you ever done the duty of Inspector at the police court?—Yes.

19082. How do you take down the reports, because you would have to report on several cases?—Whatever observations are made by the magistrate. You make a note of what has been said by the magistrate to the best of your ability, and from those notes you compile the report and submit it to your own Superintendent of the division to which the officer who is called in question was attached.

19083. In this particular case, did you, when you were making the report, make a note of what was going on at all?—No, it is all from memory to the best of my ability.

19084. If there is any similarity—I do not say there is any similarity—between the wording of your report and Inspector Fergusson's, it is quite accidental?—Quite.

19085. They do not come from the same source at all?—Not at all.

19086. You set out your report quite independently, and he sets his out?—My report is made at Kennington Road Police Station, and the other is made at Southwark—the M Division police station.

19087. Did you have any conversation with him about this case at the police court?—No.

19087*. Not at all?—No.

19088. (Mr. Whitmore.) Do you remember what Mullins was wearing on his head at the police station?—A cap—a dark grey cap.

19088*. You are quite sure of that?—Quite sure of that (Chairman.) I am not yet quite satisfied about the formal entry as to the proceedings in this case. Will you just follow. That is a copy of the charge sheet.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have the original charge sheet here. (Handing document to witness.).

19089. (Chairman.) Under the column "Charge" you find the words "Drunk, disorderly, and making use of obscene language at Oakley Street, Parish, Lambeth"?—Yes.

19090. Those words are in your handwriting?—Yes.

19091. "John Morgan, P.C. 383, L." That is your handwriting?—No, it is the constable's writing.

19092. The constable's own writing?—Yes.

19093. The person charging has to sign himself?—Yes.

19094. You are careful to observe that always. I suppose in your own interest—you and the other Inspectors when you are taking charges?—Yes.

19095. You are always careful to see that the constable or other person who is making the charge signs himself?—Whether a private individual or a constable they always have to write their own name.

19096. Then look at the next column; "Witness's name and address." There was no witness in this case?—No.

19097. Then "Taken into custody by" is the next column—"John Morgan." Who writes that?—The officer on duty. I did.

19098. "Property found on person or elsewhere—nothing." Then follow other columns. Are the other entries as to the time of detention and the time at which he is admitted to bail in your handwriting?—Yes.

19099. And then the entry of the Police Officer taking the charge. "T. Wheeler," that is your handwriting?—Yes.

19100. Then the Magistrate before whom the charge is made—"Mr. Rose"—that is in the Magistrate's handwriting, I suppose?—No, it is a stamp.

19101. Is that made by the Clerk?—I could not say. Probably so.

19102. Either by the Magistrate or by the Clerk?—Yes.

19103. Then look at the next column "Charge how disposed of by Magistrate, and what offence proved." I see the word "disd."—that means dismissed I take it?—Discharged, I take it.

19104. Surely not?—Probably it may be "dismissed."

19105. It does not much matter. Then underneath there are the words "Not proved." Who wrote those?—The Clerk I presume.

19106. But that original was handed back to you, was it not, or sent back to the police station ultimately?—Sent back to the police station on the following night.

Inspector T. Wheeler.
3 Dec. 1906.

19107. You do not know, I understand, who wrote the words "Not proved"? You think it was the Clerk?—I should presume so. Presumably it was.

19108. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It was written when it came back to you from the court?—Oh, yes.

19109. (Chairman.) I just wanted to have that thoroughly clear. But I suggest to you, Inspector, that this entry is not an accurate formal entry of all that took place?—Yes, I say it is.

19110. The charge made was being drunk and disorderly, and making use of obscene language?—Yes.

19111. As a matter of fact the prisoner never was tried on that charge?—No, but that was the charge preferred against him. The doctor was called, and it was proved that the man was not drunk, and, of course, that part of the charge would have to be struck out.

19112. Now you have come to the point. Is it any part of your duty to amend the entry in the charge sheet if the Magistrate says it ought to be done?—No.

19112*. You have never known a case in which you have altered a charge sheet?—Never.

18113. Have you ever seen a charge sheet altered?—No.

19114. By the Magistrate?—Not to the best of my recollection.

19115. I do not think it ought to be?—I do not know that I ever have.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The charge sheet would be the record of what took place at the time.

(Chairman.) Is it not a record in the sense of being a record?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Only of the charge.

(Chairman.) I do not see what power a Magistrate would have to alter the charge sheet itself, because that is a document very sacred to Inspector Wheeler for instance, because he has got on it the name of John Morgan actually written, and the charge that John Morgan made, and he signs himself to say that he took the charge. But if the prisoner is charged at the Police Court with another offence it seems to me that that is an irregularity. There was no evidence tendered here of any obscene language for instance. However, it does not appear that you were in any way responsible for that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The next witness I was going to call was Inspector Fergusson, but I am told he has left the court. All he can speak to is what happened at the Police Court. I do not know whether the Commissioners require any other evidence about that.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I think I have all the answers I want.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am obliged.

(Chairman.) If, on considering the case further, we think it necessary to ask Inspector Fergusson to come, I have no doubt he will come.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

P.C. Charles Hunt (16 L.R.), sworn.

19116. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think you are a constable stationed at Kennington Road Station?—Yes.

19117. Were you in the station at half past eleven on the night of the 9th September, when Police Constable Morgan brought in Mullins?—Yes.

19118. Will you take the plan of the station in your hand? When Mullins was brought in, he has told us he was brought through the door by Morgan into the charge room?—Yes.

19119. Where were you standing then?—Alongside the desk.

19120. Mullins has told us that he was taken across and sat down on the seat. Is that accurate?—Yes.

19121. Did you sit in the room until the Inspector came in?—Yes.

19122. The whole time?—Yes.

19123. How long elapsed after Mullins got into the room before the Inspector came?—Just a moment I think; he came straight out into the room.

19124. Did anybody go to fetch the Inspector, or did he come out of his own accord?—He came out of his own accord.

P.C. C. Hunt.

19125. Are you sure you did not leave the room at all until the Inspector came into the room?—Yes.

19126. Whilst Morgan and Mullins were in the charge room did Morgan strike Mullins at all?—No.

19127. Were you in the room when the Inspector came in?—Yes.

19128. Did you hear Mullins say anything to the Inspector?—When Morgan preferred the charge Mullins said, "I admit all that, but he struck me in the mouth."

19129. So that the first time you heard Mullins speak to the Inspector was after the charge had been read over to him?—Yes.

19130. Did the Inspector ask you anything about whether Morgan had struck him?—Yes.

19131. What did you say?—I said no.

19131*. When the Inspector asked you whether

P.C. C. Hunt.

3 Dec. 1906.

Morgan had struck Mullins did Mullins say anything about your not being in the room?—No, he did not.

19132. Was there any other constable in the room besides yourself?—Saunders was there.

10133. You have told us you heard the charge read over to Mullins, and you heard Mullins say "I admit all that, but he struck me in the mouth." Did Mullins say anything about the way he had been treated in the street?—I did not notice anything.

19134. Who was it took Mullins to the cell?—Inspector Wheeler.

19135. Is that his ordinary practice?—Yes.

19136. Was any request made by Mullins as to who should take him to the cell?—No.

19137. (Earl Russell.) You made a report on this case?—Yes.

19138. More than one?—Yes, two.

(Earl Russell.) May I see those reports?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly (handing).

19139. (Earl Russell.) You are said to be a man on reserve duty in the station?—Yes.

19140. Does that mean that you would act as gaoler if necessary?—If required.

19141. And as gaoler you would be the proper person to take a prisoner to the cells, would you?—Yes.

19142. How was it you did not take this prisoner to the cell?—I accompanied the Inspector.

19143. You did not have hold of him —No.

19144. Is the constable who brings in a prisoner never allowed to take him to the cell?—That is the rule.

19145. The constable making the charge does not take the prisoner to the cell. That is the usual rule?—Yes.

19146. Just tell me about those other doors out of the charge room on that plan. Which way would you go out of the charge room if you were going to attend prisoners in the cells?—Across this side.

19147. You would go out by this door?—Yes.

19147*. Would it be your business on this night to attend to the prisoners in the cells, or would you be doing the telephone and telegraph business?—Whichever it might be.

19148. Had you some papers in your hands?—I do not remember. I may have had a book. I could not say.

19149. What were you doing with a book—reading it?—No, I was writing.

19150. You had some duties to perform?—Yes.

19151. You might have had papers to look up, put away, and that kind of thing?—No, I do not think I had that night.

19152. Do you think you were writing any papers at all?—I was writing in a book I believe at the time.

19153. What book was it?—A telegraph book.

19154. It is part of your business to attend to the instrument, you mean. Had you sent a telegram off, or what?—I cannot remember what it was.

19155. Did you make any note of what happened on this night in your pocket-book?—No.

19156. No other notes beyond the two reports. Those are the only written notes you made?—Yes.

19157. Where were you standing in the room?—I was standing at the desk.

19158. And writing on the desk?—Yes.

19159. The desk, we have been told, is in the middle of the room, between the fire-place and the wall where the words "charge room" are written?—Yes.

19160. On which side of the desk were you standing —on the same side as the prisoner, or on the opposite side?—I was standing behind the desk, I believe, at the time; I might have been this side more than the other side, towards the entrance.

19161. The desk faces, as I understand, the wall which has the main door in it. The desk faces the passage. The Inspector, as he was seated in the chair, would have his back to the fire-place. Is that right?—Yes.

19162. Taking the Inspector's chair, were you standing on the left-hand of that chair or on the right-hand?—More to the right I should think. I cannot exactly remember.

19163. Were you standing or sitting?—Standing.

19164. Bending down over your book?—Yes.

19165. It was a message you were about to send off, was it?—I think it was one I had sent.

19165*. Mullins' description that you had papers in your hand would probably be not incorrect as far as that goes?—I might have had a book. I do not think I had any papers.

19166. Are you quite positive that in the course of your telegraphic duties you did not leave the room for a moment before the Inspector came in?—Yes, quite positive.

19167. Never left it for an instant?—No.

19167*. In the statement you made on the 10th September you do not say you were there all the time. This is what you say: "I beg to state that I was in the charge room, and did not see any violence used by Morgan." Why did you not say you were in the charge room, and never left it?—I did not think it was necessary.

19168. The whole object of your writing that report was to show that Morgan could not have done what he was said to have done without your seeing it, was it not?—Yes, I should think so.

19169. It was to exonerate Morgan from blame. This is what the report was for?—I could not say that.

19170. Do you mean when you wrote the report you had no idea why you had been asked to write it?—I heard that the prisoner had made a complaint against the constable.

19171. Exactly, and you knew the object of your report was to show that the prisoner's complaint was not true?—Yes, just so.

19172. Then it was very important to say that you never left the room at all during the time the constable was there with the prisoner, was it not?—Yes.

19173. Did you write this report on September 10th before or after the hearing at the police court?—After the hearing at the police court.

19174. When you wrote it you had heard Mullins say at the police court that in the police station you had walked out of the charge-room with papers in your hand. You had heard Mullins give evidence at the police court when you wrote this report, of course?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) But Mullins did not say at the police court that this man had left the room.

19175. (Earl Russell.) I was just asking whether Mullins said so. Mullins has sworn you did so. Did you hear Mullins tell his story at the police court?—Yes.

19176. Did you hear Mullins say at the police court that he had been struck in the mouth by Police Constable Morgan?—Yes.

19177. Did you hear him say that there were two other constables in the charge-room when he was brought in?—Yes.

19178. Did you hear him say one left by one door, and one left by another?—Yes, he did say that.

18179. When you wrote this report you appreciated the importance of your having been present in the charge-room all the time?—Yes.

19180. But you do not say you never left it. You simply say you were in the charge-room. What you meant was that you had never left it?—Yes.

19180.* You are quite sure Mullins is mistaken in saying that you walked out for a moment?—Quite sure.

19181. You never went to attend to your telegraph bell, or to a bell from the prisoners' cells, or anything?—No.

19182. Not for a moment?—No.

19183. Are you quite positive of that?—Yes, I am.

19184. You are perfectly certain you never stepped out of the door for five seconds?—I may have done after the Inspector came out.

19185. But before the Inspector came out you did not pass through the door for a few seconds and come back again?—No.

19186. Quite sure?—Yes.

19187. It is correct to say you were occupied with your writing, is it not?—Yes.

19188. In what state was the prisoner when Morgan brought him in?—He was drunk.

19189. How did he show it?—He appeared to be excited, and had all the appearance of a man intoxicated.

19190. The appearance of his face?—No, not particularly his face; I did not see anything wrong with his face.

19191. You never saw anything wrong with his face when he came in. Was it his walk, or his speech?—He was unsteady.

19192. Unsteady on his feet?—Yes.

19193. Thick in his speech?—I could not say.

19194. Was he shouting?—No, I did not notice him shouting.

19195. Did you hear him say anything at all before the Inspector came in?—No, I do not remember that.

19196. Was he violent before the Inspector came in?—Not that I noticed.

19197. You did not see him struggle with Morgan?—No.

19198. Did you watch them from the time Morgan came to the door to the time Morgan took him to the prisoner's seat?—I did not watch them.

19199. You went on with your writing?—I just finished what I had to do.

19200. There was nothing that made you lift your head and look at them?—No.

19201. But you had a good look at him when he came in, you say?—No, I did not.

19202. You told me it was from his look you thought he was drunk—nothing the matter with his face, but simply his walk?—That was after he was charged, and after he was in the dock.

19203. You did not form any opinion as to whether he was drunk or not until after the charge?—At the time the charge was taken.

19204. Before the Inspector came in you had not troubled to form an opinion about it?—I noticed he was drunk.

19204.* That is just what I want to know. Did you make up your mind that he was drunk before the Inspector came in to take the charge?—I could not say that.

19205. In what way did he show excitement?—He would not keep quiet for one thing.

19206. While the charge was being taken?—Yes.

19207. Is there a sort of little dock you put them into?—There is a dock.

19208. Do you mean he skipped about in the dock, or tried to get out, or what?—He kept moving about.

19209. Restive?—I could not say whether he was restive.

19210. Was Mullins restive. Did he try to break his way out, or anything of that sort?—No, he did not try to get away.

19211. That is all you can tell us about the excitement, that he moved about instead of standing still?—Yes.

19212. You noticed nothing peculiar about his face when he came in?—I did not.

19213. Did you notice his hands when he came in?—No, I did not.

19214. And you noticed nothing which took place between him and Morgan on the bench before the Inspector came into the room?—No.

19215. If it is true that he had to be held down on the bench you did not see it?—I did not see that.

19216. You said when you were being examined in chief that the first thing you heard Mullins say was: "I admit all that, but I have been struck in the mouth," or something of the sort. Is that right?—He did say that.

19217. That was the first thing you heard him say?—To the best of my recollection.

19218. That was after he had been charged by the Inspector, was it not? That was in answer to the charge being read over to him?—Yes.

19219. You are quite clear that is the time he said it—after the Inspector read the charge over to him of being drunk, disorderly, and using obscene language?—About that time, I think.

19220. His answer was, "I admit all that," and so on. Were you quite close to the Inspector, to Police Constable Morgan, and to the prisoner at this time?—Not quite close.

19221. As far as you are from me—as close as that?—Not so close as that.

19222. Did you not hear Police Constable Morgan telling his story to the Inspector of what had happened outside?—Yes, I heard Morgan tell his story.

19223. And you heard Morgan, of course, come to the end of his story?—I will not be sure about that.

19224. What were you doing at the time when Morgan came to the end of his story, do you think?—I may have been out of the room, I think.

19225. At that time you think you may have been out of the room?—Yes.

19226. But you came back again just as the charge was being read over?—No, I did not. I was there when the charge was being read over.

19227. I thought you told me you might have gone out of the room when Morgan was telling the Inspector what had happened, before the Inspector reduced the charge to writing?—I was in the room then.

19228. Up to the time Morgan finished his story?—Yes.

19229. You heard everything Morgan said, and you heard him come to an end?—Yes.

19229*. But you did not hear Mullins make any answer to that?—Do you mean when the charge was read over?

19230. No, I do not. I mean when Morgan first began telling Inspector Wheeler his story of what had happened in the street, and before the charge was reduced to writing?—I was there at that time.

18231. When Morgan finished his story, did you hear Mullins say anything?—I heard Mullins say, "I admit all that, but he struck me in the mouth in this room."

19232. You heard him say that before the charge was read over to him?—About the time the charge was taken.

19233. You heard him say that when the charge was read over?—When the charge was read over.

19234. Did he say it once or more than once. It is a long sentence—"I admit all that, but this man has struck me in the month." Did he say it more than once?—Once, I think.

19235. Was not the time when he said that, according to you, when the charge was read over to him?—Yes.

19236. I am asking you about the time before the charge was reduced to writing and read over to him. Try and follow me. You were here when Inspector Wheeler gave evidence?—Yes.

19237. We have heard all about what happens when a prisoner is brought in. The first thing the constable does is to tell his story to the Inspector. That is right, is it not?—Yes.

19238. Before the Inspector writes down the charge?—Yes.

19239. I am asking you before the time when the Inspector wrote down the charge. Constable Morgan told his story to the Inspector, did he not?—Yes.

19240. At the end of his story did you not hear Mullins say anything?—Only, "I admit all that, but he struck me in the mouth."

19241. But before the charge, which was reduced to writing, was read over to him. Did he say it before he was charged or after?—When he was charged.

19242. I am asking you about before he was charged. You heard him say nothing before he was charged?—I heard nothing.

19243. You did not hear him say to the Inspector, directly Constable Morgan had finished, "This man has struck me in the mouth since I came in," or "Since I was in this room"?—No.

P.C. C. Hunt.

3 Dec. 1906.

19244. You never heard that?—No.

19245. But you did succeed in hearing these important words about admitting all that?—I heard that.

19245*. Did you look at Mullins' lip?—No, I did not.

19246. Although you knew he charged the constable with striking him?—Yes.

19247. You did not think it was worth while to look to see whether there had been a blow?—I did not look at it.

19248. Did you not look at his face at any time while he was there to see what condition he was in?—Yes, I saw him from the dock; he was standing by the dock.

19249. That was after you had heard it suggested that the constable had struck him?—No, I do not think so.

19250. That was before you had heard anything about his striking him?—Yes.

19251. Did you see anything wrong with his face then?—No, I did not see anything wrong.

19252. Nothing at all—no sign of a blow?—I thought that his lip was a little swollen.

19253. Just think. Are you throwing your memory back? Is that what you recollect at the time? Try and put yourself back in the charge room. Is that what you thought at the time—that his lip was a little swollen?—Yes.

19254. You did notice that?—Yes.

19255. Did you notice any blood on his face?—No, I did not see any blood.

19255*. Not at any time before he was taken to the cell?—No.

19256. What does this report at the police court mean. Let me read to you what you are supposed to have said at the police court. "Charles Hunt"—that is you, is it not?—Yes.

19257. "The prisoner was drunk and excited when he was brought into the station." You say that now?—Yes.

19258. "I saw no violence used"?—Yes.

19259. "I was busy writing"—is that right?—I was writing.

19260. That is true—"I was busy writing"?—Yes.

19261. "There was a little blood on his face"?—I might have said that.

19262. You might have said it?—Probably I did say it.

19263. Is it a fact that your recollection about this is really not very clear?—I do not remember it.

19264. You did not pay much attention to it at the time?—No.

18265. But you recognise it would be a very serious thing for a constable to have struck a prisoner in his charge?—It would be.

19266. Although you heard the charge made at the time, you still did not pay very much attention to it?—No, I did not.

19266*. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You have been asked if you recollect this distinctly. If Morgan had struck this man in the charge room, is that a thing you would have forgotten?—I should not have forgotten it.

19267. (Chairman.) Where is the bench in the charge room?—It is where the words, "Charge room" are.

19268. Will you just mark the bench with a pencil. (The witness marked the plan.) The bench, then, is towards the centre of the room?—Not quite in the centre of the room.

19269. You have put a cross against the words, "Charge room" in the word, "Charge," on the plan?—Yes.

19270. How long is the bench. I do not mean to a few inches, or to a foot, or two?—It is only about 4 ft., I should think, or 3 it., or 3½ ft. in width.

19271. Which is it?—It is about this width (illustrating.)

19272. About 3 ft. wide?—Yes, and about 4 ft. high, I should think.

19273. From the ground?—Yes.

19274. Do you mean from the seat of the bench to the ground?—There is no seat to the bench. It is a desk without a seat; it stands up pretty high.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The Chairman is asking you about the seat that Mullins sat on.

19275. (Chairman.) The seat I am asking you about?—The seat is an ordinary seat, fixed to the walls.

19276. Will you kindly mark where the bench or seat is? (The witness again marked the plan.) I see you put the cross near the wall, between the dock and what I call the desk, and which you originally marked as being the bench?—The bench is where the word "Charge" is, and the seat is where the other cross which I have made is.

19277. How long is the seat?—About 12 ft., I should think.

19277*. Has it got any back to it?—The wall is the back.

19278. Is it fixed against the wall?—Yes.

19279. It runs, then, in the direction of the dock?—Yes.

19280. The two windows of this room are windows opening into the street, are they not. There is no side window, is there?—There is no other window.

19281. The dock is opposite the window?—That is right.

19282. I should like exactly to know where the desk is. There is your mark on the plan, which suggests to me that it is the desk. You put the cross there?—The desk would be about there.

19283. Is it in the centre of the room?—It is not in the centre of the room really.

19284. Is it touching the wall?—No. It is a desk that you can move about to any part of the room you like.

19285. Does it slope—is it a desk for writing at?—Yes.

19286. Which way is it generally put with the slope?—With the slope towards the fireplece.

19287. So that in writing you would have your back to the fireplace?—Yes.

19288. If you were writing there, the seat is also at your back?—Yes, just so.

19289. So that if you were writing at the desk and there was a prisoner sitting on the seat you would not be able to see him?—No.

19290. But a prisoner entering from the lobby in order to get to the seat would have to pass round the desk I take it on one side or the other?—Yes.

19291. Was it while Mr. Mullins was being taken from the entrance door to the seat that you had an opportunity of observing him?—I did look up.

19292. That is all you did then?—At that moment.

19292*. Now will you tell me please where, in the Inspector's office the telephone apparatus is. (The witness again marked the plan.) Am I right in assuming that you had been attending to telephone business that evening?—Just previous to the prisoner coming in.

19293. Then to get to the telephone you have to go through the door of the charge room, into the lobby, from the lobby through another door into the Inspector's office, and make your way to the corner where the telephone apparatus is?—Yes.

19294. But from there you could not see what was taking place in the charge room?—No, certainly not—not of the charge room—you could see a portion.

19295. It would require the two doors to be wide open to see anything at all from the corner, would it not?—Yes. There are glass panels in the doors.

19296. What kind of glass?—Ordinary window glass.

19297. That you could see through quite easily?—Yes.

19298. Does that apply to all the doors here. Does that apply to the doors leading to the cells as well—that they have glass panels in them?—No, I think those two doors.

19299. Have you any recollection at all as to what you were writing when Mullins was brought in?—I think it was a telegram I had just sent, to the best of my recollection.

19300. Why were you writing a telegram you had just sent?—You have to enter them into a book.

19301. In the occurrence book?—In the telegraph book.

19302. We know the time when Mullins was brought to the station. According to the charge sheet the time Mullins was brought to the station was 11.30?—Yes.

19303. Could you tell from the telegraph book what telegrams you sent that evening?—I cannot recollect now.

19304. But you could tell from the book?—Yes, I should think so.

19305. Surely you can tell me that. Do you enter the hour of dispatch in the telegraph book?—Yes.

19306. Then you can say so?—Yes, the time is entered as well.

19307. I suppose you entered the time on this occasion as usual?—Yes.

19308. I suppose this was a telegram sent to another police station, or something to do with official business. Do you write out a form first before you go to the telephone, or do you simply go to the telephone and send the message as one to be forwarded from the exchange by ordinary telegraph?—We have a book to take messages in and to write them down.

19309. Do you write the message before you have been to the apparatus or not?—Not as a rule.

19310. You give your message at the telephone first?—Yes.

19310*. And then you come back to write the message you have sent?—Yes, to write it in the book.

19311. Are you quite certain that it was not after Mullins had come in that you went to the apparatus to send this message?—Yes, quite certain.

19312. Quite certain?—Yes.

19313. Why?—To the best of my recollection.

19314. You said you were certain a moment ago?—I do not remember leaving the room before.

19315. You do not remember leaving the room before Mullins came in? Is that what you mean to say?—It was after the Inspector came out that I left the room to attend to the telegraph.

19316. I understand you were writing a telegram in the book when Mullins came in?—Yes.

19317. I understood from you you had been already to the telephone to dispatch the message?—Yes, before Mullins came in.

19318. I am putting to you, are you quite certain that that is the case?—Yes.

19319. Now why are you quite certain?—I remember going to the telegraph, and then afterwards writing it in the book.

19320. I am asking you about that, because you have been asked about the police court, and your evidence seems to suggest, to my mind, that you were not really attending to Mullins at that time. You say "I saw no violence used. I was busy writing." (No answer.)

19321. The telegraph book is at the police station, I suppose?—Yes.

19322. How many telegrams did you send between 10 and 12 o'clock? Can you recollect that? Was it a busy night?—Not extra busy, I think.

19323. Was the only duty you were discharging on this evening the sending of messages?—Yes, or doing anything that might want doing to the prisoners.

19324. You were to act as gaoler?—I was not really gaoler. I was to attend to anything that wanted doing to the prisoners.

19324*. Had you before that been asked to go to the cells, or to attend to anything in connection with prisoners that evening?—I probably had; I do not remember.

19325. At what time did you go on duty?—10 o'clock.

19326. (Mr. Dickinson.) You remember making this report of yours of the 10th of September?—Yes.

19327. At what time in the day would you make it?—Some time in the evening I think it was, or after I came back from the police court.

19328. At what time was this case heard at the police court?—Between 11 and 12 in the morning.

19329. Then were you asked to make this report?—Yes. 3 Dec. 1906.

19330. Who instructed you to make it?—The Inspector.

19331. Inspector Wheeler?—Yes.

19332. Did he tell you why he wanted the report?—With reference to the complaint alleged.

19333. With reference to the complaint of striking Mullins on the mouth in the charge room?—With reference to the alleged complaint.

19334. I mean that is what you understood?—Yes.

19335. The complaint was that Morgan had struck Mullins in the charge room?—Yes.

19336. In that report you say "Mullins was excited and accused the police constable of striking him on the mouth. I beg to state that I was in the charge-room and did not see any violence used by Morgan." I suppose Inspector Wheeler, when he asked you for this report, said he wanted your report on the question of the assault?—Yes.

19337. Do you remember signing an addition to this report: "With reference to the statement of the prisoner when he was before the magistrate, I beg to state that nothing was said by Mullins at the station of any assault in the street. He did not ask that P.C. Morgan should not take him to the cells." When did you make that addition to the report, or perhaps it was a separate report.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Here is the document. (Handing.)

19338. (Mr. Dickinson.) You wrote out this first report in the evening, you told me. The first part of it you wrote out in the evening?—Yes.

(Chairman.) I expect it was on the morning of the 10th.

19339. (Mr. Dickinson.) I think it was on the evening of the 10th, after the hearing at the police court. Let us get that clear. I asked you just now, and you said you wrote it after you came back from the police court. In this report, which you sign "Charles Hunt," and which is dated the 10th September, you say: "I beg to report that at 11.30 p.m. on the 9th inst., I was present at this station when P.C. Morgan, 383 L, brought George Mullins in on a charge of drunk and disorderly. Mullins was excited and accused the police-constable of striking him on the mouth. I beg to state that I was in the charge-room, and did not see any violence used by Morgan." I want you to tell me exactly what was the time when you wrote that report?—It was some time during the night.

19340. During the night?—The same night that Mullins was charged.

19341. Let us get this right. This report is dated the 10th September. The 9th September was the night Mullins came in and was charged. The 10th September was the day on which he was at the police court. Now, perhaps, you can tell me at what time on the 10th September did you make that report?—I made it out before I went off duty at 6 o'clock.

19341*. You were asked by Inspector Wheeler to do it?—Yes.

19342. Do you know whether at the same time Saunders made his report?—He did.

19343. At the same time?—I believe he did.

19344. Having got that I now want to know when this addition was made. Here is the addition, written at a different time and with rather lighter ink. It is your writing. When was that addition made?—That was after the proceedings in the police court.

19345. But this one was made after the proceedings in the police court?—No, not the first one.

19346. The first one is dated the 10th September. You told me that was made before you went off duty at 6 o'clock on the day on which the police court proceedings took place.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, but that is 6 a.m.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I did not understand that.

(Chairman.) Yes, it is so.

19347. (Mr. Dickinson.) You wrote this before the proceedings at the police court?—Yes.

P.C. O. Hunt.

3 Dec. 1906.

19348. Now I understand it. You wrote it at 6 a.m. on the 10th September—in the morning——

(Chairman.) The first report was made in consequence of the complaint by Mullins that he had been assaulted at the police station. The reports were made at various times on the morning of the 10th.

19349. (Mr. Dickinson.) I did not understand that this was made on the 10th. Now, when was this addition made?—After we came from the police court.

19350. This addition was made in the afternoon—after you returned from the police court?—Yes.

19351. Why did you make that addition?—I was asked by the Inspector to make a report.

19352. Did he ask you to report upon these two subjects. First of all, the assault in the street was not the same assault as the assault in the police station, I take it. You say, "With reference to the statement of the prisoner when he was before the magistrate, I beg to state that nothing was said by Mullins at the station of any assault in the street"?—Yes.

19353. What assault in the street were you referring to then, or thought you were referring to?—The prisoner alleged that Morgan used him roughly in the street.

19354. That is to say, at the police station?—Yes.

19355. You heard him say that?—At the police court.

19356. Inspector Wheeler asked you to give your account of whether Mullins said anything with regard to an assault in the street?—Yes.

19357. Inspector Wheeler asked you about it?—Yes.

19358. And in accordance with his request you wrote this?—Yes.

19359. "He did not ask that P.C. Morgan should not take him to the cells." Why did you write that?—I made the report that the Inspector asked for.

19360. I want to know exactly what did Inspector Wheeler ask you to do?—To say what I knew of it at the station.

19361. To say what you knew of it? Did he, or did he not, ask you to say whether or not he had asked that P.C. Morgan should not take him to the cell? I suppose Inspector Wheeler spoke to you about this matter?—Yes.

19362. And one of the things was that Mullins said he did not want the constable to take him to the cell. I suppose Inspector Wheeler mentioned that to you before you made this report?—No.

19363. It was of your own motion that, that you put in this about his not going to the cell without the Inspector having asked you about it?—Yes.

19364. You mean, I suppose, it was not your suggestion, but it was Inspector Wheeler's suggestion?—No, it was my suggestion; I made the report.

19365. When you made this report did Inspector Wheeler, or did he not, say to you, "Just make a report of what happened," or did he say, "Tell us what happened with regard to this question of going to the cell."?—Yes.

19366. How did he do that?—He said, "Just make a report of what happened."

19367. You told me that Saunders made a report at the same time?—About the same time. He had to do it before he went off duty.

19368. When these reports were made were both of you present?—Yes.

19369. And I suppose Inspector Wheeler spoke to both of you?—He said, "I want a report from each of you before you go off duty."

19370. And you immediately, both of you, sat down to make your reports?—Yes, to the best of my recollection.

19371. I want to know exactly how these reports were made?—Probably we sat down at the table and wrote them out.

19372. You sat down and wrote them out at the same table?—Yes.

19373. And at the same time?—I should not be sure of that; I should say we were about the same time.

19374. Did you see Saunders' report?—No, I did not.

19375. You do not know whether Saunders saw your report?—No, I do not think he did.

19376. Did you have any consultation while you each wrote your reports?—No.

19377. Are you sure?—Yes.

19378. You both made your report absolutely independently of each other. You were sitting at the same table. I want to see what the value of these reports is. You were sitting at the same table. Inspector Wheeler was there at that moment, was he not?—No, he was not.

19379. He had gone away, had he?—He was in his office.

19380. He left you to make your reports?—Yes.

19381. You both sat down to make your reports?—Yes.

19382. Am I suggesting what is inaccurate when I say they were made in consultation?—I do not believe I spoke to Saunders about it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You will notice that they do not begin in the same way.

19383. (Mr. Dickinson.) I was going to read the two. Your report says: "With reference to the statement of the prisoner when he was before the magistrate, I beg to state that nothing was said by Mullins at the station of any assault in the street. He did not ask that P.C. Morgan should not take him to the cells." Saunders' report says: "With reference to the statement made by the prisoner at the hearing of the case at court, I beg to report that Mullins made no complaint at the station respecting the alleged assault in the street, neither did he request that P.C. Morgan should not take him to the cell." You had both been asked by Inspector Wheeler to report upon those two points, I suppose?—I do not remember that. I know I was asked to make a report.

19384. Did you not have some conversation as to the importance of those two points? They were two points that had just been raised before the magistrate, and the idea was that Mullins was inaccurate. Do you mean to tell me that you did not have any conversation about that, either with Inspector Wheeler or with Saunders?—I might have spoken to him with reference to it.

19385. Did you or not?—I do not remember now.

19386. After you left the police-court, had you not been discussing the importance of these two points?—No, I do not think I had.

19387. (Chairman.) How long have you been in the Force?—Just 13½ years.

19388. I want to know whether my impression of your evidence is accurate. I understand that you did notice, when Mullins was placed in the dock, that he had got an injury to the lip?—There was a slight swelling on the lip.

19389. You noticed it, then?—Yes.

19390. That was the first time you had noticed that his lip was swollen?—Yes.

19391. When you were writing at the desk, was Mullins quite quiet after he had passed you? He said he was forced to sit on the bench. Morgan denies that. That was taking place behind your back, if you were writing. Was Mullins talking at all during the time after he came in?—I do not quite remember whether he was or was not.

19392. Was he talking when he came through the door?—No; I did not notice anything being said.

19393. He was coming quietly, then?—Yes.

19394. Does not that strike you as being rather more like a sober man than a drunken man?—No; a drunken person sometimes comes in quietly enough.

19395. When you say Mullins was drunk (you were writing at the desk, you have told us), on what do you form your judgment? It is rather a serious thing to say, especially upon your oath here. It was no business of yours, so far as I can see, to notice whether Mullins was drunk or sober. You were busy at the table, writing?—Yes; but I mean when he was in the dock I noticed him.

19396. But you did not notice when you were writing at the desk, and he simply passed you, whether he was drunk or sober?—No; I do not think I did—not just then.

19397. When did you come to the conclusion that he was drunk?—When he was in the dock.

19398. On what grounds did you come to that conclusion?—By his appearance. He had all the appearances of a man being intoxicated.

19399. What appearance?—He was unsteady on his feet.

19400. Anything else?—His eyes looked rather peculiar.

19401. Those are the two points that struck you?—Yes.

19402. You know as a fact that he was not drunk. You heard what the doctor said?—Yes.

19403. Were you present when the doctor examined him?—Yes.

19404. Then I suppose you are willing to admit that the judgment you formed was wrong?—Well, certainly, in my opinion, I should say he was drunk.

19405. Notwithstanding what the doctor said, and the admission made by Mr. Wheeler, you still stick to the opinion that Mullins was drunk when he was charged?—(No answer.)

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have got the telegram-book here, and may I just explain, in order that you may follow it? There is a telegraph as well as a telephone at the station, and the practice is this: that with regard to the telegraph, there is a slate kept on which the officer immediately writes down either the message he sends or the message he receives; with regard to the telephone, there is a small book kept in which the same thing is done at once, and then, when the opportunity offers, from the slate or the small book it is transferred into that book which is before you, and the time which appears there is not the time at which it is entered in this book, but the time at which the message is either received or sent, as the case may be. The red ink are the telephone messages, and the black ink are the telegraph messages; and if you look you will find that the material ones are that at 11.10 a telephone message was received dealing with the case of a missing child, and at 11.45 a telephone message was sent to the Divisional Surgeon.

P.C. C. Hunt.
3 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. Dickinson.) The officer signing is Inspector Wheeler.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He apparently countersigns it.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Is there any intimation as to who actually did receive the telephone message?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no doubt it was Constable Hunt; but I can ask him. As far as the book is concerned, there is nothing to indicate.

P.C. Charles Hunt (16 LR), recalled.

19406. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Have you looked at the telegraph-book?—Yes.

19407. There are two entries there in red ink—one at 11.10, a message received about a child missing, and at 11.45 a message sent to the Divisional Surgeon. Are those entries in that book in your handwriting?—Yes.

19408. (Chairman.) Was it the former of those two entries that you were busy writing when Mullins came in?—Yes, the 11.10 one.

19409. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You would be writing at the desk into the book what you had already put on the slate previously?—Yes.

19410. (Mr. Dickinson.) Copying it from the slate?—Yes.

19411. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is my mistake—it would be the small book?—Yes.

19412. (Mr. Dickinson.) You would be copying from the small book?—Yes.

19413. Immediately after you had copied it from the book you would take the book back to the telephone?—Not always. I leave it on the desk sometimes.

19414. When did you take the book back to the telephone that night? The book, I suppose, is close to the telephone, so that it can be used at once?—Yes.

19415. When did you take that book back?—It was after the charge was done with, I think, that I took it back.

19416. (Chairman.) You are not sure?—I often leave it on the desk till it is required.

19417. (Mr. Dickinson.) It would be very awkward if the book was not at the telephone if another message came. Anybody who goes to the telephone can at once write down what the message is?—Yes.

19418. Therefore, I suppose, it is important that the book should be back at the telephone always?—Yes, by whoever is going to take the message.

19419. Is it your usual practice to take the book back at once?—No, not at once; I leave it on the desk sometimes.

19420. Then the book might not be on the telephone when it is wanted?—No.

19421. (Chairman.) The entry in this book is "12,698 R.C. to S.S., 11.10 p.m. Missing, Stewart, George, age 5, dress blue sailor dress, white front, blue sailor hat, 'H.M.S. Crescent,' thereon." Is that entry in your handwriting?—Yes.

19422. Is that the entry which you were writing when Mullins was brought into the charge room, according to your recollection?—Yes.

19423. No other entry was made in the book until the entry at 11.45, when there is this message: "Ask doctor to come to K.N.; man denies drunkenness"?—Yes.

19424. Did you make that entry?—Yes.

19425. Was the man referred to Mullins?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Then we need not keep the book.

19426. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are all the calls to the telephone and all the messages from the telephone recorded in this book?—Yes.

19427. So that at this time, between 11.10 and 11.45, there was no call to the telephone at all or to the telegraph. It would appear in the book if there was, would it not?—Quite so.

P.C. Alfred Saunders, 412 L, sworn.

19428. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Were you on duty on the 9th September when P.C. Morgan brought George Mullins into the station?—Yes.

19429 Were you in the charge room?—Yes.

19430. Did you see Inspector Wheeler come into the charge room?—Yes.

19431. Between the time that Morgan entered with his prisoner and the time that the Inspector entered had you left the charge room?—No.

19432. What were you doing at that time?—Nothing in particular.

19433. Is it true that Morgan struck Mullins at all?—No.

19434. Did you hear Mullins make a statement that he had been struck in the mouth?—Yes.

19435. Were you asked a question by the Inspector about that?—Yes, I was asked if that was true.

19436. What did you say?—"No, Sir."

19437. Did the Inspector ask you to make a report?—Afterwards, yes.

P.C. A. Saunders.

19438. When did you make that report?—Before I came off at six in the morning.

19439. Did you attend at the Police Court the same day, when Mullins's case was heard, and did you give evidence?—Yes.

19440. Were you cross-examined?—Yes, by Mullins himself.

19441. Was anything said in the cross-examination (try and remember what it was exactly) by you as to whether it was necessary for the police-constable to hold Mullins on the seat. What was Mullins's question?—The question to me was: "Do you consider any more force was used than necessary," and my answer was "No." Nothing was said about him being hit on the mouth. It was just a question of any more force than necessary.

P.C. A. Saunders. 3 Dec. 1906.

19442. After you had been to the Police Court were you asked to make a report as to some statement that Mullins had made while giving evidence?—Yes.

19443. Who asked you to make the report?—A request came from Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer, I think. I would not be quite sure, but I think so, to the best of my recollection.

19444. Did you make a report accordingly?—Yes.

19445. When Mullins was at the station did he make any complaint of having been assaulted in the street by Morgan?—No.

19446. Did Mullins make any request that P.C. Morgan should not take him to the cells?—No.

19447. (Earl Russell.) You made two reports, besides giving your evidence?—Yes.

19448. Did you make any other written statement about it?—Nothing.

19449. You heard Hunt give evidence?—Yes.

19450. Your reports were made in the same way as his, one before you went off duty at six o'clock, and the other after the hearing at the Police Court?—Yes.

19451. Do you agree with him as to their being made at the same time and practically at the same table?—Yes, about the same time.

19452. And in the same place?—When we made out the second report the former reports were altogether; they were pinned together.

19453. It is the second report I am talking of for the moment?—That is it—consequently we could not both write quite at the same time.

19454. They were made in the same place?—We did not unpin the reports.

19455. You say the reports were pinned together, and the addition was written on without unpinning them?—Yes.

19456. You wrote one and then the other?—Yes.

19457. Immediately after the other?—Yes, as far as our ordinary duties would allow us. We had just come on duty then.

19458. One of you handed the bundle to the other to go on with?—No, the bundle was lying on the table, and we each went to it as opportunity offered.

19459. Never said a word to each other?—No.

19460. Never read each other's reports?—No, it was impossible.

19461. How was that?—Unless we deliberately turned the sheets over to do so. They were pinned together. Both reports were not lying open like that. (Describing.)

19462. It would be quite easy to turn the sheet back?—It would have been.

19463. Then do not say it is impossible. You mean you did not do it?—That is it.

19464. Are you quite sure?—Yes, positive.

19465. What was your duty at the station that night?—I was on reserve duty. My chief duty was gaoler.

19466. Were there many prisoners in the cells?—I cannot recollect. We were not particularly busy that night.

19467. You had been attending to them?—Yes.

19468. Taking them to the cells?—Yes, unless I was otherwise occupied.

19469. And answering their bells, and that sort of thing?—Yes.

19470. They do ring their bells?—Occasionally, yes.

19471. And getting bail for them?—Yes. If there was a telegraph message to go out I should have taken it.

19471*. At the moment Mullins came in you had nothing at all to do?—Beyond attending to him, no.

19472. You were in the charge room waiting for a duty of that sort?—That is it.

19473. Did you take particular notice of him when he came in?—Beyond just taking ordinary notice, no. I did not make an examination of him, if that is what you mean.

19474. No, I mean just what I say. Did you have a good look at him when he was brought in?—An ordinary look at him, yes.

19475. Did you form the opinion before he was charged whether he was drunk or not?—He appeared to be drunk.

19476. But at what time did you form that opinion; was it before the Inspector came in to take the charge, or afterwards?—As it was only about a minute, I would not be quite definite on that point. I formed the opinion when he was in the charge room, anyway before he was taken to the cells.

19477. That was altogether a matter of some ten minutes?—Yes, altogether.

19478. You cannot say whether you came to that conclusion before the Inspector had charged him, or after?—His condition and his actions in the charge room would lead me to form an opinion.

19479. How did he behave as he came in at the door of the charge room?—In the ordinary way. He was brought in by the constable who had hold of him by one hand.

19480. By his neck?—Yes, by the collar of his coat.

19481. Did he come in quietly?—Yes.

19482. No struggling?—No.

19483. No shouting?—No.

19484. No attempt at fighting of any sort?—No.

19485. What was he doing with his hands when he came in?—Nothing particular, that I noticed.

19486. What was the condition of his face when he came in?—I noticed nothing particular about his face. No particular marks.

19487. He was taken to the prisoners' bench?—Yes.

19488. Did he sit down quietly, or did he have to be made to sit down?—He sat down.

19489. Without being made to?—Yes.

19490. Did he try to get up again?—He was a little excited.

19491. Did he try to get up again after he sat down?—To the best of my recollection, yes.

19492. And had to be forced down again?—No, he was told to sit down.

19493. He did it when he was told?—Yes.

19494. Did he make a further attempt to get up?—No, I do not think so.

19495. He only tried once?—That is all.

19496. Was that before the Inspector had taken the charge?—No. It was immediately after he was brought in and sat down.

19497. Before the Inspector took the charge?—Yes.

19498. You say he sat on the bench?—Yes.

19499. And made one attempt to rise, but did not have to be pushed back?—No.

19500. He sat down by himself when he was told?—Yes.

19501. Did he have to be held down afterwards?—No.

19502. Do I understand the explanation you gave my learned friend of this was that you did not say "It was necessary for the police-constable to hold him on the seat"?—No, the question was quite definite, and the answer equally so.

19503. You did not say anything like that?—No.

19504. That is a mistake of the clerk at the police court?—I remember the question put to me, because it was the only one.

19505. You were only asked one question by Mullins in cross-examination?—Yes.

19506. What was that?—"Was any more force than necessary used."

19507. And what did you say?—"No."

19508. Did you see any force used to him at all?—No.

19509. You have not told me of any yet, you know?—No.

19510. You did see any force used to him at all?—No.

19511. That is what you said in your evidence in chief at the police court?—Yes.

19512. "I did not see the police-constable use any violence towards him"?—That is it.

19513. Why did you not answer the question more fully. Why did you not say "Not only not more than necessary, but none at all"?—He did not suggest that there had been any force used that I know of beyond striking him as he came in.

19514. (Mr. Whitmore.) The witness said he gave a distinct answer to a distinct question.

19515. (Earl Russell.) You say the question was this: "Did he use more force than was necessary"?—Yes.

19516. Would it not have been better to have said he used no force at all?—I only answered the question that was put to me. I was not supposed to think what was in the other man's mind. The question was asked, and I answered it.

19517. You think that was a sufficient answer?—Yes.

19518. You gave no assistance to Morgan in dealing with his prisoner?—No.

19519. Did you stand quite close to him and the prisoner all the time?—Yes, when they came first into the room they passed me, and having passed into the room I stood between the desk and the dock.

19520. That would be quite close to him, as close as you are to me?—Yes.

19521. This statement of Mullins you say is incorrect: "Whatever business these other two men were doing one went through one door and one went through the other door"?—That is incorrect.

19522. That did not happen?—No.

19523. Did you have any conversation with the prisoner at all?—No.

19524. Did you hear him say anything before he was charged?—Yes, and when the constable Morgan explained to Inspector Wheeler what had taken place Mullins said "That man"—pointing to Morgan—"has struck me in the mouth in this room."

19525. That was before the charge was written down or read over?—Yes.

19526. Was that the first thing you had heard him say since he came in?—Yes.

19527. This is how you begin your evidence at the police court, "The prisoner was very excited"?—Yes.

19528. Can you tell me what sign of excitement he showed?—He was very restless; these people generally are when they are brought in under such conditions.

19529. You mean the getting up off the seat?—Yes, he wanted to get up and he showed signs of excitement in himself.

19530. In what way?—He was not calm. One is calm in the ordinary way, but he was not.

19531. He was breathing quickly?—He showed signs of excitement in himself.

19532. You cannot tell me any external sign?—He was apparently restraining himself with an effort. He would have got up or behaved in an excitable way, perhaps, if he had been free to do so, but he was told to sit down, and he did so.

19533. That might have been consistent with a man who was very angry?—Well, yes.

19534. As well as with a man who was drunk?—Yes, both.

19535. Do you still think he was drunk when you saw him?—Yes.

19536. You agree with the last witness?—Yes.

19537. Did you observe any signs of drunkenness beyond what you have already told us?—I have not given any signs of drunkenness yet.

19538. You have told us he was excited, and I thought you said that was consistent with his being drunk. Did you observe any other sign of drunkenness about him?—He smelt of drink strongly; his eyes had the appearance of a man who had been drinking, and he was not as steady on his feet as a sober man would be.

19539. What was the appearance about his eyes that suggested he had been drinking?—They were not clear and such as a man's eyes would be if he was quite sober.

19540. Did you notice that before he was charged?—I noticed it while he was in the charge room, but I will not be quite definite as to how many minutes he was there before I noticed it.

19541. But directly he had been charged and taken out of the dock he went straight to the cells?—Yes, and during the time he was in the charge room I formed my opinion.

19542. But you cannot say it was before the Inspector came in or after?—I never had much time to form an opinion before the Inspector came in.

19543. You asked no question of the prisoner?—No, it was not my place to do so.

19544. Did the Inspector ask him for his name and address?—Yes.

19545. To write it on the charge sheet?—Yes.

19546. Did he give his name and address directly?—Yes.

19547. There was no trouble about it?—So far as I can recollect, no. Had the Inspector been longer coming out I should have taken his name and address.

19548. If the Inspector had been longer coming you would have taken his name and address?—Yes.

19549. Why?—I wanted it for my own information, to put it on the slate for our guidance.

19550. You do not mean that you would have charged him?—No, not at all.

19551. Did you, in fact, ask him for his name and address?—No, I did not have any time to.

19552. Not at any time?—No.

19553. Then he did not refuse to give it to you?—No.

19554. You are said at the police court to have stated, "He refused to give me his name"?—To the best of my recollection I did not ask him.

19555. Did you say that at the police court or not?—If it is in the clerk's depositions, yes; I took no copy of what I said. It is some time back now.

19556. You do not think that is incorrect, like the other statement?—No, not if I said it. I will not swear I did not say it.

19557. You think now that you did ask him for his name?—I may have done so; I do not recollect it. I will not swear that I did ask him, anyway.

19558. That is part of the evidence that you gave there on oath at the police court?—Yes. If I did say so, it was correct.

19559. Although you gave it on oath then you have forgotten it now?—I do not remember just that one small point—no.

19560. When did you first notice Mullins's cut lip?—I did not notice it at all. I made no inspection of the man.

19561. You made no inspection of him?—No.

19562. You heard the Inspector say his lip was swollen?—I have heard that.

19563. You did not look at him closely enough to see that for yourself?—No, that was not part of my duty.

19564. Not during the whole time you were in the charge room?—No. The Inspector took the case at once and dealt with him entirely.

19565. At the same time did you look at him closely enough to see if he had a swollen lip?—No.

19566. Or whether there was any blood on his face?—No, I made no examination at all.

19567. Then at what time did you examine him closely enough to observe the condition of his eyes?—That would be ordinary observations during the time he was in the charge room. There is a difference in forming an opinion of a man being drunk and examining him for cuts inside his mouth.

19568. I did not say inside his mouth—I said a swollen lip?—You mentioned the cut.

19569. Do you wish to tell the Commission on oath that you observed the condition of his eyes without making any close examination?—I should have had to have pulled the man's lips down to examine what was inside his lips, but I could have stood some distance from him and observed his eyes.

P.C. A. Saunders.

3 Dec. 1906.

19570. You say there were no external marks whatever of the injury to his lip?—I made no examination of the man. There may have been a swelling, I am not saying there was not; I only say I made no examination of him.

19571. You wish the Commission to believe you could have overlooked the swollen lip, but you did not overlook the eyes?—I heard his complaint; it was not made to me. Those who it was made to dealt with it.

19572. But you were quite close by?—Yes; I am open to admit there was a swelling, but I did not examine him for it.

19573. It did not interest you enough to cast a glance at him to see?—No. A drunken man at Kennington Road Station is no new thing.

19574. Was he holding a handkerchief to his mouth at the time?—I did not observe that he was.

19575. You could not say whether he was or not?—I did not observe that he was.

19576. Was there blood on his face?—I did not notice any—at least I do not think I noticed any.

19577. Was there any there. Surely you can say?—I cannot say that I saw any.

19578. Could you have failed to see it if it had been there?—Possibly I ought to have noticed that.

19579. You mean it might have been there and you did not notice it?—It would have been a very small amount of blood if I did not notice it.

19580. Enough for Hunt to notice it, but not enough for you to notice it?—He went with the man to the cells, and I did not.

19581. And although you could not see his swollen lip or any blood on his face you could see the condition of his eyes?—Yes, you could look at a man and see his returning look easily.

19582. Were you attending to what went on between Mullins and the Inspector the whole time?—In the ordinary way, yes. At the time I did not expect to have to reproduce everything that was said.

19583. You mean you were not paying very much attention?—I paid the ordinary attention as was consistent with my duty.

19584. It was not your duty to attend to a man being charged?—Yes, as gaoler.

19585. Is it your duty to be present when the charge is taken?—If I am at the station, yes.

19586. And to listen to the details of it?—In the ordinary way, yes.

19587. That is the gaoler's duty?—In the ordinary way, yes.

19588. What paragraph in the instructions?—Is that the order?—Yes, to assist in any way.

19589. Therefore you were fulfilling your duty in listening to the man being charged?—Yes.

19590. (Chairman.) When did any Inspector tell you if you were there in the charge room that you were to listen to what the charge was?—That is the general order at our station, that the man who is on second reserve acts as gaoler, and in that capacity he would be present while the prisoner is charged. He would assist in the searching if necessary, and he would conduct him to the cells under the supervision of the officer on duty. That is the understood thing at our station.

19591. (Earl Russell.) After the Inspector had reduced the charge to writing he read it over of course to the prisoner in the ordinary way?—Yes.

19592. What did the prisoner say in reply?—"I admit all that, but he struck me in the mouth."

19593. You heard him say that?—Yes.

19594. You heard him make no other complaint to Morgan?—No.

19595. You did not hear him say anything else about what happened in the street?—No.

19596. The reason you wrote your first report on this was on account of the complaint against Morgan?—Yes, the alleged assault.

19597. Let me read it to you: "I beg to report that I was on reserve duty at Kennington Road Station on the 9th inst. when P.C. 383 Morgan brought in George Mullins on a charge of being drunk and disorderly at 11.30 p.m. On Inspector Wheeler entering the charge room Mullins complained that he had been struck in the mouth by P.C. Morgan at the station." Did he make that complaint immediately Inspector Wheeler entered the charge room?—After the Inspector had asked Morgan for details of his reasons for bringing him in.

19598. Not immediately he entered the charge room?—It followed close on. There was not a break in it at all. Inspector Wheeler came straight in. He asked Morgan for the details, which were given, and Mullins made a complaint to the Inspector. It was just the running order of things.

19599. "P.C. Morgan at the station, but there is no truth in this allegation." Was the reason that you did not mention his swollen lip there that you had not seen it?—I had no occasion to mention it. There was an assault alleged, and I say it was not true, as I have stated there.

19600. You thought that was enough?—Yes, I had but to state what occurred in the charge room.

19601. You were not going to see your superior personally, and this was the report that was going before him as a full report?—Yes, that was going before him to explain whether the assault took place in the charge room or not.

19602. But if you had noticed his lip was not that a thing which ought to have gone in the report?—There was no suggestion that his lip was cut in the charge room.

19603. No suggestion?—No.

19604. He said he had been struck in the mouth, did not he?—Yes.

19605. What was the exact words he used. Did he say Morgan had burst his lip?—No, he said he had been struck in the mouth by this man.

19606. Did he not say it had cut his lip?—I do not remember that he did say so.

19607. Did he not say his mouth was bleeding?—He showed his lips to the Inspector.

19608. With blood on them?—I am not prepared to swear that.

19609. What do you mean when you say that he showed his lips to the Inspector?—After he made the allegation against Morgan he went to his lip like this (describing), and the Inspector went forward and examined it.

19610. But you did not see it?—I did not go and examine it—no, Sir.

19611. Therefore you do not know whether it was bleeding or not?—I would not like to swear whether it was or was not.

19612. Is that why you did not mention it in your report?—The assault was alleged and I say it did not take place. Beyond that I did not see that I had anything to do.

19613. You did not think it necessary to say anything more than that?—No.

19614. Before the Inspector came in you were not, of course, watching Morgan and his prisoner?—I had an eye on them, yes.

19615. But not with the same care as when you were standing by when the charge was being taken?—One has some confidence in one's comrades, and you do not expect that a man is coming in to assault the man in charge for nothing, and it was my duty to take notice of what took place in the charge room.

19616. You recognised it was a very serious charge against Morgan?—Yes, certainly.

19617. Have you talked it over with him since?—No.

19618. Never said a word about it?—Well, in what way do you mean have I talked it over with him?

19619. I mean exactly what I ask you. Have you not talked it over with Morgan since?—Officially, no, Sir.

19620. I did not ask you that?—I have not talked it over with him with the idea of reproducing any evidence.

19621. If you had I should not expect you to admit it, but I ask you have you talked it over with him?

—The whole case has been given some publicity, and one has to hear and see these things.

19622. Did you not talk it over with him the same night it happened?—No, he went out on duty. I was still on reserve and he took up his beat at once.

19623. Was he gone before you put the prisoner in the cells?—I did not put him in the cells.

19624. And was he gone before the prisoner was put in the cells by somebody else?—He should be gone in the ordinary way, but I will not swear he was gone. His duty in the station ended after the charge was read over, and the answer made.

19625. The Inspector and Hunt went off to the cells with the prisoner?—Yes.

19626. And you were left alone with Morgan?—I remained in the charge room—I will not say with Morgan.

18627. You cannot tell us?—No, because Morgan should have gone away. I can remember this much, that he said nothing to me then, because if he had have done I should have remembered it.

19628. He said not a word to you?—No.

19629. Nor since?—He may have said, "What do you think of it?" or made an ordinary casual remark, but as to the talking the case over, no, Sir.

19630. You have never discussed it with him?—There was no need to discuss the case.

19631. (Chairman.) Where were you standing when Mullins arrived with Morgan?—Close to the desk in the charge room.

19632. Which side of the desk?—When he came into the charge room I was standing between that door and the desk, and immediately afterwards I was standing between the desk and the dock.

19633. Between the desk and the dock?—Yes, that would be immediately after he sat down on the seat.

19634. Did you move at all when he came in?—Yes.

19635. Where had you been standing before he came in?—Just as he entered the door I was standing between that door and the desk. He faced me with Morgan, and I shifted my position then and I went over the passage to where he sat down, and I was standing there when the Inspector came in.

19636. And it was then that you had a look at him, I suppose?—I should hardly lose sight of him the whole time.

19637. But you did notice him when he came in?—Yes, an ordinary casual observation, that is all.

19638. You told Lord Russell that you thought he was a little excited?—Yes.

19639. Is that what you tell us now?—Yes. I should not notice the excitement, of course, until he sat down.

19640. When he sat down was he more excited or less excited?—He was just excited.

19641. So that the words, "A little excited" represent really what his condition was, as near as you could tell and recollect. Is that so?—Of course, it would be just a question of degree, but he was excited in the way such people generally are.

19642. Now, that being so, why did you tell the Magistrate that he was very excited?—He was excited.

19643. But I have asked you just now whether the words, "A little excited," represented what his condition was?—I don't think the words, "A little excited," would quite cover it. He was excited, to my mind. He was sufficiently so to justify me in making that assertion at the police court.

19644. Then, he was very excited?—Yes, he apparently only restrained himself by an effort.

19645. If that is so, why did you not tell Lord Russell that he was very excited when he was asking you a few minutes ago?—I led him to believe so at first, but he did not seem quite satisfied with that.

19646. Who?—Lord Russell.

19647. He stopped asking you about it because he was satisfied. Can you give me any explanation of the different use of language to Lord Russell and the language that you used to the Magistrate. Perhaps you can give a reason. What is it?—To the Magistrate I would state the thing as it appeared to me then. Lord Russell would naturally suggest this thing. It is more his suggestion than mine.

19648. You are rather inclined to adopt a suggestion which is made to you?—Not necessarily so, but perhaps Lord Russell is inclined to modify it.

19649. In the police court somebody persuaded you to say, "Very," and now Lord Russell has persuaded you to say "A little." Is that what you mean?—No, not at all. My story at the police court was as outspoken as the thoughts came into my mind respecting the occurrence on the previous night.

19650. The statements might have been what occurred to your mind as being proper to say at the police court, but the question is, were they accurate statements?—Yes.

19651. Did you have any talk with Mullins at all in the charge room?—No, none.

19652. None at all?—No.

19653. You are perfectly certain of that?—Yes, I did not speak to the man.

19654. Did not you ask him for his name?—I don't recollect doing so. I might possibly have done. It is some time back.

19655. If you might have done it, why did you tell me a moment ago that you were certain you had no conversation with him?—Not to discuss the case; I may have said, "What is your name?" but I almost think I misunderstood your question.

19656. I am not persuasive enough?—Not necessarily so, but one can hardly call asking a man's name a conversation.

19657. Very well, I see—that may be so. Did you ask him for his name?—I may have done so, but just at this present moment I cannot swear it. If at the police court I said I did, probably I did. It is some time back now to tax one's memory to every small detail.

19658. I understand that during the interval that took place between the time that Mullins sat on the bench or seat and the coming in of the Inspector you continued to stand in the room?—Yes.

19659. Was it part of your duty to watch what was going on?—Yes.

19660. Why?—Because my chief duty, as I have said, would be to be the gaoler that night. I should stand there ready to see the prisoner to the cell under Mr. Inspector Wheeler's supervision.

19661. Do you assume that everybody who comes into the charge room is going to the cells?—Men generally bring charges in to be taken.

19662. It is possible that a charge might be refused?—Possible, but not probable.

19663. I understand that when you are gaoler, when a man is brought in, you at once begin, as part of your duty as gaoler, to observe him?—In the ordinary way, yes.

19664. Not "in the ordinary way"?—One is prepared to go on with one's duty. When a man is brought in on a charge and you, as a matter of fact, expect he will individually be charged, and go to the cells, you don't want to wait till that before you are prepared to do anything. You are standing ready, and if the charge is taken, you are ready there.

19665. You are ready also in case of need to say what has taken place before the charge?—One would observe that.

19666. We will take it that you were quite rightly doing your duty in an ordinary kind of way?—Yes.

19667. Where were you standing?—Between the dock and the desk.

19668. How far from the fireplace?—4 or 5 ft.

19669. And close to the desk, I think you said?—Yes, there is a table next to the desk, and I should be standing just beyond the table, about a foot or so away from it. If this was the desk here, the table is about that distance, and I was standing here (describing.)

19670. About a yard or so from the desk?—Yes.

19671. And 4 or 5 ft. from the fireplace?—Yes.

19672. There is no doubt about it in your own mind that that is where you were standing?—Yes, I was standing there.

19673. Then I understand until the inspector had come in and you were taking Mullins to the dock you made no kind of personal examination of Mullins except in an ordinary kind of way that you told us you looked at him?—Yes.

P.C. A. Saunders.
3 Dec. 1906.

19674. And you stood during the time that you were waiting for the inspector to come in in the position you have just told me?—Yes. It would all take place in a little under a minute.

19675. Now will you tell me what opportunity you had of smelling Mullins' breath?—I don't think I suggested I did smell it in that minute.

19676. I did not say that. What opportunity did you have until the time I mentioned when you were taking him to the dock of smelling Mullins' breath?—When he was brought in by Morgan. He passed near to me, and while he was in the dock he would be standing close to me facing me.

19677. So that his mere passing by you gave you a sufficient indication of what his breath was to justify your coming to the conclusion he had been drinking heavily?—He smelt strongly of drink.

19678. Then I understand you did not go near enough to him after he had sat down on the bench to smell his breath again?—I did not approach him with that idea at all.

19679. You were several feet away according to this plan of the room if it is drawn according to scale?—I should be rather nearer to him than to the fireplace.

19680. I do not think so from what P.C. Hunt marked?—The seat on which Mullins sat runs from the fireplace to the other wall, and Mullins would be sitting perhaps in the middle of the seat as near as possible.

19681. But you think you were near enough to smell Mullins' breath, then, from the seat?—No, I would not suggest that.

19682. Then why did you?—I understood you to suggest I was some distance from him.

19683. I know, and I was then going to ask you, was not the distance such that you could not smell Mullins' breath from where you were standing, and the moment you saw I was going to ask you that you said that Mullins was nearer to you than the fireplace. Why did you say that?—Just to correct you. You were going to foreshadow that I was some distance away from the man.

19684. Quite. Then am I to understand you were so near to Mullins that while he was sitting down you could get some impression of what his breath was smelling like?—I could have got the impression.

19685. Did you. You told Lord Russell he was smelling of drink strongly?—When I first noticed the smell of drink was when he stood up in the dock—to notice it definitely.

19686. Then you do not rely in that statement on the whiff that came from him as he came in?—No.

19687. Nor upon his sitting down?—Not to make a definite statement—no.

19687*. Where were you standing when he got into the dock?—I had not shifted my position but very little. It is probable that I had to move on one side to allow him to pass.

19688. I do not know that. According to the scale on this plan it would be about 9 feet between the table and the dock?—Hardly as much as that.

19689. Then this scale must be wrong?—It might possibly be that amount, but I should not have thought it.

19690. How far do you say it is?—I was standing from the dock about 3 feet or so after he was put in.

19691. Then you must have moved a good distance forward?—I should step back in this manner (describing). To allow him to go by me, and I might have stepped up, and I should not step back in an exact straight line.

19692. You say you were near enough to him when he was in the dock to smell his breath?—Yes.

19693. Why did you not tell me that at first when I began to ask you about this matter?—I do not quite remember that you put the direct question.

19694. I did. I asked you where you were, and then I said, how do you account if you were there for the fact that you were able to smell his breath. Then you went back and you said you smelt it as he was coming in, and then you explained he was nearer to you than to the fireplace?—I understood you to ask me what opportunity I should have during the time he was there to smell Mullins' breath.

19695. Why did you not say when he was in the dock and only 3 feet from him I smelt it, if that is the case?—That is the case.

19696. Why did you not say so?—I could have made a shorter answer by saying that, certainly.

19697. (Mr. Whitmore.) Do you remember how Mullins was dressed when he came into the station?—except that he had dark clothes on, no.

19698. Did you see any marks of dirt on his clothing?—I did not notice them.

19699. Did you notice what he had on his head?—I did not take particular notice.

19700. (Mr. Dickinson.) I understand that on this night you were the gaoler?—That was my chief duty.

19701. Is that a duty that is taken on by a different man every night?—No; I was posted on reserve duty for that month.

19702. For one month you are posted there as gaoler, and does that mean that you are constantly at the station?—Not necessarily. If a telegraph message is received that has to be taken out I should have taken it. During my absence Hunt would have acted as gaoler.

19703. If you are not out you act as gaoler?—Yes, while I am there.

19704. Tell me exactly what is the duty of the gaoler?—He sees the prisoners to the cells, visits them periodically as is necessary, according to their condition, attend to their wants, answering the ringing of the bells, and of course will report any undue circumstances to his inspector.

19705. What do you mean by seeing the prisoners to the cells. When a prisoner comes in he is charged first of all?—Yes.

19706. It is your duty to be there at that moment?—Yes.

19707-8. What happens then? What do you do when you have to see them to the cells?—You merely go down the cell passage and see that the cell is lighted, and the prisoner walks into the cell.

19709. Does the gaoler take the prisoner to the cells?—Yes, under the supervision of the inspector.

19710. He takes the prisoner to the cells under the supervision of the inspector, and therefore the gaoler is the person who leads him if he must be led?—Unless the inspector would do so. The inspector is directly responsible, and the gaoler is responsible to the inspector.

19711. You were there for a month. Had you taken many prisoners to the cells?—Yes, but I had only been on about a week on this very night.

19712. Do you as a rule take a prisoner to the cells alone?—No. The gaoler would go down the cell passage with a prisoner alone with the exception of the presence of the inspector.

19713. What do you mean alone, except with the presence of the inspector?—The inspector would either come down—Mr. Wheeler invariably comes right down to the very door, and as often as not would bolt one of the bolts.

19714. He invariably goes down?—Yes.

19715. On this night he went down?—I did not go down, but I know he went.

19716. Why did you not go down. You were gaoler?—Yes.

19717. Why did you not go down. It was your duty?—Yes. Hunt and I did the job amicably between us and Hunt went down with Inspector Wheeler. There was no special reason why he should go or not go. He would act as gaoler if I were not there, so we were jointly responsible, and on this occasion he took the responsibility and went down.

19718. What do you mean by jointly responsible. I thought you said you had been by somebody told off on duty as gaoler for the month?—Yes, but should there be any message to go out I should have to take it.

19719. But there was no message going out then?—Not at that moment.

19720. I want to know how it was that Hunt, who was not the gaoler, took this man to the cells?—Because he was doing nothing in particular at that moment.

19721. What were you doing?—I do not know that I was doing anything, but to the best of my recollection I was. One has various duties to perform, and little official duties crop up during the time one is on one's tour of duty.

19722. Is it the usual custom for the gaoler to let other men do the work he is told off to do?—As I said before, we were jointly responsible.

19723. But Hunt was not gaoler?—To a certain extent he was. It was his main duty to attend to the telegraph and telephone. At the same time he was as much responsible for the condition of the prisoners as I was; therefore it was to his interest to be about to see that the prisoners were all right, and he would, if necessary, visit them periodically, the same as I did.

19724. And of course you were there at that station till 6 o'clock the next morning?—Yes.

19725. Is there a constable named Ripping there?—Posted at the station, yes.

19726. Do you remember a notice coming to the police station that the police were wanted at China Walk that night?—Yes.

19727. When did it come?—To the best of my recollection after Mullins had been charged. I will not exactly swear to it, but to the best of my recollection after he had been charged.

19728. About how long after was that?—It would be immediately afterwards; it was close, either just before or just after, but it was close—I can remember.

19729. You were in the charge room, I suppose, when that came?—Yes.

19730. How did that notice come, do you know? There was nobody else to receive it but you?—It came in by a lad to the best of my recollection, and he said the police were in trouble in China Walk and wanted some help.

19731. He said that to you, did he?—Yes.

19732. Did you tell the Inspector that?—Probably I did.

19733. Was Police-constable Ripping there?—His duty was to be on the door. I fully expect he was there.

19734. Is it a fact that Morgan and Ripping were sent off to carry out that duty?—Morgan, I understand went afterwards. Whether he was sent I do not know. I did not give the order, but I knew for a fact that he went, because I saw him at the other station when the charge was eventually taken.

19735. I think you told Lord Russell just now that immediately after the charge was taken Morgan went off on his beat?—I said that he went out, and, to the best of my recollection, that was so.

19736. Now I have reminded you of this episode, what are the facts?—As I just told you, he went out, and my subsequently seeing him at the other station in connection with a charge there makes me positive that he went to the trouble, but I did not hear him ordered to go. He went out. I am not prepared to swear he was not sent there.

19737. Now I want to ask one thing with regard to what was said at the police court. You, first of all, said: "The prisoner was very excited. I did not see the police-constable use any violence towards him"?—Yes.

19738. How did you come to give that answer? Did anybody ask you a question?—I do not recollect that I was asked any questions.

19739. What is the course of procedure there? Did you go into the box?—Yes.

19740. Did the Magistrate ask you anything in the first instance, or the clerk of the court?—You go into the box and are sworn. You give your name and your number, and then you proceed to tell the story. You do not get any questions asked unless the clerk wants to bring any facts out.

19741. Did you volunteer that statement without any question being asked—the prisoner was very excited?—Yes; I may have been interrupted. I do not just remember.

19742. You further answered: "He refused to give me his name." That you also volunteered without any question?—Yes.

19743. You could pretty well say whether it was so or not, now that I have called your attention to the usual practice?—Yes.

19744. Whatever was taken down was taken down as a voluntary statement of yours?—Yes.

19745. Then Mullins asked you if you thought any more violence than was necessary had been used?—After I had given my evidence, yes.

19746. I think you have told us that the answer you gave was that no more violence was used than necessary?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The answer was "No."

19747. (Mr. Dickinson.) We have two answers. What was your answer? What actually happened? What did Mullins ask you, and what did you say?—Mullins put the question to me.

19748. What did Mullins say?—Did I consider any more violence than was necessary was used, and I said "No."

19749. You say Mullins put the question in that form—"Do you think any more violence than was necessary was used?"—Yes.

19750. Can you suggest why he should put the question in that form?—Perhaps it was in his mind. Mind you, I cannot speak for him.

19751. You are denying what is put down by the clerk. The clerk says your answer was: "It was necessary for the police-constable to hold him on the seat?" I presume the question would have been: "Was it necessary for the police-constable to hold him on the seat?" However, you say that question was not asked and that answer was not given?—No; I give the question and the answer as I remember it.

19752. You say he asked: "Was any more violence than was necessary used?"—Yes.

19753. Can you say why he should put the question in that form?—Perhaps in his mind he felt he deserved, or merited, some violence.

19754. He wanted to defend the police-constable?—Not necessarily.

19755. But a person who asks a question like that would be anxious to show there was not more violence used than necessary?—He had already said when he was charged: "I admit all that."

19756. Morgan told the Inspector about the occurrence, and then he was eventually charged. What had Mullins admitted?—That what Police-constable Morgan alleged was correct, except that he had been struck in the face.

19757. He admitted he had been rough in the street, and fighting, and perhaps he would carry that idea in his head, and think he would need some restraining, and that would be the reason he would put the question to me.

19758. (Chairman.) Just consider what Mr. Dickinson has been putting to you. You were cross-examined by Mullins?—Yes.

19759. And the answer that you gave, whatever the question may have been, was this: "It was necessary for the police-constable to hold him on the seat." Did you give that answer?—I do not recollect that at all. The question and answer, to the best of my recollection, were as I have given them to you to-day. Mullins distinctly asked me did I consider any more violence than was necessary was used, and I answered "No."

19760. Then your suggestion is that the clerk, in taking it down, made a mistake in taking down these words?—Yes, of course, there is a possibility.

19761. It seems to me unlikely that he should have made a blunder about so clear a question and answer—"It was necessary for the police-constable to hold him on the seat." Now let me ask you this: The police-constable was Morgan, of course?—Yes, I understand so.

19762. Was Police-constable Morgan in fact holding Mullins on the seat at any time?—No.

19763. You are perfectly clear about that?—He did not hold him there after he sat him down.

19764. Then the meaning of this sentence of yours is still more obscure—"It was necessary for the police-constable to hold him on the seat." You say Police-constable Morgan did not hold him. Therefore it was not necessary?—I do not remember having said that at all. I have given the question and the answer that have remained in my head all the time.

P.C. A. Saunders. 3 Dec. 1906.

19765. I understand you to suggest that the clerk has not taken it down quite correctly. Is that what you suggest?—Yes. I do not remember that question and answer at all. The question and answer are as I have given them to you.

GEORGE SIMS, sworn.

G. Sims.

19766. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you a marine store dealer?—Yes.

19767. I think your shop is at 29, Oakley Street?—Yes.

19768. Do you keep the shop, or is it a relative of yours that the shop belongs to?—I keep the shop.

19769. You are the shopkeeper, are you?—Yes.

19770. Who is Mr. Frederick Sims?—My uncle. He works for me. He is the manager of the shop.

19771. Is your shop near the Duke of Sussex public-house?—Yes.

19772. How far off?—Three doors away.

19773. Do you remember the night of the 9th September, the time when Mullins came and spoke to the constable? Do you remember the incident?—The time, do you mean?

19774. Yes?—I should say it must have been about 11 o'clock, or a few minutes after, or something like that.

19775. What were you doing?—Standing outside talking to my uncle.

19776. As you were talking did the constable come up?—He was standing about three feet away from us.

19777. Just explain that a little bit more. Had you been standing on the pavement longer than he had, or did he come up?—He came up.

19778. You were standing talking to your uncle, and the constable came up?—Not the constable. The constable was standing there when we came out of the Duke of Sussex.

19779. But I thought you came out of your shop?—No.

19780. Were you in the Duke of Sussex up to closing time?—We came out of there a few minutes before they closed.

19781. Did you walk up the road towards your shop?—No; we were outside the private bar there.

19782. You and your uncle?—Yes.

19783. Did you see the constable when you came out of the public-house?—Yes.

19784. Where was he standing then?—Against the saloon bar.

19785. Was he standing by himself?—Yes.

19786. Did you know the constable?—Only by being on duty round there.

19787. Had you spoken to him before, or he to you?—Yes.

19788. You knew him just to pass the time of day to him?—Yes, that is right.

19789. When you came out of the Duke of Sussex, and he was standing there, did you go and speak to him?—We were both standing talking, and we said "Good evening" to him, just passing the time of day.

19790. Was he three feet from you at that time?—Yes—it would be about three feet.

19791. So that, as he was standing there, you just said "Good evening" to him?—Yes.

19792. What did he say to you? Did he say anything?—I do not know that he answered. I could not be sure.

19793. What was the next thing that happened?—Mullins came up.

19794. Where did Mullins come from?—From the Duke of Sussex.

19795. Did you see him come out?—I did not notice him come out.

19796. What did you see him do?—He tapped the constable on the shoulder.

19797. Had the constable got his back to him?—Yes.

19798. Did you hear Mullins say anything?—He said, "At the ear-hole again," or something of that sort.

19799. When Mullins said that what did the constable say?—The constable took no notice of him.

19800. Then what did Mullins do?—I said, "Good-night," and walked away. Mullins went one way and I went the other.

19801. Did you see Mullins go away?—Yes.

19802. Did you speak to Mullins?—I said "Good-night" to him.

19803. Did you know him to speak to?—Yes.

19804. After he touched the constable and said this to him you said "Good-night" to Mullins and went away?—Yes.

19805. You were three feet from the constable then? Were you standing in the same place?—About that.

19806. You say the constable took no notice. Did the constable, so far as you know, hear what was said? Did he appear to hear?—I could not say whether he heard what was said or not.

19807. Did he turn round to speak to him, or did he keep standing in the same position?—I never noticed that.

19808. Should you have seen if the constable had struck Mullins?—There was no blow struck while I was there.

19809. You saw Mullins walk away?—I saw Mullins walk away. He walked one way and I walked the other.

19810. Where did you go to?—I went to the top of the street—Waterloo Road end.

19811-12 That is the opposite way to which Mullins went towards his home?—Yes.

19813. Did you see anything more of Mullins or of the constable that night?—Yes.

19814. Had you seen anything of Mullins in the Duke of Sussex?—Never noticed him.

19815. Was the house full—were there a lot of people there?—I could not say it was full; there were a few people in there.

19816. At the time you heard Mullins make this observation to the constable was the Duke of Sussex closed?—Yes, I think they had just closed.

19817. Are you sure about that?—I think they were closed then.

19818. Were there a good many people standing about at the time?—There were a few people standing about.

19819. So far as you could see the constable paid no attention at all to anything that Mullins said?—No.

19820. I mean he gave no indication to you that he had heard anything?—No.

19821. Were the people who were standing about all talking rather loudly? Was there a good deal of noise?—There was not much noise there.

19822. Was there any noise? Were the people talking loudly?—Some of them that came out of the public-house were talking.

19823. (Earl Russell.) You have known Mullins some little time, have you not?—Yes.

19824. And your uncle knows him too?—Yes.

19825. And you know Mullins' daughter, I suppose?—I cannot say I have ever seen his daughter.

19826. Have you ever set eyes on his daughter?—I have not taken that much notice; I was never in his company.

19827. Do you know Mrs. Mullins?—Yes, I know his wife.

19828. You do not think you know his daughter, Katie Mullins?—No.

19829. You were talking to your uncle at this time?—Yes.

19830. Had he come out of the Duke of Sussex, too?—Yes, with me.

19831. You had both been in there, but you had not noticed Mullins?—No.

19832. But you saw him very soon after you came out?—Yes.

19833. How long before closing-time did you come out of the Duke of Sussex?—I suppose it would be about five minutes or something like that. We came out as soon as they called "Time."

19834. That would be about five minutes to?—Yes.

19835. So that if Mullins had slipped in three or four minutes before closing-time he would not have been there at the same time as you?—No.

19836. You were not having a regular conversation with this constable?—No.

19837. Simply passing the time of day to him?—Yes.

19838. You have a good deal to do with the police in your business of marine store dealers, do you not?—Yes.

19839. Do not they bother you rather?—Sometimes we are loading a van, and the van has to wait till the stuff is ready, and they hurry us on a bit. That is all.

19840. They are apt to put questions as to where old metal comes from, and that sort of thing, are they not?—They are always entered in the book.

19841. I mean you are subject occasionally to having to prove where you get your things from, and that kind of thing. You get visited by the police sometimes, do you not?—Yes.

19842. Did you see a girl with Mullins on this occasion?—I never noticed her.

19843. She might have been there, do you think?—I could not say whether she was or whether she was not.

19844. You saw Mullins go up to the police-constable and tap him on the shoulder?—That is right.

19845. Would this be correct: "I touched the constable on the shoulder." You agree with that?—Yes.

19846. "And I said, what, at the ear-hole again!" You heard him say that?—Yes.

19847. He was, of course, within arm's-length of the constable, and you were three feet away?—About three feet away.

19848. As far as you are from me?—That would not be three feet, would it?

19849. As far as you are from that gentleman writing?—I suppose that would be about it.

19850. Not as close to the constable as Mullins was?—No.

19851. You are quite positive you heard those words?—Yes, I heard those words.

19852. Did you know what they meant?—I could not tell you.

19853. You never heard that expression before?—No.

19854. You have no idea what it means. You cannot say for certain whether the constable turned round or did not turn round when he was spoken to?—No, I did not take that much notice.

19855. Was there another man there with a straw hat, did you notice?—No.

19856. There might have been?—There might have been.

19857. You think at the time this happened the Duke of Sussex had just closed?—Yes, I think it would be closed then.

19858. At the time you saw Mullins come out he would be almost the last out of the house, you think?

19859. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He did not see Mullins come out?—I could not say whether he was the last one out.

19860. (Earl Russell.) Did you see him come out from the Duke of Sussex, or not?—I did not notice him come out.

19861. You did not see him actually come out?—No.

19862. The street was what you would call quiet for closing-time?—There were a few people knocking about.

19863. But before closing-time?—I could not say.

19864. You were not inside actually at closing-time, were you?—No.

19865. You came out of the Duke of Sussex just a few minutes before closing-time, and you went into your shop just a few minutes after closing-time?—I did not go into my shop at all.

19866. Where did you go?—Towards the top of Waterloo Road.

19867. Did you see Mullins fighting anywhere?—I never noticed.

19868. Not at all. Did you see any people fighting in the road at all?—I never noticed any.

19869. After Mullins had spoken to the constable did you watch Mullins till he walked away?—He left at the same time as me.

19870. He left the constable at the same time as you did?—Yes.

19871. You did not walk in the same direction?—No; he went one way, and I went the other.

19872. You saw him go away from the constable?—Yes.

19873. The constable did not try to stop him?—No.

19874. While you were watching the constable and Mullins would it be true to say that the constable stopped Mullins from fighting some man?—I was not watching at all.

19875. But you saw Mullins come up to the constable, and you saw him go away from the constable?—Yes.

19876. During any part of that time was Mullins fighting with anybody?—I did not see him.

19877. Was the policeman separating anybody who were fighting during any part of that time?—Not while I was there.

19878. No such thing as a fight was going on?—Not while I was there.

19879. (Chairman.) When Mullins tapped the policeman on the shoulder were you standing on the pavement or in the road?—On the pavement.

19880. Was the constable standing on the pavement or in the road?—On the pavement.

19881. Was he on the pavement nearer to your shop or nearer to the Duke of Sussex?—Nearer to the Duke of Sussex.

19882. The constable was?—Yes.

19883. Had you passed him on the way from the Duke of Sussex to your shop?—I never went to the shop from the Duke of Sussex.

19884. I know; you said you went to the top of the street. When you came out of the Duke of Sussex you turned towards your shop, I understood?—I might have turned a few feet towards there.

19885. It is also a matter of a few feet, I understand, but you did turn a few feet towards your shop. Was the police-constable when he was tapped on the shoulder nearer your shop or nearer the Duke of Sussex? Nearer the Duke of Sussex.

19886. In which direction did Mullins come?—He came from the Duke of Sussex way.

19887. Was there plenty of light there then?—They turned the lights out. There would not be a lot of light there then.

19888. I understand when Mullins came out of the public-house they were just closing. Do you think the lights were out then?—I would not say they were all out; I did not take that much notice.

19889. It was not so light as it had been?—No.

19890. Is there any lamp-post close by where the constable and you were standing?—No.

19891. Is it possible, do you think, that the police constable might have given Mullins a punch in the ribs without your noticing it?—He never did while I was there.

19892. You do not think he could have done it while you were there?—There was no rowing whatever while I was there. If there was any row it was after I went away.

G. Sims.
3 Dec. 1906.

19893. Then you went up the street, I understand? Yes, to Waterloo Road.

19894. Had Mullins gone when you went away, or did you both go away at the same time?—We went away at the same time.

19895. Did you look back?—No, I did not.

19896. Did you see anything of a man near the constable with a grey dust-coat, or something of that kind, on?—I never noticed him; I did not take that much notice.

19897. Immediately after you left the Duke of Sussex you say there was only the constable, Mullins, your uncle, and yourself there?—There were a few other people outside.

19898. Were they some feet away?—Yes.

19899. (Mr. Dickinson.) You say that you had known the police-constable from his being on duty there?—Yes.

19900. He has been there for some years. How long have you known him?—I did not take that much notice how long he has been there.

19901. For four or five years, or for three or four years, or what?—I never noticed; the last couple of years.

19902. You have spoken to him sometimes. Is that so or not?—Yes, when he has come and worried me about keeping the vans standing outside the shop.

19903. He has been to you about vans standing outside the shop?—Yes.

19904. Sent by the police to remonstrate with you?—No; when he has been on duty.

19905. He has been round to you to say, "You must not have that van so long outside the shop." Is that it?—That is it.

19906. Has that often happened?—Not very often.

19907. Is your van constantly in front of your shop?—No.

19908. Do you remember an Inspector coming to you and asking you about this?—Yes.

19909. Do you know the Inspector?—Not to speak to.

19910. You did not know him before then?—No.

19911. Can you tell me when that was—I could not tell you the date.

19912. The date of this occurrence was the 9th September. Can you tell me on what day he came?—I could not say.

19913. Do you remember signing a statement?—Yes, quite well.

19914. That statement is dated 10th September?—I could not tell you the date.

19915. Just cast your memory back. You did sign a statement?—Yes.

19916. Was not that the day after the occurrence?—I could not say whether it was the day after or a couple of days after. It is some time ago now.

19917. Do you remember a police inspector coming to you—Yes.

19918. In that statement you said, "Good night, and we all separated." What did you mean by saying "We all separated"?—All separated? Not all separated. We never all separated. I went away with my uncle to the top of the street.

19919. I wish you would tell me what you did mean by saying you all separated?—I suppose that means when we left we went away from the Duke of Sussex. I went to the top of the street with my uncle and his wife and my young woman, and then we separated at the top of the street.

19920. You went to the top of the street with your uncle after Mullins had spoken to the policeman?—Yes, and after he had gone away.

19921. Did the policeman go with you then?—No.

19922. What did this Inspector ask you? Try and remember. He came to you. I suppose you did not know him before that moment. What did he say?—He asked me if I knew anything about it.

19923. About what?—As regards any blow struck, or anything of that, and I said, "No, I did not see any blow being struck."

19924. Was that the first he said, "Do you remember anything about a blow being struck"?—I could not say it was the first thing now. I have had a lot of other things to think about, and not only to think of a thing like that. I did not think it concerned me at the time.

19925. Try and cast your memory back?—I could not say.

19926. You remember that he asked you whether you remembered anything about a blow being struck?—Yes.

19927. What was your answer?—I told him no.

19928. Did he mention the names of the people concerned?—I could not exactly say whether he mentioned the names or not.

19929. Try and remember. An inspector comes and asks you about some occurrence in the street?—It is no use my saying anything when I do not remember, is it.

19930. Certainly not, but I want you to try and remember?—I could not say.

19931. Did he mention the name of the constable concerned, or the name of the man who had brought the charge—I think he did, but I would not be sure.

19932. Then I suppose he asked you to make a statement in writing?—That is right.

19933. How was this statement made? Did you write it yourself—No. He asked me some questions and he wrote it down, and I signed it.

19934. Did he ask you whether you saw the constable strike Mullins?—Yes, I think he did.

19935. And you said no?—I said no, there was no blow struck while I was there.

19936. Do you remember a little girl crying?—No, I do not. I never noticed a little girl there. There might have been one there, but I never noticed her.

19937. (Chairman.) I should like the original statement, please. (The statement was handed to the learned Commissioner.) I think you said, in answer to Mr. Dickinson, something about your aunt and a young lady. Where did they join you?—They were standing further up.

19938. They were standing also in the road?—Not in the road.

19939. On the pavement?—On the pavement.

19940. Nearer to the top of the road?—Nearer to the other end, to the Duke of Sussex.

19941. Had you arranged to meet them there, or had you just parted from them—They were waiting for us—for me and my uncle.

19942. Did you know Mullins well enough to call him by his Christian name?—Yes.

19943. My reason for asking that is that before you used the words to which Mr. Dickinson referred, "We all separated," you said in your statement, "I passed on, saying 'Good-night, Copper; good-night, Fred; good-night, George'"?—I never said that.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is not how it is written. "Mullins came up and said something I did not hear, and then passed on, saying, 'Good-night, Copper; good-night, Fred; good-night, George!'"

19944. (Chairman.) Quite right—it was my misreading. "Mullins came up and said something I did not hear, and then passed on, saying, 'Good-night, Copper; good-night, Fred; good-night, George?'" You heard Mullins say that?—Yes, I think he did say that.

19945. (Mr. Dickinson.) He called you George?—Yes.

19946. (Chairman.) Mullins called you George?—Yes.

19947. Had he done that before?—Yes, I think so.

19948. Taking it in that way, what do you mean by saying "We all separated"?—We all separated.

19949. I may be wrong, but, reading this over, I should certainly think that you had been talking together. When a man says that and you do not complain of it, and you say "We all separated," I should infer that you had been all talking together?—No; only saying good-night.

19950. That is your recollection?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The other Sims is here.

(Chairman.) You had better put him in the box.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) If you please.

FREDERICK SIMS, sworn.

19951. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you a marine store dealer?—No; I am manager for my nephew.

19952. You manage a marine store at 29, Oakley-street?—Yes.

19953. You have heard George Sims, who appears to be your nephew, give an account of what occurred on the night f the 9th September?—Yes.

19954. Is that correct, according to your recollection?—I could not tell the date.

19955. Is the account he has given of what took place correct according to your recollection?—Quite right.

19956. (Earl Russell.) Can you remember anything more than he told us?—No; nothing whatever.

19957. You do not remember seeing a little girl there?—No.

19958. Do you know her as Mullins' daughter?—No.

19959. You do not know her by sight?—No; in fact, I do not think the child knows me.

19960. You cannot be sure of that? You are often in the shop, I suppose?—Yes; sometimes I serve 200 or 300 children a day in farthings and ha'porths.

19961. (Chairman.) Do you know the constable at all?—Only by occasionally coming by. I could not say more than what my nephew said.

19962. Did you have a talk with the constable after coming out of the Duke of Sussex that night?—No.

19963. You heard what Mullins said to him?—Quite right.

19964. And are you positive that nothing more passed than that?—Nothing whatever—not in my presence.

19965. (Mr. Dickinson.) I should like to know what your version of the story is. Just tell us, in a very few words?—I cannot tell you any more.

19966. Tell us in your own words?—I think it must have been about two or five minutes to 11 when we came out of the Duke of Sussex. Me and my nephew stood talking together. I did not notice which way the constable came. He might have come on my right or on the left—it happened to be a surprise to me. I think it must have been about a minute to 11 when Mullins came and tapped the constable on the shoulder, and said: "What, at the ear-hole again!" I looked at him, and I said to my nephew, "We had better make a move." He said, "All right." Mr. Mullins said, "Good-night Fred, good-night George, good-night Copper!" Mullins went that way, and we went that way. When we got down to the bottom of the street, me and my nephew parted. I went home with my missis, and he went home with his young woman.

19967. Why did you say to your nephew "We had better make a move"?—There was no occasion for it whatever. I could have stopped for a month, if I had liked.

19968. But why did you say that?—I do not like hanging about the streets as a rule.

19969. This was after you had heard this man, Mullins, say to the constable, "At the ear-hole again"?—Almost at the time it happened.

19970. Are you quite sure you heard that?—Yes.

19971. You heard it?—I am a bit deaf, but I can catch things when I want to.

19972. Did you think the policeman resented it?—No.

19973. You knew what it meant, did you not?—You know, I can think. There are three or four ways of putting it. Some people say "At the tap." There are not many people who do know what it means.

19974. You knew what it meant?—Of course I did, at the time; but I did not take much notice of it. If I had been talking to someone, or to you, and I came and spoke to you two or three times, somebody might come and say: "Pulling his lugs down?"

19975. I suppose it is rather offensive, is it not?—Quite right.

19976. You knew it was offensive?—I should not like a man to say that to me. I should feel inclined to punch him on the nose, if I thought I had any chance of doing it.

19977. But the constable did not do that?—He could not have done, or else he could not have been my temper.

19978. He did not punch him?—Perhaps the constable did not hear him.

19979. You say perhaps the constable did not hear him?—I do not know whether he did or not.

19980. You heard it, although you are rather deaf?—Yes.

19981. Have you any doubt that he must have heard it?—No, I have not.

19982. Of course, you understand what I ask you?—Yes.

19983. When this Inspector came to ask for your statement, does your memory enable you to say on what day it was?—Was it the day after this happened?—It might have been the second or third day; I could not say exactly.

19984. Did he come to your house? Where did this happen?—He came to my house and then he came to the shop, 29, Oakley Street.

19985. Did he find you both there?—No, I was in the shop first, then I went for my nephew.

19986. What happened then?—The Inspector asked me what I knew about the affair that occurred outside the "Duke of Sussex" the other night. I did not understand what he meant at the time. Of course, I gave a statement to the Inspector. He put it down on a piece of paper and I signed my name to it, just like the statement I give to you now.

19987. Did he sit down at your desk and write it?—No, we have not a desk; we have only a scale.

19988. Where was this particular piece of paper written out?—On the left hand of the shop, on a flat scale.

19989. What you said was written down by the Inspector?—Yes.

19990. Did he ask you questions?—No. He asked me one or two questions—what I knew about it—and I told him what I have just told you.

19991. Did he ask you whether you saw Mullins fight with anybody?—Yes, he asked me if I saw any blow struck, and I said no.

19992. Did he ask you whether you saw Mullins fighting anybody?—Yes.

19993. What did you say to that?—No.

19994. You never saw Mullins fighting at all?—No.

19995. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Mr. Cole was the landlord of the "Duke of Sussex" public-house, and you will find his statement on page 13A. The only point of it is that he shook hands with Mullins and his wife.

(Earl Russell.) I talked to George Mullins about that the other day, and he tells me the landlord has reminded him that he did shake hands with him and his wife.

(Chairman.) I do not think it has any important bearing on this case at all.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) With regard to Cameron, he is a witness we should have liked to call, and we have tried to find him, but he has left his address, and the only address we have of him at present is that he is at a stone quarry in Wales. I believe there are several. We are not able to find him at present. That is all the evidence we have to call.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Who was Cameron?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) He was the man who accompanied the constable on the way to the station.

(Chairman.) Police-constable Morgan told us that a man did come up and offer his assistance, and that he walked part of the way to the station with him.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I should like to know what steps have been taken to find him, because I understood from the statement that he was found by reason of the fact that he seemed to officiate a second time in the same capacity.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) On the same night?

(Mr. Dickinson.) Yes.

Sub-divisional Inspector FREDERICK SPENCER, sworn.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.
3 Dec. 1906.

19996. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are Sub-divisional Inspector of the L Division?—Yes.

19997. Did you take a statement from James Cameron, stonemason, of 400, Wandsworth Road, Clapham, on the 11th September last?—I did.

19998. Did he sign it in your presence?—He did.

19999. Last Thursday did you endeavour to find him by means of a police telegram at his address?—I did.

20000. You have there the reply which you got from the police station in answer to your inquiry?—Yes.

20001. The short effect of it is that he has left his address and has now gone to work, it is believed, at a stone quarry in South Wales?—Yes, but the district cannot be ascertained.

20002. The exact address has not been ascertained?—No.

20003. Have you been able to find it?—No, I have not.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I want to ask Inspector Spencer about another thing. You are not going to call him at all about anything else, I suppose?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, his evidence is all hearsay.

20004. (Mr. Dickinson.) You took the statement of the two Sims?—Yes.

20005. What was it made you go to the Sims?—I went in consequence of being in charge of the L Division—Constable Morgan could not leave. I went to the two Sims to ascertain, if possible, what was their view and to get their reports.

20006. I want to know about a little bit earlier than that. How did you know Sims had anything to do with it?—The reports were left to be countersigned after the occurrence in the station.

20007. That is to say, the report of Inspector Wheeler, which is dated 10th September. That you saw at the station on the 10th September after the police court proceedings?—No, before they were left with me in the early morning.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There were two reports of Inspector Wheeler.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I have here a report signed by Inspector Wheeler, and dated 10th September, 1906. That is the second one.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There was one of the 9th.

20008. (Mr. Dickinson.) Yes, but the one of the 9th has not got Inspector Spencer's name on it.

20009. The report with your name on it is dated the 10th September, and that gives an account of what had taken place at the police court, and also an account of the case. This is the report. It is signed by Inspector Wheeler and submitted by you: "I have taken the statements of the two Mr. Sims, who are marine store dealers, at 29, Oakley Street, and they say no fight occurred while they were present. Statements attached." When did you first have anything to do with this case?—I should think now it would be after the police court proceedings.

20010. That is to say, on the day of the police court proceedings?—Yes, I should start making inquiries at once.

20011. Would your attention be called to it by this report?—Yes.

20012. How would this report be the first thing you knew of it?—By the fact of something having occurred at the station by which the conduct of a constable had been called in question.

20013. Would you have had that information before the police court proceedings, or afterwards?—I should have the information that such a thing happened at the station.

20014. And you being responsible would inquire into it?—Yes.

20015. (Chairman.) At what time do you get to the station?—Usually at half-past eight in the morning.

20016. (Mr. Dickinson.) That would be on the morning of the police court proceedings?—Yes, on the Monday morning.

20017. Then on that Monday morning you would have been told all about this?—I expect so. I cannot quite remember now; but I did know all about it.

20018. You knew all about it before it went to the police court?—Yes.

20019. You were not at the police court?—No.

20020. Did you know of it by conversation with Inspector Wheeler?—Probably that would be it. I cannot quite recollect.

20021. Did you see the police-constable at all?—No, not then.

20022. When did you first see him with reference to this matter?—After the police court proceedings.

20023. Was that the first time you heard anything about Sims knowing anything of this case?—Yes.

20024. How did you hear that. Who told you that?—I think it came to my knowledge because of the evidence given at the court.

20025. Then it was not because the police-constable told you of it?—No.

20026. He did not tell you about it?—No.

(Chairman.) Mullins told the story at the police court.

20027. (Mr. Dickinson.) Mullins in his story at the police court had mentioned Sims' name, and so you thought it would be well to make inquiries?—Yes.

20028. Was it your duty to put Morgan under any sort of examination?—My duty was to get from him a full report of all that happened.

20029. Did you get a full report from him?—Only after the police court proceedings. In the first instance he would make a report on the complaint of Mullins by direction of Inspector Wheeler, and then something happened at the police court by which he was further involved, and I should have a further report on that.

20030. Had you seen Morgan's report?—No.

20031. Why not. Surely that was a very important part of your business?—Yes, but in all probability it was so important that it was sent to the Superintendent direct before I got it. I mean the Superintendent was on night duty, and he would probably send it away at six o'clock, when he came. I do not know that he did so, but he may have done.

20032. Let me understand what your position is. You undertook these further inquiries on your own responsibility?—By direction of the Superintendent.

20033. But you went and made these inquiries the very day of the police court hearing?—Yes, the same night.

20034. You went on the evening of the same day?—Yes.

20035. Had you instructions from the Superintendent to do that?—Yes.

20036. By that time were you not aware of any particulars of this case?—Only from what I had seen in the report which had been made in the first instance.

20037. But what reports had been submitted to you?—None whatever.

20038. Then you did it without knowing anything about the matter?—Except what had been said at the police court.

20039. You were not there?—But I was told.

20040. Who told you?—Inspector Wheeler.

20041. Then you had a conversation with Inspector Wheeler?—Yes, after he came back.

20042. Upon that conversation you went to see Sims?—Yes.

20043. Did you discuss with Inspector Wheeler whether you should go and see Sims or not?—No. I was to prove it as far as I possibly could.

20044. In this conversation what was your idea of this case. What was the principal point you had in your mind?—What I wanted to clear up was whether Mullins was struck as alleged by the constable, and in order to do that I thought I ought to see somebody, if I could, who was there and could say anything about it.

20045. Whether Mullins was struck by Morgan as alleged?—Yes, in the street.

20046. Did you know anything from Morgan about there having been a fight in the street?—I heard about it from the report and from the evidence which had been given, that is all.

20047. But you had not heard the evidence?—I heard from Inspector Wheeler.

20048. Then Inspector Wheeler did tell you that part of the case was that Morgan said there had been a fight in the street?—He told me they all saw it.

20049. Did you know then that the story was what we have heard that there was a regular fight—that there were 10 or a dozen people fighting in the street?—Yes, I heard that.

20050. You knew that at the station?—Yes.

20051. Was that the reason why you asked the Sims whether they saw Mullins fighting with anyone?—Yes, I wanted to know whether any fighting at all took place.

20052. You say in this report: "I have taken the statements of the two Mr. Sims, who are marine store dealers at 29, Oakley Street, and they say no fight occurred while they were present." You attached importance to that statement?—Yes.

20053. Why did you attach importance to that statement?—They were the only two persons I could find who had witnessed anything at all, and it was only to them that I had to look to get any information I wanted to get.

20054. They told you there had been no fighting in the street?—They did.

20055. Did not that have a very great effect upon your mind with regard to Morgan's statement? I understood you to say that you understood part of the case was that there had been a regular fight in the street?—Yes.

20056. Quite apart from Mullins?—I think that is further explained by the fact that they went away and that it might have happened after they left.

20057. You say nothing more?—Perhaps it is in their Statements.

20058. In their Statements they said they went away?—Yes.

20059. I am not quite sure that you understand what I want to get from you. You found out from them that there had been no fight in the street of any kind?—So far as they knew, but they impressed me with the idea that they went away, and that something must have happened, and did happen, either after they went away or before they came out of the public-house, if it did happen at all.

20060. Your view was that if it happened at all, it might have happened afterwards?—Yes, or before.

20061. Did you try to get any further evidence about it?—I did. I inquired of the licencee of the public-house, but no one seemed to know who was there.

20062. They could not tell you?—No.

20063. Did you take any steps to ask people in the houses immediately adjoining whether there had been any fight?—Yes. I asked several women living in the neighbourhood, but I could not find anybody who knew anything about it at all.

20064. Their evidence looked as if there had been no fight?—Yes.

20065. When this is sent up to your Superintendent your Superintendent submits something, too, at the end of this report?—Yes.

20066. He submits: "I am unable to complete this inquiry at present, but as far as I can gather there appears little blame, if any, to the constable." Did you say anything about that?—I reported the particulars I obtained, and I was told that Mr. Cameron might know something about it, but when I did see him I found he only arrived on the scene when the man was in custody.

20067. When you sent in this report it goes to the Superintendent?—Yes.

20068. The Superintendent makes some observations upon it. When he did that had he any further information than what you had given to him?—Yes. We had talked it over.

20069. He says, "As far as I can gather, there appears little blame, if any, to the constable"?—Yes.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.
3 Dec. 1906.

20070. (Mr. Whitmore.) What was your view of the whole transaction?—My view was that there had been a fight previous to the alleged assault upon Mullins, but that they had been separated by the constable, and that Mullins came back and tried to renew the fight, that he was then told by the constable to go away, and refused to do so, and furthermore used obscene language; so I gathered.

20071. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where did you get that account from—the account we have now heard?—I got it from the constable's report, and from the evidence at the police court.

(Chairman.) That is Morgan's story.

20072. (Mr. Dickinson.) But I understood you had never had Morgan's story put before you when you went to make these inquiries?—Yes. I understood you to say the first thing in the morning.

20073. You had had the whole story from Morgan after the police court proceedings in the afternoon?—Yes.

20074. And that was the time when he told you about Mullins going away and coming back?—Yes.

20075. (Chairman.) Where was the blame to be attached to the constable, according to your view?—There seemed to be none.

20076. You could find no evidence at all in the neighbourhood that any such fight such as the constable alleged had taken place?—It does not follow from that that it did not take place.

20077. It does not follow, and therefore I should have thought the report would have been this: "I cannot form an opinion about it." Superintendent Noviss says: "As far as I can gather there appears little blame, if any, to the constable." Was there any blame at all, if his story was true?—We could not say positively. He was not to blame then, because we had not seen a witness who apparently was there, but whom we did not discover until afterwards. I had not seen this man Cameron at this time.

20078. Does it not strike you that it was rather premature for Superintendent Noviss or anybody else to form a judgment on the case at that time?—It is usual to send reports forward.

20079. But up to the time you were reporting there had been absolutely no evidence obtained confirming Morgan's statement?—No.

20081. So the matter remained at that time exactly where it was left in the police court?—It did.

20082-3. Do you not think it a little premature to come to any conclusion as to the amount of blame to be attached to the constable, or, indeed, whether there was any blame at all to be attached to him?—The facts have to be brought to the notice of the chief constable, and if they are not completed then he sends the case back for them to be completed.

20084. I want to know what can be the meaning of the words: "There appears little blame if any to the constable." If the constable's story is true he was not to blame at all?—No.

20085. He had to prove it to the magistrate. That is how the matter stood. I do not see how you were in a position to pass any judgment on the matter that afternoon?—They are not my words.

20086. You told Mr. Dickinson that it was you who told Superintendent Noviss, and I understood you to say you agreed with the superintendent's expression?—As far as I had gone I thought no blame was attached to him.

(Mr. Whitmore.) I thought you said you agreed with him.

20087. (Chairman.) That is what I am suggesting?—I did not know what Mr. Cameron had said.

20088. Your view was that if Morgan was speaking the truth there was no blame to be attached to him?—That is so.

20089. You had made inquiries, but you could not get any evidence to confirm his account?—Only Sims's evidence, and they were the only people I could find that were there at all.

20090. That did not confirm it all as regards the fight, which, according to Morgan's statement was the Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.

3 Dec. 1906.

crucial thing?—Yes. They told me that this fight might have taken place, although they did not see it.

20091. Of course it might.

20092. (Mr. Dickinson.) Mullins says that this difficulty arose by reason of his having passed the expression "At the ear-hole." You knew that?—Yes.

20093. Do you also know that the police constable said it had arisen through the fact that Mullins was fighting with a man in the crowd?—Yes.

20094. Those two points were totally inconsistent?—They were.

20095. One was true and the other was false. The decision of the magistrate, so far as it went, went to show that the police constable's version was false?—I think the magistrate was guided by the doctor's certificate; that is my impression.

20096. (Chairman.) It was not a case of drunkenness, but of disorderly conduct and obscene language as well on the charge sheet?—Yes.

20097. That did not dispose of the case I should have thought.

20098. (Mr. Dickinson.) The magistrate said this: He asked Morgan if he desired to ask Mullins any questions, and the constable said, "No, Sir, only I absolutely deny having in any way assaulted him." The magistrate makes a very serious accusation, because he says his story is rather circumstantial as to what took place in the street. The magistrate, with regard to what took place in the street was more inclined, I should gather, to believe Mullins than Morgan?—I think it was unfortunate that the constable did not cross-examine Mullins. That would have altered the appearance of the thing altogether.

(Chairman.) You are now going back to consider whether the proceedings in the police court were conducted as they should have been. That is quite irrelevant to what Mr. Dickinson and I have been asking you now.

20099. (Mr. Dickinson.) If what Morgan was saying was untrue then surely you would not have suggested that he was not to blame. The question is which story was true. If Morgan's story was untrue he would have been to blame?—Quite so.

20100. Then do you not think it wanted more investigation on the part of the police to find out whether it was true or not?—The difficulty was to find out the facts, and the only witnesses we could find were the two Sims's and this man Cameron.

(Chairman.) I cannot see why Superintendent Noviss suggests that there is but little blame, or that the constable is not to blame at all. He cannot have meant that there was but little blame to the constable if the story was untrue.

20101. (Mr. Dickinson.) What are the instructions as regard cases in which a charge is dismissed at the police court? Is there any recognised system by which you inquire into the case at once?—If there is any reflection on a police-constable the case is reported by the inspector on duty at the court, and it is then transmitted to the superintendent concerned who institutes inquiries.

20102. The Superintendent is the person who has to make the inquiry?—Yes, and the Sub-Divisional Inspector is the officer who makes those enquiries.

20103. But in most cases I suppose it would follow the order. The Superintendent and the Sub-Divisional Inspector discuss the matter, and come to a conclusion on whatever information they have got, and send on a report?—Yes.

20104. You made no further attempt to examine Morgan about it at all?—No, I directed him to make a full report of all that took place.

TWENTIETH DAY.

Tuesday, 4th December 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-law).
Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-law), (Secretary.)

Detective-Sergeant William Burrell, sworn.

Detective-Sergeant W. Burrell.
4 Dec. 1906.

20105. (Mr. Muir.) Are you a detective-sergeant of the X Division?—Yes.

20106. You were called as a witness, I think, in the case of Wilson v. Worsley, before his Honor Judge Stonor?—Yes.

20107. For the purpose of proving the number of convictions against the plaintiff?—Yes.

20108. Did you produce a list of such convictions?—Yes.

20109. Which you had compiled by making inquiries from your fellow-officers and getting extracts from police-court books?—Yes.

20110. Have you since endeavoured as far as possible to verify those convictions?—I have.

20111. And also to find out whether there were any others against the same person?—Yes.

20112. Have you compiled that list (handing document to witness)?—Yes.

20113. That list goes back to the year 1882?—To the 24th December, 1882.

20114. What were the first three convictions?—24th December, 1882, 21st February, 1883, 13th May, 1884.

20115. With regard to those, are the police-court books destroyed?—They are, and the registers as well.

20116. How long are they kept?—Twenty years.

20117. So you cannot get any further information with regard to those?—No, I cannot.

20118. Are you able to trace the officers who were concerned in those?—No.

20119. And with regard to those three, the second one is the one of twenty-one days' imprisonment which Wilson disputes?—Yes.

20120. With regard to the others in that list, have you verified them as far as you can?—Yes, I have satisfied myself that the Wilson was identical.

20121. He has got some nickname by which he is known?—Yes; "Chinaman" Wilson.

20122. What is the earliest date of the convictions that you have verified?—Up to just recently, do you mean?

20123. The earliest date?—The 24th December, 1882.

20124. Excluding those first three?—The 28th May, 1890.

20125. From that date down to what date?—The 22nd October this year.

20126. You have verified those convictions as relating to "Chinaman" Wilson, who is the person who was the plaintiff in that action of Wilson v. Worsley?—Yes.

20127. Excluding the first three there is the 28th May, 1890, assaulting P.C. Mason, 10s. or seven days; 25th May, 1893, assaulting Alfred Fontano, 40s. or a month?—That was a private individual.

20128. The 10th October, 1893, 2s. 6d. or three days, for drunkenness; 11th March, 1896, assaulting P.C. Sellers, 20s. or fourteen days. Then there was a charge of assaulting a woman which was dismissed, on the 31st August, 1898. Then the 23rd December, 1902, drunk and disorderly, 4s. or four days; 14th July, 1904, assaulting P.C. Cornish, 20s. or fourteen days. Then the 3rd August, 1904, that was the charge that was dismissed and was the subject of the action?—That is so.

20129. Then the 22nd October, 1906, drunk and using obscene language, 10s. or seven days?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think I ought to mention, Sir, that this witness is only called because we understood you wanted to investigate the circumstances under which the evidence was given in order to see whether or not this man had justification for bringing forward the list of convictions. We understood that that was the reason, otherwise we do not propose to give any evidence in this particular case.

(Chairman.) It was a matter of very great importance, of course, in the trial of the county court action, and the question whether the plaintiff had been previously guilty of assaults and so forth was distinctly relevant to the issue which the learned Judge was trying. The Judge in that case has given his judgment, and this is quite secondary from our point of view, but still we are very glad to have the evidence.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I only want to make plain the reason we have called this witness.

(Chairman.) I am glad the detective-sergeant has been called, because it has made the matter plain to us. There is a statute, is there not, about proving previous convictions?

Detective-Sergeant W. Burrell.

4 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. Muir.) Yes.

(Chairman.) Can you give me a reference to it?

(Mr. Muir.) I will endeavour to give it to you, Sir, in the course of the morning.

20130. (Mr. Dickinson.) None of these convictions were convictions on which terms of imprisonment were given, were they?—No.

(Mr. Muir.) Except the second in the list, which we cannot prove.

(Mr. Dickinson.) That was what the point was in the case. Wilson declared he was accused before the county-court Judge of having been imprisoned, and he said he had never done a day's imprisonment in his life.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He was charged with having been convicted, and, in his mind, there was a distinction between being convicted and being imprisoned, and he was very indignant that anybody should say he had been convicted when he had not been imprisoned. That was his point here, but at the county court he complained that one of those convictions did not refer to him, and we are unable to say it does refer to him, because we are unable to trace from the records the exact particulars of that case, and therefore it must be taken for any material purpose here that it does not refer to him. We are not able to prove it.

(Mr. Dickinson.) We are under a misapprehension I suppose, because I see Mr. Rufus Isaacs asked Wilson this question: "The Wilson who was not you had been convicted several times and had been sentenced to several terms of imprisonment," and Wilson answered, "It was not me." We were under a misapprehension as to what these convictions were.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It was cleared up a little later on which I pointed out that what the man was endeavouring to make clear was that he had never been to prison. That was the point. Now, Sir, if it is convenient to you, I propose to call the witnesses in Baker's case.

(Chairman.) If you please.

(Earl Russell.) I am told that Baker's landlord is here. It was suggested last time that he might be called to speak to Baker's condition as to drunkenness when he came out. He was the man who bailed him.

(Chairman.) We can call him later.

P.C. William Pittuck, 312 F, sworn.

20131. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are a constable, stationed at what station?—Notting Hill.

P.C. W. Pittuck.

20132. Were you on duty on the night of Sunday, the 30th September, in Campden Hill Road, Kensington?—Yes.

20133. Did you notice the man Baker?—Yes.

20134. What time was it when you first saw him?—Just after 11 o'clock—just about 11, when they were turning out of the Windsor Castle.

20135. Where was he when you first saw him?—Coming out of the door.

20136. We have had a plan prepared which may assist the Commissioners. Does that show the position of the Windsor Castle. (Handing a plan to the witness)? Yes.

20137. You have marked there the point where he stood up against the wall and the lamp-post?—Yes.

20138. You told me it was about 11 o'clock. Where was he when you first saw him?—Coming out of the public-house.

20139. Where were you standing then?—On the corner.

20140. That is on the corner of which street?—Peel Street.

20141. After he came out of the public-house what did he do?—Walked along Campden Hill Road, towards Kensington Place.

20142. And then?—Turned the corner, went up against the wall, and started to urinate opposite the lamp-post.

20143. How far would you be from him then?—I followed him close along a few yards behind.

20144. Was there any reason for your following him, or was it just in the ordinary course of your beat?—Just in the ordinary work of my beat.

20145. You walked behind him rather than followed him?—Yes.

20146. Was the place where he went and made water, as you say, close to the lamp?—Quite opposite the lamp-post.

20147. Could people see him and see what he was doing?—Quite easily.

20148. Were there any people about at the time?—Two women and two men standing under the lamp-post and three or four passing by at the top of the road.

20149. When you saw him in this position what did you do?—I walked across the road to him and told him he ought to know better, as there were people about, and he said "What harm am I doing?" I said "Give me your name and address, I shall report you for a summons under the London County Council bye-laws."

20150. Is there a bye-law applicable to this offence?—Yes.

20151. What did he say to that?—He said "I will give you my name and address, what do you want it for?" I said "I have told you what I want it for."

P.C. W. Pittuck.
4 Dec. 1906.

He continued to shout "I will give you my name and address, what do you want it for," and I took him into custody, as several people stopped at the top of the road.

20152. When he shouted in this way "I will give you my name and address, what do you want it for?" did he speak loudly?—Yes, shouted.

20153. Did you notice people stopping?—Yes.

20154. Looking to see what was the matter?—Yes.

20155. Then what did you say to him?—I took him into custody then.

20156. Did you tell him he would have to go to the station?—Yes.

20157. You took him to the station, and you took him into the charge room, I suppose?—Yes.

20158. Who was the Inspector in charge?—Inspector Mason.

20159. Did you tell Inspector Mason what had happened?—Yes.

20160. Did you tell him in substance what you have told the Commissioners now?—Yes.

20161. What charge did you make?—Drunk and disorderly.

20162. Was that the charge entered on the charge sheet?—Yes.

20163. Was it read over to him?—Yes.

20164. What did he say to that?—I do not remember him saying anything.

20165. Did you stay in the charge room after that?—No.

20166. Did you hear anything that took place between him and the Inspector, or did you leave the charge room?—I left the station.

20167. Leaving him with the Inspector?—Yes.

20168. I think you were not the constable who was sent for the doctor?—No.

20169. You had nothing more to do with it until you went to the police court the next day?—That is right.

20170. (Earl Russell.) When you first saw Baker come out of the public-house was there anything in his conduct to attract your attention?—Nothing at all.

20171. He was walking quietly?—He was walking quietly.

20172. You saw this other young man Porter with him, did you?—Yes.

20173. Was he walking quietly too?—Yes.

20174. Were there any signs of drunkenness about him at that time?—Yes, he was staggering all over the path.

21075. Why did you tell me he was walking quietly?—He was walking quietly; he was not making any noise.

20176. But staggering from side to side?—Yes.

20177. Both of them?—No, only one.

20178. Baker?—Yes.

20179. Did he pass you before he came to this wall?—No.

20180. Did you think he was so drunk as scarcely to be able to look after himself?—Not at all.

20181. You did not think that?—No.

20182. Although he was staggering from side to side?—Yes.

20183. You did not think he was likely to want any assistance or cause any disturbance?—He had a friend with him if he wanted any assistance.

20184. You thought Porter would see him home?—Yes.

20185. Was he on the pavement when you saw him or in the roadway?—On the pavement.

20186. Were there many people on the pavement?—No, I do not think there was anyone at all. I do not remember anyone.

20187. No one at all?—Not at all.

20188. How far were you from him when you saw him first?—Four or five yards, I suppose.

20189. As close as that?—Yes.

20190. Then you followed steadily after him?—Yes.

20191. Walking about the same pace?—He may have been going a little quicker than me.

20192. How far from where you saw him first was it to the place where he came to the wall?—Just over 100 yards.

20193. He had to cross the street to get to the wall, did he?—No.

20194. Was it the same side as the pavement?—The same side as the pavement.

20195. When he came to the wall he simply turned his back to the street and faced the wall?—That is right.

20196. Opposite the lamp post on the other side of the road?—Yes.

20197. Might I look at that plan that was handed in, because it may help me to uderstand the position? (Plan handed to learned Counsel.) That is the place where you have put the red cross?—Yes.

20198. The public-house is at the corner of Peel Street, Campden Hill Road?—Yes.

20199. When he came to Kensington Place he turned to his right to turn down Kensington Place?—That is right.

20200. And you turned to your right too?—Yes.

20201. Before you saw him turn to the wall?—No.

20202. Not before that?—No, not before that.

20203. Did you stand at the corner and watch him after he had turned into Kensington Place?—No.

20204. Had he reached the wall and already turned to it and begun operations before you saw him?—Yes.

20205. He was that much in front of you at that corner?—Yes.

20206. Had he been there a minute or two or a minute before you saw him?—I should say he had only just got there.

20207. He gained a bit on you since he left the public-house?—Yes.

20208. Is that a dead wall against which people frequently commit a nuisance at night or not?—I could not say. I have not noticed anyone before.

20209. That was the reason that made you follow him?—I did not follow him.

20210. But when you got to the corner?—I went across to him then.

20211. That is what I am putting to you. The reason that when you got to the corner of Kensington Place you turned down Kensington Place instead of going straight along Campden Hill Road, was what?—That is the end of my beat.

20212. You mean you would have turned down Kensington Place anyhow?—Yes.

20213. It was not anything you saw him doing that made you turn down?—I went straight down to him, but still I should have gone down if he had not been there.

20214. You went straight to him, but you would have gone down anyhow. That is what you say?—Yes.

20215. Did you quicken your pace at all?—No, not at all.

20216. Had he finished by the time you reached him?—I could not say that. He stopped.

20217. Was he filling his pipe when you got to him?—No.

20218. Was he lighting his pipe?—No.

20219. Did he have a pipe in his hand?—Yes, I believe he had.

20220. Are you quite sure he was not filling it?—I did not see him filling it. I saw the pipe in his hand.

20221. Are you quite sure he had not just finished filling it?—I could not say.

20222. You cannot be sure of that?—No.

20223. Did you see him strike a match just before you reached him?—No.

20224. Might he have struck a match?—No.

20225. Are you certain he did not?—Certain.

20226. What was he doing with the pipe in his hand?—I could not say.

20227. Just holding it?—Just holding it in his hand, that is all.

20228. No sign of his being about to light it?—No.

20229. Are you perfectly certain there was not a match-box in his hand?—I could not say.

20230. Where were these people standing that you have told us about?—Four under the lamp-post.

20231. Two women and two men standing under the lamp-post?—Yes.

20232. On the opposite side of Kensington Place?—Yes.

20233. Were they people you had ever seen before—any of them?—There are very often four standing there.

20234. Do you know the two men, for instance, by sight?—I have seen them there before.

20235. Could you find them there again?—I could not say that I could.

20236. Do you know their names?—No, I do not know their names.

20237. But you know them by sight?—I have seen them there before.

20238. If you knew them by sight you would know them if you saw them again?—Yes, I daresay I should.

20239. Where were the three or four that were passing by?—Going up Campden Hill Road.

20240. Not down Kensington Place at all?—Not down Kensington Place.

20241. They were 30 yards from where he was, were they?—No, not so much as that—just going straight across the top of the road.

20242. Your intention when you walked up to him was to summon him for committing a nuisance, I suppose, was it not?—Yes.

20243. That is not an offence which you would arrest for—you would take the name and address and issue a summons?—That is right.

20244. What was the very first thing you said to him?—I told him he ought to know better, with people standing about in the road.

20245. Did you say anything to him about people standing about in the road?—No, I do not know that I did. I said, "You ought to know better."

20246. You said just now you said, "You ought to know better with people standing about in the road." Did you say that to him about people standing about in the road?—No. I said, "You ought to know better."

20247. You were feeling quite friendly to him when you first came up?—Yes, I suppose I was.

20248. No ill-feeling?—Not at all.

20249. He had not given you any trouble or spoken to you or done anything?—No, he was a stranger to me.

20250. And you thought it was part of your duty to ask for his name and address with a view of issuing a summons?—That is right.

20251. Are you quite sure that you did not come up to him and say in a friendly way, "I want your name and address, old cock"?—Quite sure.

20252. Why not?—I am quite sure of that.

20253. Why not? Why should you not have said it?—It is not very proper, for one thing, for a policeman to speak to anyone in the street like that.

20254. Rather free and familiar, but there is no great harm in it, is there?—No, no harm at all.

20255. You are quite sure you did not say that?—Quite sure.

20256. Did you hear him say at the police court that you had said it?—Yes.

20257. Are you sure that he heard you tell him that he ought to know better?—He heard me ask for his name and address, and he ought to have heard the other.

20258. I agree he heard you ask for his name and address, but you are not quite sure that he heard you tell him that he ought to know better?—He must have done.

20259. Are you perfectly certain that he heard you say that at all?—Yes.

20260. Positive?—Yes.

P.C. W. Pittuck. 4 Dec. 1906.

20261. Why are you certain?—Because when I said, "You ought to know better," he said "What harm am I doing?"

20262. Because he answered you?—Yes.

20263. Are you sure he did not say that when you asked for his name and address?—No.

20264. He said, "I will give you my name and address. What do you want it for"?—Yes, I tried to persuade him to give me his name.

20265. From first to last you were talking for a minute or so, or perhaps more?—Yes, I daresay I was.

20266. You could say a good deal in that time?—Yes.

20267. Are you quite sure his saying he had not done any harm did not come later in the conversation?—Yes.

20268. What was the very next thing you said after he said he was doing no harm?—I said, "Give me your name and address; I shall report you."

20269. Did he ask you what you wanted his name and address for?—I told him I should report him for a summons under the London County Council bye-law.

20270. Do you mean you said all that in one single long sentence?—I did.

20271. What—"If you do not give me your name and address, I intend to report you for a summons under the London County Council bye-law"?—That is right.

20272. For making water against the wall?—Yes, that is right.

20273. You said all that straight on end?—I did.

20274. You say he said he would give you his name and address at first?—Yes.

20275. What were his exact words?—He said, "I will give you my name and address; what do you want it for?"

20276. After you had explained to him all about the London County Council bye-law, he asked you what you wanted it for?—Yes, that is right.

20277. Did you tell him then what you wanted it for?—I told him I had already told him.

20278. Did you say, "Never mind what for"?—No.

20279. Nothing of the sort?—I said, "I have already told you what I want it for."

20280. Did you say, "Never mind that now; I want your name and address"?—No.

20281. Did you repeat that you wanted his name and address?—No.

20282. You only said it once?—That is all.

20283. You never asked him for his name and address more than once?—I said, "Are you going to give it to me?" when he shouted, "I will give it to you." I said, "Are you going to give it to me?"

20284. What did he say to that?—"Yes," he said, "I will give it to you; what do you want it for?"

20285. A second time he said that?—He shouted it several times.

20286. Did you each time say to him you wanted his name and address, and repeat it?—No; I asked him what he was going to do.

20287. And what did he do?—He continued the shouting, and I took him into custody.

20288. He continued shouting?—He continued shouting.

20289. What did he continue to shout?—"I will give you my name and address; what do you want it for."

20290. He kept on saying that over and over again?—That is what he said.

20291. And each time he said "What do you want it for," you did not answer him?—Yes, I told him to give it to me if he was going to.

20292. That was your answer, "You can give it to me if you are going to"?—Yes.

20293. He said several times over, "What do you want it for"?—Yes.

20294. Each time he said that you did not answer

P.C. W. Pittuck.

4 Dec. 1906.

him what you wanted it for?—No, I did not. I had told him once.

20295. Did he not tell you he would rather give it to you at the station?—No.

20296. Did you not at the end of a good deal of this conversation say, "Well, if you won't give it to me you will have to come to the station with me"?—Yes, I said, "You will have to come with me."

20297. "If you won't give me your name and address you will have to come with me." Is that what you said?—No.

20298. What are the exact words you said?—I asked him three or four times, and he continued to shout, "I will give it to you;" and I said, "Well, you will have to come with me then."

20299. You meant by "then" "if you do not give me your name and address I shall have to take you to the station." Is that what you meant?—Yes, I took him at the same time as I said that "If you won't give me your name and address, then you will have to come with me."

20300. (Chairman.) You say three or four times now, but you told the learned counsel you only asked him once for his name and address? I asked him several times for it, and I said, "Are you going to give it to me."

20301. (Earl Russell.) What you did say to me a little time ago was that you only once asked him for his name and address in those words?—Yes, actually asked him for his name and address—only once.

20302. Is that what you mean now?—Yes.

20303. But you told the learned Chairman just now you asked him several times for it?—I said, "Are you going to give it to me."

20304. That is what you kept on saying, "Are you going to give it to me"?—"Are you going to give it to me."

20305. Did he at any time refuse to give it to you?—No, he did not refuse to.

20306. You mean he did not refuse in words to give it to you?—No.

20307. He did refuse in fact?—He did.

20308. He did not give it to you?—No.

20309. Although he kept on saying he would?—Yes.

20310. Are you quite sure he never said to you he would give it to you at the station?—No.

20311. Who was the person who first suggested going to the station—you or him?—I did. I took him to the station.

20312. I know you took him there, there is no dispute about that, but I asked you who first suggested going there?—I did.

20313. Because he refused his name and address?—No, because he was shouting.

20314. Because he was shouting "I will give you my name and address"?—Yes.

20315. But after he had done that shouting, if he had given you his name and address would you still have taken him to the station?—He had not finished shouting when I caught hold of him to take him there.

20316. But supposing after he shouted this two or three times, he had then given you his name and address, would you have arrested him?—Not if he had given it to me, no.

20317. Am I not right in saying you ultimately took him to the station because he refused his name and address. That was the real reason?—No, because he was shouting.

20318. Would you have taken him anyhow, even if he had given his name and address?—If he had given it to me he would not have shouted, or would not have continued to shout.

20319. But supposing after he had shouted two or three times he had then given it to you?—I should not have taken him then.

20320. You would not?—No.

20321. Is it not true to say that the real reason you took him to the station ultimately was because he refused his name and address?—No. Because he continued to make the noise; that was the reason I took him.

20322. Did he not tell you he would give it to you at the station?—He never told me so—no.

20323. Did he not say he should prefer giving it to the Inspector at the station?—No; he never said anything to me after I took him into custody.

20324. I did not say after you took him into custody, before you took him into custody?—No.

20325. Did he not say he would rather give it to the Inspector at the station?—No.

20326. Did he tell you that he was perfectly willing to give it to the Inspector at the station?—No.

20327. Did he say anything at all about giving it to the Inspector at the station?—In my hearing he did not.

20328. Not a word?—No.

20329. He never said a word about giving it at the station—not to you?—Not to me; no, Sir.

20330. What was his friend doing all this time?—Standing by the side of me.

20331. Doing nothing?—Doing nothing at all.

20332. Saying nothing?—Saying nothing.

20333. Was he drunk?—No.

20334. Did Baker himself show any signs of drunkenness beyond the shouting while you were there?—Staggering about.

20335. Still staggering?—Yes, still staggering about.

20336. Anything else?—No; only I could smell that he had been drinking.

20337. I did not ask you whether he had been drinking, because it is admitted he had been drinking. I asked you whether he showed any signs of being drunk?—He was staggering about and his breath smelt. He was excited.

20338. Anyone's breath may smell without their being drunk. You say the signs were that he was excited and staggering about?—Yes.

20339. And shouting?—Yes.

20340. Were there any other signs of the excitement beyond the shouting?—No.

20341. Was what he was saying making quite a noise in the street?—Yes.

20342. How many people came round you?—No one actually came round, but people stopped at the top of the road.

20343. People stopped at the top of Kensington Place and looked down?—Yes.

20344. That was 20 or 30 yards away, was it, or more?—Just over 10 yards, I suppose—10 or 15 yards; it may be 20; I will not say for certain.

20345. I think, according to the distance you have given here on this plan, it is 108 yards. Have you measured that, or has someone else measured that?—Someone else has measured that.

20346. You think it is about 20?—I think it is about 20

20347. They did not come nearer than that?—They did not come any nearer.

20348. Did they make any complaint?—No; no one made any complaint to me.

20349. How many people stopped at the top of Kensington Place to look down?—About half a dozen I should think.

20350. Did you know any of them at all?—Not at all.

20351. No one you had ever seen before, to your knowledge?—No; not to my knowledge I had not.

20352. I do not know whether I can really get you to tell me exactly what you took Baker into custody for?—Being drunk and disorderly.

20353. I know what the charge was; but what was the final thing he did in the street that made you decide that you must arrest him?—Shouting.

20354. He had shouted several times before that?—Yes; I asked him to keep quiet, and give me his name and address.

20355. You asked him to keep quiet?—Yes.

20356. You did not tell us that before. When did you ask him to keep quiet?—After he had shouted two or three times.

20357. After you had been with him two or three minutes—about how long before the conversation began?—I could not say. Not many minutes; I suppose it may have been two.

20358. Then you asked him to be quiet?—I told him to be quiet.

20359. What were the exact words you used?—I believe I told him not to get excited. "Don't get excited, and give it to me"—that was it.

20360. Did he say again, "What for"?—He said, "I will give it to you. What do you want it for?" He started to shout again, and I took him into custody.

20361. When you would not tell him again what for?—There was no necessity. He heard the first time.

20362. You would not, as a fact, tell him again what for?—No.

20363. It was because after you told him to be quiet and he shouted again that you took him into custody. Is that the reason?—Yes.

20364. The first time he shouted after you told him to be quiet?—No; I cannot say that was the first time.

20365. He shouted two or three times more?—Yes.

20366. You had not thought of taking him into custody for being drunk before that moment, had you?—No.

20367. Not for being disorderly until he went on shouting?—Not until he made it so that I could.

20368. Did you put your hand on him?—Not previous to taking him into custody I did not.

20369. That is what I mean?—When I took him into custody I did.

20370. What did you say to him when you put your hand on him as you arrested him?—"You will come to the station with me now."

20371. You said "You will come to the station with me now"?—Yes.

20372. You did not tell him then that you were going to charge him with being drunk and disorderly?—No.

20373. The only conversation you had with him up to the time you put your hand on him was about his name and address, was it not?—That is right.

20374. Did you have any conversation with him on the way to the station?—No.

20375. Not a word?—I think I told him to put his pipe out. He had his pipe in his mouth, and I told him to take it out of his mouth. He wanted to light it if I remember rightly.

20376. Was it not alight?—I do not think it was.

20377. He had it in his mouth?—He had it in his mouth.

20378. And he wanted to light it?—I think that was it. I would not say for certain.

20379. You would not let him do that because he was in custody?—That is right.

20380. There was no other conversation between you on the way to the station?—No.

20381. When you got to the station you found the inspector there did not you—Inspector Mason?—Yes.

20382. Did Porter come to the station door with you?—He may have been behind me, I could not say, I did not see him.

20383. You took no notice of Porter?—No.

20384. You have no complaint to make of his conduct?—No.

20385. You took him straight into the charge room?—Yes.

20386. And put him in the dock?—Yes.

20387. Where was the Inspector?—I could not say exactly where he was. He was in the charge room at the time; I think he had just come up out of the cell passage, if I remember rightly.

20388. So you put your man straight in the dock without waiting?—Yes.

20389. Did the Inspector come up to the charge desk?—Yes.

20390. You told him what was the matter?—Yes.

20391. What did you tell him?—I told him the facts of the case, what I had seen this man do, and that I had asked him for his name and address, and he was shouting, and I took him into custody.

20392. You told him that you thought it was a proper case for a summons, and you wanted to get his name and address with a view to a summons. Did you tell him that?—I told him I asked Baker for his name and address.

20393. With a view to a summons. He understood that, I suppose?—Yes, he understood that certainly.

20394. Then what did you tell him happened?—I told him that he shouted and I took him into custody.

20395. Is that all you told the Inspector?—I charged him with being drunk and disorderly to the Inspector, and then I told him what had happened previous, and what he had done.

20396. You told him what first attracted your attention to him?—Yes.

20397. I understand that. There is no dispute about that, and you told him you charged him with being drunk and disorderly?—Yes.

20398. But the usual rule is for you to give the Inspector an account of what shows the disorder?—Yes, that is right.

20399. What account did you give him. You simply said he shouted?—I told him what he was doing, and he shouted when I asked him for his name.

20400. Did you tell him what he shouted?—Yes.

20401. What words did you tell the Inspector he used?—"I will give you my name and address—what do you want it for?"

20402. Did you tell the Inspector that you told him when you first went up what you wanted it for?—Yes.

20403. You told him that you said that long sentence about the bye-law?—Yes, that is right.

20404. Did you tell him that when he kept on saying "What for?" afterwards, you refused to tell him again?—No, I don't know that I did.

20405. You did not tell the Inspector that?—No.

20406. What did you tell the Inspector about his being drunk?—I told him that I had seen him coming along the road staggering about.

20407. You told him you had seen him staggering about before you walked up to him?—Yes.

(Chairman.) This is the first time I have heard of that.

(Earl Russell.) I think this witness said when he came out of the public-house at the corner he noticed him staggering.

(Chairman.) "He turned the corner to Kensington Place."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He said that, I am sure.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Not before he came out—he did not say he had been staggering before he came up to him.

(Witness.) On leaving the public-house.

(Mr. Dickinson.) That is the first time he has said that on leaving the public-house Baker was staggering.

(Chairman.) He used the words "I saw nothing particular about him."

(Mr. Dickinson.) He said he was staggering when he went with him after he had taken him into custody. He said he was staggering all the way, but now he says when he saw him leave the public-house he was staggering.

(Earl Russell.) I asked him whether he noticed anything when Baker left the public-house, and he said he noticed him staggering then.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We are agreed about that, I think.

(Mr. Whitmore.) You had better put the question to him again.

20408. (Earl Russell.) The Commissioners want to know when you first noticed that Baker was staggering?—When he started walking away from the public-house.

20409. What is the name of the public-house?—The Windsor Castle.

20410. That was when you first noticed he was staggering?—Yes.

20411. Did you tell that to the Inspector was what I was asking you?—I don't know whether I did or not.

P.C. W. Pittuck. 4 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I understood you to say "Yes," just now.

(Earl Russell.) He said he did mention this when I asked him what he told the Inspector.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I think he said he told the Inspector.

(Earl Russell.) Yes, he did say so.

20412. (Mr. Dickinson.) What is the truth—did you or did you not?—Yes, I told the Inspector when I first saw him and the facts of the case right through.

20413. (Earl Russell.) That is not quite the question, when you first saw him. What I asked you was whether you had told the Inspector that when you saw him first as he came out of the public-house he was staggering?—Yes.

20414. You did tell the Inspector that?—Yes.

20415. Did you tell the Inspector he was staggering during the time you were talking to him in Kensington Place?—Yes.

20416. Are you sure?—Yes.

20417. Did you tell the Inspector that a crowd assembled?—No.

20418. Did you tell him anything at all about other people in the street?—I told him the people crossing the top of the road stopped, and that the four were there.

20419. The four under the lamp-post?—Yes.

20420. But that was not what you took him into custody for?—No.

20421. That would have been very proper evidence on a prosecution under the bye-laws?—Yes.

20422. All that had passed before you came up to him had nothing to do with your taking him into custody according to you?—No, not at all.

20423. Did you tell the Inspector about the people standing at the top of Kensington Place?—Yes.

20424. What did you tell him about that?—I told him about half a dozen stopped along the top of Kensington Place.

20425. Did you say anything at all to the Inspector about his giving his name and address at the station or anything of that sort?—No.

(Chairman.) I do not quite follow this cross-examination, because I understood Baker to say that the constable simply charged him with being drunk and disorderly. That is what he said in his examination-in-chief to you?

(Earl Russell.) Yes.

(Chairman.) You are putting a series of questions to the police-constable suggesting that all these things were said to the Inspector in charge, and that a complete statement was made by the police-constable to the Inspector in charge.

(Earl Russell.) I am asking the constable what he said to the Inspector in charge in order to test that by what the Inspector's account is of what was said to him.

(Chairman.) It seems to me you have succeeded in showing that your witness Baker has given a different account entirely, and you are rather discrediting his statement.

(Earl Russell.) I have not got the print of what he said before me, but I think he agrees that what he said was that Baker was taken up and charged with being drunk and disorderly.

(Chairman.) I do not want to stop you, I only want to be able to follow your line of cross-examination.

(Earl Russell.) I am trying to get this man's recollection of what occurred in the station so as to compare it with what the Inspector says when he is called.

(Chairman.) He has given a very different account of it to that which Baker gave.

(Earl Russell.) On the whole incident do you mean or of what took place in the station?

(Chairman.) Of what took place in the station. Are you suggesting that Baker wishes to amend his statement?

20426. (Earl Russell.) No, but I hardly expected the constable to give the same account as Baker. I am simply trying to follow these details. (To the Witness.) Then the Inspector reduced the charge to writing?—Yes.

20427. And read it over to Baker?—Yes, that is so.

20428. Who else was in the charge room at the time?—The reserve man and one police-constable in plain clothes.

20429. How many men altogether?—Five.

20430. Altogether?—Yes.

20431. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Including Baker?—No, without Baker.

20432. (Earl Russell.) How many besides Baker and the Inspector and you? That is what I want to get at?—Two others. There was the reserve man and a police-constable in plain clothes.

20433. What were their names?—Hillier and Price.

20434. They were in the charge-room at the time?—Yes.

20435. Were they close to the charging desk, or did they take any part in the charging at all?—They were not taking any part in it. Price had put a prisoner in the cells, and I think P.C. 139 Hillier assisted him with the charge previous.

20436. Had they come back from the charge-room to their duty?—Yes.

20437. Just got back?—Just got back.

20438. And they were not attending to the charging that was going on?—No.

20439. Before the charge was read over to Baker you had to sign the book, had you not?—No—after.

20440. What did Baker say when the charge was read over to him?—Nothing.

20441. Nothing at all?—Nothing at all.

20442. Did he not say to the Inspector, "Are you going to take a charge like that—the constable has brought me here so that I should leave my name and address"?—No.

20443. Nothing of the sort?—Nothing of the sort.

20444. Did he say anything at all about being willing to give his name and address at the station?—I don't remember that he did.

20445. You do not remember that he did not?—No. I don't remember him saying anything at all.

20446. He made no answer to the charge?—He made no answer to the charge—that I am certain of.

20447. You mean by that he said nothing when it was read over to him?—Yes.

20448. That you are quite sure of?—Yes.

20449. Nothing at all?—Nothing at all.

20450. Did he say anything when he was brought into the charge room and before the charge was read over to him?—He did say something, but I could not tell you what it was.

20451. Who did he say it to?—The Inspector, I believe.

20452. I suggest to you that what he said was: "Are you going to take this charge? This constable has brought me here so that I may leave my name and address"?—I could not say what it was; I don't remember it.

20453. Did you hear him tell the Inspector that he was not drunk and he was not disorderly?—No.

20454. He never denied the charge at all?—He did not deny the charge.

20455. You heard him say nothing except this one thing to the Inspector which you could not catch?—That is right.

20456. That is your idea?—Yes.

20457. I want to be quite clear about that. From the time you brought him into the police station up to the time you saw the last of him, he did not say anything that you heard?—Not that I heard.

20458. You are quite sure?—Quite sure.

20459. Did you go on duty again at once?—Yes.

20460. You know nothing about what happened afterwards in the station?—No.

20461. Was it the next day that he was charged before Mr. Garrett?—Yes.

20462. And you gave evidence there?—Yes.

20463. Did you tell the Magistrate then what you have told us?—Yes.

20464. Did you tell him about his shouting?—Yes.

20465. And about the people being at the top of the street?—Yes.

20466. Did you tell the Magistrate he caused a crowd to assemble?—No.

20467. What did you tell him about people coming round when he shouted?—There was no one came round at all.

20468. About the people coming?—Stopping at the top of the road. There was no one came down Kensington Place at all.

20469. Did you tell the Magistrate that perhaps half a dozen people stopped 20 yards away at the top of the road?—Yes.

20470. That was what you told him?—Yes.

20471. Did you tell him that Baker was making a disturbance?—Yes.

20472. By shouting or in any other way?—By shouting.

20473. Did you tell the Magistrate you had noticed him staggering?—I cannot say that I did. I told him he was drunk.

20474. You just simply told him he was drunk and nothing else?—Yes.

20475. You did not tell the Magistrate anything about his staggering?—No, I said he was drunk and shouting.

20476. Did you tell the Magistrate that he kept on saying he would give his name and address, but did not do it?—No.

20477. Did you tell him he ever refused his name and address?—No.

20478. Just tell me what this means, which is in the clerk's notes at the police court. This is what you say in cross-examination: "Defendant had a friend with him. I asked him for his name and address, and he refused to give it"?—He shouted several times that he would give it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He said that too about the shouting.

(Earl Russell.) Yes, that is later.

(Witness.) He did practically refuse. He did not say he would not give it, but he did refuse to a certain extent.

20479. (Earl Russell.) Did you tell the Magistrate, in answer to that question, that he did refuse to give his name and address?—No.

20480. Then you cannot explain hod that gets upon the notes?—No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Surely he did refuse it, because it is Baker's own case that he refused.

(Earl Russell.) And the constable has told us that he did not.

(Witness.) He did not refuse. He kept saying he would give it.

20481. I was simply asking you to explain this—"and he refused to give it." You cannot give us any further explanation?—No.

20482. Did you tell the Magistrate you arrested him because of the disturbance, and not because he refused to give his name and address?—Certainly.

20483. Did you say you would not have arrested him if he had given his name and address?—Certainly I did.

20484. You told him that?—Yes.

20485. Is this correct, then—"I asked him for his name and address, and he refused to give it. If he had, there would have been no occasion to arrest him"?—That is quite right.

20486. That is perfectly true?—Yes.

20487. (Chairman.) Just think. He had been drunk and disorderly according to your statement, and if so you were bound to arrest him?—If he had given his name and address he would not have been disorderly. It was the shouting.

20488. (Earl Russell.) Did you make any report on this case?—No.

20489. No report at all?—No report at all.

20490. The Magistrate, Mr. Garrett, heard everything you had to say, did not he?—Yes.

20491. Did he say at the end of the case that there was no evidence that Baker was drunk and disorderly?—No.

20492. He did not say that?—No, he discharged the case—that was all.

20493. He made no observation at all?—No.

20494. But he did, in fact, discharge him?—He did discharge him, yes.

20495. You are sometimes a little unfortunate in your prosecutions, are not you?—No.

20496. Did you not give very important evidence in a prosecution against a public-house, the Hereford Hotel, in Gloucester Road, Kensington?—Yes.

20497. Evidence about betting?—Yes.

20498. That case was dismissed in the end, was it not?—Yes.

20499. You were the principal witness, were not you?—No.

20500. You were not the principal witness?—No. I was one of the two.

20501. Will you tell me if this is the case or not—you were a little behind Baker and his friends when they came out of the Windsor Castle?—All the way, yes.

20502. Is it not the fact that before they reached Kensington Place you passed them?—No.

20503. And turned down Kensington Place first as far as the corner and then came back again?—No.

20504. You never did pass them?—No.

20505. Did you cross over the road to come up to Baker?—Yes.

20506. From where the lamp post is?—Yes.

20507. Which way had you been walking down Kensington Place?—Down to the right.

20508. Away from Campden Hill Road?—Yes, on the left hand side of the road. I was on the top.

20509. Look at that plan. To get on to the pavement where the lamp post is in Kensington Place you would have to walk over the top of Kensington Place going down there?—That is right.

20510. I want to know why, if directly you turned the corner you saw this going on with Baker, and the dead wall, why you did not walk down the same pavement he was on?—There is no pavement that side of the road. We cross the road and walk down the pavement.

20511. I asked you that question at the beginning, and you told me there was a pavement alongside the dead wall?—Along the top, but not down this side. Along the Campden Hill Road there is a pavement, but not down here.

20512. I asked you particularly whether there was a pavement at the place where Baker was standing at this dead wall?—No.

20513. You now say there was no pavement there?—There is no pavement there. There is only the kerbstone.

20514. So that Baker was on the side of the road opposite to the pavement?—Yes.

20515. And you say that you saw him directly you turned the corner from Campden Hill Road?—Yes.

20516. Why did you not walk straight down the road to him? Why did you cross over to the pavement where the lamp post is and then cross back again?—I could not say at all.

20517. You cannot explain that?—No.

20518. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know what the particulars are about this public-house case that has been spoken about, but until Earl Russell asked you the question has anybody complained of your conduct in that case up to this moment?—No, Sir.

20519. Was that a case in which you had to keep observation on a public-house or something of that kind?—Yes.

20520. Were you doing it by instructions of your superior officer?—Yes.

20521. You said that if Baker had given his name and address there would have been no disorder?—Yes.

20522. Just explain what you mean about that. In your opinion what did the disorder consist of?—The shouting.

P.C. W. Pittuck. 4 Dec. 1906.

20523. And if he had given his name and address in the first instance there would have been no shouting?—No.

20524. Because if he had given his name and address there would have been an end of the matter?—Yes.

20525. So that when you say if he had given his name and address in the first instance there would have been no disorder you mean if he had given his name and address in the first instance, there would have been no shouting, and the matter would have ended?—That is right, Sir.

20526. (Chairman.) As I understand this case, whether the man Baker was staggering or not after leaving the public-house, his condition was not such that you would have interfered with him if nothing further had happened in your sight?—Yes.

20527. Then you, going along your beat in the ordinary and proper way, turned into Kensington Place?—Yes.

20528. And there you saw Baker making water against the wall?—That is right.

20529. Up to that time he had done nothing, except that, which justified your touching him?—No.

20530. I understand that you thought you were justified in taking his name and address because he had committed an offence against a bye-law of the County Council?—Yes.

20531. Had you been instructed that you had power to ask the name and address of people who in your opinion are infringing the bye-law of the County Council?—Yes.

20532. Where did you get that instruction?—In the Police Orders.

20533. Which Police Orders? Perhaps you can assist me, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I will try to do so, Sir.

(Chairman.) The general law, as I understand it, is this, that where offences against the Police Acts are committed in view of a constable the constable has the right to ask for the name and address.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I will find that out, Sir.

(Chairman.) That is offences against the Police Acts.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I assume there are some means of enforcing a County Council bye-law, and if you could not ask for the man's name and address you could not enforce it.

20534. (Chairman.) The constable refers to his instructions. (To the witness.) Where are those instructions?—In the Police Orders.

20535. Do you mean by the Police Orders this white book?—No, not that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We will send for a copy if there are any, but it may be verbal. The Inspector will tell you about it, because he would know more about it than this witness. This is an extract from the Police Orders: "London County Council bye-law, No. 9, dated 20/3/00, made under the provision of the Act 51 and 52 Victoria, Chapter 41, Public Decency." I need not read the bye-law. Then "General Orders, page 593, and instruction book pages—so and so—"There is no power of arrest without warrant under the bye-laws, but any breach of the same is to be observed by police, the names and addresses of offenders obtained, and, where necessary, application made for authority to proceed by summons, care being exercised that police have satisfactory evidence in all those cases in which it is requisite to prove serious nuisance, or the annoyance or disturbance of any person."

(Chairman.) That does not carry it much further.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is in the white book, pages 425 and 426: County Council and Municipal Bye-laws: "There is no power of arrest without warrant under the bye-laws, but any breach of the same is to be observed by police, the names and addresses of offenders obtained, and, where necessary, application made for authority to proceed by summons," and so on. That is a correct copy that I read you a moment ago from this Regulation No. 102.

(Chairman.) The names and addresses of offenders are to be obtained. What I want to know is where is the statutory duty cast on the person who is accused of having committed an offence against a bye-law to give his name and address?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You asked me for the Police Instructions.

(Chairman.) I said I was satisfied as far as the police constable was concerned with the police instructions, but I said that would not carry it far enough.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know whether there is statutory authority to ask a man for his name and address in the street, but I will see if I can find anything. As far as the policeman is concerned that is his justification.

20536. (Chairman.) Then you thought that under what Mr. Bankes has read from those Police Instructions you were authorised and justified in asking Baker for his name and address?—Yes.

20537. Then I take it that if he had given his name and address right off there would have been no arrest, and none of this bother would have arisen?—Not at all.

20538. And I also take the effect of your evidence to be that beyond shouting there was nothing disorderly in Baker's conduct?—No.

20539. He did not try to strike you?—Not at all.

20540. Or to strike anybody else?—No.

20541. He came quietly to the police station?—Yes.

20542. Did you tell the Inspector in charge the story that you have told us this morning in substance?—Yes.

20543. And did you tell the story in the same way to the Police Magistrate?—Yes.

20544. Are you certain about that?—Yes.

20545. Observe what I say—did you tell the Magistrate the same story as you have told us to-day?—Yes.

20546. Did you tell it in as much detail?—No.

20547. What did you tell the Magistrate? How did you begin your evidence?—I told him I was on duty when I saw the prisoner urinating in Kensington Place—the prisoner, who was drunk, I should have said. I asked him for his name and address, and he shouted several times, "Yes, I will give you my name and address—what do you want it for?" and I took him into custody.

20548. Then you accept the account which the clerk wrote down at the police court: "About 11.15 p.m., on the 30th September, I was on duty in Kensington Place. The defendant was drunk, and urinating in the road"?—That is right.

20549. You said that?—Yes.

20550. You told me a moment ago he was urinating in Kensington Place?—In the road in Kensington Place.

20551. You are certain you said in the road?—Yes.

20552. Do not you think that was calculated to produce a false impression when you put the word "drunk" before it—drunk and urinating in the road?—No.

20553. Do you think that is a fair way of stating the effect of what took place?—Yes.

20554. Do not you think that if you said that to almost anybody, apart from his being a Magistrate, that he would have thought the case was one of Mr. Baker staggering about in the centre of the road, not on the side or on the pavement, and making water?—No.

20555. You do not think so?—No.

20556. Baker went up to this dead wall, did he not, and turned his back upon the people?—Yes.

20557. If there were any people?—Yes.

20558. And did he not light his pipe before you came up to him?—No, I did not see him.

20559. Are you prepared to contradict him upon oath upon that?—Yes.

20560. I suggest to you that the way you told the story to the Magistrate was not at all fair to Baker. You still think it was?—Yes, just the facts of the case—that is all.

20561. No, because you have not told the detailed facts. This is a very general statement that you made to the Magistrate. Did the Magistrate ask you any further questions?—I don't remember that he did.

20562. What did you say to the Inspector? Did you tell the Inspector all the details of the case?—I cannot say that I said as much as I said this morning, but still I told him the facts of the case.

20563. You told the Inspector that the first thing you had said to Baker was not "You are behaving in a drunk and disorderly way," but "I want your name and address"?—That is right.

20564. And you wanted his name and address because you thought he had been guilty of an offence against the County Council bye-law?—That is quite right.

20565. You are certain you told the Inspector that?—Yes.

20566. (Mr. Dickinson.) When did you first think he was drunk?—I thought he was drunk when he began to walk.

20567. You concluded that you had a drunken man in front of you?—He was staggering all over the path. I did not take much notice of him in the first instance, as he was going quietly.

20568. He staggered when he went with you. How long did that staggering last?—All the way.

20569. I suppose in your mind it is essential to make good a charge like this that a man is drunk?—I do not know.

20570. The fact that he is drunk and disorderly?—Yes.

20571. If you had not thought he was drunk, and he had only shouted, and had refused to give you his name and address, would you have taken him up?—Yes.

20572. You would?—Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Mr. Eldon Bankes, there is no offence of disorderly apart from drunk, is there?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, of disorderly conduct in the streets—in a public place.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Where is that?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I will find that for you. Of course it is not in the police orders. It is a statutory authority for doing that. This man was purporting to deal with this case as a case of drunkenness.

20573. (Mr. Dickinson.) That I quite understand. When you saw him making water you thought he was not then drunk, I suppose?—Yes.

20574. Did you see any other drunken people coming out of the public-house?—No.

20575. You have said that if he had not refused his name and address you would not have taken him up?—No.

20576. Because he would not have been disorderly?—Quite right.

20577. His drunkenness on that occasion was not sufficient for you to have taken him up?—He was not drunk and incapable.

20578. Apart from disorderly?—No.

20579. You say there were four people standing by the lamp?—Yes.

20580. And other people in the road?—Yes. When the people standing under the lamp-post saw what he was doing they walked away to the top of the road as I walked down.

20581. As you walked from Campden Hill Road down this road they walked away. Did they pass you?—Yes; as I got to the lamp-post they looked across at him and looked to me and walked away.

20582. I understand at that moment, when he was actually making water, there was nobody by the lamp-post?—Yes.

20583. I thought you said as you walked up they walked away?—Yes. As I walked down they looked at me, and looked across the road at me, and walked away.

20584. None of these people who saw this disorder came up to you?—No.

20585. They did not crowd round you at all?—Not at all.

20586. It is rather an exception when you are taking up a drunken man not to have a crowd round you?—It is a very quiet place, and there were very few people about.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Section 7 of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1829, says: "It shall be lawful for any man belonging to the said Police Force during the time of his being on duty to apprehend all loose, idle, and disorderly persons whom he shall find disturbing the public peace." Then there is Sub-section 13 of Section 54 of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, which says: "Every person who shall use any threatening, abusive, or insulting words or behaviour with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, or whereby a breach of the peace may be occasioned, may be arrested." Then there is Section 64 of the same Act, which says: "It shall be lawful for any constable belonging to the Metropolitan Police to take into custody without warrant all loose, idle, and disorderly persons whom he shall find disturbing the public peace."

(Chairman.) Those sections do not apply to this case. The drunk and disorderly charge must have been made, I think, from the form of it, under the Licensing Act and other sections.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. I was only referring to that because Mr. Dickinson asked for the reference.

(Chairman.) There are some Sections in this Act of Parliament which justify a constable taking into custody a man who refuses to give his name and address. I think it is when committing an offence against the Police Act.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I know there are provisions of that kind justifying an arrest for refusing to give his name and address.

(Chairman.) If the constable is also prepared to prove that there was some offence against the Police Act.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes; but the question you put to me just now is rather different, because you asked me whether there was statutory authority to ask a man for his name and address. What a constable does is this: He is told to obtain his name and address. He is not told to arrest the man if he does not give it. Whether it is under statutory authority to ask a man for his name and address any more than you pass the time of day in the street I do not know.

(Chairman.) Supposing I am walking up St. James's Street; no constable has a right to come up and say to me, "Give me your name and address, Sir." I should say, "I will not give it."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Then there would be an end of it.

(Chairman.) Then there would be an end of it, except that I might possibly bring an action against him for something or other in that case. It seems that the refusal to give the name and address to a constable is an offence in some cases.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I do not quite understand Regulations 186 and 187 on page 249 of the White Book. What does Regulation 186 refer to? It says: "Every person taken into custody by any constable without warrant, except persons detained for the mere purpose of ascertaining their name or residence." Section 187 says: "The exception of persons detained for the mere purpose of ascertaining their name and residence refers to the power to take persons into custody who commit offences against the Police Act within view of the constable, and whose name and residence are unknown to such constable."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You will find very useful references at the end of those Directions. You will see the first regulation you read refers to Section 69. Section 69 says this: "Every person taken into custody by any constable belonging to the Metropolitan Police without warrant, except persons detained for the mere purpose of ascertaining their name or residence, shall be forthwith delivered into the custody of the constable," and so forth. I must look for the case in which a person may be detained for the purpose of ascertaining his name and address.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Regulation 187 goes on to say: "It is important to bear this in mind, as there is no general power to arrest or detain for the purpose of compelling names and addresses to be given. There must be express authority for the purpose."

(Chairman.) The point in my mind is that the defendant Baker, apart from the question of drunkenness, was not committing any offence against the police. He was committing an offence against the County Council's bye-laws, if it be an offence. I do not know

P.C. W. Pittuck. 4 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) My attention is called to the Licensing Act, 1872. That will give you an instance. Section 25 of that Act provides that "Any constable may demand the name and address of any person found on any premises during the period which they are required by the provisions of this Act to be closed, and if he has reasonable ground to suppose that the name or address given is false, may require evidence of the correctness of such name and address, and may, if such person fail upon such demand to give his name or address or such evidence, apprehend him without warrant."

(Chairman.) Quite. That is a very well-known instance of the power, but I cannot recollect any general power, except some power to ask for the name and address where an offence against the Police Act is being committed. That is rather a matter of law. We will thrash it out.

(Earl Russell.) You were good enough to say that I might interpose Baker's landlord, who is anxious to be released.

(Chairman.) Very well.

Mr. JOHN WALTON, sworn.

Mr. J Walton.

20587. (Earl Russell.) What is your address?—53, Dartmoor Street.

20588. Is Mr. Baker a tenant of yours?—Yes.

20589. On this particular night were you sent for to bail him out at the police station?—Yes.

20590. You went?—Yes.

20591. At what time did you bail him out?—I think I got there about a quarter to 12.

20592. He went back home with you?—Afterwards, yes.

20593. You went first to see a doctor, did you, or something?—I had to wait some time while they were seeing about the doctor coming.

20594. When did you first see Mr. Baker that night?—Previously?

20595. No, when you went to bail him out. Did you see him before 12?—Yes, I saw him when he came up with the Inspector.

20596. What was his condition then as to sobriety?—Sober.

20597. Do you know of your own knowledge when he left your house that day?—Yes, I think about quarter to 10 when he went out the same evening.

20598. Was there any special reason that you know of for his staying in that night instead of going out?—He looked in the door to say he was going to the doctor's about one of his children being ill.

20599. Are you able to say yourself what he had to drink in the house? Do you know that at all?—Nothing at all to my knowledge. He does not live with me; he is in apartments.

20600. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you know him quite well?—Yes.

20601. I think your name is Walton, is it not?—Yes.

20602. Can you tell me about the time when you got to the police station?—About quarter to 12, I should think.

20603. Was it a little time before you saw Baker?—Yes, five or six minutes.

20604. You were asked to wait a little time?—Yes.

20605. Because there was some question about the doctor coming?—Yes.

20606. So you sat down and waited?—I stood up, I think.

20607. Then after a few minutes Baker came into the room, did he not, with the Inspector?—Yes.

20608. Then did Baker seem rather excited?—I did not notice it. He seemed annoyed at being locked up.

20609. Did he say he refused to be bailed when he saw you?—He told me he should like to see his own doctor.

20610. Did he say he would not go out on bail?—He would have to see his own doctor.

20611. Did he say he would not go until the doctor came?—I cannot say.

20612. I will try and remind you. Did you then try and reason with him, and did you say, "Don't be silly, accept my bail, and come home"? Did you say that to him?—I told him to go away and not to have an altercation with the Inspector, because the constable had already given in the charge. I said, "You are doing no good talking to him."

20613. Did you not tell him not to be silly?—I cannot say I did.

20614. And I suppose you cannot say you did not?—I cannot say.

20615. You tried to reason with him, and to persuade him to go away with you?—I told him he had better come away; it was no good talking there because the constable had already given him the charge.

20616. You could not persuade him, could you, to come with you?—I did not try to persuade him.

20617. Did he say "If you bail me out I shall not go to the police court"?—I do not remember.

20618. Then did the Inspector say, "Well, if you do not intend to turn up you ought not to ask this gentleman to be bail for you"?—It is some time ago. I do not remember that.

20619. You did not persuade Baker to come with you? Did you wait at the police station?—I went outside and waited, expecting the doctor would see him, and that he would come away.

20620. How long did you wait?—I cannot say, but over half an hour, I think.

20621. Then did you go in again?—I went to inquire whether he was there or not.

20622. What did they tell you?—I do not know what it was.

20623. Had he then gone?—I asked if he had gone. They said no.

20624. Then did you go out again?—Yes, I went out.

20625. What did you do then?—I walked about to keep myself warm.

20626. Then did you go in a second time?—I waited at the door till he came out.

20627. You waited at the door, and ultimately he came out?—Yes.

Inspector ARTHUR MASON, sworn.

Inspector A. Mason.

20628. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you an Inspector attached to the Notting Hill Police Station?—Yes.

20629. Were you in charge of the station on that Sunday night when Pittuck brought in Baker?—Yes.

20630. I think he brought him in and put him straight into the dock?—No, I think not—not straight into the dock. I believe at the time there was another prisoner about to be removed. A charge was brought in about ten minutes earlier, and I think that prisoner had not been quite finished with, but it was only for a minute or so.

20631. Mr. Baker went into the dock very shortly after?—Very shortly.

20632. What did the constable say to you when giving the charge?—I asked him the nature of the charge. He said drunk and disorderly in Kensington Place. I said, "What was the disorder?"

20633. You said that to the constable?—Yes.

20634. What did he say?—He said, "I saw him urinating by the wall near a lamp-post. Two females were passing at the time; there were some more standing there. I crossed the road and asked for his name and address to report him for a summons. He commenced shouting, 'My name and address? Oh, yes. I will give you my name and address. What do you want it for?' This he repeated several times, and as he would not be quiet and give me his name and address I took him into custody."

20635. (Chairman.) That is a full account of what the constable said to you, is it?—That is so, as far as I can remember.

20636. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What was the next thing that happened?—I said to Mr. Baker, "Do you hear what the constable says?" He replied, "Yes, I know I was urinating against the wall, but I refused to give him my name and address because I did not consider I was doing any harm."

20637. What did you say then?—I said, "He also alleges you are drunk. I am of the same opinion. Would you like to see a doctor?"

20638. What did he say to that?—He replied, "I am not drunk. I do not want to see any doctor."

20639. Then did you enter the charge?—Yes, I then entered the charge.

20640. Did you read it over to him in the usual way?—Yes, and he made no reply.

20641. He made no reply at that time?—No.

20642. But he had told you he was not drunk?—Yes, he had previously stated it so.

20643. What opinion did you form with regard to his condition?—The opinion that I formed then was that he was drunk, and I am still of the same opinion.

20644. What made you think so?—By the look of his eyes, he could not walk straight, and he talked thick.

20645. After you have entered the charge did you accompany him down to the cells?—Yes.

20646. Or did you take him down yourself?—I accompanied him down. Police-constable Price took him down, and I accompanied him. When he had been placed in the cell I spoke to him on the question of bail, and asked him if he would like to be bailed out, and if he had anyone to send to. He referred me to his landlord, Mr. Walton the last witness.

20647. Did he say anything at that time in the cell about a doctor?—No, nothing whatever at that time.

20648. Then I think you left him in the cell?—Yes.

20649. And you sent for Mr. Walton?—Yes.

20650. Shortly after did Mr. Walton come round?—Yes. About quarter past 12 he arrived.

20651. Then was Baker sent for?—Yes. I filled up the form in the bail-book, and sent the constable down to the cell to fetch Mr. Baker up.

20652. Who fetched him up, do you remember?—Police-constable Price.

20653. When Baker came up, was he brought into the charge room?—Into the Inspector's office, where I had the book.

20654. Was Mr. Walton in there?—Yes.

20655. Just tell us what took place there?—When he came in, and I told him Mr. Walton was about to bail him, he said, "I am not going to be bailed until I have seen a doctor." I told him he could see a doctor if he wished. Mr. Walton argued with him a bit, and he suggested that he should accept the bail then, and go out, but he still replied "No, I am not going until I have seen a doctor," and he said "I want to see a doctor of my own." I informed him that he could do so, but I should also call in the Divisional Surgeon in the interests of the police.

20656. Did Baker give you the name of the doctor he wanted?—Yes, he gave me the name of Dr. Barrett, of 5, Bedford Gardens. I explained to Mr. Baker that only one fee was allowed for calling in doctors, and that if he called in a private doctor he would have to pay his fee. He replied that he was willing to do so.

20657. Is that all that took place then?—Yes. He was then placed back in the cell again.

20658. And Mr. Walton went out, did he?—Yes, Mr. Walton left the station.

20659. Did you send for Dr. Barrett?—Yes, I sent Police-constable Hillier 139, a man who was off duty in the section house, as there was no one else available. I wrote on a piece of paper the name of Mr. Baker, that he was charged with being drunk and disorderly, and that he wished to see him. I told the constable to explain that the police could not pay his fee. When doctors are called in they look to the police to pay them.

Inspector A. Mason.

4 Dec. 1906.

20660. It is the ordinary practice, is it, if you are not going to pay the doctor's fee, to tell him so before he comes?—Yes.

20661. How long was Hillier away?—I should think he would be about half an hour; it is three-quarters of a mile from the station.

20662. Did he come back and report that Dr. Barrett was not at home?—That is so.

20663. Did you immediately tell Baker?—Yes, I told Baker that Dr. Barrett was not in. He then asked that Dr. Bagram, of 1, Pembridge Gardens, should be sent for.

20664. And did you at once send Hillier for him?—Yes, I sent the same constable with the same message.

20665. Had he still the same piece of paper with him, or did you write a fresh one?—No, he had the same piece of paper.

20666. How long was he away on that occasion?—I should think about twenty minutes.

20667. What report did he bring back?—That Dr. Bagram refused to come.

20668. Did you at once inform Baker of that?—Yes, I informed him of that, and he then asked that Dr. Lee, of Holland Park Avenue, should be sent for.

20669. What did you say to that?—I said it would be better if he accepted Mr. Walton's bail, and go out and see a doctor himself, and to this he agreed.

20670. In the meanwhile had the Divisional Surgeon been?—Yes, another officer came to the station, and I sent him for the Divisional Surgeon.

20671. When did he arrive?—He arrived about a quarter to one.

20672. That was Dr. Jackson?—Dr. Jackson.

20673. At what point was that—whilst Hillier was out for the second doctor?—No, for the first one.

20674. Had Dr. Jackson examined Baker?—Yes, he had examined him. He asked that he might examine him at the station when he got there.

20675. I ought to have taken it in chronological order. You sent Hillier for the first doctor?—Yes.

20676. Whilst he was out, Dr. Jackson, whom you had sent for, came?—Yes.

20677. Just tell us what happened with regard to Dr. Jackson. Did he go and see Baker at once?—Yes, Baker was brought into the charge room, and the doctor there examined him.

20678. Was that done with Baker's assent? Did Baker assent to being examined?—He did not object to it; he did not raise any objection.

20679. He knew who the gentleman was?—I believe so. I heard him later on call him Mr. Jackson.

20680. I mean he told us he knew him at any rate by sight and by reputation. Dr. Jackson examined him in the charge room?—Yes.

20681. Did Dr. Jackson give a certificate?—He entered it in the occurrence book.

20682. Here it is: "James Baker; recovering from drink, 12.30.—Jackson."

(Earl Russell.) Dr. Jackson is going to be called, I suppose.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, because I have a certificate that he cannot come, as he is ill. I have the doctor's certificate.

(Chairman.) If necessary we can summon him. We quite accept that statement.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have the doctor's certificate here, and I will tender it if necessary. I would not have read it if I had thought Earl Russell would have objected.

(Chairman.) We should have asked for it on another ground. That is entered in the occurrence book in accordance with instructions, you say?

20683. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, this was entered in the doctor's handwriting—"Recovering from drink." Was Baker told what the doctor had said?—No, I think not, not at that time. The doctor did not say anything to him. He said to me, "Very well, he can go back again."

Inspector A. Mason.

4 Dec. 1906.

20684. Baker's attitude was that he wanted his own man?—Yes.

20685. Was he sent back to wait till his own man came?—Yes.

20686. Now we can go back to the point when you said the second doctor said he could not come, and that the best thing he could do would be to accept the bail and see a doctor when he went out. Did he agree to do that?—Yes.

20687. He was bailed out at 1.20?—Yes, and Mr. Walton was the surety.

20688. Then he left the station and went away?—That is so.

20689. Baker said that when he got into the station he said to you, "Are you going to take a charge like that?" Did he say that?—No.

20690. Did he tell you that the constable brought him there with the intention of his giving his name and address?—No.

20691. Did he keep knocking at the door?—No; there was a bell in the cell.

20692. He does not suggest that he rang the bell. Would it be possible for anyone to hear if he knocked at the door?—Quite.

20693. At any rate, nobody in the station heard any knocking?—No.

20694. And the bell was not rung?—No.

20695. He said this: "I kept knocking at the door, as I could not make anybody hear. In a few minutes he came and said, 'Your bail is here.' Then I was brought out into the charge room. When I knew the charge, I said 'I will see a doctor before I go.' The Inspector said, 'You can see one outside.' I said, 'I will have one fetched here.' They put me back in the cell. (Q.) Although your bail was there you said that? (A.) Yes, my bail was there then." Did you say anything about his seeing a doctor outside until the last occasion after you had failed to get the two doctors?—I think not; I am almost sure I did not, but I will not swear to it.

20696. (Earl Russell.) There was a great deal of difficulty about these doctors, was there not?—Yes, there was some difficulty.

20697. It did happen that by a series of unfortunate incidents the only doctor he saw was the police doctor?—Yes, that is so. The police made every endeavour for him to see a private doctor.

20698. On the piece of paper that you gave Hillier in order to give these messages was his name written down correctly?—Yes.

20699. You wrote it down yourself, did you?—Yes.

20700. It is correct on the charge sheet?—Yes.

20701. Do you understand how it came to be given incorrectly to Dr. Bagram?—No; I cannot say at all.

20702. You know that is the reason he did not come?—I have heard so, but I cannot say that it is correct.

20703. I understood you to say almost in the last answer you gave my learned friend that you do not think you said anything about going out himself to see a private doctor until after you had sent for these two?—I think not. I will not swear to it. I do not remember. Several weeks have now elapsed.

20704. Just think of your account of what happened. Walton comes there ready to bail him?—Yes.

20705. You do not want to keep the man, but you want to get rid of him?—Exactly.

20706. He says he wants to see a private doctor. It is a certain amount of trouble for you to send for a private doctor?—It is no trouble; it is my duty.

20707. Would it not have been the simplest thing to say "Go out on bail and see a doctor if you wish it"?—If he wished to be examined at the station by a private doctor we could make arrangements, which I did.

20708. Would it not have been the simplest thing to say at once: "If you want to see a private doctor go out on bail and see any doctor you like"?—I do not think I said so then. I may have said so.

20709. I understand you also said to him: "If you are going to see a private doctor then I shall also call in the Divisional Surgeon in the interests of the police." Is that right?—Yes.

20710. Had you up to that moment intended to call in the Divisional Surgeon?—No; he said he did not want to see a doctor.

20711. Then what exactly did you mean by saying that?—Because he asked for a private doctor himself. I explained to him that if he had a private doctor on his own behalf the Divisional Surgeon would also come on behalf of the police.

20712. You were afraid of what the private doctor might say?—No. It is according to the regulations; it is according to the code.

20713. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where is that?—It is in the general orders.

20714. (Earl Russell.) If a man wants to see a private doctor the police doctor must come too?—Yes.

20715. You agree he said he did not want to see the police doctor?—No, I did not hear him say he did not want to see the police doctor. He said he wanted to see a doctor of his own, or a private doctor, or words to that effect.

20716. You offered him the police doctor, and he said, "That is not what I want"?—When he said he wanted to see a private doctor I told him he could. In reply to that he said he wanted to see a private doctor of his own.

20717. Were you there when the Divisional Surgeon examined him?—Yes.

20718. You told my learned friend, Mr. Bankes, that he consented, but it would not have made any difference whether he had consented or not?—If he had objected he would not have been examined.

20719. Is that so?—Yes, that is so.

20720. In spite of your regulations?—If he had objected to be examined by the Divisional Surgeon he would not have examined him. It would amount to an assault to examine a man against his will.

20721. Did not Baker when the Divisional Surgeon caught hold of his wrist say: "I do not want to see you, Mr. Jackson; I will wait till my own private doctor comes"?—No.

20722. Nothing of the sort?—No; he did not say so.

20723. Did he not pull himself away from Dr. Jackson?—Not at all. I did not see the slightest sign that he had any objection to being examined by the Divisional Surgeon.

20724. What was the hour at which Dr. Jackson did actually examine him?—At 12.50 it is in the occurrence book.

20725. But the actual examination took place about twelve, did it not?—No, it was much later than twelve.

20726. When did you send the message for him?—At a quarter past twelve. I did not send the message until after Mr. Walton arrived at the station, and that was a quarter past twelve when he came to bail him, and Baker said he wished to be seen by a doctor.

20727. Are you quite certain it was at a quarter past twelve?—The man could not have been charged at the station and have had his bail sent for half a mile away from the station, and for him to be back in a quarter of an hour.

20728. What time is the charge-sheet marked?—11.30.

20729. Did the doctor come directly you sent for him?—No I sent a constable for him, and he arrived there shortly afterwards.

20730. You did not send a telephone message?—No, I sent a constable.

20731. You say you told Hillier to explain to Dr. Barrett that the police could not pay his fee?—Yes.

20732. I make no objection to that. Did you also tell him to tell Dr. Barrett that the prisoner said he was willing to pay the fee?—I cannot say whether I did or not; I may or may not. Dr. Barrett appeared to be well known to the man. He regarded him as his doctor, from what I understood.

20733. It was the same message that was sent to Dr Bagram?—Yes.

20734. You are certain you told him the police could not pay the fee?—That is so.

20735. And you are not sure whether you told him to say that the prisoner was willing to pay the fee?—I am not sure.

20736. Finally, when it came to the third doctor, Dr.

Lee, you had had enough of sending for doctors, and you told Baker he had better go out and look for one?—I thought that was the best plan. If he had sent for Dr. Lee perhaps it would have been the same thing. He would have been longer in the cells.

20737. That is why I suggest that it would have been simpler to have said that at the beginning?—He wished to be examined at the station.

20738. Who went for his bail?—P.C. Pittuck, the last witness. He was on the beat on which Mr. Walton lives.

20739. Now I want to come back to what happened when Baker came in. Did you hear Pittuck's evidence this morning?—Yes.

20740. Did he tell you practically all that he told us?—I think not. I think I have repeated all that he told me.

20741. Of course, it was perfectly clear, and you understood that when he went up to the man he went up to him to get his name and address with a view to a summons?—That is so.

20742. Did he tell you that he told the man Baker what he wanted his name and address for when he first asked for it?—Yes, that he was going to summon him—that he wanted his name and address to summon him.

20743. Did he tell you what he said he was going to summon him for?—No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The regulation with regard to a Divisional Surgeon being present when an examination is made by a private medical man is at page 100.

20744. (Earl Russell.) I was asking you whether Pittuck had told you that he told Baker what he was going to summon him for?—No, I think not, as far a my memory serves me. I think he told me he asked for his name and address, as he wished to summon him.

20745. Leaving it to the man himself to guess what for?—Yes. He had previously explained to me that he had been urinating against a wall.

20746. Did he say that the man refused his name and address?—He did not say he refused it. He said he kept shouting, "Oh, yes, I will give you my name and address. What do you want it for?"

20747. You did not ask him whether, when he asked him what he wanted it for, he told him again?—No, I do not at all remember that.

20745. According to your recollection of what he told you, he left Baker to guess what he wanted it for, except that it was for the purpose of a summons?—Yes, I should take it for granted the man would know he was committing an offence against the bye-laws.

20749. Probably the man did not know about the bye-laws. But it would be the right thing for a constable to tell a man what he wanted to know his name and address for, would it not?—Certainly.

20750. Supposing a man did not hear him, or would not hear him, the constable ought to tell him again what he wanted it for?—He should repeat it.

20751. Did you ask any question of Pittuck why he did not tell Baker again, and distinctly, why he wanted his name and address?—I could not say.

20752. Was anything said at all by Pittuck about Baker saying that he would give his name and address at the station?—No.

20753. Did Baker say that he was quite willing to give his name and address to the officials at the station?—No.

20754. He never mentioned that?—No.

20755. You have told us that he did keep saying, "I will give you my name and address. What do you want it for"?—Yes.

20756. Did neither of them at any time say anything at all about his being willing to give it at the station?—No, neither of them.

20757. When Baker was at the station, and before you, did he not at any time say anything about—"I thought I came here to give my name and address?—No, not in my hearing.

20758. Did he not say to you, "I only came here to give my name and address"?—No.

20759. Nothing of the kind?—No.

20760. Did he not say to you, "Are you going to take a charge like that"?—No.

20761. Did he express no surprise at all at being charged?—No.

20762. Not the least surprise?—No.

20763. He made no expression of surprise either to you or to the constable?—No.

20764. You did not give evidence at the police court, did you?—No, I did not attend.

20765. Have you made any report on this case?—No.

20766. Did you make any note in your book at the time of anything the prisoner said?—No.

20767. You formed the opinion yourself at 11.30 that he was drunk?—Yes, and I am still of the same opinion.

20768. Very drunk?—Not very.

20769. You say he did not deny being drunk?—He denied it when being charged.

20770. This is your account, is it not. You said to him, "The constable alleges you are drunk, and I am of the same opinion"?—That is so.

20771. He denied it, and said he would like to see a doctor?—No, I said, "Would you like to see a doctor?" and he said he did not want to see a doctor.

20772. Quite right. He said, "I am not drunk; I do not want a doctor"?—That is right.

20773. You agree that he denied the charge of being drunk, do you?—Yes.

20774. If a prisoner is charged with being drunk, and denies the charge, is it your duty to send for the Divisional Surgeon at once?—No.

20775. Not necessarily?—Not necessarily.

20776. Although he is charged with being drunk, and he says he is not?—Yes. He said he did not wish to see a doctor. If he had asked to see one, whatever the state of drunkenness, I should have sent for a doctor; but as I was satisfied he was drunk, and he did not say he wanted to see a doctor, I did not think it necessary, in my discretion, to send for a doctor.

20777. Although he denied he was drunk?—He did.

20778. Did he say that in the presence of Pittuck?—Pittuck was there.

20779. This was during the process of charging him, was it?—Yes.

20780. What you noticed you told us was the condition of his eyes?—That is so.

20781. And that he did not walk straight?—Yes.

20782. And talked thick?—Yes.

20783. Is that consistent with having taken very little drink and being excited?—No, not exactly. It is consistent with the man being drunk, but not very drunk.

20784. Did Pittuck, when he told you about seeing Baker in the street, tell you he had seen him staggering?—No, not to my remembrance. I do not believe that he said so.

20785. Did you not ask Pittuck for the evidence on which he based his idea that the man was drunk, or were you satisfied?—I was satisfied myself that he was drunk.

20786. Then Pittuck never told you that he saw Baker staggering while he was talking to him about giving his name and address?—No. I was satisfied about the drunkenness, and I asked him about the charge of disorder. I did not know anything about that, as I was not there.

20787. Pittuck never told you about seeing Baker staggering when he came out of the public-house?—I do not remember him saying so.

20788. Where did Pittuck begin his account of the story—when he saw him against the wall and walked up to him?—Yes, when he saw him urinating by the wall.

20789. He did not tell you what happened before that about his walking down Campden Hill Road?—I do not remember him saying anything about it.

20790. With regard to the "Windsor Castle" public-house, if a man is seen leaving a public-house drunk, would not the licensee be committing an offence in permitting drunkenness on the premises?—There was no evidence that he had permitted the offence of drunkenness on the premises?—There might be no evidence that the man was served at the "Windsor Castle." There was no evidence before the police that he permitted any drunkenness there.

Inspector A. Mason

4 Dec. 1906.

20791. If you saw a drunken man coming out of a public-house you would think it your duty to make inquiry, would you not?—No, I do not know that I should. I have frequently seen a man go into a public-house and leave again within a minute.

20792. But suppose you do not see him go in. Suppose you only see a man come out of a public-house, and he is drunk, is it not the business of the police on the beat to report that to their superiors?—They would do so, no doubt 20793. (Chairman.) Do you mean that it is a statutory duty?

(Earl Russell.) No. I mean it is a disciplinary duty, because it is an offence on the part of the landlord either to permit drunkenness on his premises or to serve drunken people.

20794. If it is noticed that habitually people come out of a public-house drunk it is an offence, is it not?—Yes.

20795. Did not Baker write his own name and address?—I believe he did for the doctor.

20796. Not the one you sent to the doctor's?—No.

20797. (Mr. Dickinson.) Baker himself said that when the divisional surgeon came he asked him to write his name and address on a piece of paper. That is what you are referring to?—Yes.

20798. (Earl Russell.) Not for you, but for Dr. Jackson?—Yes.

20799. That piece of paper is not attached to the certificate?—No, Dr. Jackson keeps all those.

20800. Do you think he has it?—I think so.

20801. That he has it now?—I think it is very probable.

20802. Did Baker show any excitement in the police station?—He was excited, but he endeavoured to suppress it. I could see that he was excited.

20803. Was not his chief complaint that he had been brought there at all and that he was kept there?—No.

20804. He did not make any offer to give you his name and address when he got there?—I asked him for his name and address for the purpose of the charge. He gave it then.

20805. He never said he had been asked for it at all?—He told me why he refused to give it, but he did not say anything about being asked for it.

20806. Because he thought he had not done anything wrong?—He did not consider he had done any harm.

20807. He did not give any additional reason that he preferred to give it at the station?—No.

20808. You are quite clear that there was no suggestion of that?—No.

20809. At the time when you suggested that he had better take his bail and go out he had been seen by the divisional surgeon, of course?—Yes.

20810. And you had seen the divisional surgeon's report?—I saw the entry in the Occurrence Book.

20811. There was no charge at any time, I think, of using bad language in the streets, was there?—No, there was nothing of that.

20812. You did not regard making water against the wall as being part of the charge of disorder, did you?—No. That had not been dealt with. He was disorderly shouting about the neighbourhood. Shouting there at that hour of the night when people are in bed would cause disorder.

20813. I think you have told us that the constable when he told you what had happened explained to you that there were two females and two other people under a lamppost. That was in connection with making water against the wall. He told me there were two females passing the top, and there were others standing close by.

20814. I took it down as you said it. "He said near the lamppost there were two females." Is not that right?

20815. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think he said there were two females near the lamppost, and others standing near?—Yes, and others standing near.

20816. (Earl Russell.) He did not tell you that two females were under the lamppost?—No.

20817. But all that you agree was no part of the charge of disorder?—No.

20818. That is only what led up to it?—Yes.

20819. I did not notice that you said anything about what he said about the people when he shouted. Did he tell you anything about people collecting?—Yes. That was an oversight on my part. He said several people stopped at Campden Hill Road.

20820. He told you where they stopped?—Yes, at Campden Hill Road, at the top of Kensington Place.

20821. He did not use the expression that a crowd assembled?—No.

20822. Or that people surrounded them?—No.

20823. Did he tell you that the place where they stopped was 20 yards away?—No, he did not say the distance. He said it was at the top of Kensington Place.

20824. Are you able to recall what impression you got from that—that there were people standing around, or standing a little distance away?—People standing a little distance away to hear what the shouting was about, was the impression I formed.

20825. You would not suggest that he was creating a crowd in the street when people were standing 20 yards away?—No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) With regard to the reference I gave to you about the regulations, I ought to point out that those regulations clearly only refer to a very serious class of offence.

(Mr. Dickinson.) The regulations about the doctor?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I noticed that just now.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) But I ought to say I am told the practice is to treat this regulation as applying to every case in which a prisoner asks for a private doctor.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Under the words, "In all cases in which the examination seems likely to furnish evidence as to prisoner's guilt or innocence." These are the words under which they bring in a doctor in the case of drunkenness.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think that these regulations clearly apply only to the more serious cases, but the regulations to which the Inspector was referring were no doubt 10 and 11, because 10 says: "Every prisoner to whom this Order applies must be clearly told by the Inspector on duty at the station that it is proposed to examine him, and that he has the right to object if he so desires; for, in the absence of consent, any examination would be an assault." That was the expression that the Inspector used. Then 11: "If a prisoner consents to such examination, he is to be told that if he desires the attendance of a qualified medical man on his behalf an opportunity for such attendance with the Divisional Surgeon will be given, and arrangements are to be made accordingly." So that those Regulations clearly indicate that if the prisoner desires his own independent man he is to have him, but with the Divisional Surgeon.

(Mr. Dickinson.) That seems to be the practice in connection with cases of drunkenness.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) It is the first time we have heard of that in cases of drunkeness.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) In practice the Inspector tells me he applies this Regulation to these cases, and believes it is so generally regarded, but there is no special regulation dealing with drunkenness I am told.

Inspector ARTHUR MASON, recalled.

20826. (Chairman.) How long have you been Inspector?—Three years.

20827. How long at this particular station?—Two years and nine months.

20828. Mr. Eldon Bankes asked you what the constable said when he came with his prisoner to the police station, and you told him?—Yes.

20829. You remember my asking you whether that was all that he had said?—Yes, I remember you did.

20830. I will just read it to you again. You put a question to the constable first?—Yes, I asked him the nature of the charge.

20831. He replied, "Drunk and disorderly in Kensington Place." I said, "What was the disorder?" His answer was, 'I saw him urinating by the wall near a lamp post; two females were passing at the time; there were some more standing there. I crossed the road and asked him for his name and address to report him for a summons. He commenced shouting, 'My name and address. Yes, I will give you my name and address.' This he repeated several times, and as he would not be quiet and give his name and address, I took him into custody." That is what you said to Mr. Eldon Bankes?—Yes.

20832. And that is all that the constable told you, I understand?—That is all that I should remember at the time, but I remembered a little more later on.

20833. Do you mean all you could remember at the time you were answering Mr. Eldon Bankes?—Yes.

20834. What else did he say?—About the persons standing at the top of the street. I think I replied to that a little later on near the end.

20835. "The constable also said"—what?—Several persons stopped at the end of the streets in Campden Hill Road.

20836. Then you had the conversation with Baker that you have mentioned?—Yes.

20837. And you looked at Baker?—Yes.

20838. And came to the conclusion that he was drunk?—Yes.

20839. Now will you tell me what led you to think that Baker was drunk?—He staggered as he was being taken to the dock. He was not able to walk straight. His voice was thick and rather husky like a drunken man's would be, and he had the look in the eye of a drunken man—a kind of a hazy look.

20840. Did he give you his name and address?—Yes, when I asked him for it.

20841. At once?—When I asked him for it to put it on the charge sheet.

20842. When you commenced to fill in the charge sheet?—Yes, he gave it to me willingly enough.

20843. This was a Sunday evening?—Yes.

20844. It is a quiet part of London, is it not?—Yes, it is.

20845. And the prisoner was fairly well dressed, I suppose?—About the same as he is to-day—very similarly.

20846. Then I should say he was well dressed?—Yes.

20847. When he gave his name and address you found he was an ironmonger's assistant according to his statement?—Yes, so he informed me.

20848. And the place at which he lived, according to the address he gave, is quite a respectable place, is it not?—A respectable working class.

20849. Did you reflect in taking the charge of being drunk and disorderly you were taking a very serious step?—Only that I knew the charge was correct.

20850. You could not have known the charge was correct in so far as disorder was concerned?—No, just so.

20851. The question I put to you was this, Did you at the time reflect that the charge was a very serious one so far as Baker was concerned?—Oh, yes.

20852. It might affect his employment?—Just so.

20853. It might affect his whole life?—Just so.

20854. And did you then, reflecting upon that, think that the materials before you were such as to justify you in taking the charge of drunk and disorderly?—Oh, yes, Sir.

20855. Simply on the statement that the constable made, and which I have read to you together with what you observed as to the condition of the prisoner?—Yes, I had no reason to believe that the constable would tell me falsehoods as to what took place in the street.

20856. Just think. The only evidence of disorder before you was, "I crossed the road and asked for his name," and so on—he commenced shouting?—Yes.

20857. Do you mean to say that a man shouting would be sufficient disorder in your opinion to justify your taking the charge?—Yes, in that neighbourhood, in a neighbourhood where there are persons residing and in bed at that hour of the night.

20858. Residing and in bed. This conversation between Baker and the police-constable was taking place in Kensington Place, as I understand it, on the side of the road on which there were no houses?—Yes, but there are houses very close to—on the opposite side there are houses occupied by working-class people.

20859. Did it not occur to you that perhaps Baker might be resenting and justly resenting being asked his name and address?—No.

29860. It did not occur to you?—No.

20861. Do you say that the police-constable had any right to ask for his name and address under those circumstances that the police-constable had explained to you?—Yes.

20862. Show how and why?—The man was committing an offence against the bye-laws.

20863. Show me the bye-laws. I doubt it very much. No lawyer, and I am one, can carry all the statutes and bye-laws in his head, and nobody need blush to say that he does not remember them, and I certainly do not. I have never seen this bye-law.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) This is a copy of it, Sir, and I believe the bye-law is in the White Book. I will find the reference directly.

20864. (Chairman.) This bye-law that Mr. Bankes is good enough to hand up to me is to the following effect: "Every person who in any street or in any open space to which the public have access for the time being shall commit or attempt to commit any act of indecency with any other person"—that does not apply to this case?—No.

20865. "Or shall to the annoyance of residents or passengers commit any act of indecency which is not already punishable in a summary manner by virtue of any Act of Parliament in force throughout the County of London shall be liable to a fine," and so on. Do you say that merely making water against a blank wall at night time, even if a lamppost be near by, comes within this bye-law?—In my opinion, yes, Sir, if there are females about.

20866. "To the annoyance of residents or passengers"—it must be?—Yes.

20867. At any date that is your view?—Yes, that is the view that I take of it

20868. It is not punishable so far as you know in a summary manner by virtue of any Act of Parliament?—No, I know nothing else that deals with it except that bye-law.

20869. It seems to me a somewhat odd way of extending the law—"shall to the annoyance of residents or passengers commit any act of indecency which is not already punishable." However, I will take it that your view is right, although I will look into the matter. Where does this constable get the right to ask for the name and address?—From the instruction book and the general orders.

20870. I do not quite see that. Where is the general order. I am not asking you these questions in any hostile spirit at present.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You will find it in the paper that I have handed in. The general order follows on the bye-law. I cannot find the reference in the White Book yet.

Inspector A. Mason.

4 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. Dickinson.) It does not seem to me that it is in the White Book as far as the County of London is concerned. I find a similar bye-law for the County of Middlesex in the White Book, but, however, this book is dated 1900, and possibly it is subsequent to that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is probably in a later edition.

(Chairman.) I am not questioning the existence of the bye-law.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The direction is No. 102.

20871. (Chairman.) Is this what you are referring to? "The following bye-laws have been made by the county councils of the undermentioned counties and municipal boroughs under the provisions of the Act 51 and 52 Victoria, chapter 41, section 16, in the case of counties, and under 45 and 46 Victoria, chapter 50, section 23, in the case of municipal boroughs. There is no power of arrest without warrant under the bye-laws, but any breach of the same is to be observed by police, the names and addresses of offenders obtained, and, where necessary, application made for authority to proceed by summons, care being exercised that police have satisfactory evidence in all those cases in which it is requisite to prove serious nuisance, or the annoyance or disturbance of any person." All it says is, that the police are to obtain the names and addresses of offenders?—Yes.

20872. Do you say that gives a policeman the right to ask a person for his name and address?—In my opinion, yes.

20873. But supposing the person refuses?—The Police have no power to arrest him.

20874. No power to arrest him even then?—No.

20875. That was your view at this time?—That is so.

20876. You will remember that this was your state of mind when you took this charge?—Yes.

20877. It did not seem to you very likely the true explanation of the case was that Baker had got annoyed at being asked for his name and address, and the constable was too insistent in asking for it?—No, I think not.

20878. Drunk and disorderly is a serious charge?—Yes.

20879. This offence, even if it be an offence within the bye-laws, was obviously a very slight infraction of any law against decency?—Yes

20880. Do you think now, remembering what has taken place before the police court, that you exercised a wise judgment in taking this charge?—Yes.

20881. The only disorder was shouting?—That is so.

20882. You think you exercised a right judgment?—Yes, I think so.

20883. But not a right judgment in case you were mistaken as to Baker being drunk?—But I was satisfied on that point.

20884. But supposing you made a mistake as to his being drunk, you do not think you ought to have taken the charge in any form, as I understand?—I think so—the disorderly conduct.

20885. Even then?—Yes.

20886. Quite apart from the charge of drunkenness?—Yes.

20887. Did you tell Baker that you thought he was drunk?—I told him I was of the same opinion—those were the words I used.

20888. Did you not ask Baker any questions as to how he had been spending the day?—No.

20889. It is not your custom to question the prisoners?—No.

20890. And he volunteered no statement as to being in the Windsor Castle, or anything of that kind?—No.

20891. I suppose you will agree with me that drunkenness is a matter of degree?—Yes.

20892. We know that even if a man only takes one small portion of whisky, physically speaking that does affect him, and from the very first drop of alcohol you take you do become affected?—Yes.

20893. And the more you take the more noticeable the physical signs of the effects of alcohol become?—No doubt.

20894. At what period in the process of completion do you say a man becomes drunk? If a man goes on drinking enough alcohol he becomes insensible and completely intoxicated?—Undoubtedly he would.

20895. At what point in the process of becoming completely intoxicated do you say a man becomes drunk?—When he has not the full control of his limbs, for one thing.

20896. And that is what you rely on in this case, the staggering?—Yes, that is one of the things.

20897. Does it occur to you that staggering might be caused by mere mental excitement due to passion?—I think not. I have never seen such a case.

20898. That may be because you rather assume if a man behaves out of his ordinary course that he has been drinking, I suppose?—Yes; taking the staggering with the other things.

(Mr. Whitmore.) I do not want to ask any questions, but I do wish to have my mind made quite clear as to what is the recognised duty of the Inspector in charge when a policeman comes in with a prisoner in a case of this kind. Has he to satisfy himself by interrogation?

20899. (Chairman.) That is in Rule 199. "The officer on duty, before receiving a charge, is to ascertain that there is reasonable ground for preferring the complaint against the accused; and unless the circumstances be such as to entitle the accuser to be believed, a charge is not to be taken." And then 200: "The greatest care is to be exercised in the investigation of charges, as it has occasionally been noticed that, even where there have been suspicious circumstances, the officer on duty has shown great readiness in accepting the statement of the constable making the charge without giving the case that close personal attention which is imperatively demanded." That was in my mind when I was asking you these questions, and you said you did comply with those regulations in this case?—Yes, I did.

20900. And forming the best judgment you could, you took the charge?—Yes.

20901. (Mr. Whitmore.) As a rule, unless there is some reason against it, you give credit to the statement made by a police-constable who you believe to be a man of good conduct?—Yes; I look at it in this way: I see no reason why a constable should improperly bring a prisoner to the station on a false charge and with a desire to get a man punished by telling a lot of falsehoods against him. In so doing the constable risks having the charge made against him of bringing forward a false charge against the prisoner.

20902. In this case was the police-constable a man who you were entitled to rely upon?—A very reliable man.

20903. You would be inclined to give implicit credit to anything he said?—Yes, entirely.

20904. And you did so?—Yes.

20905. (Mr. Dickinson.) I noticed that you said, in answer to one question, that Baker was excited when he came into the police station, and that he tried to suppress it?—Yes, I did say so.

20906. In what way did he try to suppress his excitement?—He seemed as though he did want to shout, but he managed to control himself.

20907. Then would you think in the case of a man who is suppressing, and successfully suppressing, his excitement that that was not evidence that he was not drunk—a drunken man trying to suppress his excitement?—Not if he is very drunk.

20908. I am trying to get at what you thought was the condition of this man. You did not think he was very drunk?—No.

20909. Did you think he was so drunk as he had not got control of himself?—No, he was not in that condition.

20910. At the same time you saw by his eyes and you smelt by his breath?—No, I did not.

20911. Did you not say his breath smelt?—No, I did not go near enough to do any smelling.

20912. You said something about his eyes?—Yes.

20913. You said the appearance of his eyes looked like drink, and his speech was thick?—Yes.

20914. And he was staggering?—Yes, he was not able to walk steadily.

20915. When a man is like that he must be pretty far gone?—No, not necessarily. Of course, drink has a great deal more effect on some people than on others. I have in the course of my experience of 19 years met people who cannot move at all, but their heads are as clear as possible. On the other hand, I have met people who can walk all right, but if you spoke to them they would not know what you were talking about; it has gone to their heads.

20916. I suppose you have also met people who have been excited and not drunk?—Yes, I have.

20917. You can make a mistake?—Yes, it is possible; but I do not think I did in this case.

20918. I want to know exactly what you meant when you said you would also call the Divisional Surgeon in the interests of the police. What was in your mind in saying that you would call the Divisional Surgeon in the interests of the police?—If a prisoner had his own doctor, the man might be very drunk, and unless the doctor is very conscientious—I do not suggest for one moment that either of these gentlemen is not very conscientious—but he might say the man was entirely sober, and, on the other hand, independent evidence for the police—possibly the Divisional Surgeon—would say he was not sober. We should have evidence on each side, both for the police and for the prisoner.

20919. You rather regard the duty of a Divisional Surgeon to be to protect the police?—Not necessarily.

20920. To get an independent opinion, not biassed by acquaintance with the accused?—That is so.

20921. I suppose that idea you get from Regulations 10 and 11, which we have read, which say that when a serious case arises, under which a prisoner has to be examined by a qualified medical man, there should also be an opportunity for the Divisional Surgeon to be in attendance?—Yes.

20922. In No. 10, as Mr. Bankes has read it, when it is proposed to examine him the prisoner must be clearly told by the Inspector that he has a right to object if he so desires. Did you on this occasion tell Baker that he had a right to object to Dr. Jackson being called?—No; I do not take it that that paragraph refers to such a case as drunkenness. It is more a case of rape, and such cases as that.

20923. It does undoubtedly, but I understand it was rather the practice to extend the principles laid down in these cases to an ordinary case of drunkenness?—Yes. I did not tell him so. Of course, I had previously told him I should send for Dr. Jackson, and he made no objection to that.

20924. You are sure he made no objection?—Yes.

20925. You know he has told us that he did object?—I believe so, but not in my hearing. I am certain he made no objection to me. I am positive of it.

20926. But still, according to your story, he was asking to have other doctors brought?—Yes.

20927. Surely you must have understood he did not wish to be examined by Dr. Jackson? He did not, at any rate, assent to it?—He did not say anything either way, either for or against it. When I told him I should send for the divisional surgeon he did not say he approved or objected.

20928. You are perfectly sure of that, because it is not in accordance with his story?—Yes, I am quite clear on that.

20929. Were you present when Dr. Jackson did examine him?—Yes.

20930. Did Dr. Jackson take hold of his wrist and feel his pulse?—I think he did, I am not sure. I remember he got him to write his name on a piece of paper. He looked at his eyes, and I believe he looked at his tongue, but what else he did I could not swear to.

20931. After that had happened did you hear him ask Dr. Jackson what paper he had made out?—No.

20932. He did not ask Dr. Jackson what opinion he had of his condition?—Not at that time.

20933. Did he at any time?—Yes, when he was bailed out Dr. Jackson remained there expecting that another doctor would arrive.

20934. Expecting his own doctor to come?—Yes, expecting a private doctor would attend on behalf of Mr. Baker.

20935. Then, it is inaccurate, I suppose, for him to say that Dr. Jackson said, in answer to that, "The inspector has got the particulars"?—Yes.

20936. You are sure Dr. Jackson did not say that?—Not at any time, Sir.

20937. At any time? You may not be talking of exactly the same moment?—He asked Dr. Jackson a question—either that or something very similar to it—at the time he was bailed.

20938. Probably at the same time, but he did ask Dr. Jackson what his opinion was?—Yes.

20939. And did Dr. Jackson say that the inspector had got the particulars?—He said something like that, and I read to him what Dr. Jackson had written in the Occurrence Book.

20940. Then he said, "And then the inspector said, 'Dr. Jackson certifies that you are recovering from drink'"?—Yes, that would be correct.

20941. That account he has given us is correct?—Yes.

20942. You did not attend before the police magistrate?—No.

20943. Why did not you?—I regarded it as simply an ordinary case, and that there was no necessity for the officer taking the charge to attend.

20944. One moment. Did you regard this as an ordinary case? You knew perfectly well he had protested he was not drunk?—Yes. I have seen men so drunk that they are lying on the floor, and they protest that they are not drunk.

20945. You knew he was a man in respectable circumstances?—Yes.

20946. Did you know he was going to be defended by a solicitor?—No.

20947. Do you find that it is sufficient in a case where the drunkenness is denied that there should be nothing but the evidence of the one policeman?—I think so, and the doctor's certificate.

20948. Was the doctor's certificate handed in?—Yes, it was attached to the charge-sheet, but that, I believe, became detached at the court. The exact wording of what the doctor had said was put on the sheet.

20949. So the magistrate knew he had been drinking?—Yes.

20950. Did not you realise that the question of whether he was drunk or not was of importance?—No.

20951. I suppose you were in charge of the proceedings before the police court?—At the police station.

20952. Ought the inspector not to be there when proceedings are taken?—No. If so, he would have to attend every day in all these cases.

20953. The inspector leaves it to the constable?—Yes, and if any query is raised or the magistrate wishes to see the officer on duty the case is adjourned till the afternoon and the officer is sent for.

20954. (Chairman.) But I rather gathered from what you said to Lord Russell and to myself and to Mr. Dickinson that it was rather a weak case as far as the disorder was concerned?—No, I do not think there was any weakness in it. I was satisfied on the disorder. Shouting out and waking people up at night was sufficient disorder.

(Chairman.) What the constable told the magistrate was a good deal stronger than what he told you.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It was uncorroborated, because, unfortunately, the inspector did not go to the police-court.

20955. (Chairman.) I did not want to make any suggestion, and my questions are not directed to the question of the propriety of the magistrate's decision, but to see whether these proceedings were properly conducted at the police-station. What the constable told the magistrate was he began to shout and made a great disturbance. The use of those words is stronger evidence than anything he had told you?—Yes.

20956. But, then, that did not satisfy the magistrate, did it?—No.

20957. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand you thought that the oath of the constable that he was drunk, plus the certificate that he had been drinking—because that was all it said—was sufficient to obtain a conviction?—I think so.

Inspector A. Mason.
4 Dec 1906.

20958. Therefore your knowledge, which you have told us for the first time you had, that this man was drunk in your opinion, for the reasons which you have given expression to, was not necessary at all in order to obtain a conviction?—No, I think not.

20959. What do you take a doctor's certificate, saying the man has been drinking, to mean. Does it mean he was under the influence of drink or not?—In this particular instance, an hour and a half had elapsed between the time the man was arrested and the time the doctor was seeing him, and the doctor remarked to me that he was not able to say what the condition of the man was at the time he was brought in, but he could not certify that he was actually drunk.

20960. (Chairman.) He went as far as he could?—He went as far as his conscience allowed him.

20951. (Mr. Whitmore.) Why do you say that? Did he not go as far as he thought his observation justified him in going, and as far as an actual examination of the prisoner led him to form an opinion?—I think so.

20962. (Mr. Dickinson.) Then his certificate—"Had been drinking," to your mind means that the man had been under the influence of drink?—Yes.

20963. These are the words that are very often used, are they not?—Yes, or "Recovering from drink."

20964. That means recovering from a condition in which he had been probably drunk?—Yes.

20965. So much drinking that he had been under the influence of drink?—Yes, that is what I think the doctor meant.

20966. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I just ask this question? If the man had thought that any further information could be given, is it the practice for him to send for the Inspector who took the charge?—Yes, it is.

20967. But in this case you were not sent for, and did not hear anything about it till it was all over?—No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know, Sir, what further witnesses you wish to have, but I can tell you who are here. Constable Hillier is here, the man who was sent for the doctor, and if you want to hear him I will call him. The constable Price is also here, the man who went down to the cells with Baker. I do not know whether Earl Russell wants either of those men called?

(Chairman.) Was Price in the charge room at the time the charge was taken?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am not sure whether he was or not.

(Chairman.) If he or P.C. Hillier were in the charge room they are certainly worth calling.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not think they can tell you anything that happened, because I think they were just coming up, but they are here and I can call them.

(Mr. Whitmore.) I should like to hear something from Hillier as to what name he gave the doctor.

(Earl Russell.) The real thing with regard to Hillier that I can attach importance to is that he gave the wrong name. We have already had that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We can ask him about that.

P.C. JOHN HILLIER, 139 F, sworn

P.C. J Hillier.

20968. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you a constable attached to the Notting Hill police station?—Yes.

20969. You are the man who was sent for these two doctors?—Yes.

20970. Were you given a piece of paper?—I was, by Inspector Mason.

20971. Was the man's name written upon it?—Yes.

20972. What name?—James Baker.

20973. The only point is about the second doctor. When you went to the second doctor, did you see him personally?—I did.

20974. Did you show him the piece of paper, or did you read it?—I read the name off the paper.

20975. We are told that he thinks you told him the name was Barker?—No, I gave him the right name.

20976. Next day you went to the police court?—I did.

20977. You were asked then what name you gave the doctor?—That was the cross-examination.

20978. What name did you say then?—For the moment I said "Barker."

20979. Then you made a mistake?—I did make a mistake there.

20980. And the mistake you made was not, according to you, at the doctor's house, but at the police court the next morning?—It was.

20981. And your belief is that you told him the name was Baker?—I am positive of it.

20982. What did the doctor say when you told him that name?—I told him the complainant's name, and told him he would also be seen by the Divisional Surgeon, and the police would not be responsible for his fees.

20983. What did the doctor say?—He said, "I shall not come."

20984. Did he say anything to you about not knowing the man? Did he say whether he knew him or whether he did not know him?—I believe he did.

20985. You believe he said what?—That he did not know the man.

20986. Where was it you saw the doctor?—At the door.

20987. At the door of his house?—Yes.

20988. Was he dressed then?—He was dressed.

20989. He had not gone to bed?—No, he had not gone to bed.

20990. Did the conversation take place at the front door of his house?—Yes.

20991. (Earl Russell.) What you said to the second doctor you went to when you saw him was, "There is a drunken man named Barker at the station"?—I told him there was a man named James Barker.

20992. At the station?—Yes.

20993. (Chairman.) You said "Barker" to the doctor?—Baker, I mean.

20994. But you just now said "Barker"?—I was mixed up. I said James Baker.

20995. (Earl Russell.) Barker or Baker—I am not at the moment on that point, but you said to him, "There is a drunken man at the station who wants you to see him"?—I said, "There is a man named James Baker charged at the station with being drunk, and he wishes to see you."

20996. He told you he did not know him?—Yes.

20997. When you went back to the station, you told the Inspector you had given the name of Barker?—I went back to the station and told the Inspector that the doctor would not come.

20998. Did you say anything about having given the name of Barker?—No, I did not.

20999. When you were in the police court, that was the very next day, was it not?—I was at the police court on another charge.

21000. The very next day?—Yes.

21001. And you did give evidence in this case?—Yes.

21002. And you said the doctor refused to come?—I did.

21003. There was a solicitor who appeared for Baker at the police court?—Yes.

21004. And he asked you more than one question?—Yes.

21005. When you said the doctor refused to come, did he not say that was simply because you gave him the wrong name. The solicitor put that to you in asking you questions, did not he?—He said something about the name.

21006. Then your attention was called at the police court to the fact that you had given the name of Barker instead of Baker, was it not?—In front of the solicitor.

21007. That is what I say. When you were giving evidence at the police court your attention was called to the fact that you had given the name of Barker instead of Baker?—By the solicitor; but I told him positively that I gave the right name to the doctor.

(Chairman.) It seems to me, Earl Russell, that this witness has given you the answer that you were desiring. He said that the doctor said, "I do not know the man."

(Earl Russell.) That is quite true.

(Chairman.) Then, if the doctor did not know the man, that is sufficient reason for his not coming.

(Earl Russell.) I only want to make it clear that it was impressed upon the witness's mind at the hearing at the police court that it was a question of the wrong name.

(Chairman.) He made a blunder again, as he did in the very first answer he gave to you; he made the same blunder.

21008. (Earl Russell.) At the police court your attention was called to the fact that it was a question of your having given the right name or the wrong name?—Yes, in front of the solicitor; but I told the solicitor I was positive that the doctor that I went for—Dr. Bagram——

21009. Positive about what?—About giving the right name to the doctor, because I had it on the paper, and I read it off to him.

21010. (Chairman.) What became of the paper?—That is thrown away.

21011. (Earl Russell.) You told the solicitor at the police court you were positive you said Baker, and not Barker?—Yes.

21012. Do you know the note of your cross-examination is this: "I said to Dr. Bagram there was a man Barker at the station charged with drunkenness"?—No; Mr. Baker. I read it off the paper. I am positive of that.

P.C. J. Hillier.

4 Dec. 1906.

21013. And yet there was the question raised at the police court as to whether it was the right name or not?—Yes, by the solicitor.

21014. And you admitted then that you had given the name of Barker?—I admitted to the solicitor I told him Barker.

21015. I cannot understand it.

(Chairman.) What the witness says is perfectly clear. He admitted to the solicitor that the word "Barker" slipped out in answer to the solicitor's question.

(Earl Russell.) That is not the effect it had on the mind of the Clerk of the Court obviously.

(Chairman.) No. The note is: "I said to Dr. Bagram there was a man Barker at the station." Then the police-constable now explains that he did make that mistake in answer to a question in cross-examination by the solicitor.

(Earl Russell.) But he admits his attention was also called to the importance of the fact of his having given the wrong name.

(Chairman.) And he says he corrected it, as he corrected it when I pointed out he had made a blunder in his answer to you.

21016. (Mr. Dickinson.) Was the address on the paper, as well as the name?—Yes.

(Mr. Muir.) Police-constable Price seems to have been in the station at the time the man was brought in, and I do not know whether you would like him called.

(Chairman.) I must leave it to you. I do not know what he is going to say, but if you think it is worth while to call him, please do so.

(Mr. Muir.) It is only for you, Sir, to express an opinion; but perhaps I had better call him.

P.C. Henry Price, 148 F, sworn

(Mr. Baker.) I have never seen this man before.

21017. (Mr. Muir.) Is your name Henry Price, and are you a police-constable, 148 of the F Division?—Yes.

21018. Were you on reserve duty at Notting Hill Station on the night of the 30th September, when P.C. Piddock brought in a prisoner named Baker?—Yes.

21019. Did you see him there?—Yes—that is Baker. (Pointing.)

(Mr. Baker.) Of course, he knows me now.

21020. (Mr. Muir.) Did you hear the charge made?—Yes.

21021. What was it?—A charge of being drunk and disorderly.

21022. Were you present while the charge was being taken?—Yes.

21023. Did you take any part at all in what was going on?—No, I did not.

21024. Did you form any opinion as to what state the prisoner was in as to sobriety?—I formed the opinion when I was taking the man to the cells. The man smelt strongly of drink, he staggered, and I took him by the arm and led him to the cells.

P.C. H. Price.

21025. You were the officer who took him to the cells?—yes.

21026. (Earl Russell.) You are quite sure Pittuck did not take him into the cells himself?—Quite sure.

21027. Were you on regular gaoler's duty?—Yes.

21028. Did you know this case was heard and dismissed at the police court the next day?—Yes.

21029. Were you in the police court?—No.

21030. When did you hear of it?—I heard of it the next day—that the charge was dismissed.

21031. When did you first make a statement to anybody that you had been in the charge-room, and noticed he was drunk?—Last Wednesday week.

(Mr. Muir.) That is all the evidence in this case, Sir.

(Chairman.) Then we will sow take the case of Tresadern, otherwise Harding.

Arthur Tresadern, sworn.

21032. (Earl Russell.) You live at 10, Gibraltar Buildings, Bethnal Green Road?—Yes.

21033. What is your age now?—I was 20 last week.

21034. What is your occupation?—Cabinet maker.

21035. When you went to a Board school you were known as Harding, were you not?—Yes.

21036. What name are you known by now?—Harding.

21037. You are still known as Harding?—Yes.

21038. On leaving school you went to work for Mr. Butler, a cabinet maker, did you not?—Yes.

21039. You worked for him for about nine months?—Yes.

A. Tresadern.

21040. What happened then?—I was arrested one Saturday night for disorderly conduct.

21041. That would be about how long ago?—Six years ago.

21042. And the charge was dismissed when it came up?—Yes, on the Monday morning.

21043. Did you get into any trouble again soon afterwards?—Yes; I think it was during the next week.

21044. Let me try and identify these occurrences.

A. Tresadern.

4 Dec. 1906.

What police court did you come up at the first time you were arrested?—Worship Street.

21045. What name were you charged in?—The name of Harding, I think.

21046. And the second occasion you say was very soon after?—Yes.

21047. The second time what were you charged with?

(Chairman.) I think it would be more convenient, Earl Russell, if you would come at once to the witness's complaint as to the conduct of the police recently; and if the question of his character, and so on, becomes relevant, we can then inquire into the previous convictions or the previous dismissals of charges against him.

(Earl Russell.) With regard to these various arrests and dismissals it is not his character that is in question.

(Chairman.) We have looked at the statement made by Tresadern, and we have noticed, of course, that he admits that he has been previously convicted. We cannot go into the question of how far those convictions were just or unjust. We must presume that the convictions were just convictions, but the mere fact that he has been convicted of these offences does not disentitle him to come before us if he likes to complain of some wrong conduct on the part of the police.

(Earl Russell.) I quite appreciate that. It was rather the dismissals that I was taking him over more than the convictions. These are all dismissals that I am referring to.

(Chairman.) It would be more convenient if you would come first of all, at any rate, to the arrest of which he complains.

(Earl Russell.) That is the charge of assaulting P.C. 47 HR.

(Chairman.) I understand that case was dismissed. It is a recent case?

(Earl Russell.) Yes.

(Chairman.) It was on the 26th September this year. The Magistrate, I understand, dismissed the charge against Harding.

(Mr. Muir.) That is so. It was a summons.

21048. (Earl Russell.) That is the case in which you were arrested on the 18th September?—That was in between the alleged assault and the time when I should have appeared to the summons. It was six days after the alleged assault.

21049. (Chairman.) I understand that you were charged before Mr. Cluer on the 26th September with some offence?—Yes.

(Mr. Muir.) Technically he was summoned.

21050. (Chairman.) You were summoned?—Yes.

21051. What the police constable said was that while he was conveying a prisoner through Sclater Street on the 9th September you, Harding, came and assaulted him, the constable?—Yes.

21052. That is the case?—Yes, that is what he said.

21053. (Earl Russell.) What was the first that you knew of this case of assaulting the constable, P.C. 47 H R?—The first I knew of it was in the police station on a Tuesday night, when Inspector Wensley turned round to me and said, when I was up for identification for some robberies that had been committed in Bethnal Green, and several prosecutors had stood by and had failed to identify me. He turned round because I was kicking up a row over being detained in there so many hours, and said, "If we do not have you for this, we shall have you for something else," and the next morning a summons came to the door for an alleged assault on the constable, that being the first I had heard of it.

21054. Were you under arrest at the time you were put up for identification?—Yes, detained in the station.

21055. What were you detained for on that occasion?—On suspicion.

21056. And then you were let go?—Six detectives broke my door open at 6 o'clock in the morning, and took me out of bed, and put me in the station.

21057. And then did you come before the Magistrate at all?—No. After being kept in there about nine hours I was told I could go.

21058. What day was it that this happened? Was it the 16th September?—On a Tuesday morning.

21059. How long before the hearing before the magistrate—about a week or ten days?—Yes, about eight days.

21060. Did you know anything about having assaulted this constable while you were in the station beyond what you have told us?—No, there was nothing said to me, only what Inspector Wensley said to me, "If we do not get you for this we will have you for something else."

21061. When did you first hear about the assault on this police constable?—The next day.

21062. When was the summons served on you?—The next morning.

21063. That charged you with assaulting a police constable?—Yes.

21064. Do you say that that was the first time you heard about it?—Yes.

21065. When did you first appear before the Magistrate?—On the 25th September, or 26th, I would not be sure.

21066. There was only one hearing?—Yes. It was on the 25th I think. I think it was adjourned to the next day.

21067. The hearing was on the 26th?—Yes.

21068. That was before Mr. Cluer at Old Street Police Court?—Yes.

21069. What evidence was given against you?—A constable came in, got into the witness-box, and took the oath.

21070. Which one?—Constable 45.

21071. Do you mean the one you were charged with assaulting, or some other one?—The constable I was charged with assaulting.

21072. Was that Police-constable 47 H R?—Yes. He got into the witness-box, and said he was conveying a prisoner to the station, and I came behind him and hit him in the ear, and turned round and ran away again, something to that effect.

21073. (Chairman.) Did you keep the summons?—Yes.

21074. Have you got the summons?—Yes. (Producing.)

The summons was put in, and is as follows:—

"In the Metropolitan Police District.

"To Arthur Harding, of 10, Gibralter Gardens, Bethnal Green.

"Information has been laid this day by Michael Cann, P.C. 47 HR, for that you on the 12th day of September, in the year one thousand nine hundred and six, at Sclater Street, within the district aforesaid, did unlawfully assault and beat one Michael Cann, a constable of the Metropolitan Police Force, then and there in the execution of his duty as such constable.

"You are therefore summoned to appear before the Court of Summary Jurisdiction, sitting at the Old Street Police Court, on Tuesday, the 25th day of September, at the hour of two in the afternoon, to answer to the said information.

"Given under my hand and seal this 18th day of September, one thousand nine hundred and six.

"(Signed) H. C. Biron

"(One of the Magistrates of the Police Courts of the Metropolis)."

21075. (Earl Russell.) Did you know this constable before?—Yes, I have seen him about the streets, living in the neighbourhood.

21076. Had you interfered with him when he was taking a prisoner to the station?—No, I never moved out of the public-house I was in.

21077. Or struck him?—No, I never went near the crowd.

21078. Did he call out anything to you as he went to the station?—I would not be sure it was him, but it was one of the constables. They had about four or five constables there. One of them—I do not know which of them exactly called out, "All right, Harding, we will have you for this."

21079. One of the constables called that out?—Yes.

21080. You could not say which of them?—No, I could not say which of them.

21081. Two other constables gave evidence against you, did they not?—Yes, and said they saw me fight the officer.

21082. They both did?—Yes.

21083. Was anything said as to why you were not arrested at the time?—I think I asked the constable the question, if I had assaulted him, why did they not come and take me out of bed as they did on other occasions, on suspicion, or anything like that, as they often do. I saw one of the constables the next morning, and he said, "Good morning" to me: he never mentioned the affair. In cases like that they generally arrest a man if they think they have assaulted a constable, or anything like that.

21084. On that occasion was evidence given against you by three constables?—Yes.

21085. Any other witnesses?—No.

21086. Then you went into the witness-box and gave evidence yourself?—Yes.

21087. You said you were in a public-house called the "King's Arms"?—Yes, in Sclater Street.

21088. Where the arrest took place?—Where the assault was alleged to have taken place.

21089. Did you see an arrest taking place in Sclater Street when you were there?—I saw them taking a man to the station.

21090. You saw a man in custody being taken to the station through Sclater Street?—Yes.

21091. Where were you when you saw that?—In the public-house doorway.

21092. On the premises of the public-house, or on the pavement?—On the premises—on the doorway.

21093. What did you say when you saw the man being taken along in custody?—I saw the way they were ill-treating the man, and I could not stop myself, so I shouted out, "Don't kill the man," or something to that effect. Then it was one of the constables turned round and said, "All right, Harding, we will have you for this."

21094. You called three other witnesses?—Yes, those that were playing "Dart" with me at the time.

21095. They gave evidence to the same effect?—Yes.

21096. Mr. Cluer dismissed the charge?—Yes.

21097. You tell the Commissioners now that you never assaulted that constable?—Yes, I tell them I never went near the crowd, knowing well that if they saw me near it I should have got a knock on the head, and been rendered insensible.

21098. The Police do know you very well, and you have very often been in custody?—Yes, and I have often received a hiding off them.

21099. Have you been arrested again since this charge was dealt with?—Yes.

21100. How many times?—Twice since then.

21101. What has happened to you on those occasions?—I have been detained in the station for a few hours, and, after being put up for identification, I have been told I can go.

21102. You have not been brought before a Magistrate on either occasion?—On neither occasion.

21103. Can you give the dates on which you were arrested?—The last one was last Saturday week. I was going into a public-house, and two constables came up to me and said, "We arrest you on suspicion of having stolen a 56 lbs. tub of butter, and also assaulting a man at the station." I asked the Inspector whether he would fetch the prosecutor, as I wanted to go home. The man came, I was placed amongst others for identification, and then I was told I could go, they were satisfied.

21104-5. There was no actual charge made against you. You were arrested on suspicion and released?

21106. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The date of this assault, when the man was taken into custody, was the 12th September?—I believe so; I would not be sure.

21107. There were two men in custody?—Only one going along Sclater Street.

21108. Who was that?—A man named Callaghan, I heard afterwards.

21109. Do you know him at all?—By sight I know him.

21110. By name?—I certainly know him by name.

21111. Why did you say, "Callaghan, I heard afterwards," if you knew him by sight and name?—Because when I was walking through Brick Lane, about an hour after his arrest, somebody came up and said, "Do you know who that was they took along there?" They said, "It was young Charley Callaghan; they didn't half knock him about."

21112. Did you not know him when they were taking him into custody?—No.

21113. But he was a man you knew by sight quite well?—Quite well—never hardly to be in his company, or anything like that.

21114. How long had you known him by sight?—Twelve or fifteen months.

21115. You knew it was Callaghan?—I heard afterwards it was Callaghan.

21116. You saw the constable who had hold of him?—No, I saw a dense mass of people, about 300 people, and I saw some men with helmets on struggling in the midst of it, and I could see they were ill-treating the man, because from the public-house doorway I could see there were hundreds of people round, and in the centre, going towards that way, was the constables and the prisoner.

21117. Do you mean there was such a crowd round them that all you could see were the helmets?—The helmets. Sometimes a constable pushes the people back when they were getting in close behind.

21118. What were they doing to him?—Knocking him about, punching him in the back, and all that.

21119. You could see that, could you?—Yes, when the crowd opens, and the constable says, "Get out of it."

21120. When the crowd opened in that way, could you see who the constables were?—I saw two.

21121. When the crowd opened in that way could you see it was Callaghan they were holding?—No.

21122. Why was that?—Because the constables are quite big, and he is little.

21123. When the crowd opened could not you see Callaghan too?—No, they were taking him that way, and I was going that way.

21124. He was going in a direction away from you?—Yes.

21125. And his face was turned away from you?—Yes.

21126. The constables were going in the same direction?—They were taking him to the station.

21127. How was it you recognised the constables?—Because the constables turned round to get the people back.

21128. What became of Callaghan when they were doing that?—There were four or five other constables there.

21129. You did not see that it was Callaghan at all?—No.

21130. That was only what somebody told you afterwards?—Yes, that was what I heard afterwards.

21131. How far were you from this man whom you know now to be Callaghan?—From about where I am standing now, to the sergeant standing at the post there.

21132. About 15 or 20 feet?—It might have been more. I could not be exact. Now I come to think of it, this is not the width of the road.

21133. Now you come to think of it it was much further?—Yes.

21134. How much further was it now you come to think of it?—It might have been five or ten yards more.

21135. Or 15 yards more?—It may have been.

21136. Your memory is not very exact as to the distance you were away?—No.

21137. Were you near enough to shout to the constables?—Certainly I was near enough.

21138. So that they could hear you?—Yes.

21139. You were in such a position that they could see who it was who was shouting out?—I could not say.

21140. Have you no idea on the subject?—No.

A Tresadern.

4 Dec. 1906.

There being a lot of people present, they may have seen my face or they may not.

21141. Do you know if they saw you?—Standing in the doorway, with people in between, and the constables over there struggling with the prisoner, how do I know whether they saw my face or not? They may have heard my voice.

21142. They were near enough to recognise your voice, you think?—Yes.

21143. In all this crowd and commotion?—Yes.

21144. And only your voice?—Yes.

21145. They could not see your face?—No. They may have done.

21146. They may have been near enough to see your face?—They may have been near enough to see my face; I could not say.

21147. Certainly they were near enough to hear your voice?—They were near enough to hear my voice, certainly. One of them passed the remark—he heard it, because he hollaoed out what he did.

21148. What is it you say he holloaed out?—"All right, Harding, we will have you for this."

21149. Can you say what constable it was who said that?—Who holloaed out?

21150. Yes?—No, I could not say which one it was.

21151. Are you sure it was a constable at all?—Turning their head, I should have thought it was a constable—besides, nobody else had a reason for shouting that out.

21152. Are you sure it was a constable at all who shouted that out?—There may be a doubt, but I should not think so. Why should a private individual turn round and shout that out?

21153. Is that your sole reason for saying it was a constable—because no private individual would do it? Is that your only reason?—Yes.

21154. That is your only reason?—Yes.

21155. You said a moment ago that the constable turned his head. Which constable turned his head?—I could not exactly say which one did it. There were four or five there.

21156. One of them turned his head, did he?—Yes.

21157. Is that the one who shouted?—I could not say.

21158. Did it come from his direction?—Yes, it came from his direction.

21159. You did not recognise his voice?—No, it sounded more like one tall, fair fellow, but he is not here at the present time. He never gave evidence at the police court.

21160. Who is that?—I do not know his number. He is a tall, fair man.

21161. Do you not know his name or number?—I do not know his number, and I do not know his name.

21162. You know the Police in the district very well, do you not?—As much as they know me.

21163. That is very well?—That is very well.

21164. Cannot you tell me his name or number?—No. One of the other constables there may be able to tell you, but I did not exactly take notice of his number.

21165. There were hundreds of people there, I think you said?—Two or three hundred all round.

21166. And you were known, I suppose, to a good many people about there?—Yes.

21167. And anybody who heard that shouted out could have seen that you were standing 5, 10, 15, 20, or 50 yards off. Anybody could have seen that when that was shouted out?—Not anybody, because those at the back could not have seen where I was standing.

21168. But those round about you could?—Yes.

21169. They could see you were standing there having nothing at all to do with the matter?—Standing in the doorway, yes.

21170. And yet the policeman, before those hundreds of witnesses, shouts out to an innocent bystander, "I will have you for this." That is your statement?—My shouting, "Don't kill the man," you understand, he very likely meant—not in the exact words some people would take it—"We will give one when we get the opportunity."

21171. I am pointing out to you that the constable announced in the presence of hundreds of people that that was what he was going to do?—They are not frightened of hundreds of shopkeepers. A very respectable shopkeeper there heard a constable tell him he would bash his brains out in front of all of them.

21172. Can you name any respectable shopkeeper who has heard a constable say that?—Yes.

21173. What is his name and address?—A barber in Sclater Street.

21174. What is his name?—I do not know his name.

21175. What is the number in the street?—The inspector could tell you. It is next door to a draper's shop, just before you get to Brick Lane, and there is a Jewish shop opposite—they were all present when a constable came behind me, knocked me down, and when I got up I heard him pass the remark; and they all told me to go to the station, and the constable stopped me from going to the station when I got half way.

21176. The instance you gave was of a constable before a respectable tradesman offering to bash his brains out?—Yes.

21177. Who heard that, the barber?—The barber and the people in the opposite shop.

21178. What is the name?—Miss Jacobs, I think the name is.

21179. What is her occupation?—A shopkeeper.

21180. Of what kind?—A grocer's shop.

21181. Opposite the barber's shop?—Yes.

21182. Is there more than one grocer's shop opposite the barber?—No.

21183. Only one?—Only one.

21184. And you still say the constable in the presence of these hundreds of people shouted out that he was going to take you for something you did not do?—Yes.

21185. Did you recognise any of the constables who were present on this occasion on the 12th September?—No, only the tall fair policeman.

21186. Did you recognise any of the other constables?—No, not until I saw them in the police court. I did not know they were the men who were present at the time until I saw them in the police court.

21187. Did you recognise any of them as having been present?—No.

21188. You do not know the number of any of the constables who were present on that occasion?—Since then I know the numbers.

21189. By their saying they were there?—Yes.

21190. What I want to know is whether you saw and recognised any of them?—No.

21191. You are quite sure of that?—Yes.

21192. When you were before Mr. Cluer giving your evidence did you swear, "I saw Police-constables 47 and 164 there"?—I may have done, yes.

21193. Then that is untrue?—What do you mean by untrue?

21194. Is it untrue?—Certainly not.

21195. That you saw them there?—I saw them there—very likely I did—but I never knew them until I saw them at the police court.

21196. Was that what you meant when you swore before Mr. Cluer, "I saw Police-constables 47 and 164 there"?—I saw them there.

21197. That is what you said?—I did not say I saw them there—I did not know them personally until I saw at the police court that they were the men.

21198. Is that what you meant when you swore before Mr. Cluer, "I saw Constables 47 and 164 there"?—Yes.

21199. Is this what you said before Mr. Cluer: "I know Police-constable 47 H R by sight. I did not see him on the ground with Callaghan. I saw Police-constables 47 and 164 there." Do you mean to say you meant the magistrate to understand that you did not recognise those men at the time when you saw them?—(No answer).

21200. Have you any answer?—Will you read it again?

21201. I shall not read it again. Do you represent that you are a person of good character?—No; after being convicted I do not think I am a man of good character. I am only what they have made me. That is all.

21202. What who have made you?—What they have made me.

21203. Who?—The police.

21204. Did you tell Lord Russell you were a cabinet-maker?—Yes.

21205. When were you last employed as a cabinet-maker?—For my father.

21206. When?—Nine months ago.

21207. How long were you in his employment as a cabinet-maker?—Only about three months.

21208. And that is nine months ago?—Yes.

21209. Since then have you been the constant companion of convicted thieves?—Not the constant companion. I might stop and talk now and again to a man I know.

21210. The constant companion of convicted thieves engaged in robberies from vans, and from foot passengers in the neighbourhood of Commercial Street, Globe Road, and Royston Street?—No.

21211. Do you know Mr. William Southey, a draper, of 123 and 190, Brick Lane?—Yes.

21212. Is that anywhere near the barber you have spoken of?—Yes.

21213. Is it next door?—Yes.

21214. Has he been at that address ever since you have known the place?—Yes, I have bought my shirts and things there; he knows me quite well.

21215. Would it be true if he said that he had never known you to do a day's work?—Certainly not. What does the man know what I do to earn my living?

21216. Would this be true: "From early morning till late at night he and his gang have been a great annoyance to me and other tradesmen, and our businesses have suffered by the conduct of this gang. I have seen Harding molest and rob people, and assist other thieves in committing thefts. On one occasion this gang, including Harding, robbed a man outside my shop, and then threw the man through my shop window. Would that be true?—No, certainly not true.

21217. "I have also seen Harding and his gang rob vans, take the goods into doorways, and send small boys to fetch them with barrows." Would that be true?—No.

21218. "And he and his gang are terrors to the inhabitants of this place"?—No.

21219. All that would be quite untrue?—Yes.

21220. There is no justification for it?—No.

21221. Do you know Joseph Fleming, a boot manufacturer, of 125 and 127, Brick Lane?—Yes.

21222. He is an Alderman of the Bethnal Green Borough Council?—Yes.

21223. Would it be true if he says, "I have known Harding five or six years"? Would that be true?—Yes, it may be.

21224. "He never works"?—How does he know I do not work?

21225. "But is a practical thief, and leader of a dangerous gang of thieves that infest this locality." Would that certainly be true?—Certainly not true. What do you mean—true?

21226. Do you know William Williams, a draper, of 194, Brick Lane?—No.

21227. Do you not?—No.

21228. He is head assistant in the employ of J. C. B. Richardson, drapers. Do you know Richardson's shops, 194, 196, and 198, Brick Lane?—Yes.

21229. You know that establishment?—Yes.

21230. Do you know the head assistant, Williams?—No, I do not.

21231. "I have known the man Harding about five years. He appears to be the head of a gang of thieves that frequent this Lane. I have never known of him having any employment. He is always about with other thieves, mixing in crowds during the busy hours of the market. Amongst his associates are Bob Wheeler." Do you know Bob Wheeler?—I do.

21232. Do you know Dido?—I do.

21233. A gentleman or a lady?—His name signifies that he is a gentleman.

21234. Do you know Emesly?—I know a man named Emesly.

21235. Is he a cooper?—Yes.

21236. Newman?—Yes.

21237. Are those all convicted thieves?—All convicted thieves.

21238. Are they all associates of yours?—What do you mean by "associates"? I talk to them when I see them. That is all.

21239. Do you know Arthur John Ruthe, a draper, of 186, Brick Lane?—Yes.

21240. "I have known the man Harding four or five years." Is that right?—Yes.

21241. "As a member of a gang of thieves who loiter about Brick Lane from morning to night, and their presence loitering about is detrimental to business. Respectable people are afraid to come in the Lane to do their trading." That is the description Mr. Ruthe gives of you. Is that true?—No.

21242. Mr. Enoch Power, a bird-dealer, of 91, Sclater Street, says this. You know Sclater Street. You are frequently there, are you not?—I may be.

21243. "I have lived in Sclater Street between 23 and 24 years. I have known Harding and his gang for two or three years as a thief, having seen him jump vans and take stuff off them more than once. Since Harding and his gang have used Sclater Street they have ruined business and ruined the street." Is that true?—No.

21244. Henry James Gellender, leather seller, of 191, Vallance Road, Bethnal Green, says this. Do you know Mr. Gellender, of Vallance Road?—I do not.

21245. Do you know a leather seller's shop at 191, Vallance Road?—No.

21246. Do you know Vallance Road?—I do.

21247. Do you know Mr. Hochfeld, of Vallance Road?—No.

21248. Would it be true that you have been continually seen in the neighbourhood of 162, Bethnal Green Road?—No.

21249. Do you know Bethnal Green Road?—Yes. I think you had better ask the Inspector who made the inquiries what part of Bethnal Green that may be.

21250. Would it be true if anyone in Bethnal Green said "I have continually seen Harding and his clique molest and rob people of their watches and handbags"?—Is it true?

21251. Yes?—Certainly not.

21252. "I have known Harding between five and six years. Never known him to work"?—No.

21253. Do you know Mr. Alfred William Witherick, the licensee of the "Rising Sun" public-house, 92, Sclater Street?—Yes, I do.

21254. "I have known Harding about six months." Would that be right?—Yes.

21255. "As an associate of bad characters who never, to my knowledge, do any work"?—That may be a bit true.

21256. That you are an associate of bad characters who never do any work?—That may be a bit true.

21257. Several people, if these statements are true in your neighbourhood, seem to have a very bad opinion of you?—Each one of them says there have been several robberies, and yet I have been free from prison for nearly three and a half years, and there are honest, straight people yet. I have never been convicted for one offence, and yet they saw me commit so many. That is a very funny thing.

21258. The police do not seem to be doing their duty, do they?—No; and they do not seem to be doing their duty if they say they saw me do it. Why did they not go to the station and have me arrested? They had nothing to fear.

21259. Although they say you and your gang are the terrors of the neighbourhood?—Yes. It is a funny thing they say they saw me commit numerous robberies, and yet they have never gone up and had me arrested, or been a witness against me.

21260. That seems to be so?—Why do they not get me taken to the court? I saw the Inspector deliberately go into a shop and point me out to a man in the shop. He cannot deny it.

A. Tresadern. Dec. 1906.

21261. What do you say you have actually seen?—I have seen the Inspector telling them what to say—that I was the man.

21262. Pointing you out to see whether you were the man they were talking about?—Pointing—that man there.

21263. There is no mistake about it. You were the man they were talking about?—Yes; after the Inspector told them, certainly.

21264. I do not want to take you in too much detail, but you have on a great many occasions been arrested?—Yes.

21265. Sometimes the people have failed to identify you?—Yes.

21266. On a great many occasions?—Yes.

21267. When they have failed to identify you have you been wearing different clothes to what you were wearing on the day of the alleged robbery?—How do I know on what days the robberies were committed?

21268. Were you wearing different clothes when you were identified?—How do I know whether I was wearing different clothes?

21269. You say you do not remember.

21270. (Chairman.) He does not say that?—You asked me whether I was wearing different cloths at the time I was put up for identification.

21271. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) On any of those occasions?—At the time the robberies were committed, how do I know what clothes I was wearing if I did not commit the robberies?

21272. Do you mean you do not know whether at the time you were put up for identification on any of these occasions you were wearing different clothes from the clothes you were wearing on the day of the robbery?—I have only one suit at a time; I cannot afford any more. I have always only one suit.

21273. I will tell you what the suggestion is. It is that as soon as you have committed one of the street robberies you go home and change your clothes?—That is a mistake if they suggest such a thing. I am under the Prevention of Crimes Act. Why do they not give me twelve months for living dishonestly?

21274. That is another complaint against the police—that they ought to have proceeded against you under the Prevention of Crimes Act?—If they saw what they have been putting down against me they would have been justified in doing so. I could prove I have been getting an honest living.

21275. If I may respectfully say so, they ought to have proceeded against you under the Prevention of Crimes Act. You have been convicted also, in spite of the number of times you have been arrested and never charged. You have been arrested a good many times and taken to the police station, but there has been a failure to identify you, and then you were discharged?—Yes.

21276. There was another case, when you were arrested for carrying a bag of onions, on a charge of unlawful possession?—A sack of lemons. I was selling them at the time.

21277. Did a police-constable come up to you and ask you to account for the possession of that bag of lemons?—Yes. I told him where I got them from. He was not satisfied.

21278. Did you drop them on the ground, and tell him to find out where you got them?—I dropped them on the ground. I said: "I bought them in the market. If that will not satisfy you, I do not know what will satisfy you."

21279. When you got to the station, did you tell them that your mother had bought the lemons?—I did.

21280. And that was the fact?—Yes; she had bought them.

21281. Why did you not say so when the officer stopped you?—I did say so.

21282. The officer was Alfred Putt, was he not?—I do not know his name.

21283. Putt was his name. Is this a correct account of what took place? "On the 30th November, 1905, I was on duty in Hare Street, Bethnal Green, when I saw the above"—that is Tresadern, alias Harding—"carrying something in a sack on his shoulder." Is that right?—In Bethnal Green?

21284. Yes, in Hare Street, Bethnal Green. "I stopped him, and asked him where he got them from. He replied, 'You f——g well find out'"?—I never said anything of the kind. I said, "I have lemons there. I have bought them at the market."

21285. "He refused to give any information whatever as to how he had obtained what I could see was a bag of"—"onions" I have it in my copy—"lemons"?—Yes.

21286. "I told him I should have to take him to the police station. He replied, 'Do as you like. I shall not tell you where I got them from'"?—I said nothing of the kind.

21287. "I then took him to the station, where he told the officer on duty that the lemons had been purchased at Spitalfields Market by his mother. His mother attended at the station shortly afterwards, and produced receipts showing that the onions"—you say it ought to be "lemons"—"had been purchased a short time before at Spitalfields, and he was then allowed to go"?—Yes.

21288. That was rather a triumph over the police, was it not?—A triumph?

21289. You understand what I mean by a triumph?—I understand what you mean. It was rather a failure for them. That is all.

21290. That is the same thing.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

Wednesday, 5th December 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).

Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).

J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

(Chairman.) Is Tresadern here?

(No. answer.)

(Chairman.) Have you any other witness, Lord Russell?

(Earl Russell.) Frederick Smith is here, Sir.

(Chairman.) Then he may be called.

FREDERICK SMITH, sworn.

F. Smith.
5 Dec. 1906.

21291. (Earl Russell.) Are you manager of the King's Arms public-house in Sclater Street?—Yes.

21292. Do you recollect on the 12th September being there with Tresadern and others?—It was about 12, I think—on a Wednesday.

21293. Do you remember Tresadern being there?—He stood on the doorstep.

21294. Do you mean all the time. What was he doing at first?—He had been playing dart at first.

21295. What took him to the doorstep?—There had been a row in the street.

(Earl Russell.) Tresadern is here now, Sir, if you would rather he continued his evidence.

(Chairman.) Yes, perhaps it will be better. We will recall Mr. Smith.

ARTHUR TRESADERN, recalled.

A. Tresadern.

21296. (Mr. Muir.) You mentioned yesterday the number of times that you had been acquitted. You have also been convicted a number of times?—Three times.

21297. How old were you at the date of your first conviction?—14.

21298. What was that for?—Gambling. I was fined 2s. 6d. or one day.

21299. Was that a conviction which took place on the 27th of March, 1901?—Yes, that may have been the one.

21300. Was the charge disorderly conduct?—Gambling, I think.

21301. What happened to you?—2s. 6d. or one day.

21302. The charge I am speaking of is before that. On the 27th March, 1901, were you charged with disorderly conduct and bound over in the sum of £5?—Yes, that is right.

21303. What was the disorderly conduct?—Running about or something to that effect.

21304. At that time you were thirteen years of age?—Yes.

21305. Do you remember who was the magistrate?—I do not remember the magistrate.

21306. Were you in April of the same year, the next month, again before a police magistrate charged with being a suspected person?—Yes.

21307. On that occasion you were discharged?—Yes.

21308. At that time you were only thirteen years of age?—Yes.

21309. Then in January of 1902 there is a sentence of one day?—That was for gambling, I think.

21310. It is called on the records being a suspected person?—No, I do not think so.

21311. That is a different thing from the 2s. 6d.?—Yes.

21312. Did you pay the 2s. 6d.?—Yes, I paid the 2s. 6d.

21313. Is there another conviction apart from the 2s. 6d. on the 16th January, 1902, of being a suspected person and a sentence of one day?—No, I do not recollect that.

21314. In March, 1902, you would then be 14 years of age?—Yes.

21315. In March, 1902, for larceny you were sentenced to twelve months' hard labour?—Yes.

21316. Was that at the Sessions?—The North London Sessions.

21317. A sentence of twelve months at the age of 14? Yes, 14 or 15, I would not be sure.

21318. Then in March of the following year, that would be after you had done your twelve months, were you up again for larceny from the person?—I was taken out of a coffee-shop for identification, and a boy said I had stolen his watch.

21319. Did the magistrate deal with it?—I was sent for trial to the North London Sessions, and I was found guilty and sentenced to 20 months' hard labour.

21320. No, before that—just a month before, in March, were you up before a magistrate charged with larceny from the person?—Yes.

21321. And discharged on that occasion?—Yes.

21322. Then in the April of 1903 came your conviction at the Sessions for larceny from the person?—Yes.

21323. For which you got 20 months?—Yes.

21324. At the age of 15?—Yes. I may have been a year older.

21325. 15 or 16?—Yes.

21326. Then you were twice had up before a magistrate in January and May, 1905, once for larceny from a van and once for larceny from the person?—I was taken out of bed one morning in 1905 on a charge of stealing three bales of cloth.

21327. From a van?—Yes. I was remanded for one week, but there was no evidence that the police could offer against me and I was discharged.

21328. That was in January?—Yes.

21329. In May of the same year there was another charge of larceny from the person?—It was just one Sunday night when a man gave me in charge, and said I had shot his brother the night before.

21330. I am not speaking of shooting?—That is shooting also. When I was taken to the station this man found out he had made a mistake, and he charged me with stealing a bag from a woman, and I was charged on his evidence. There was no prosecutor or anything, and I was brought in front of the magistrate the next morning, who discharged me.

21331. Then in April, 1906 (May, 1905, was the larceny from the person that I am speaking of), were you charged with shooting a woman with intent to do her grievous bodily harm?—I was charged with shooting a man, and a week after they brought forward a charge of shooting a woman or a young girl.

21332. The girl was, in fact, struck by a bullet?—So she says, but I do not know whether she was struck or not.

21333. There was medical evidence of it, was there not?—Yes, but the bullet never entered her chest.

21334. No, it did not, but she was struck by it?—Yes.

21335. You were committed for trial at the Central Criminal Court?—Yes.

21336. On a charge of shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm?—Yes.

21337. And you were acquitted there?—Yes.

21338. In that same month of April, you having been acquitted on the 6th April, on the 13th were you arrested again on a charge of robbery?—A week after—Good Friday night.

21339. Was the charge robbery with violence?—Yes, that was the charge.

21340. How far did that get?—I was discharged the next morning by the Magistrate. There was no evidence against me.

21341. No evidence at all?—No.

21342. Nobody appeared?—The prosecutor told the Inspector at the station at the time that I was not the man who robbed him, and there were two witnesses who said I was there at the time, but I said I was walking on the other side with a girl at the time it happened. On that evidence the Inspector charged me, and the next morning the Magistrate said there was not a particle of evidence against me, and discharged me. It was something to that effect.

A. Tresadern.

5 Dec 1906.

21343. The prosecutor did not come forward?—He did come forward. He told the Inspector I was not the man who had robbed him, and I was not concerned in robbing him.

21344. There were two boys who came to the station?—Yes.

21345. What were their names—Jacobs?—Maurice Gotleib, and the other was Rosenblaum, or something like that.

21346. Two small boys?—Yes. They have since told me that the constable gave one of them 3d. to pick me out at the station.

21347. One of those boys told you that?—Yes.

21348. Those two boys live in your neighbourhood?—Yes.

21349. You knew them quite well by sight, did you?—I knew them by sight, but not quite well. I only knew them as living in the neighbourhood; that is all.

21350. On the 24th July in this year again were you charged with assault?—Yes.

21351. Where was that?—In Brick Lane.

21352. Where were you charged?—I was charged at Commercial Street, I think, but I am not sure.

21353. Were you convicted?—Yes.

21354. And fined £5 or a month?—Yes.

21355. Who was the person who complained of being assaulted on that occasion?—A stranger to me. A man insulted me, as witnesses came forward and proved. He called me a name, and I had a right to defend myself. He attacked me first.

21356. You assaulted him, did you?—I had a fair fight with him.

21357. A fair fight with him, but Mr. Cluer fined you £5 or a month?—Yes.

21358. Which did you elect to do?—I paid the £5.

21359. And then, on the 26th September, comes the assault that we are dealing with now?—Yes—the 12th September, I think.

21360. It was the 26th when you were before the Magistrate?—Yes. You have not dealt with all the cases in which I have been taken up for identification.

21361. I have dealt with those before where the charges were refused?—But there are more. You have not said how many times I have been taken out of bed, or how many times I have been taken out of music halls.

21362. There were a number of cases in which you were taken to the police station for the purpose of identification, and you were not identified?—Yes.

21363. The Inspector refused the charges?—He did not refuse the charges at all. I was taken there and detained in a cell, and then placed among other men and then had to wait until the prosecutors had a look at me to see if I was the man who had committed the robberies or not, and then I was sent away.

21364. You were sent away without being taken before the Magistrate?—Yes; there was absolutely nothing whatever for them to detain me there for.

21365. That is what we call refusing a charge. With regard to this public-house that you were standing outside of on this 12th September, that is the King's Arms?—Yes.

21366. Are you in the habit of using that public-house?—Not in the habit. I am a teetotaller. I do not generally go into public-houses.

21367. Are you in the habit of using that public-house for any purpose at all?—I may go in there once a week.

21368. Never oftener than once a week?—No, I should not think it was oftener.

21369. And do you meet your friends there?—My friends! I meet some respectable people in there when I do go in there.

21370. I ask you whether you meet your friends there?—No, not my friends. I meet respectable people there.

21371. You never meet any friends there?—If you put it in that way, yes, I do meet some friends there.

21372. And some of them are men who have been convicted?—One or two of them may have been convicted. I do not ask for their convictions before I speak to them. They are as good as me, some of them, and some are better.

21373. And some as bad?—Some may be bad. I do not know.

21374. How do you pass your time in this public-house when you go there?—Talking about different things. Sometimes we have a friendly game of darts or coddam, or some game like that.

21375. Is the game of coddam sometimes called shove-halfpenny?—No. You hold a farthing in your hands, and the other side has to find it, and the one who finds it has a chalk.

21376. They have to guess which hand it is in?—Yes.

21377. You shuffle it underneath the table, and bring your hands up, and that is called coddam?—Yes.

21378. What are the stakes at this game?—No stakes at all.

21379. A mere pastime?—A mere pastime. It is played in nearly every public-house, I believe, and in every coffee shop.

21380. So far as your experience goes?—Yes.

21381. How many hours do you spend in the public-house playing coddam or darts, or whatever the game may be?—I may be in there two hours, or I may be in there three hours—not much more.

21382. And your companions play with you, of course?—The people who come in the house for a glass of ale might be invited to have a game, that is all. They do not stop in there for the purpose of playing.

21383. Have you ever played before with Miller?—I may have played once or twice or three times before with him.

21384. Have you done it?—Yes.

21385. Not oftener than once or twice or three times?—I should not think much more.

21386. And Andrews. Have you played with him before?—I might have done. I would not be sure.

21387. Can you recollect whether you did or not?—No; I cannot recollect.

21388. Were there any others playing at the game on this 12th September besides you and Andrews and Miller?—I think there were two strangers, I believe so; and I believe the governor was playing the game, too. I am not sure.

21389. Who was?—The manager of the place, I believe, was playing.

21390. You mean Mr. Smith?—I mean the manager. I call him the governor.

21391. Do you mean Frederick Smith, who has been called?—Yes, Mr. Smith.

21392. You believe he was playing at this game?—I believe so; I won't be sure now.

21393. And on other occasions has he joined in the game also?—He might sit down to have a quiet game of coddam.

21394. I want to know whether he has done so?—I saw him playing one night in the house.

21395. Once?—Yes.

21396. Only once?—Yes.

21397. Never oftener than that one time?—I only go in there once a week, and he may have been out the other times. I only saw him in there one night playing.

21398. You only remember one occasion on which he joined in this game with you. Is that right?—He may have been playing on the night.

21399. You would not like to pledge yourself?—No, I would not. He may have been playing that night.

21400. Then on this particular night how long had you been playing before you went outside to see what was happening when the noise came along?—I think I had been there an hour and a half.

21401. What had you been drinking?—Ginger beer.

21402. And what had the others been drinking?—I do not generally take notice of what people drink, but I think some of them were drinking glasses of ale.

21403. Andrews, for example. What was he drinking?—Ale.

21404. And Miller?—I could not say what Miller was drinking.

21405. And the manager, Smith?—I could not say. He generally has a bottle of ale, or something like that. I do not look over people and hear what they order.

21406. As this procession was passing with the policeman that you have described—I do not want to go over the ground again—it was only a few steps from you as you stood at the door of the public-house?—When we came outside it was outside Morris's shop, about the same distance as I am from the door of this Court.

21407. Did it continue to get further away from you, or to come nearer to you?—Going away from me.

21408. So that you never saw anything except the backs of the people who were there?—No. I may have seen the constables' faces; I could not be sure.

21409. Did you go to the police court next day, when Callaghan was up before the magistrate?—I went there with his wife.

21410. With Callaghan's wife?—Yes.

21411. Were you in court?—No.

21412. Where were you?—I was in the public-house opposite.

21413. Did you not go into court and hear the thing at all?—No, because I should have been refused if I had attempted to get in. They generally refuse admittance into the police court to people they happen to know, unless they are taken there by force.

21414. Did you hear any of the officers give their evidence about Callaghan?—No.

21415. Your suggestion, as I understand it, is that, being in custody on the 18th September, you were not identified on that charge that you were in custody for?—When six detectives came up and broke my door open, and took me out of bed, you are alluding to?

21416. Yes, that is the 18th September?—Yes.

21417. You were in custody on suspicion of being concerned in some charge of robbery?—Yes.

21418. And Local Inspector Wensley was the officer who had charge of that case?—He was the man who took charge of the identification when we were standing in the room.

21419. You know Mr. Wensley, I suppose, quite well?—I only know his face. I do not know him to speak to.

21420. But you know his appearance quite well?—Yes.

21421. You know he is a local detective-inspector?—I do not know that. I know he is an inspector.

21422. An inspector, and a detective-inspector?—Yes, through seeing his name in the newspapers in connection with cases.

21423. Constantly in that district you have seen his name in the newspapers?—Once or twice; I do not say constantly.

21424. Your suggestion, as I understand it—tell me if I am wrong—is that, you not being identified, Inspector Wensley said he would have you for something else?—I asked the detectives to stand over that way, further away from the door, as I knew they would not be backward in telling the prosecutor to pick me or somebody else out, and I asked why an officer had gone out, and Mr. Wensley said, "You have got too much of it; if we do not have you for this we will have you for something else."

21425. And next morning you were summoned, or the next day?—Yes, the policeman brought the summons.

21426. What time of the day, do you remember, or was it the same day that you were summoned?—The next day.

21427. Do you remember about the time?—Half-past 10, it may be.

21428. In the morning?—Yes.

21429. It is your idea that that summons was issued because you had not been identified on the 18th, is it?—I would not say that, because they may have applied for the summons beforehand.

21430. Then what was your suggestion about the summons being served the next day? You have told the Commissioners that Inspector Wensley said this to you, "If we do not have you for this we will have you for something else," and next day the summons was served?—Yes.

21431. What was your suggestion? What did you mean to suggest to the Commission?—That I should be arrested for something else in connection with which they would be able to get me convicted, such as getting some man to pick me out in the station and say I was the man who stole his watch.

21432. Was it not your suggestion that that summons had been issued because the man had failed to identify you on the 18th?—I never said that at all.

21433. I know you did not say it, but is not that what you intended the Commission to infer?—No, it is not.

21434. Not at all?—No, I am only telling you the words he said to me.

21435. Why did you bring the two things together in that way if that was not your suggestion?—It is my manner of speaking. I have not been educated in any college, and I do not understand grammar, or anything of that sort; it is the way I talk.

21436. Then you do not make that suggestion that that summons was issued because you were not identified on the 18th?—No.

21437. What time was it you were put up for identification on the 18th?—Half-past 7.

21438. At night?—At night.

21439. You know, do not you, that magistrates do not issue summonses after 5 o'clock in the day? They cease to sit?—The summons was obtained next morning, while I was in the police station.

21440. We know it is dated the 18th, so that it must have been issued before you were put for identification?—While I was in the station it was issued—while I was in the cells they went and obtained that summons.

21441. What time were you put in the cells?—Directly I arrived there—about 7 in the morning.

21442. Then do you suggest that it was applied for because you were there in custody, in case you should be identified? Is that your suggestion?—It may have been the case. I do not know the way they work these things. It may have been the case, and I should have thought it was the case.

21443. Why do you suggest that?—Because I heard afterwards that they applied to the Commissioner of Police for a summons, and he told them to go and get a summons. I think that was the case.

21444. From whom did you hear that?—I heard something of it at the police court, before the magistrate.

21445. So that you know now, do you, that that summons was applied for before you were in custody on the 18th at all?—I think it was. I only think. I cannot answer definitely. I do not know the workings of the case.

21446. Besides Callaghan, a man called Williams was also in custody on that night of the 12th September, was he not?—So I heard afterwards.

21447. Do you know him?—Yes.

21448. Stephen Williams is his name, is it not?—I do not know him by that name.

21449. Williams—you know the man?—I know the man you mean, but I do not know him by the name of Williams.

21450. What name do you know him by?—Cooper.

21451. Do you know that both those men were convicted before Mr. Mead?—Yes.

21452. How long have you known Callaghan?—Twelve or fifteen months.

21453. And how long have you known Cooper?—Two years.

21454. Has he lived in the same house with you?—No.

21455. Never?—Never.

A. Tresadern

5 Dec. 1906.

21456. Both of those men had been previously convicted?—I think so.

21457. Several times?—I could not say. I do not know whether they have been convicted several times.

21458. (Earl Russell.) Let me ask you about all these previous convictions you have been asked about. Before the first one that Mr. Muir spoke about, I think you were arrested with six others for sleeping out, were you not?—Yes.

21459. Did you know that that was the charge against you when you were taken up? Were you told that?—I do not exactly know the charge. I know the next morning the Inspector came in to us and told us that we should also be charged with stealing a log of wood, valued 3s. 9d., or something like that—a plank of wood.

21460. That case was tried before Mr. Haden Corser?—Yes.

21461. And dismissed?—Yes.

21462. Do you remember an occasion soon afterwards when you were walking with a boy carrying firewood?—Yes.

21463. What happened on that occasion?—A constable went up to him, and the boy got frightened, and he dropped the sack and started running away. The constable ran after him and caught him, and started taking him to the station. I went up and said, "What is the matter, George?" He said, "He is going to take me up." I said, "Come on, I know you have not done anything. I will be a witness for you." The constable said, "All right; come on, then, boy." When I got into the police station they charged me as well as him, and put me in the dock by the side of him.

21464. For unlawful possession?—Unlawful possession of something, I do not know what the charge was. The next day I was bailed out by my father, or my father fetched a man to bail me out, and I went to the police court the next morning and the case was dismissed against me, and the boy was remanded till Wednesday, when he was dismissed as well.

21465. Did the Magistrate say anything when he dismissed the case against you?—I believe he said the boy should never have been charged.

21466. Did he say anything about you?—I believe he said the Inspector should not have taken the charge against me, and that I had only come up as a witness. It is so many years ago that I cannot remember everything that occurred.

21467. Do you remember an occasion when you had some trouble in Whitecross Street with two detectives?—Yes.

21468. What happened on that occasion?—That was dismissed also.

21469. What happened? What were you charged with?—I was walking through Whitecross Street, and a detective came up to me and punched me, so I got frightened, and I started running away, and another one came up and knocked me down, and people started shouting out, "You cowards," and calling them names, so they started taking me to the station and searched me, and then they charged me as a suspected person waiting about to commit a felony—picking pockets.

21470. Was that at Worship Street Police Court?—Yes. I was brought up before the Magistrate on the Thursday and remanded till Saturday, and then I was discharged.

21471. Do you know what you were remanded for? Did you hear anything said about it?—Attempting to pick pockets, I believe.

21472. Do you know the reason why it was not disposed of at once, and why it was put off?—No, I do not.

21473. Then you were charged with playing pitch-and-toss and fined 2s. 6d. or one day's imprisonment?—Yes.

21474. Then there is the next case Mr. Muir referred to at the North London Sessions on the 4th March, 1902, when you were charged with stealing a bale of rags with an ex-convict. Is not that so?—Yes.

21475. You do not dispute the justice of that conviction? You admit you had a hand in that?—Yes.

21476. When you were being sentenced were there previous convictions proved against you?—Four.

21477. Do you know the officer who proved them?—Constable 381. He said something about me being convicted for stealing some tobacco at Clerkenwell Police Court, and I contradicted it, and there were some photographs shown to the jury. I do not believe I said anything at that time when I was standing in the dock. I scarcely knew what they were saying, and I did not take any notice of the convictions or anything. I was sentenced to twelve months.

21478. When did you know and understand that four previous convictions had been proved against you?—When I was in Wormwood Scrubs Prison I saw on my card "Previously convicted—four convictions." People used to say to me—the old men in there—"You ought to be sent to Batford." They asked me if I had been in prison before. I said no. They said I ought to be in with the stars. When I looked at the card I saw four previous convictions.

21479. By the stars you mean in the starred class of prisoners?—Yes. I asked the Governor why was that, and he told me there were four convictions, and he told me to write to the Home Secretary, and I believe I did so.

21480. How many times had you been convicted, because it is not necessary that you should be imprisoned? You understand, when you were fined that is a conviction?—Only that one day, and I was bound over to keep the peace.

21481. Were those the only two previous convictions before that, or was there another?—I believe they were the only two previous convictions.

21482. You were bound over for disorderly conduct and fined 2s. 6d. or one day for the pitch-and-toss?—Yes, I believe they were the only two convictions.

21483. When did you learn that one of these convictions referred to stealing tobacco?—When I was again tried at the North London Sessions.

21484. Not until after you got out of prison that time?—No.

21485. You say you wrote a letter to the Home Office. Are you sure you wrote a letter?—Yes, I am sure.

21486. While you were in Wormwood Scrubs?—Yes.

21487. Did you get any answer to that?—No.

21488. What did you complain of in that letter?—The convictions.

21489. I have no doubt that letter can be produced. After you came out you were arrested for stealing a watch, were you not?—Yes.

21490. What police court were you brought up at that time?—Worship Street.

21491. What was the result?—I was discharged.

21492. On the 25th February, 1903, were you again arrested for stealing a watch?—Yes.

21493. With another young man?—I was taken out of a coffee-shop and put up for identification.

21494. With another young man?—Yes.

21495. Who arrested you?—Detective-Sergeants Smart and Cabin.

21496. Then you were taken to Commercial Street Station and put up for identification?—Yes.

21497. Were you identified by the prosecutor?—A little boy came in and said I was one of the men who was there at the time the watch was stolen.

21498. That was true, was it not?—I was there, but I had no hand in stealing his watch.

21499. On that occasion you were tried at North London Sessions on the 21st April, 1903, and you were found guilty?—Yes.

21500. Did you tell the judge what you tell us now, that you were there but you did not steal it?—Yes.

21501. Did the jury add anything to their verdict of guilty?—Yes, they recommended the two of us to mercy on account of being young.

21502. Did Detective-Sergeant Pearce state anything?—He got up and said I was the leader of a gang of thieves in Brick Lane for the last four years, and since we have been arrested there were no purses stolen and no reports of robberies, and absolutely nothing happened in the whole division since we had been in Brixton.

21503. That is what he told the Judge?—Yes.

21504. Two previous convictions were proved against you on that occasion?—Yes, this one of stealing this tobacco.

21505. Did you say anything about the conviction of stealing tobacco on that occasion?—Yes, I denied it. The photographs were shown to the jury.

21506. What photographs?—The photograph of this man who was convicted for stealing the tobacco and a photograph of myself taken while I was doing my 12 months.

21507. Who produced those photographs—do you know where they came from?—No.

21508. The jury said the photographs were identical when they saw them?—I believe so.

21509. Did you ask that the officer who had to do with the Harding who stole the tobacco should be present?—Yes.

21510. You asked that?—Yes.

21511. And you said that was not your conviction?—Yes.

21512. Was anything done in consequence of that?—No, I was sentenced to 20 months, that is all.

21513. It was 381 H who proved these previous convictions, was it?—I believe that was the constable.

21514. Did he say anything about your earning your living by working?—No, not a word was mentioned about me working. He said I had never done a day's work in my life, and I had the firms there to prove that I had been working for them.

21515. On the 7th December, 1904, you were arrested while you were in bed. Do you remember that occasion?—Yes, I was taken out of bed.

21516. Do you remember who it was who arrested you?—Detective-Sergeant Brogden and Detective-Sergeant Dassant.

21517. That was on the charge of stealing watches and chains?—Yes, in the neighbourhood.

21518. Were you put up for identification?—Yes, on the Saturday morning.

21519. How many people came in to try and identify you?—Five or six.

21520. Were you identified?—No.

21521. And then you were released again?—Yes.

21522. Then on an occasion in February, 1905, were you taken out of bed again?—Yes.

21523. By Detective-Sergeant Dassant?—Yes.

21524. What were you charged with that time?—Stealing three bales of cloth.

21525. That was out of a van, was it not?—Yes, out of a van.

21526. Did you tell the officer anything when he arrested you?—I told him I did not know what he was talking about, and while I was talking to him he was searching the rooms, turning everything over. First of all, he came up and said it was a bale of boots that was stolen, and he suspected I had them in the room. After he searched the room Sergeant Brogden came up, and said, "Come on, you have been so clever about it, come downstairs," and when I got right down in the basement there was some cloth covered over with some sacks, so he said, "What do you know about that?" I said, "I don't know anything about it." We argued the point for a quarter of an hour, and he told my sister if she did not get upstairs they would take her as well, and finally they decided to take me to the station. I was kept there until 7 o'clock at night, and then the carman came in and said the cloth was stolen off his van, and I was charged. The next morning Mr. Cluer—I won't be sure whether it was Mr. Cluer or not—said there was no evidence and he must discharge me, so they asked for a remand to see if they could obtain any witnesses. I sent him round to a coffee shop where I was in at the time the stuff was stolen.

21527. Who asked for a remand, you or the police?—The police. I was remanded for a week, and the next week I had a solicitor, but it was not needed. The magistrate said, "The police don't propose to offer any evidence, as other families were living in the same house as you, and you were not responsible for the cloth being down there. There are other convicted people in the house, and therefore you must be discharged."

21528. So that after a remand for a week the police offered no evidence?—No evidence.

21529. Then two months later, when you were going home to dinner, you were arrested again on suspicion of stealing a watch and chain?—Yes.

21530. Were you put up for identification as usual?—Yes.

21531. Were you identified on that occasion?—No.

21532. You were allowed to go?—Yes.

21533. About a month later do you remember being arrested in Brick Lane by Detective-Sergeants Pearce and Tyson?—Yes.

21534. Charged with stealing several watches and chains?—Yes.

21535. Were you put up for identification at Commercial Street Station that time?—Yes.

21536. Do you remember several men came in to identify you?—There were two or three came in.

21537. What about the first who came in? Do you remember anything happening?—No.

21538. Did any of them identify you?—No. Afterwards they said to the prosecutor——

21539. Who said?—Detective Pearce said, "This is the man who stole your watch and chain," or "chain," or something to that effect. The man said, "I don't think it is," and Detective Pearce said, "We know for sure it is.'

21540. You were allowed to go then?—Yes.

21541. At the end of July, 1905, do you remember being arrested by P.C. 213 for disorderly conduct—about 15 months ago?—Yes, I was taken to the station.

21542. Did you meet anyone on the way to the station?—Another constable.

21543. Do you remember who it was you met on your way to the station?—I don't think I have been arrested for disorderly conduct.

21544. You do not remember that occasion?—No. I was arrested for fighting one Saturday night, and taken to the station. The man said, "It was a fair fight, and I gave him as much as he gave me, so I don't want to charge the man." The Inspector told me I could go. He said, "You can consider yourself a lucky man." I think that was this year—not last year.

21545. Is this a different case to the case of shooting at a girl, the case in which you were arrested in Bethnal Green Road for shooting?—Yes, that is a different case.

21546. You were arrested, were you, in Bethnal Green Road?—Yes.

21547. What was the charge of shooting that time?—Shooting a man on a Saturday night.

21548. Who came up when you were arrested—A police-constable?—Yes.

21549. Anyone else?—The man who was giving me in charge.

21550. Who did he say you had shot?—His brother.

21551. Then you were taken to the station?—Yes.

21552. Did anything happen on your way there?—Another constable came up and he said to the man, "You have made a mistake, his name is not Brewer; his name is Harding." The man said, "I am very sorry I have accused you of it; you can go; I don't want to charge you." I said, "Oh, you came up and said I have shot your brother and now you will come to the station and see it out." When we got to the station the man had a talk to the Inspector, and suddenly he came back and said, "If I don't have you for that I will have you for stealing a bag a month ago, opposite where I live."

21553. Before I come to the bag incident this man thought your name was Brewer?—Yes.

21554. You did all go to the station?—Yes.

21555. But the Inspector took no charge against you for shooting?—No, he said that was a mistake.

21556. And the man himself said he had made a mistake?—Yes.

A. Tresadern.

5 Dec. 1906.

21557. That was at the station to the Inspector?—Yes.

21558. What do you say the Inspector said about a lady's bag?—The man accused me then of stealing a lady's bag.

21559. The same man who charged you with shooting his brother?—Yes. He said he saw me do it. They kept me in the station while they sent for this woman, but I do not think they could find any woman. Anyway, I was brought out of the cell after being kept there all night, and they charged me with stealing that bag on this man's evidence. I was taken to Worship Street through the street, two officers having hold of me, and taken up into the police court. The case was tried and the Magistrate dismissed it.

21560. Who gave evidence against you?—This man.

21561. Anyone else?—Only a constable. I do not think the constable got up and spoke.

21562. If he did it would be evidence of arrest?—Yes.

21563. The only evidence of stealing the bag was given by this man?—Yes.

21564. And the Magistrate dismissed that charge?—Yes.

21565. And then were you arrested at the Cambridge Music Hall last January?—Yes, five detectives came up and dragged me out. I was with a young woman, and they got hold of me by the neck and pulled me out of it. They took me over to the station and told me I should be detained on a charge of stealing a man's watch and chain, and there they made me take my coat and waistcoat off and they searched me all over.

21566. You were put up for identification the next day?—Yes.

21567. You were not identified?—No.

21568. Was anyone identified?—The man picked another man out as they did in most of the cases. He came and picked one of the men out that they brought in from outside to stand up.

(Chairman.) I do not want to stop you, Earl Russell, but you are going rather into details now, are you not, which are a little remote from the issue before us?

(Earl Russell.) I only wanted to re-examine the witness on the cross-examination as to character and what had happened to him.

(Chairman.) You are hardly improving matters, are you?

21568*. (Earl Russell.) That rather depends on the view the Commission take. However, I am not anxious to pursue the re-examination on those lines. (To the witness.) I should ask you this before I leave the question of your character. You told Mr. Muir yesterday that you had been getting your living honestly by working?—Yes.

21569. Will you tell the Commissioners how you get it and what you have done for a living?—I have been helping my father, and I also back horses, and sometimes I may lose one day and I may win twice as much the next day. Then I get a few shillings off my brother, who is well to do, and a few pounds that I drew a little way back for an accident that happened to me. I have been getting a living that way.

21570. (Chairman.) What is your father's name?—Henry Tresadern.

21571. Is that his real name as far as you know, and was that the name of his father before him and so on?—Yes.

21572. How do you come by the name of Harding?—My father's father was in business as a fur manufacturer and had a big factory, and the man with him was named Harding, and when he died they used to call my father's father by the name of Harding also, and the name stuck to us ever since. All the family go under the name of Harding also.

21573. What is you age now?—20 on the 27th of last month—November.

21574. So far as you know were you born in London?—Yes.

21575. In the part of London that you now live in?—Yes.

21576. Were you sent to school at all?—I was put into Dr. Barnardo's Homes, and I was in there three years.

21577. How old were you when you went into Dr. Barnardo's Homes?—9, I think.

21578. Had you not been to any school before that?—Yes, I had been to a Board School.

21579. How came you to be sent to Dr. Barnardo's Homes?—My mother was taken seriously ill and sent to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and a friend of my father interested himself in the case and got me put into Dr. Barnardo's Homes.

21580. Have you brothers and sisters?—Yes, and step-brothers and step-sisters as well.

21581. How many?—About 8 step-brothers and sisters.

12582. Are you the eldest?—No, I am the youngest of the 8. I have got some at home younger than I am, but they are my own brothers and sisters.

21583. You are the youngest of 8, and there are still younger children?—Yes.

21584. Has you father been living in the same house since you remember?—He has been living in the neighbourhood nearly all his life.

21585. In the same neighbourhood, but not in the same house?—No, not in the same house.

21586. What is your father's business or trade?—He used to have a public-house.

21587. How long ago was that?—20 years ago, I think.

21588. Before you were born, you mean?—Yes.

21589. During the time that you remember what has been his trade?—A gilder and overmantel maker.

21590. Does he work for others?—No, he works for himself, and has a few in to work for him.

21591. How long were you at Dr. Barnardo's Homes?—3 years.

21592. When you left Dr. Barnardo's Homes did you go home to live?—Yes, my mother took me away from there.

21593. And you went back home?—Yes.

21594. Then you would be about 12 years old?—Yes

21595. Were you not sent to any other school?—Yes, I was sent to a Board School.

21596. Again?—Yes.

21597. When did you leave the Board School finally?—Just before I was 13.

21598. You told one of the learned Counsel that you had got no grammar or anything of that kind. Do you really mean that?—I don't understand it much.

21599. Can you read and write?—Yes.

21600. You had a reasonable opportunity up to the age of 13 seemingly of a good education, had you not?—Yes, Sir.

21601. Before you left the Board School at the age of 13 were you apprenticed to anybody?—No, I was employed in Mr. Butler's cabinet business in New Inn Yard.

21602. Were you regularly apprenticed?—No, not apprenticed.

21603. How long did you go to Mr. Butler's?—I was there about nine months.

21604. That would make you about 14?—Yes.

21605. How came you to leave Mr. Butler's?—Over being arrested on this Saturday night. I could not get there on the Monday morning, and I did not like to go in there any more. He sent round for me several times, but I got another situation in another place.

21606. That was the first arrest, was it?—Yes.

21607. What was that for?—Disorderly conduct.

21608. What became of that charge?—Discharged.

21609. Did you not go to Mr. Butler's after that?—No, I went to Mr. Atkins, in Church Row.

21610. Were you paid wages at Atkins'?—Yes.

21611. What wages?—Eight shillings a week.

21612. How long did you remain there?—About two months.

21613. How did you come to leave?—Over being arrested again. They went round to him to see if I had been employed there, and the policeman pulled the foreman up one night, and said, "Is this the man who has been working here?" and he said, "Yes." I would not go back there any more.

21614. How long each day were you at Atkins'? What were your hours?—I started at 8 in the morning, till 8 at night.

21615. What did you do in the evening?—Played about. Sometimes I had to go out selling toys and that for my mother, as she is a tradeswoman.

21616. Am I to understand your father has a shop?—No. He is blind now, Sir.

21617. Has he got a whole house, or does he live in apartments?—He is not with us now. He has not been living with us for the last three years now. He is at his own apartments.

21618. You are 20, and when you were 17 your father went away?—Yes. I was doing my imprisonment.

21619. What does your mother do for a living now?—She is a cripple, and she goes out selling on a Saturday and the night time.

21620. Do you live with your mother?—Yes.

21621. Where?—No. 9 and 10, Gibraltar Buildings.

21622. What rooms have you got there?—Two.

21623. Two bedrooms?—Yes, that is all they are.

21624. How many of you are living there?—Me, my mother, and two sisters and a little brother—five of us.

21625. What employment were you last in—I think it was mentioned, but I have forgotten for the moment?—I was working for my father when he had a shop last.

21626. That was three years ago?—No, he comes upstairs now and again to see us. He does not live very far away from us, and he comes up to see how we are getting on, and I used to go down to his shop in Hollybush Gardens.

21627. Had your father a shop?—Yes.

21628. Up to what time did he keep the shop?—Up to about four or five months ago.

21629. Why was the shop given up?—He was coming over bad; his eyesight was getting worse and worse.

21630. Was it for your father that you worked last?—Yes.

21631. How long did you work for him?—I never used to work definitely, but only just go in and do a bit of work, such as planing up or fitting up some work afterwards.

21632. Quite casual work?—Yes, he used to give me a few shillings, that is all.

21633. No regular bargain?—No.

21634. Then from the time you left Atkins down to the present time you had never done anything except this casual work for your father?—No, except selling lemons for my mother.

21635. I notice that on one occasion you were fined £5?—Yes.

21636. And the fine was paid?—After I had done a week. I will tell you how it was paid. They made a collection up with the subscription list, and got the money together.

21637. (Mr. Whitmore.) Who did?—Some of my friends.

21638. ((Chairman.) That you have been told since, of course. You were in prison, I understand, at the time, and this you have subsequently heard?—Yes, they got a subscription up amongst them.

21639. Who did that?—The boys round where I knock about—round Brick Lane.

21640. They got up a subscription. Who was the man or the boy who collected the money?—A man named Emesly.

21641. Emesly's name was mentioned yesterday, was it not, by Mr. Muir?—Yes.

21642. Has he ever been convicted for larceny or anything of the kind?—Yes.

21643. Who were the others who contributed to the £5, according to what you have heard?—Different people—stall keepers in Brick Lane.

21644. What were their names?—I don't exactly know their names, because I was not out at the time they were getting it.

21645. But they seem to be very much interested in you if they subscribed this fund to get you out of gaol?—I know one man, Charles Leman, a fruiterer.

21646. Was he a friend of yours?—He knows me, and he respects me very much.

21647. What aged man is he?—Forty-five, I should think. Several of the people who are sitting in Court now, shopkeepers, gave something.

21648. Is Leman a friend of your family's—does he know your father?—He may do, yes.

21649. But do you not know that?—No, I would not be sure.

21650. Can you mention anybody else who contributed?—Mr. Rayner, who is sitting in Court now, gave 6d. towards it.

21651. But 6d. does not go very far towards £5?—No, but some people gave 2s. and some gave 3s.

21652. How many were the subscribers in number?—I could not tell you.

21653. Were they 20, 30, or more?—More than that.

21654. Fifty?—More than that.

21655. Were they mostly, as far as you can gather, friends of yours who lived in this neighbourhood, and who played about with you and so on?—People who knew me.

21656. And had played about with you?—No, I should not say played about with me.

21657. People a good deal older, you mean?—Yes.

21658. Why do you think that they were so interested in you in particular that they were willing to subscribe?—They know I never knock anybody about for nothing. I never insulted anybody who walked through Brick Lane. I never took a liberty with anybody down there. They know I don't come in and demand shillings off them like some people do.

21659. Am I to understand that this was mere charity on their part, and that they were interested in your case as a boy in the neighbourhood or something of that kind?—Yes.

21660. That is what you wish to represent to me?—Yes.

21661. But Emesly was the man who collected the money, I understand?—Yes.

21662. And he is a convicted thief?—Yes, but he gave it to my mother. It was mostly on my mother's behalf that he did it.

21663. Then with regard to the stallkeepers. Had you any business with the stallkeepers who subscribed?—No, I only spoke to them and talked to them about different affairs, that is all.

21664. What had you been doing on this Wednesday? Do you remember how you had spent the day—very much as usual, I suppose?—Which Wednesday?

21665. The Wednesday on which Callaghan was arrested and when the row took place near midnight?—Yes, I was upstairs gilding some brackets and making a pair of brackets. I had just come home from the composition makers, and I was putting the oil on them.

21666. At Gibraltar Buildings?—Yes.

21667. In your bedroom?—Yes.

21668. How long had you been working at that on this 12th September?—There was a lot to be done.

21669. Never mind that. How long had you been working at them?—About three hours.

21670. Was that in the morning or in the afternoon?—In the afternoon.

21671. What had you been doing in the morning? How do you spend your mornings, usually—let me put it in that way?—I get up and go down Brick Lane and have a sup at the coffee-shop, then have a cup of tea and look at the newspapers till about 12, and then come out and get talking to some fellows till about 1 o'clock, and then I go home and have some dinner if there is any.

A. Tresadern. 5 Dec. 1906.

21672. You have some dinner if there is any?—Yes.

21673. Then this afternoon you recollect that you did some work to some brackets?—Yes.

21674. Were you paid for that work?—No, I was doing it for myself to hang up in the room. They are upstairs now.

21675. The brackets were to adorn your room?—Yes.

21676. Then you had done no job at all on that Wednesday?—No.

21677. Had you any money in your pockets?—About 5d. or 6d., what I took off a man who owed it to me. There are several people about there who owe me a lot of money which I lent them last Christmas time.

21678. Do you mean you are able from time to time to lend friends sums of money?—Last Christmas time I did, because I drew some money out of the bank.

21679. What bank was that?—Not exactly out of the bank—out of the County Court. I had some money to come, and I asked the Judge if he would grant me £10.

21680. By the County Court, do you mean the Shoreditch County Court?—Yes.

21681. Is there money in the Shoreditch County Court in some matter or cause standing to your credit?—There was, but it is all drawn out now.

21682. Before you were 21?—Yes, it was drawn out before I was 21.

21683. You are only 20 now, you told me. Did that money come from some relative?—No, over an accident.

21684. And you were the plaintiff in an action?—Yes.

21685. When was the judgment given?—I was 7 years old at the time the accident occurred.

21686. What was the amount of the damages?—£60 or £100, I would not be sure.

21687. That has been paid out of court gradually?—Yes, with interest.

21688. And you received the last amount last Christmas?—Yes.

21689. £10?—Yes.

21690. How much money had you earned between Christmas and this 12th September?—About 6s. or 7s. a week, just enough to give my mother half-a-crown and something to get a bit of food with, that is all, and then there were those people who paid me a few shillings. I could not say exactly how much I got through that time.

21691. What is the rent of the two rooms at Gibraltar Buildings?—5s.

21692. Then you had the £10, which you got rid of apparently by lending, according to your account, and about 6s. a week, which is all you have had to live upon?—I have managed to scrape together, not out of the £10, but doing odd jobs, such as pulling a barrow of work home for a man, or something like that, I have managed to get about 6s. or 7s. a week in that way.

21693. You calculated that in the 6s. a week?—I don't say that comes out of the £10.

21694. You understand the suggestion against you is that you are an habitual criminal, and that you are in the habit of ekeing out your means, whatever they are, by larceny?—That is what they said 5 years ago when I was at work.

21695. Now, I want to know a little more about these games. What is the first game you mentioned?—Darts.

21696. How is that game played?—By a cork board, with wires round it marking out spaces such as 5, 10, 15, or 20, and the wires go round in the centre, and some are trebles and some are doubles. A man may get up to 400, and another man gets 300, and the man who gets the highest shot wins.

21697. It is a game of chance?—Yes.

21698. Were you playing that game in this public-house on the 12th September?—Yes.

21699. Were you playing for money?—No.

21700. Where is the amusement?—Playing the game.

21701. It is a mere game of chance?—It is a game of skill.

21702. Is it?—Yes.

21703. I asked you a moment ago whether you considered it a game of chance, and you said, "Yes." You say it is a game of mingled skill and chance?—A man may throw and hit the side, another man may throw and get into the centre.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Does the best man necessarily win?

21704. (Chairman.) Not necessarily. It is not purely a game of chance?—No, it is a game of skill as well.

21705. The other game you have explained. You said something about putting money on horses?—Only now and again.

21706. You have done so?—Yes.

21707. In what sums, about?—6d., a shilling, and so on.

21708. Where did you find an opportunity of making a bet?—With a bookmaker.

21709. A street bookmaker?—Yes.

21710. Do you know where to find a street bookmaker whenever you want to?—Yes.

21711. Not very far, I suppose, from Sclater Street?—About 20 yards.

21712. Do bookmakers come there on all race days?—They just live round the corner.

21713. So that you know where to find one?—Always standing there.

21714. I understand you to deny absolutely when near closing time you heard this row and went to the door, leaving the doorstep?—Yes, I went nowhere near the crowd.

21715. Why did you stop on the doorstep?—Knowing quite well if I had gone in the crowd I should have had something very nasty to take—a knocking about—and very likely I should have got a hit with one of their truncheons.

21716. It was just closing time, 12 o'clock?—The houses close at half-past 12.

21717. Did you, in fact, go back to the public-house again?—I never went away.

21718. I will put it in that way. You returned inside from the doorstep when the crowd had passed by?—Yes.

21719. Who was standing within there?—The manager, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Miller, and Mr. Andrews.

21720. And not one of you stirred from the doorstep?—No.

21721. Was there a good deal of disorder, or was the crowd going very much as usual in the case of an arrest of a man?—People were shouting and so forth—kicking up a row—"Don't kill the man, you scoundrels," and calling them various other names.

21722. How many constables did you see?—Four or five.

21723. Not more?—No.

21724. Was the prisoner that you saw struggling?—I could not see. He was moving about with the crowd all round, and the policemen at the back had to keep pushing the people away.

21725. You say you saw them because of the helmets, I think you told Mr. Muir yesterday?—Yes.

21726. You think there were four or five constables?—Yes.

21727. You could not say whether the man was struggling, from where you were?—No.

21728. Have you ever said that you could?—I do not think I did.

21729. According to the notes of the evidence in your case you said, "I went out, and saw five or six constables taking a man who was struggling"?—Yes, I may have said that.

21730. That was taken down by the Clerk. Do you dispute it?—I may have said that at the time; it is four months ago.

21731. Do you say that now?—I will not be exactly sure; I have not a very good memory of what happened then. What I said at the police court was the true account of what happened.

21732. Do you mean to say you have not a good memory as to what took place on the 12th September?

—Not exactly all the details of it. I know there was pushing, shoving, and struggling.

21733. (Mr. Dickinson.) I see you said at the police court that an officer not here shouted, "All right, Harding, we will have you for this." Have you any idea who that officer was?—Yes, I have an idea. He is a tall fair man.

21734. Do you know him?—Yes, if he is the same man I believe it is; I know the one I think it was.

21735. How far away were you when they shouted that out?—Fifteen yards.

21736. They had passed the public-house?—Yes, they had passed when I came out.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Would you allow me to ask him one question as to the officer?

(Chairman.) Certainly.

A Tresadern.

5 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Is that the tall, fair man, who is standing up?

(Witness.) No.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) (To the Constable.) What is your name?

(Constable.) Filbee.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Harding says the tall, fair constable of whom he spoke is not Constable Filbee.

(Chairman.) I understand not. He says there were other constables there.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) We will secure their attendance.

FREDERICK SMITH, recalled.

F. Smith.

21737. (Earl Russell.) You are the manager of the King's Arms public-house?—Yes.

21738. You were telling us that Harding or Tresadern was there, playing dart?—Yes.

21739. Were you joining in the game, or not?—Yes.

21740. You were playing dart with them?—Yes.

21741. There was some disturbance outside?—Yes, there was a row through a prisoner being taken into custody.

21742. You all went out? Is that so?—We went on to the doorstep.

21743. Harding went, and you went?—Yes.

21744. Were there any others outside?—There were several outside.

21745. What were their names?—I could not tell you.

21746. Did you notice what Harding did after you got outside?—No, he stood on the step as they went by.

21747. Did you see whether he left the doorstep or not?—He never left the doorstep.

21748. That you are quite certain about?—Yes.

21749. What exactly did you see of the disturbance when you first came out?—I never saw anything at all. I saw a lot of people, and I saw a man being taken into custody. They told me he was a man named Callaghan.

21750. How far was he from you when you first saw him?—About 20 yards, I expect.

21751. Going towards the public-house?—No, going away.

21752. He had already passed before you went out?—Yes.

21753. Did you know any of the constables with him?—I should not know them.

21754. Could you see them?—I could see there were some policemen, by their helmets.

21755. Could you see what they were doing at all?—They were taking a prisoner.

21756. Did anyone on the doorstep call out anything?—They might have done. I did not take much notice.

21757. Did you hear anything called out at all about the arrest?—There was a lot of shouting. There was something mentioned about "Arthur." Sometimes they call him "Arthur" and sometimes "Harding."

21758. There was something mentioned. What was it?—"Arthur," I think it was.

21759. Who said it?—I could not say.

21760. Did you hear Harding say anything?—Something about killing a man—something to that effect.

21761. You did not hear any answer to that?—No. There were a lot of people there; there were about 200 or 300 people shouting.

21762. What happened after this procession had passed, and it went further away?—I went inside.

21763. Did the others go inside?—Yes.

21764. Did Harding go inside?—Yes; and two more that were standing outside came inside.

21765. Two of them came inside?—Yes.

21766. Did you go on with your game of dart?—Yes.

21767. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Do you often play dart in this public-house—the King's Arms?—Sometimes when a few friends come in at night—workmen.

21768. And coddem?—No, I hardly ever sit down to that—sometimes.

21769. It is played there?—Sometimes.

21770. Are you the person in charge?—Yes.

21771. Had you seen Harding play those games before?—Once, I think; once or twice.

21772. Do you know Emesly?—No, I do not know any of them by name. I do not know Arthur's name, only what they say it is now. I heard his name mentioned, but I do not know him.

21773. You do not know him by name?—No.

21774. Who was it who first asked you to give evidence on Harding's behalf?—I should not have come here to-day unless I had had a subpœna.

21775. Who was it who first asked you to give evidence on Harding's behalf?—Harding's mother.

21776. Was anybody with her at the time?—I do not think there was.

21777. When was it you were asked by Harding's mother to give evidence?—A month ago; something like that.

21778. How long before you gave evidence at the police court?—I do not know how long it is ago.

21779. How long before you gave evidence at the police court?—I never saw his mother then.

21780. Did you see his mother before you gave your evidence at the police court?—No.

21781. Who was it who asked you to go to the police court and give evidence?—Harding's relation—some chap—I do not know who he was; he represented he was a relation.

21782. Then it was not Harding's mother who first asked you to give evidence on his behalf?—No—to come here.

21783. I am asking you who it was who first asked you to give evidence on Harding's behalf at the police court. Do you understand the question?—Yes.

21784. Who was it?—It was Harding himself.

21785. What about the relation you mentioned a moment ago?—He had a relation as well.

21786. With him?—Yes; at any rate, I do not know his name.

21787. So that it was Harding himself who asked you to go to the police court and give evidence?—He said: "You know I never went away from the doorstep." I said: "That is quite right."

21788. He told you what you knew?—Yes.

21789. How long was that before you gave evidence before Mr. Cluer?—I could not tell you.

21790. Was it the day before?—No; it would be the date he had his summons, I think.

21791. How do you know that?—He said that he had got a summons that day; that is all I know.

21792. He came to your public-house, I suppose?—Yes.

F. Smith.
5 Dec. 1906.

21793. He told you he had a summons for assault. Did he tell you where the alleged assault took place? —I do not remember.

21794. What evidence could you give unless you knew where it was the assault was alleged to have taken place?—I only gave evidence that he was standing on the doorstep, and never left.

21795. Did he tell you at what hour it was alleged the assault had taken place?—No.

21796. He told you neither the place nor the hour? —Yes; he knew the time. He said when they took that little man Callaghan in.

21797. Then he did know?—Yes.

21798. And you knew from him what the hour was, and what the place was at which the alleged assault had taken place?—I knew it without that.

21799. How did you know?—Because I went to the door, and saw them going by.

21800. How did you know it was at this time and place that he was charged with committing an assault? —The summons says something about that.

21801. The summons says nothing about it. It says neither the hour nor the place. It says: "Unlawfully assault and beat one Michael Cann, a constable in the Metropolitan Police Force, then and there in the execution of his duty as such constable" (that is to say, "then and there" applies to the 12th September, 1906, at Sclater Street). How did you know it was at the time that this constable was passing with his prisoner that it was alleged the assault took place by the prisoner?—I do not know.

21802. How did he know?—I do not know.

21803. And yet you were asked by him to go and prove an alibi for that very moment?—I beg your pardon.

21804. You were asked to go and prove that he was standing on your doorstep at that very hour?—It was the night that that prisoner was taken in.

21805. That was what you were asked to go and prove, was it not?—Yes.

21806. Although the summons does not say a word about the hour, or anything nearer than "Sclater Street" as the place where the assault took place. Of course you know that if you permit gambling to take place in your house that would be a very serious offence from the point of view of the licence being lost? —It would.

21807. And if you were permitting gambling on this night you would be in very great danger of losing your job?—Yes.

21808. And if you were permitting this game of dart Harding knew it?—Yes.

21809. And he would be in a position to give information of it?—Yes.

21810. Have you already lost a licence for permitting gambling?—No; I won it before Mr. Loveland-Loveland on appeal.

21811. You tell me about what you are thinking of, and if it is not the same I will tell you what I am thinking of? What were you saying about Mr. Loveland-Loveland?—I appealed to Mr. Loveland-Loveland, and it was granted.

21812. You mean that you were prosecuted for permitting gambling?—I was never summoned in my life.

21813. What do you mean—that your licence was taken away?—It was not.

21814. By the Licensing Justices?—They refused it.

21815. They refused to renew it?—Yes.

21816. What house was that?—The Gardeners' Arms, Old Ford.

21817. On the ground that you had permitted gambling?—They said so, but they never convicted me of it.

21818. That was the ground on which the Justices refused to renew the licence?—Bagatelle, I think it was. Then I appealed to Mr. Loveland-Loveland, and he granted it.

21819. And you transferred the licence, I suppose? —Yes.

21820. Was that a condition of allowing the appeal? —No.

21821. When did you transfer the licence? Was it transferred before you went before Mr. Loveland-Loveland?—No.

21822. Immediately after?—No, I think not; about six or eight months, when I found a purchaser.

21823. Did you transfer it at the next Transfer Sessions?—No; I think it was the one after.

21824. Was it a condition of allowing your appeal that the licence should be transferred to some other person? Was not that a condition?—I do not think so.

21825-6. That is all you will say?—Yes.

21827. At any rate, you are no longer a licence-holder?—I never applied for one, but I have never been refused. I won the appeal before Mr. Loveland-Loveland.

(Mr. Dickinson.) The Gardeners' Arms is not the house we are speaking of.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No; it is a different house altogether.

(Mr. Dickinson.) He says he has not a licence.

21828. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are not the licensee here?—No.

21829. You are merely the manager?—Yes.

21830. You would be in a very awkward position if Harding were to say, however untruly, that you had permitted gambling upon this night of the 12th September?—Yes.

21831. Do you know Harding?—No, I do not know him.

21832. Do you know his gang?—No. I have not been there long; about nine months.

21833. (Mr. Whitmore.) How long?—About eight or nine months.

21834. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Do you mean you did not know him during that time?—I did when the Inspector came and told me about Harding.

21835. How long ago?—About four months.

21836. Therefore it was before the 12th September? —Yes.

21837. Is it not a licensing offence to permit convicted thieves to use a public-house longer than necessary for ordinary refreshment?—I do not know which they are. I do not ask their names when they come in.

21838. You told me the Inspector told you about Harding about four months ago?—We had the burglars in once.

21839. This man Harding and others were playing this game of dart for how long?—I do not know; not long.

21840. But how long?—I could not tell you. I had been out; I had just come home.

21841. Could not you tell me?—It might have been half an hour or an hour.

21842. Or an hour and a half?—It might have been.

21843. Or two hours?—It might have been; I could not tell you. I did not take so much notice as that.

21844. Were you within speaking distance of the constables when they went by with their prisoner?— They were on the other side of the road. I suppose they would be about 20 or 15 yards when they went by.

21845. That is hardly speaking distance, is it?—No.

21846. Who went out of the public-house first, you or Harding?—I believe I went out first; I went out on the doorstep.

21847. How long after you went out did Harding come out?—He came out right behind me.

21848. You were there practically at the same time? —Yes.

21849. And 20 yards off was the nearest you saw of them?—I should think so; they kept going further away.

21850. With their backs towards you?—Yes.

21851. Were you able to recognise any one of them? —No; I could not recognise any one of them.

21852. Or their prisoner?—No.

21853. Could you see them?—I could not see the prisoner.

21854. You could not see him?—I could not see him.

21855. Did any more pass between the constables and Harding?—I heard somebody shouting. There were such a lot of people there that I could not say whether there was or not.

21856. Just tax your memory. Did any remark pass from one to the other as between Harding and any of the constables?—I did not hear it. There might have been; there was a lot of shouting.

21857. You gave evidence before the Magistrate?—Yes, that is right.

21858. What evidence did you give on that point as to whether anything passed between Harding and the constable? You remember what passed that night, do you not?—Yes; I saw the prisoner going by.

21859. You remember quite clearly what took place?—I saw them taking a man by.

21860. What was said, if anything, between Harding and the police?—There was some shouting; there was a lot of shouting.

21861. According to your recollection of what took place that night, what was said?—"All right, Arthur," or something of that—I could not remember what it was—"I will have you for that."

21862. Who said that?—I could not tell you. I could not tell whether it was the policeman at all or anybody else.

21863. Twenty yards off?—Yes.

21864. With their backs to you when you came out?—Yes.

21865. (Chairman.) You heard somebody say, "I will have you for that"?—Yes; I could not say who it was.

21866. "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that"?—Yes; I did not know who it was. There were such a lot of people there.

21867. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) At that time the police were 20 yards off, with their backs towards you?—Yes.

21868. Was it one of the police?—I could not say.

21869. Could you not say it was not one of the police?—I do not say it was a policeman, and I do not say it was not.

21870. The police were 20 yards off, with a struggling prisoner, and their backs to you at the time you came out, Harding being behind you as he came out. How on earth could the police see him?—I do not know.

21871. Cannot you say it was not the police?—I do not say either way; I could not say who it was.

21872. Cannot you say it was not the police in view of the facts?—I do not know that it was, and I do not know that it was not—I do not know who it was.

21873. Just think what the position is?—Yes. I do not say either way. I do not say it was not, and I do not say it was.

21874. In fairness to the police?—There were a lot of people there. I could not say who said it.

21875. If what you are telling us is true, could it possibly have been the police?—I would not say it was, and I would not say it was not. I do not know who it was.

21876. You never said so?—No.

21877. Did Harding call out anything?—He shouted something—I do not remember exactly what the words were—"Don't kill the man," or something, I think it was.

21878. To whom was that observation of Harding's, "Don't kill the man," addressed?—To the policeman; I could not say who it was.

21879. Twenty yards off?—15 to 20 yards. They kept going on further.

21880. How long had Harding been standing on the doorstep before he shouted, "Don't kill the man"?—It might have been a minute.

21881. During that time the police had been getting further off?—Yes, but they were struggling at the time—they had been struggling.

21882. And a shouting crowd?—Yes.

21883. A hostile crowd?—Yes, there were a lot of people.

21884. Very hostile to the police?—Yes.

21885. To whom did Harding address his remark, "Don't kill the man"?—I do not know who it was to, unless it was to the policemen. I do not know.

21886. Twenty yards off?—Yes, it was all that—15 to 20 yards.

21887. Do you think they heard it?—That I could not say.

21888. Could they have heard it? In the circumstance you have described, could the police possibly have heard it?—I should not think they could.

21889. Who replied, "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that"?—I could not tell you.

21890. For what? What were they going to have him for?—I do not know.

21891. For what?—I do not know what for.

21892. Are you quite clear as to the words used?—Yes; they were the words used.

21893. You are quite clear as to that?—I could not see who said it.

21894. No; but you are quite clear as to what the words were?—Yes. There were a lot of people there.

21895. Now, first of all, as to what Harding says. Did he say, "Don't kill the man"?—Yes.

21896. You are quite sure about that?—Something to that effect—"Don't kill the man," or something.

21897. Can you take away the "or something"? Was it "Don't kill the man"?—Yes.

21898. You are sure of that?—Yes.

21899. Did you tell the Magistrate——?—Yes.

21900. Wait and hear the question before you answer it. Did you tell the Magistrate that what he said was "Don't hurt the man, or something"?—"Don't kill the man."

21901. "Don't hurt the man, or something"; and did you tell the Magistrate that some man called back, "I will have my own back"?—I might have done.

21902. To-day you have said, "All right, Arthur."?—"All right, Arthur." That is the word.

21903. "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that"?—Yes, "for that."

21904. That is what Harding said in the box to-day, whereas what you said before the Magistrate was some man called back, "I will have my own back"?—Yes; I do not know what man it was.

21905. I am not talking about which man it was. I am talking about the words. Which is true, what you said before the Magistrate or what you have said to-day?—What I said before the Magistrate, I suppose.

21906. Then what the man said was, "I will have my own back"?—Yes.

21907. Do you swear that?—Yes.

21908. He did not say, "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that"?—Something to that effect. There were a lot of people there.

21909. Your recollection is quite clear?—Yes.

21910. (Chairman.) Do you know what that other game is?—Coddem?

21911. Yes?—Yes; it is a piece in the hand. When workmen leave off at night they generally play the game for half an hour. They have a glass of ale, and they amuse themselves before they go home to bed.

21912. Have you ever heard of any gambling going on?—I do not allow that.

21913. I do not quite follow Harding's description of the game of dart. I understand there is a board placed against the wall, and you throw darts at it?—Yes.

21914. The same answer applies to that—you would not permit any gambling?—No.

21915. Are you vigilant in the matter? You are the manager?—Yes.

21916. Are you vigilant in the matter if you are at the counter?—It is right in front of the bar; there is no taproom there; I can see it; it is in front of the counter; there is no taproom out of sight, so I have it all in front of me. There is no taproom there at all.

21917. I should like to ascertain exactly what the state of your recollection is about the words you heard in the crowd. You told Mr. Muir you are quite certain the words you used before the Magistrate, which were shouted out by someone, were, "I will have my own back"?—Yes.

5 Dec. 1906.

21918. Do you wish me to understand that the words, "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that"——?—The one in front of the Magistrate is right.

21919. Wait a moment. I understood you to tell Mr. Muir that the words which you said were used before the Magistrate, "I will have my own back," were in fact words which you heard shouted on this occasion?—Yes.

21920. You also told Mr. Muir that somebody shouted out, "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that"?—That one is not right. It was something to that effect. I got mixed up. The one before the Magistrate is right.

21921. Then do you mean to say you are quite wrong in saying the words, "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that," were used?—Yes.

21922. How had it come into your mind?—It is mixing up, I suppose.

21923. The words, "I will have my own back," and "I will have you for that" are words which are very different in relation the one to the other. When you were asked a few moments ago what you heard shouted out, how did the words, "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that," come into your mind?—"I will have my own back."

21924. How did the other phrase come into your mind?—I do not know.

21925. Did you invent it?—No.

21926. Have you heard anybody else use it?—I have heard them use it.

21927. "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that"?—I do not know his other name.

21928. You were stating what you heard shouted out, and you told him the words were, "All right, Arthur, I will have you for that." How did those words come into your mind?—I do not know.

21929. Is it the truth?—No; I say the words were similar to that.

21930. That incident about Callaghan's arrest, and the crowd, took place late at night on the Wednesday?—Yes, about half-past 11 or a quarter to 12, I believe.

21931. How long after was it that Harding's relative came to you to speak to you about the police court proceedings?—It was after the summons, I think.

21932. The summons, we know, was on the 18th, and the case came on on the 26th. That would be six days after the Wednesday. It was after the 18th and before the 26th. How many days was it before you actually went to the police court?—About three days before I went to the police court.

21933. Probably. What time in the day was it he came to you?—About lunch-time.

21934. There was somebody with him?—Yes.

21935. You do not know whom, I understand?—No.

21936. Please be very careful. What were the first words that Harding said to you?—The first words were that he had got a summons for knocking a man, a policeman, about the very night, he said, when they took Callaghan, "When I stood by the side of you at the door." That would be about three days before I went to the police court. That was all that was said. He asked me to go up to the police court.

21937. Then he did add something?—Yes.

21938. Did you tell him anything?—No. He asked me if I would go up to the police court for him.

21939. And you said you would go?—If I did not he said he would subpœna me.

21940. He mentioned Callaghan's name?—Yes.

21941. Did that convey any meaning to you? Did you know Callaghan?—I had heard the name. I refused to serve him.

21942. The name was familiar, but the man was not?—Yes.

21943. Did you see Harding between that interview and the time when you gave evidence at the police court?—No.

21944. I see that there were other people who came to the door with you and Harding?—Yes.

21945. How many altogether?—There were two standing outside, near the house; there were a lot of people in the street—hundreds—about 200.

21946. How many people had been in your house that evening, and went out with you to the front to see what took place?—Some walked out, and some finished their drinks and walked away.

21947. How many people do you think happened to be in your house when they heard the noise in the street, and then left?—I do not think there were many—about eight or nine.

21948. You are certain you yourself did not leave the doorstep?—No, I did not.

21949. But some did?—Some went off.

21950. Did you know any of the men by name who were in the eight or nine, or were playing dart there, or perhaps were not playing dart? How many of them did you know?—About four, that work at cabinet works.

21951. You knew Harding, who had been there before?—Yes; I only knew him as "Arthur."

21952. At any rate, you had seen him before?—Yes, I had seen him before.

21953. Did you know the names of any of the other men?—No, I do not know their names. They work at cabinet works on the other side of the road.

21954. How many people do you think, when you went to the doorstep, went out into the crowd? There might have been four or five.

21955. Can you recollect the names of any one of them?—No. Some are strangers.

21956. How many stayed on the doorstep with you?—Me and Harding and another stranger—I do not know who he was—and there were a few more standing outside.

21957. What makes you recollect that Harding happened to stay by your side?—He came back again. I was playing a game of dart with him; we had not finished.

21958. Did he come back and finish the game?—Yes.

21959. Then the thing which fixes Harding as standing by your side on the doorstep is the unfinished game?—Yes.

21960. How does that fix it in your mind?—We were half way through it; he had the darts in his hand that belonged to the board.

21961. Very likely you might go into the road and take the darts with you, and then come back?—He was standing with me on the doorstep.

21962. You cannot tell me the names of the four or five other people; you cannot identify them?—There was a man named Miller—he is not a stranger—and another chap; I do not know his name.

21963. Miller went into the road and joined the crowd?—Yes; he was outside.

21964. You say Harding's continued presence is fixed in your mind by the unfinished game of dart?—Yes.

21965. That is the only circumstance?—I was standing on the step, and I never went off the doorstep either.

21966. Do you wish me to understand that you had no conversation except the one conversation with Harding between the time of this incident on the 12th and the time when you went to the police court?—I only saw him here yesterday.

21967. Had you heard any talk about the summons against Harding?—At the police court, or before that?

21968. Before the police court proceedings?—No.

21969. None of the customers talking about it?—No.

21970. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where is Bacon Street?—Just round the back of the house.

21971. Does it run into Sclater Street?—It runs down like that to Brick Lane and to Cygnet Street.

21972. The prisoner Callaghan was arrested in Bacon Street?—Yes.

21973. How did they come round in front of the public-house?—I cannot say, I do not know.

21974. There is your public-house, and there is Sclater Street?—Yes.

21975. Where were they going?—Along here on the other side of the road.

21976. They were going that way?—Yes, towards the police station.

21977. If they had come right along Bacon Street they would have come along Cygnet Street?—Yes.

21978. Where is the door of your public-house?—On the corner.

21979. It is on a level, I suppose, with the street?—Yes, bar a little step. F. Smith. 5 Dec. 1906.

21980. About 30 yards along there?—Yes.

21981. I suppose you had heard the noise some time before you went out?—Yes, that was the reason I went out.

21982. There was a good deal of noise?—Yes, and a lot of people there.

21983. How many police-constables did you see?—I should say there were four or five there. I could not recognise any of them though.

WILLIAM ANDREWS, sworn.

21984. (Earl Russell.) You are a glass beveller?—Yes. W. Andrews.

21985. Do you live at Walkley Street, Old Ford?—Yes.

21986. On the occasion when there was this disturbance you were in the King's Arms, were you not?—Yes.

21987. What were you doing there before the disturbance?—Nothing before the disturbance. I was playing at dart.

21988. With whom?—Four or five, or there might have been six of us.

21989. Can you tell us the names of any of them?—There was Tresadern. At that time I knew him to be Harding.

21990. Who else?—Miller, the other witness. The others I do not know their names. I have only ascertained since.

21991. You were not often at that public-house before?—No. Just passed it going home from work.

21992. What was the first you heard?—We were playing dart, and we heard a row outside—holloaing and shouting.

21993. What did you do then?—I said, "Hulloa, there is something up." I rushed to the door, and, of course, the others went to the door.

21994. You all went to the door?—Yes.

21995. Did you notice Harding in particular?—I was by the side of him when he came out.

21996. Where did Harding go to?—Nowhere.

21997. I thought you just told us he went to the door?—I thought you meant outside.

21998. I am asking you where he went to?—He came with me to the door.

21999. Did he go any further?—No.

22000. Did he not go into the street at all?—One of his feet may have been on the pavement just outside the door.

22001. Was there a biggish crowd in the street?—Yes, a great crowd.

22002. What did you see going on in the crowd?—I saw a number of constables; they had a prisoner between them, and I could see they were ill-using the man, something shocking, according to my idea. I should not like to have been the prisoner.

22003. Did you hear anything called out, or not?—Yes, I heard all the people shouting "Cowards," "Cowards."

22004. Did you hear Harding call out anything?—Yes. He stood by the side of me, and he turned round and said "Don't kill the man."

22005. How far off were the constables when he said that?—I cannot tell you the distance; I am not a judge of distance. It may have been 9 to 15 yards. I am no judge of distance.

22006. Did you hear any answer to that?—Yes.

22007. What did you hear?—I heard them turn round and say——.

22008. Who turned round?—A constable turned round.

22009. You saw him?—Yes. I did see a constable turn round, and I could see one of his hands. Two constables turned round altogether. Who they were at the time I did not know. I did not recognise them till they got to the court. They said: "All right, Harding, we will have you for this." I took that in. There are two different ways of taking it from the way they said it.

22010. Just tell us how you took it, taking it one way?—"All right, Harding, we will have you for this," as much as to say they would take him. Taking it the other way—"All right, Harding, we will have you for this," as much as to say, "We will make you suffer for interfering."

22011. You mean they might have him for the case in which the prisoner was arrested, or on a future occasion?—Yes.

22012. Were you close to Harding all the time you were in the street?—By the side of Harding.

22013. He did not go into the street?—No.

22014. Nor mix up with the crowd?—No.

22015. How far had this disturbance got when you got there?—It was passing down Sclater Street.

22016. How long did you look at it for?—It might have been a couple of minutes. Time is hard to judge.

22017. Then what did you do?—Went back and finished our game at dart.

22018. How far had the constables got with the prisoner when you went back. Were they still in sight?—They were passing.

22019. They were still passing when you went back?—You could see the crowd, but how far they were I do not know.

22020. Did Harding come in with you?—Yes.

22021. And you continued playing dart with Harding?—Yes. I had a bit of a lead with him, so I wanted him to come back.

22022. You meant to finish the game?—Certainly.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Before the examination of this witness is resumed, Sir, I desire to bring to your attention the fact that statements are made to me by those tradesmen whose names and addresses were mentioned by me last night that they have been threatened by Harding and that man Dido by both gesture and by words, and I should like you to hear what their statements are on that subject in order that you may take such action upon it as you think right.

WILLIAM WILLIAMS, sworn.

22023. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you a draper?—Yes. W. Williams.

22024. Do you carry on your business at 194, Brick Lane?—Yes, I am in the employ of Messrs. J. C. B. Richardson and Sons, Limited.

22025. Did you on the 23rd of November give a statement to Inspector Wright?—I did.

22026. And sign it?—I did.

22027. Do you know a man called Dido?—Yes, the man in those photographs.

22028. You know him by sight?—Yes.

22029. And by that name?—Yes.

22030. Did you see him last night?—No, not last night—this morning.

W. Williams.

5 Dec. 1906.

22031. Was anyone with him this morning?—Yes, Harding.

22032. Where did you see them?—Standing immediately outside the shop, pointing in the shop.

22033-4. Did he say or do something?—Yes, he made a sign and said "This is the f——r who is going up against us to-day"—most obscene language.

22035. Anything else?—He made some other statements afterwards, which I cannot quite think of at the moment.

22036. So far as those men are concerned, do you go in fear of them, or not?—No, I am not in fear of any one of them.

22037. Not any one of them?—No, or the lot of them. I don't mind any one of them.

22038. But they did make that statement this morning?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I can call other witnesses to speak to the same thing.

(Chairman.) That is sufficient, Mr. Muir. The Commission will take a certain action on Mr. Williams' statement with a view of affording such protection as we can.

22039. (Earl Russell.) Apart from the abusive language the statement was true?—Yes, the statement was quite true.

WILLIAM ANDREWS, recalled.

W. Andrews.

22040. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) How long have you been in the habit of using the King's Arms public-house?—Not long.

22041. About how long?—I may use it perhaps once a fortnight.

22042. For how long?—Very likely a long while. My trade lies down that way.

22043. Give us some idea. How long have you been in the habit of using that public-house?—Eighteen months—not using the house, but just having an occasional drink in there on my way to work.

22044. How long have you known Smith, the manager?—About a month—known him as manager.

22045. If you were using this house for 18 months, Mr. Smith has been manager for longer than a month, has not he?—I don't inquire who is manager, or who is potman, or anything else.

22046. Had you known him as a person in that house?—I have seen him in there, but never knew who he was.

22047. You have seen him serving?—Yes.

22048. How long have you known him as a person serving in that public-house?—It is impossible to say, because I never took notice when I go into the house.

22049. About?—I don't always see him when I go in. I may go in to have a drink, but very often I have not seen him in there.

22050. How long is it that you have known him as a person serving in the public-house?—Supposing I say the same time as I have been in there—about 18 months.

22051. Did you know his name?—No.

22052. Be careful. Did you know his name?—No, I did not.

22053. Were you quite sober on this night of the 12th September?—Certainly. I did not leave off before 7 o'clock, and it takes me half an hour to go home, and I am sure it takes me an hour to wash and have my supper and come back.

22054. You are quite certain?—Yes.

22055. You have been arrested for drunkenness?—Once.

22056. When was that?—A few weeks ago.

22057. Was it in September?—Yes.

22058. On that occasion did you send for Smith to bail you out?—I sent to the manager of the house.

22059. That is Smith?—It may have been Smith.

22060. You sent for Smith to bail you out on that occasion?—I might have done.

22061. How long have you known Harding?—I never knew him before the end of the occurrence.

22062. You did not know him at all?—No.

22063. Where are you living?—11, Wharncliffe Street, Queen's Street, Old Ford.

22064. At the time this happened?—The same address. I have always lived there, and I was born there.

22065. Are you still living there?—Yes.

22066. Have you seen a good deal of Harding since you appeared for him at the police court as a witness?—No, I saw him the Sunday following that he had the summons. I went down to buy a bird, and I happened to go in the same house, and he said to me "Mate, did you see me strike a constable that night?" I turned round and said "No." I said "I was with you, wasn't I?" He said "Go on." I said, "When it comes up at the court if I can manage to get the day off I will come up for you."

22067. Was this quite a casual meeting?—Quite a casual meeting.

22068. You did not know his name?—Not until this night afterwards when they mentioned the name.

22069. Who mentioned the name?—I put it down that the constables mentioned the name.

22070. So that until this night when the constables mentioned the name you did not even know Harding's name?—No, I did not.

22071. And you did not know, I suppose, who the constable meant?—No, I did not. I looked around to see who he meant.

22072. Who was meant by the name of Harding?—Decidedly.

22073. Did you find out?—He said "That is all right."

22074. Who said "That is all right"?—I heard one of them say "That is all right—that is you." When I saw them looking at him I turned round and said, "You had better grease inside."

22075. You said that to Harding?—Yes.

22076. You could tell who the constable was looking at?—Yes, certainly, when I saw him looking at him—two or three of them know him round there.

22077. There were four of you at least standing close together?—There were a lot more than four.

22078. At any rate there were four of you all standing close together round Harding?—Yes.

22079. You were able to tell which of you it was that the constable was looking at?—No, I could not tell at all. I did not know who he meant. I saw the others were looking round at Harding.

22080. Which of them did you see looking round at Harding?—Three or four.

22081. Which three or four?—I don't know their names.

22082. You knew no one there?—No, I knew nobody round there.

22083. You meant that you saw who the constable was looking at?—He might have been looking at me. We were all standing together.

22084. Now you say it was the others who looked at Harding?—The constable was looking at him, and when that name was mentioned the others stood aside and said, "That is all right," and looked towards Harding, and that is how I happened to know who Harding was.

22085. That is the first you knew of who Harding was?—Certainly.

22086. Did you say anything to him about it?—I said, "There you are—they have got you now"; and I said, "If I was you I would grease inside."

22087. What had Harding done?—Nothing.

22088. Why should you advise him to go inside?—Because they might have come back after they conducted the prisoner to the station and arrested him for it.

22089. What for?—What have others been arrested for—nothing.

22090. What could they have arrested him for on that night?—I don't know.

22091. Yet you advised him to go inside in case they should come back and arrest him?—Yes, certainly. I should advise anybody to get out of the way to avoid being arrested. If it had been me I should have run home.

22092. You heard what the policeman said?—Yes, I put it down to the policeman as having said it.

22093. Could you tell which policeman it was?—Now you are asking me a question. I could not answer that.

22094. You could give no description of him?—I never recognised any constables we saw there till I saw them in the court, and I don't believe I could tell them now. They may be in court now for all I know. I don't know them, and don't want to know them.

22095. How far off was the constable at the time he said that. It might have been nine or fifteen yards. I am no judge of distance.

22096. Tell us your idea of nine or fifteen yards in this court?—Just past those papers, or it may be towards the doorway.

22097. To the corner of what is usually known as the jury box?—It may have been a little bit further.

22098. It was as close as that?—I believe a little bit past there. I did not judge the distance.

22099. Had the constables passed you at that time?—They were passing me when we went out.

22100. They were actually passing?—Yes.

22101. And you saw their faces?—I saw two turn round.

22102. If they were actually passing you would see the side of their faces?—No.

22103. Why not?—I did not look at their faces.

22104. But you could, if you had looked, have seen the side of their faces?—If I had gone out with the intention of looking at the constables' faces I should have gone straight up and looked at them.

22105. They passed you as you got out?—We were standing here, and the crowd were just about here. We saw the back of them as they were passing. They were coming this way.

22106. You never saw their faces at all except when they turned round?—Not till the man who is called Harding turned round and shouted out.

22107. What was the closest that you were to the constables?—You just asked me the distance, and I said between nine and fifteen yards. I could not tell you.

22108. That was at the time the constable spoke?—That was at the same distance. I put it down that the prisoner would not go, and I suppose the people were shouting, and he threw himself on the ground, and the other constables were trying to keep the crowd back. That is what I put it down to, and through his shouting out they turned round.

22109. Were they standing stationary—not moving?—They were pushing the crowd that way and this way, and when he shouted out they turned this way. (Describing.) They were turning round both ways.

22110. How long were they there pushing the crowd about without going any further on their journey?—Time is a very hard thing to judge of, and I could not tell you.

22111. But to the best of your ability?—A minute, or it may have been two minutes or three minutes for all I know.

22112. What period was it that you heard the constable speaking?—The moment Harding shouted out.

22113. What period was that? Was that before the man threw himself on the ground, or after he threw himself on the ground?—Before that—through him hearing his voice, and all the people shouting out at the same time—that is what made him throw himself on the ground.

22114. Hearing Harding's voice?—It may have been his voice that did it, or it may have been the women shouting—there were women screaming all round there.

22115. You said it was through hearing the voice?—I do not know which voice. It may have been the women or it may have been Harding.

22116. Were you calling out anything?—No, I was glad to get inside.

22117. You stood outside, and sent Harding inside?—Certainly. I would have taken them all in if I had had the chance.

22118. The police would have taken them all in?—No, I would have taken them all in sooner than they got into trouble.

22119. Why did you not go in yourself?—I did go in, and took Harding in with me.

22120. Why did you advise him to go in? Why should he go in any more than you?—I should not like to see anybody get into trouble.

22121. But if the police were going to arrest an innocent man, why should not they have selected you?—They might have done, and that was why I was glad to get inside.

22122. Why did you advise Harding to get in?—I should have advised anybody. If you had been there I should have advised you.

22123. There were lots of other innocent people out there besides Hrding?—They might have taken them.

22124. Why select Harding as the person to go inside?—Because I heard them mention his name, and I knew nobody else there, and, mentioning his name, I thought I would try to get him out of it.

22125. A name you never heard until that night?—No.

22126. Did you know him by the name of Arthur?—Arthur was never mentioned.

22127. Did you know him by the name of Arthur?—I never knew his name. I had not seen him—at least I had seen him, but never knew whether his name was Arthur, Bill, Jack, or anything else. All I know is that the constable turned round and shouted out to Harding.

22128. Had you ever seen him before at all?—I may have seen him.

22129. Do you know a man named Emesly?—No.

22130. You do not know him at all?—No.

22131. Do you know a man called Webb?—I know one man of the name of Webb.

22132. Doing eighteen months?—No, I do not know anybody who is inside. I know nobody who is in prison.

22133. Who has been in prison?—No, or who has been in prison. I know one Thomas Webb—a man working on the road.

22134. He is not in prison at present?—No, he is at work.

22135. Do you know Dido?—No.

22136. Are you sure you do not know him?—I am certainly sure I do not know him.

22137. Did you hear Harding say something?—Yes, I heard him shout out, "Don't kill the man."

22138. To whom did he say that?—No one individually. He shouted to the lot—the way they were ill-using the man.

22139. Are you sure it was not addressed to one particular constable?—No, it was addressed to no one man alone. It may have been addressed to the lot.

22140. Did you say this when you were before the Magistrate (Mr. Cluer): "He," that is, Harding, "said to the constable, 'Don't kill the man'"?—"Said to the constables."

22141. The plural?—Yes.

22142. Did you go on to say this, "The officer said 'All right, Harding'"?—"The officers."

22143. More than one of them said that, did they?—I just told you I saw two turn round, and one lifted his hand.

22144. Did they not shout that out?—They may have done.

22145. I am talking about what you said to Mr. Cluer. Did you say, "The officer said 'All right Harding'"?—The officer shouted out, or the constable shouted out, "All right, Harding, we will have you for this."

22146. The officer—one officer?—One officer, yes.

22147. You said one officer did it?—I heard one officer say it.

W. Andrews.

5 Dec. 1906.

22148. You saw it?—No, I did not see it. I heard one officer say it.

22149. Did you see him speak?—I saw his hand lifted and his mouth moving.

22150. So that you have no doubt at all it was one officer?—Yes.

22151. A constable did this?—Yes, certainly.

22152. How far off were you at this time—nine to fifteen yards?—Yes, the same distance that I have mentioned already.

22153. What else did he say—"All right, Harding"?—"We will have you for this."

22154. "This"?—Yes.

22155. Did he not say "for that"?—No, he did not.

22156. You swear that?—I swear it.

22157. When you were before Mr. Cluer did you say he said, "All right, Harding, we will have you for that"?—No.

22158. You swear that?—I swear it.

22159. Can you account for the magistrate's clerk taking that down as your evidence?—Certainly.

22160. How did he take it down?—I do not know. I was not behind him to see him taking it down.

22161. You are absolutely certain the words were "for this," and not "for that"?—"For this."

22162. You are absolutely certain of the exact words that were used?—Certainly.

22163. It was "this" and not "that"?—It was "this."

22164. Did any officer say, "I know you, Harding"?—I never heard none say so.

22165. Did any of the men who came out of the public house go into the crowd?—Not as I noticed; they may have done.

22166. How many of them came out of the public house?—I cannot see out of every bar. I was only in one bar.

22167. How many came out of your bar?—I do not know.

22168. Cannot you give us some idea?—No, I could not tell you who was in the bar.

22169. Seven or eight of them?—There were seven or eight amongst us. There may have been more in the bar, but if they mingled with the crowd it was nothing to do with us.

22170. Did any of the seven or eight of you go into the crowd?—Not that I am aware of.

22171. Will you swear that none of them did?—Certainly.

22172. You will swear it?—I would swear it. None out of the seven or eight that I am aware of shifted, but I can swear that five never shifted.

22173. As to the three you will not swear?—No, certainly not, I would not swear.

22174. What were the names of the other three that you won't swear to?—You have asked me that once before, and I told you I did not know their names, and I do not know them now.

22175. You did not know Harding's name that night?—Not that night I did not.

(Earl Russell.) I have no further questions to ask.

22176. (Chairman.) You gave evidence at the police court on September 26?—Yes.

22177. Were you subpœnaed, or did you go voluntarily?—I went voluntarily.

22178. Who asked you to go?—I happened to go down on the following Sunday, or a couple of Sundays afterwards, and I wished to buy a bird, and I happened to go in the same house, the King's Arms, and I saw the prisoner Harding, and I fancied a bird a man was selling, and I followed him about, and he went in there to have a drink, and I saw Harding in there, and he came up and said, "Well, mate, did you see me strike that constable that night when the row was out here."

22179. Which Sunday was that, the Sunday before the 26th?—Yes, it was about the 23rd.

22180. Or the 22nd. You say it was the Sunday before the 26th?—Yes.

22181. What did Harding say to you?—He said to me, "Here, mate, I want you," and I said, "Halloa, what do you want?" He said, "Did you see me that night of the riot strike the constable," and I said, "No, certainly not; was not I with you all the time."

22182. Anything more?—He said, "I have had a summons for striking a constable," so I said, "Well, that is nice for you. What are you going to do about it." I said, "If you want a witness to come up and prove that, I will come for you," and I wrote out my address and gave it to him.

22183. Did you get a letter afterwards?—He sent me a letter on his own.

22184. And you went to the police court?—Yes.

22185. Were you playing this game of darts with the manager, Smith, and Harding?—Yes.

22186. Then you heard the row, I understand, and went to the door?—Yes.

22187. All the people who were in the public house apparently went?—I suppose they all followed out directly one went.

22188. And some went away?—They may have done. I would not like to say that, but they may have done.

22189. What makes you so certain that Harding did not go into the crowd and come back?—I was with the man chatting with him, and I asked him who it was.

22190. You were there three or four minutes, I understand, before you went back to the game?—I may have been. Time is a very hard thing to judge of, is it not?

22191. I know it is not very easy to remember all these details?—It is not. When I went to give evidence at the police court I never thought anything of this kind would come on.

22192. I quite agree it is not easy to state the exact time, but you must on the other side take into account that it is very important for us to know the details?—Yes, I know that.

22193. Then you are not very particular about the details?—No, I only know the full facts of the affair.

22194. You are very full of the fact that Harding did not leave your side?—I am certain.

22195. But you do not wish to pledge your recollection as to all the details?—I have given them as far as I can.

22196. You cannot tell me, for instance—at least I gather from an answer you gave me a few minutes ago that you cannot tell me—how long you were all at the door of the public house?—It may have been a minute or it may have been two minutes. If you are standing talking together you do not know how the time passes.

22197. Quite so, and I entirely agree with you. That is what I was suggesting to you. It may have been four or five minutes?—It may have been.

22198. Do not you think that Smith is right when he says it was about four or five minutes?—Yes, certainly, but I don't go by what Smith says. His evidence is nothing to do with me.

22199. You would not like to contradict him?—I would not like to contradict him.

22200. If you were at the door four or five minutes is it not quite possible that Harding might have rushed into the crowd and come back?—No, I swear he did not go into the crowd.

22201. You seem to have been very anxious to get Harding back into the public-house?—Yes, when his name was mentioned.

22202. You thought he was in danger of being arrested?—Certainly, when I heard his name mentioned and hearing of other people being taken.

22203. You have also told us you had never seen Harding before that night?—Certainly I had not.

22204. How did you know his name was Harding?—When the constable mentioned his name.

22205. If the constable shouted out Harding and you did not know what the name of the man next to you was how could you know that the constable was talking to him?—Because I saw the crowd standing round looking back to him.

22206. Then all the crowd turned and looked at Harding?—Yes, and someone said something to Harding, and I said "You had better grease in."

22207. Do not you think it very likely that they were looking that way, because Harding had rushed from the crowd and the constable said "I will have you for that Arthur"—or "Harding"?—No. There may have been a dozen persons standing round, and they saw him there, because he was under the full glare of the big lamp, and it stands to reason they must have seen him standing there.

22208. We have had the whole scene described, not only by yourself but by two others, and there were some 300 people there. There was a great crowd, there was much shouting, and then we understand that the constable certainly shouted out something—"Arthur" or "Harding," "we will have you for that"—Yes.

22209. You agree with that?—Yes.

22210. Then the people looked in the direction of the public house?—Yes, the people looked in the direction of the public house, so there must have been something.

22211. There must have been something done by Harding?—No, there was nothing done.

22212. So you say?—I will swear that.

22213. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you understand a plan?—Yes.

22214. Here is a plan of these streets. That is the public house and that is Cygnet Street, and that is Sclater Street, and this is Bethnal Green Road?—Yes. W. Andrews. 5 Dec. 1906

22215. When you came out where was it that you first saw the police and the crowd?—About here, three parts across the road. (Pointing on the plan).

22216. Going across the road?—Yes.

22217. Did you see a policeman on the ground at any time?—I did not see him.

22218. Did you see Callaghan on the ground?—No.

22219. There was a struggle going on?—There was a struggle going on, but who it was between I could not say. They were struggling sometime till it reached the corner—struggling on the ground.

22220. There was somebody on the ground?—Yes, I could see that by the way they were standing.

22221. That was at the corner of Cygnet Street and Sclater Street?—Yes.

22222. Almost opposite the door of the public house?—Yes, but there were a lot of people there, and you could not see whether it was here or there. (Pointing on the plan).

22223. You saw them move on?—Yes, they were gradually moving on and on.

22224. In which direction did they go?—Straight down Sclater Street.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I should like to ask another question of Smith.

FREDERICK SMITH, recalled.

22225. (Mr. Dickinson.) I asked you about this plan just now, and I want you to tell me again where it was that you saw them first when you came out of the door?—Along here. (Pointing on the plan). F. Smith.

22226. That is Cygnet Street and that is Sclater Street. (Pointing on the plan)?—Yes. They were in Sclater Street at the time.

22227. Just mark with a blue pencil where you saw them when you came out of the door?—They were coming along here. This is Brick Lane, and they would be coming up here to Bethnal Green Road.

22228. Where did you see them?—Coming along here. (Pointing on the plan).

22229. (Chairman.) Which door of the public house were you all standing at?—This door here.

22230. (Mr. Dickinson.) Is there any other door to the public house?—Yes, there is another door here and one round the corner.

22231. Where is it that this game of dart was being played?—Here. (Pointing on the plan).

22232. Between these two doors?—Yes.

22233. Can you get out of that other door from the bar?—Yes.

22234. You can get out of any door from the bar?—Yes.

(Chairman.) What the witness has said Earl Russell is that they were standing at the door that opens on to the corner.

(Earl Russell.) The door that he has marked with the pencil that opens on to Sclater Street.

(Chairman.) It opens on to the corner, apparently the actual corner.

JOHN MILLER, sworn.

22235. (Earl Russell.) You live at 27, Gibraltar Gardens or Buildings?—Gibraltar Gardens or Buildings—it is all the same. J. Miller

22236. You are a general dealer?—Yes.

22237. You remember the 12th September when there was some disturbance in Sclater Street?—Yes.

22238. Were you among those playing darts with Harding?—Yes.

22239. About how long had you been there?—Two hours or more.

22240. What was the first you heard of the noise outside?—We were playing darts and all of a sudden while we were playing we heard a lot of people coming along shouting and hooting, and when they came past the door we all went to the door to have a look to see what it was.

22241. How much did you see of the row when you got to the door?—I only saw the mob of people shouting.

22242. Could you make out who the prisoner was?—I did not know who the prisoner was till the next morning.

22243. Were you able to see him?—No.

22244. Were you able to see the constables?—Only their helmets.

22245. About how far from you were they when you saw them?—Ten or twelve yards away from the public house.

22246. There was a great deal of shouting going on in the street altogether?—Yes.

22247. Was the street very full of people too?—I should say 200 or 300 people were there.

22248. Where was Harding when you ran out?—I never ran out at all. Harding was in there playing darts with me.

22249. But you left the place where you were playing darts?—We left the dart board and went to the door.

22250. Where did Harding go?—He stood by the side of me.

22251. At the door?—Yes.

22252. Did he go into the street?—No.

22253. Not at any time?—Not at any time. In fact I was not allowed to go.

22254. You were not allowed to go?—No, and I know he never moved.

22255. Do you mean you would not allow him to go?—No, I was not allowed to go.

22256. Who would not allow you to go?—My intended.

22257. Did you hear Harding say anything while you were at the door?—He stood at the door by the side of me, and when we saw the chap who was being taken along was being ill-treated he holloaed, "Don't murder the man."

J. Miller.

22258. Could you see he was being ill-treated?—No, we were only going by the cries of the man. He shouted out, "Don't murder the man," and all of a sudden the response came back, "All right, Harding, we will have you for this."

22259. Do you know who made that answer?—No.

22260. You could not tell for certain who made that answer?—No.

22261. You do not know for certain that it was a policeman?—No.

22262. At any time did Harding go into the street? I am quite sure he never moved from my side.

22263. When that was all over where did you all go to?—We all went back and finished our game of darts as soon as they moved a little bit further on.

22264. And that is all you know about this arrest?—That is all there was I know.

22265. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You say it was your intended who would not allow you to go out?—Yes.

22266. How long have you been "intending"?—This last six months.

22267. Which bar of the public house was it that you were in?—All on the big side. What I call the big side, the four-ale side.

22268. The big drink side?—The big half a pint—a penny.

22269. I supose that is the popular side?—That is the popular side for poor people.

22270. I suppose it was very full that night?—Not so very crowded. There might have been twelve or thirteen people there all told.

22271. Were all the people in there playing darts?—No.

22272. How many can play darts at once?—Two hundred of you could play at once if you wanted to. It is all according to what game you are going to play.

22273. How many were playing that night?—Five or six.

22274. Were you all friends together playing darts?—All friends.

22275. And one of those who was playing was Andrews, the last witness?—He was playing, but I did not know him that night.

22276. You told me a moment ago you were all friends who were playing?—I put it down as friends. If I go into a public house along of you, and I had a drink along of you, I should call you a friend.

22277. Was your intended playing darts?—No, she was sitting down holding the baby.

22278. Andrews was playing, and there were five or six others?—Yes.

22279. Were you playing for drinks?—No, we are not allowed to play for drinks.

22280. Then you were playing for love?—A friendly game.

22281. How long had you been playing?—I think I had about two games that night.

22282. Can you give me the names of any of the other people you were playing with?—No, that I could not, except Harding, and I do not know the other people's names, except the manager.

22283. So that although you were all friends you cannot tell us now any of the names?—No, only what I have just now told you.

22284. It was only Harding you knew by name?—Harding and the manager.

22285. Was the manager playing?—Yes, with us.

22286. Are you sure that you cannot give us the names of anybody who was in that big side except yourself?—Except what I have just now told you.

22287. Are you in the habit of frequenting that house?—My living lies round about that neighbourhood, and I generally go in now and again.

22288. Then you are in the habit of frequenting it?—I do frequent it because my living lies about there.

22289. Are the same people in the habit of frequenting it?—Not that I am aware of.

22290. Do not the same people go there night after night?—Not that I am aware of. I am not there night after night.

22291. Were you busily engaged in your game, all of you?—On the night in question.

22292. Busily engaged?—Till the row came by.

22293. How far off was the row when you first started to go out?—I should think between 10 to 12 yards.

22294. So that really the crowd was right opposite the door before you started to go out?—Right past the door; not opposite, but right past the door.

22295. They had gone past it?—Across the road.

22296. They had gone past the house?—Yes.

22297. In which direction?—Towards the station.

22298. Towards the police station?—Yes, going towards Sclater-street.

22299. So they had gone past the door before anybody started to move out. Is that right?—Certainly.

22300. The street is not very wide there, is it?—I am no judge of distances.

22301. You know a wide street from a narrow street?—Certainly.

22302. Which do you call this, a narrow one or a wide one?—I should say there was just about enough width for two vans to pass one another.

22303. You call that a narrow street?—It is not wide.

22304. In such a street as that 300 people would spread quite from side to side?—Yes, and if there was a thousand they could.

22305. Is it not a fact that the crowd reached right up to the public house door?—No.

22306. Now think again. There were 300 people in that street?—Yes, and you could put 10,000 in it, which there is many a time on a Sunday morning.

22307. How near was the nearest part of the crowd to the public house door?—Outside Mr. Morris's.

22308. I am afraid I do not know Mr. Morris's?—That is in Sclater-street.

22309. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you know the number of the shop?—If I am not mistaken it is 87 or 77. I could not exactly tell you the number.

22310. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) When you heard this shouting did everybody start to run out together?—We all went to the door to see what was the matter.

22311. And I suppose you hurried?—I did not hurry. What had I to hurry for?

22312. To see what was going on?—I only went to look to see the crowd, and I heard the shouting going on. I stood on the doorstep.

22313. Is the door a wide one or a narrow one?—It is a double door.

22314. How many people can get out at once?—Without exaggerating I should say about two or three could get out.

22315. You and your intended, if you were arm-in-arm?—No, she was sitting on a form holding the baby.

22316. But about two people could get out at once?—Yes, there is a partition between.

22317. Were you one of the first to get out of the door or one of the last?—I was not one of the first or one of the last, but I went to the door.

22318. Do you remember whether you were one of the first to get out of the door or one of the last?—I remember going to the door, but whether I was the first or the second I could not say.

22319. But plenty of time would elapse for anybody who went out of the door first to get as far as the crowd and back again before you got out if you had been the last?—It would have been impossible.

22320. Have you known Harding for some time?—I have not known him personally. I have known his parents, his mother, but I have not known him.

22321. Be a little bit careful. Did you know Harding that night when you saw him in the public-house?—Yes.

22322. Had you spoken to him before?—No.

22323. You swear that?—I swear that I had never had any conversation with the man.

22324. You had never spoken to him?—I have not had any conversation with him.

22325. You never knew him by sight?—By sight, but I knew his mother all my lifetime I was going to say, and never knew him. I never knew who he belonged to till this case came on.

22326. You never knew who he belonged to although you knew his mother?—I knew his mother, but I did not know him.

22327. You knew his mother, but you did not know he was his mother's son?—That is correct.

22328. So that he was a complete stranger to you?—To a certain extent.

22329. To a very great extent?—It is a great extent.

22330. Did you recognise him when you went into the public house?—No.

22331. Were you introduced to him by somebody?—I was asked to have a game, and I joined in the game.

22332. And when you joined in the game did you know that one of the persons playing was Harding?—Not for the moment.

22333. Then how did you find out?—When he was summoned.

22334. The summons came long after that?—Yes, but I never had any contact with him after.

22335. How did you find out when you were playing with him who he was?—I did not find out who he was. I did not know who the man was.

22336. You swear that down to the time you were in the public-house playing the game you did not know who he was?—No.

22337. You swear that?—Yes.

22338. Do you remember telling me just now that of all the persons in that place the only two you knew were Harding and the manager?—I did say that, and I got his name after—not before.

22339. I asked you who of the people playing darts you knew, and you said the only two were the manager and Harding?—They were the only two that I knew in the company, and I knew his name in the court.

22340. Did you know Harding when you were playing darts, or did you not know him?—Not at the first lead off.

22341. Not at the first lead off, but did you get to know who he was while you were playing darts?—No.

22342. Did you know who he was when you went to the door to see the row?—No.

22343. He was a complete stranger to you then, was he?—Up to the time being he was.

22344. I want you again to try and explain how it was you told the Commissioners that the only two people you knew who were playing darts were Harding and Smith?—That is correct.

22345. How did you know Harding?—I did not know him until the day of the summons. I only know him by his name now; I knew his mother, but I never knew he belonged to the same woman that I knew.

22346. According to you the only persons in the bar that you knew were Smith and your intended?—Correct.

22347. The only two?—Yes.

22348. You swear that?—Yes.

22349. Is it the practice in these public houses to play darts with people you do not know?—If you like. They all join together and amalgamate.

24350. Is it the practice in these public houses to play darts with people you do not know?—If you like to play, anybody can have a game. You can play or anybody. You can walk in and call for your glass of ale, and if you like to have a throw at a dart you can. It is open for everybody.

22351. It is the practice for people to play who are complete strangers to each other?—Anybody.

22352. Did anybody ask you to play?—I was asked to have a game.

22353. Who asked you?—Some strangers; I could not say who.

22354. Did you ever get outside the door, or not?—I went to the door.

22355. Did you ever get outside the door?—I went to the door.

22356. That is not an answer to my question?—I went on the step.

22357. Is that outside the door?—Yes.

22358. How many steps are there there?—One—there is a kind of lift.

22359. Did you ever get beyond the step?—No.

22360. How many people can stand on that step at once?—Put us altogether five or six of us, or perhaps ten. When it is raining twenty could get on it.

22361. Did the people who were in the other bars of the public house come out of the same door?—I could not answer you that.

22362. Does that same door that you came out of communicate with the other bars?—It is one door on its own.

22363. Is there another bar you can get into from this same door?—Not unless the door was open.

22364. But the door was open?—Not inside the bar.

22365. I am speaking of the outside door?—There are two doors attached to this bar.

22366. I am speaking of the door in the street that you went to?—There are two doors attached to that side.

22367. The double door is the door you went to?—The double door is in the front, and there is one at the side.

22368. You went to the one at the front?—Yes.

22369. How many bars can you get into going through that door?—Only one.

22370. According to you from where you were you could not see the prisoner. You could not see anything more than the helmet of the constable. That is all you could see?—Quite correct.

22371. So that if Harding was standing anywhere near you he could not tell whether the constable was illusing the man or not?—That I cannot answer.

22372. And yet he shouted out "Don't murder the man"?—Yes, that was through the cries of other people—not only him, but other people holloaed out. "Don't murder the man."

22373. If Harding could not see the constable you follow that the constable could not see him?—That I cannot answer for, because there is a very big lamp outside the door, so he might have turned round and seen him in the glare.

22374. According to you, from where you were standing you could not see the constable's face, you could only see the top of his head?—That is quite correct—in fact I did not know the constable.

22375. There were so many people between?—200 or 300 and four or five policemen.

22376. And the result was that the constable could not have seen you from where he was?—He might have seen him.

22377. If you could not see his face because of the people how could he see your face?—From being under the big lamp.

22378. What prevented you seeing him was not the light but the people?—Yes.

22379. There were the same number of people between him and you as there were between you and him?—They were across the road. The people were all across the road.

22380. The people prevented you from seeing anything else but the helmet?—Yes.

22381. And the same people prevented your seeing him?—Yes.

22382. So if Harding was standing by you, according to your account, the policeman could not have seen him?—He could not have seen him, not as far as that goes.

22383. Then if he was standing by you how can you account for the policeman shouting out, "I will have you, Harding," or words to that effect?—That I cannot answer for. Whether it was his voice or not I cannot say.

22384. It was his voice, you think?—It might have been his voice, but I can swear on my oath now that the man never moved from my side on the night in question.

J. Miller.
5 Dec. 1906.

22385. You do not mean to say he would be by your side all the night in question?—No, till the bother went further on, and we came back and finished our game of darts.

22386. Did you see anybody strike the constable?—No.

22387. Nobody struck him?—Not in my company.

22388. You say you heard the constable shout out something about Harding?—I did not say the constable at all. I heard a reply come back, "All right, Harding, we will have you for this," but whether it was the constable or whoever said it I don't know.

22389. You heard that?—Yes.

22390. At that time did you know that the man standing by your side was Harding?—No.

22391. You did not?—No.

22392. This took place on the Wednesday night?—I could not exactly say what night it was. I know it was the 12th.

22393. How long after that was it that Harding first spoke to you about this?—About a week.

22394. About what had happened on that night?—I did not know anything about it till nearly the day of the summons, when his mother spoke to me.

22395. His mother spoke to you?—Yes.

22396. Where did you see his mother?—Down where I live.

22397. Up to that time you did not know that the man in the public-house was her son?—Not at the time being.

22398. And up to the time the mother spoke to you you did not know that her son had been in the public-house?—That is quite right.

22399. What did the mother say to you?—She asked me whether I was there on the night in question, and said that Arthur was summoned for striking the constable. I said, "If that is the case he has done nothing of the kind. I will go as a witness for him."

22400. How did you know that? You did not know who she was speaking about?—Yes, because I saw him going down the area afterwards as I was coming up—coming down the Terrace.

22401. After you had spoken to the mother you saw him?—Yes.

22402. She asked you to come and say he did not strike the constable?—No, she never asked me nothing of the kind.

22403. What did she ask you?—She asked me if I was there the night in question, and I said "Yes." She said, "Arthur is summoned for striking a constable," and I said "Arthur has done nothing of the kind."

22404. You did not know at that time Arthur had been in the public-house?—I did when I saw him.

22405. How long afterwards was it when you saw him?—Eight or nine days or five or six days.

22406. How long after this conversation with the mother did you see him?—It might have been a day or a day and a half.

22407. So that you did not see him the same day that you talked to the mother?—No.

22408. Now we have got that clear. Now I want you to explain to the Commissioners when the mother said to you that Arthur had been charged with striking the constable how did you know whether he had or whether he had not?—Because the man stood by the side of me on the steps the same evening.

22409. You did not know he was the man?—Don't I know his features?

22410. You learned them for the first time?—Learned what?

22411. Learned his features?—I know the man's features, don't I?

22412. You do not follow me. At the time you spoke to the mother you did not know him by sight?—No, I did not know him by sight—not on the night in question.

22413. You did not know him by sight at the time you were talking to the mother. That is quite clear?—Quite clear.

22414. That is perfectly plain?—Perfectly.

22415. Then the mother said to you, "Were you in the public-house"?—The mother turned round and said "Have you heard about Arthur?" I said, "Who is Arthur?" Those were the words. She said to me, "He is summoned for striking a constable on the 12th." I said, "He has not done anything of the kind."

22416. I suppose you have never heard of a "common vouchee"?—I don't understand French.

22417. At that time his name might have been Arthur Jennings for all you knew?—For all I care.

22418. (Earl Russell.) Try if you can to explain this to the Commissioners?—I have only told the truth, and nothing else.

22419. Try and explain to the Commissioners when you understood that this man who you saw in the public-house was called Harding or Arthur. When did you know he was Harding or Arthur?—About five or six days after.

22420. How did you know that?—Going down home. I was down home when I spoke to his mother. His mother said, "Were you in the house that night when Arthur is supposed to have struck the constable?" I said "I was there, but Arthur never moved."

22421. Was that what you were telling this gentleman about his mother?—Yes.

22422. Where did you see his mother first?—Down home.

22423. At her house?—At the door. I only live four or five doors off.

22424. At the door of her house?—Yes.

22425. Was anybody else there?—No.

22426. Nobody else?—No.

22427. What was it the mother said to you?—She said, "Have you heard about Arthur having a summons?" I said "Who is Arthur?" She said "My son." I said "I don't know who you mean." She said, "It was the row with Callaghan after he got locked up—they have summoned him for striking the constable." I said "I know he did not, because he stood on the steps by the side of me all the time."

22428. What I am trying to get you to tell these gentlemen is when you learned who she meant by Arthur. You said to her at the beginning of the conversation, "Who is Arthur?"—Yes. She turned round and said it was her boy.

22429. When did you get to know what her boy's features were?—When I saw him the day before he went to the summons.

22430. Not till then?—No.

22431. (Chairman.) How long have you lived at Gibraltar Gardens?—As near as may be about nine months.

22432. Where does Mrs. Harding live—in Gibraltar Gardens?—Yes.

22433. She has not got a whole house there, has she?—I do not know exactly what she has got there. I know she has one or two rooms.

22434. She has two rooms in—I think it is called Gibraltar Buildings?—It is the same.

22435. That is in the same street that your house is in?—Yes.

22436. About how long have you known Mrs. Harding?—I was going to say all my lifetime.

22437. Then you have lived in this neighbourhood for more than nine months?—I have lived in the neighbourhood all my lifetime.

22438. And you have known Mrs. Harding for many years?—For many years.

22439. Do you know that she has got several children?—I believe so.

22440. Are you quite sure that you had never seen this young man?—Never before—never knew he was the son of Mrs. Harding.

22441. Never seen him about the streets?—I have seen him, but never known he was the son of Mrs. Harding.

22442. You have seen him about the streets?—Not to have conversation with him.

22443. You have seen him about the streets?—Yes, but not to have conversation with him.

22444. You have seen him about the streets?—Yes.

22445. Is he a good deal about the streets?—Not that I am aware of.

22446. At any rate he was not an entire stranger to you when you began playing "Dart" with him on the 12th September?—Not exactly, but I never had any conversation, and did not know who he was. I did not know his name at all then.

22447. I am willing to accept that; but he was a man you had seen about in the streets?—Yes.

22448. In the neighbourhood?—Yes, but never knew who he was.

22449. You wish us to understand that you did not know he was the son of Mrs. Harding?—Correct.

22450. Perhaps you do not know, but you may take it from me that the summons was taken out on the 18th September?—Yes.

22451. That was six days after the Wednesday evening on which Callaghan had been taken up, and the row had taken place. How long after the 18th was it that you saw Mrs. Harding?—If I am not mistaken about a day before the summons was to come off at the court.

22452. The summons came off at the Court on the 26th. You think it was a day or two before you went to the Police Court?—Yes.

22453. Did Mrs. Harding come to you at your house, or did she come to you in the street?—Met one another accidentally.

22454. She was not coming to you for the purpose of asking you to give evidence?—No.

22455. Wait a moment until I have finished my question. She was not coming to you, as far as you knew, for the purpose of asking you to come and give evidence for her son?—Certainly not.

22456. How long was it since you had spoken to Mrs. Harding before that occasion?—I speak to her nearly every day. We meet one another at the market. If a woman gets her living in the streets the same as myself we might pass the time of day—"Good morning."

22457. This meeting, you say, was merely an accidental meeting as far as you were concerned?—Yes, quite accidental.

22458. How did she begin the conversation?—She turned round and said "Have you heard anything about Arthur?" I said "Who is Arthur?" I turned round and said "You don't know what you are talking about. Who is Arthur?" She said "My son. He is summoned with assaulting the police on the night that Callaghan got locked up." I said "What?" I said "Arthur never went out of the door. He stood by the side of me and my pals. He never went off the doorstep."

22459. I understand you did know who Arthur was?—Not till then.

22460. Then how could you be in a position to tell her that her son was not concerned in this assault on that night?—That was after I had seen him.

22461. Had you seen a man called Arthur or Harding, who was by your side on the 12th September before you saw his mother?—No.

22462. Between the Wednesday on which this occurrence took place and the interview with the mother you had not seen Harding at all?—No.

22463. Then I still do not understand this conversation. When you met the mother you did not know that Arthur was her son?—No.

22464. You did not know that the man at the public-house door by your side was her son?—No.

22465. Then what did you think she meant by asking you to come and give evidence for Arthur?—She never asked me to give evidence at all.

22466. Then what did she say to you?—She only turned round and said, "Have you heard about Arthur getting a summons for assaulting the police?" I said, "Arthur never done anything of the kind."

22467. Have you heard that the man who was standing by your side had been summoned at the time?—Yes.

22468. Who had told you that the man had been summoned?—Hearing one or two talking.

22469. That did not have any meaning?—Not to me, none whatever. In fact I took no heed of it.

22470. (Mr. Dickinson.) How long were you in the public-house?—About two hours.

22471. Was Harding there the whole of that time?—He might have been there about an hour or an hour and a half.

22472. Had you been playing "Dart" with him all the time?—Not all the time. I joined in the game a little while after. I think I played about two games.

22473. How long does a game last?—It all depends on whether you are lucky to get under; it might take a quarter of an hour or half an hour, according to your number.

22474. You had two games?—About that.

22475. Did you have another game after this had happened—after the crowd had gone by? No, it was the finish of the game.

22476. Who won that game?—I do not know. It is only a game of skill. It is not for anything else. It is really a pastime more than anything else.

22477. You all came out to the door?—We were standing at the door. There were about four of us at the door. After the crowd had dispersed and had gone along, we went back and finished the game.

22478. It was very near closing-time?—No, I can tell you the time as near as makes no odds. It was about half-past 11.

22479. How do you fix that time. You say this happened between 11 and half-past 11?—Yes.

22480. How do you know that was the time?—Because I am in the habit of going home.

22481. What time did you get home?—About quarter to 12 at my own place.

22482. (Earl Russell.) There is a witness whose proof has been sent to you, Morris Gotlib, but who is not connected with this case of assault, and I should like to call him if the Commissioners will allow me on this question of identification.

(Chairman.) On the question of identification of what?

(Earl Russell.) On the question of identification of prisoners.

(Chairman.) We have not considered that yet. I do not think we can take the witness at this moment.

(Earl Russell.) Then those are all the witnesses.

(Chairman.) We will go on with this case again to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

Wednesday, 5th December, 1906.

IN CAMERA.

MRS. X's CASE.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

Mrs. X, sworn.

Mrs. X. 5 Dec. 1906.

1. (Earl Russell.) You are a married woman living at 103A (———)?—Yes.

2. Your husband is a naval architect?—Yes.

3. I think his business takes him away often to (———) and to other places out of London?—Yes.

4. When he is out of London you have to go about by yourself?—Yes, to friends.

5. Did you have occasion to go to a lady at (———)?—Sometimes. I used to give lessons to a lady, a friend of mine.

6. You are Spanish yourself?—Yes.

7. And you give her Spanish lessons?—No, French lessons. I speak French and Italian.

8. Were you giving her such lessons in March, 1906?—I left London to go with my husband for months. She is in Paris.

9. I was asking you about March, six months ago. Were you giving her lessons?—Yes.

10. In order to get to (———) you used to take a motor omnibus to Oxford Circus, and then take a 'bus?—Yes, I used to take one at Oxford Circus to Westminster Bridge. It goes from (———) to Oxford Circus, and then I used to take a 'bus to go to Westminster Bridge.

11. You have to change omnibuses?—Yes, that is right.

12. On the night of the 20th March, 1906, you had been paying a visit at (———) to this lady?—Yes, that is right.

13. And you had got off the (———) 'bus on your way home?—Yes.

14. Where had you got off the omnibus?—At Peter Robinson's. There is a bonnet place.

15. Near Peter Robinson's?—Yes. I was looking for a motor omnibus about half-past 10; it was raining very hard.

16. It was raining very hard?—Yes, it was a very rainy evening.

17. You were waiting there for a motor omnibus?—That is right.

18. Did you have a large cardboard box with you?—Yes, a very big box. The policeman told me they never mentioned that box.

19. Never mind the policeman. Had you any box containing the things you had been wearing at the house of this lady whom you had visited?—That is quite true.

20. While you were waiting for the motor omnibus you saw a friend, did you?—Yes, and another gentleman. I tumbled my umbrella, and he picked it up. He said "Madam, your umbrella." I said "Thank you very much." He said "Will you allow me to help you with your box?" I said "No, thank you very much; I do not want your help. I am just waiting for a motor-car."

21. This was a stranger?—Yes. The other one—I knew him—said "Where are you going, Mrs. X? Will you come in a cab?" I said "No, I prefer a motor-car; it is quicker."

22. He asked you to come with him in what?—In a cab. He said "There is no motor-car; it is awfully late for you; it is half-past 10." I said "Never mind; the motor-car cannot be very long."

23. Does he live near you?—He does not live far from me.

24. (Chairman.) What is his name?—I see him very often. He is at (———). He is a gentleman in business. I do not know his name. I see him very often in (———). He is a business gentleman. He always says "How are you madam?" He is not a friend of mine.

25. (Earl Russell.) You mean he is not a visiting acquaintance?—No. I see him very often at (———); he is in business; he is not a friend of mine.

26. He is not a friend of your husband's?—No.

27. Do you know his name?—No, I do not really know his name. He is just a friend like that, you know—just to say "How are you?" He is no friend of mine at all. It is only business for the shop. That is all.

28. What kind of shop?—What you call in England a linen-draper.

29. A draper's shop?—Yes. He says "How are you?" like that. It is nothing.

30. You said you would wait for the motor omnibus?—Yes. He only picked up my umbrella.

31. (Chairman.) I thought it was somebody else who picked up the umbrella?—Yes. Somebody said "Can I help you to carry the box?"

32. That was the first gentleman who spoke to you?—Yes. One picked up the umbrella and the other offered to carry my box.

33. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand that these two gentlemen were together?—No. It is like this. When you are looking for a motor-car, and have plenty of things in your hands, very busy, and raining hard, there are always some people who say "What are you looking for?" Some gentleman sometimes comes and speaks to you. I say "I do not want that; I am looking for the motor 'bus. No, thank you, I do not want anything else."

34. (Chairman.) But your umbrella was open, I suppose, as it was raining?—Well, the 'bus was full, and I had to stop for another one. All the people were returning from Queen's Hall, and from the music halls, and there is rushing to get a motor-car very often.

35. But your umbrella was up?—No, it was shut at that moment. It was not open, but it was like this, flopping. I dropped it down, and he picked it up. He just picked up my umbrella and gave it to me. That is nothing.

36. You told the gentleman whom you knew that you did not wish to go with him. You said you would rather wait for the motor 'bus. Is that so?—That is what I said. I said "No, thank you, I will wait for the motor 'bus." Then a policeman looked at me.

37. Did the gentleman go away in a cab?—Yes.

38. What happened then with the police?—The policeman came up with a smile on his lip and said

"Hallo, good lady," touching me on the chin like this (illustrating). I said "What a liberty you take with me." He said "Do not be so rushing, lady." He said "What did the gentleman say?" I said, just for fun, "He was asking me to take a cab." He said "Oh, you did not go in the cab with him." I said "No, I want a motor-car." He said "Never mind; it is rather late; it is half-past 10." He said "What are you doing here? It is half-past 10." I said "I know it is half-past 10." He said "Come with me." I said "Where?" He said "Come with me. What country are you?" I said "I am foreign." He said "Come with me." I said "No. Do not be silly. My husband will be here to-night; he has come from abroad." He was coming from (———). "He will be here this evening. Do not be silly; let me alone." He said "Give me your address, and I can come and see you." I said "No, I do not want you to know my address; leave me alone." I said "I do not want to hear what you want to say."

39. (Earl Russell.) Do you say the policeman asked you to give him your address?—Yes.

40. Did you say that the policeman touched your chin?—He touched me just like this (illustrating). "Hallo, good lady," or "good girl."

41. Where did he touch you?—Like this (illustrating.)

42. On your chin?—Yes. He said, "Where are you living?"

43. (Mr. Whitmore.) Where were you standing when the policeman did this?—At the corner of Oxford Street. There is a corner where there are all the bonnets, where the motors stop—at the corner of Regent Street.

44. (Chairman.) At the corner of Regent Street and Oxford Street?—Yes, that is right.

45. Peter Robinson's shop is on the north side, is it not?—It is Peter Robinson's shop; it goes right round the corner.

46. Peter Robinson's shop, if I remember rightly, is on the north-eastern corner of Oxford Street?—There is a bonnet shop at the corner.

47. Peter Robinson's shop, near which the motor buses stop, is the corner shop. It is on the north-east corner. The motor buses going from the Langham Hotel to Waterloo Station would go down Regent Street, but, on the near side, they would go down on the east side of the road?—I was at Peter Robinson's, and it was raining. Someone said, "Can I carry your box?" and I said, "No."

48. Were you on the south side of Oxford Circus? Were you on the side nearest to (———) or nearest to (———)?—To catch the motor 'bus that comes down Regent Street.

49. I understood the Witness to say just now that there is a bonnet shop there when I put the name of Peter Robinson's to her.

(Mr. Dickinson.) She gave the name of Peter Robinson.

50. (Chairman.) She said there was a bonnet shop?—Yes, there is a bonnet shop.

51. Mr. Leslie has explained the matter, and refreshed my recollection as to these shops. The original Peter Robinson's is on the north-east corner, but there is another Peter Robinson's shop on the south side of Oxford Street. That is in Regent Street, where the motor 'buses stop.

52. (Earl Russell.) That is at the south-east corner.

53. Did the policeman say anything else to you?—He said, "Have you got any baby?" I said, "I have got none." He said, "How long have you been married?" I said, "Five or six years. Why do you ask me such a question?" He said, "Your husband is no good." I said, "Why is he no good?" He said, "You have no baby." I said, "My husband is an Englishman; he is the same as you are." He said, "Oh." I said, "You dirty rascal; let me go." He said, "Why are you rushing me like that—inside." I looked at him, and said, "What are you doing to me?" He said, "Why are you rushing me like that?" I said, 'Leave me alone. If I have no baby, that is not your business."

54. I do not understand what you mean by "inside"?—In prison, in charge. He said, "Inside"—allez-vous-en—and he took me in a little place.

55. Was anything said to you by the policeman about the man you had been speaking to? Did the policeman say anything to you about your friend that you had been speaking to, or the other one?—Yes. I said, "That gentleman has never said anything wrong to me—only to pick up my umbrella; he never said anything wrong." I said, "Do not put me inside." He said, "Never mind—it is half-past ten—inside." I looked at him like that. I said, "Oh, that is very funny." He took me by the arm, and squeezed me. I said, "Do not do that; do not be so rude to me."

56. Do you mean he took hold of your arm with his hand?—Yes, like this (illustrating).

57. (Chairman.) Where were you when he did that first?—At the corner of Peter Robinson's, in Oxford Street. It goes near Oxford Street. It is not in Regent Street. There is at the corner a bonnet shop. That is in Oxford Street, and not in Regent Street. It is between Oxford Street and Regent Street. There is a little corner there. You call that Oxford Street, I think. There is a station there. What is the station?

58. (Earl Russell.) The Tube station?—Yes, that is right.

(Chairman.) There are some shops at the corner, but facing the corner; in other words, Oxford Street and Regent Street, if I remember rightly, do not go to right angles there.

(Earl Russell.) No; there is a quadrant. I suppose that is what the witness means.

59. (Chairman.) She was standing where the houses are crossing, so to speak, from the one line to the other?—He took me in a little street. I have never been there before. He said, "You are not married." I said, "I am; I can prove it." He said, "You are not; you live in Charlotte Street." I said, "I do not know where Charlotte Street is." I said, "You take me for somebody else." That is what I said to him. He said, "You are not married."

60. (Earl Russell.) You had seen this policeman before, had you not?—Never; I did not know him by sight.

61. Had you not seen him before?—Never seen him before. Another constable came—a nice-looking man with a polished face—and he spoke to him and said, "Look at that lady." I did not run away.

62. Was all this the same policeman?—Yes; and a fair man and tall, with a moustache.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Might she identify the man?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(P.C. Cole, 528 V, was called in for the purpose of identification by the Witness.)

63. (Chairman.) (To the Witness.) Look at that constable. Is that the man to whom you are referring?—Yes, that is the man.

64. (Chairman.) (To the constable.) Your name is Cole?—P.C. Cole, yes.

65. (Chairman.) What is your number?—P.C. Cole, 528 V.

66. (Chairman.) (To the Witness.) When did Constable Cole first of all put his hand upon your arm?—When we were going into the small street. This street is at the back of Regent Street.

67. You know Regent Street?—Yes; there is a public-house near the Tube station.

68. Let me put it in another way. Where were you standing when you dropped your umbrella?—At the corner of Regent Street and Oxford Street, near the Twopenny Tube station, and I just went like this to look for a motor (illustrating).

69. Were you standing in the same place when you had the conversation with the gentleman who asked you to go in his cab?—Yes, near the Twopenny Tube.

70. You were standing in the same place?—Yes, just at the corner.

71. You may have moved a foot or two?—That is right.

72. But it may be described as being in the same place?—Yes.

73. You had a conversation with a gentleman?—No, no conversation; only two words. That is all.

74. He went off in his cab?—That is right—to get in the cab.

Mrs. X.
5 Dec. 1906.

75. And you were still in the same place?—Still in the same place; there was no motor 'bus.

76. No motor 'bus had come?—It might be there in a second.

77. Then Constable Cole came and spoke to you. The constable who has just been in was the first constable who spoke to you?—All the same one.

78. You were standing in much the same place when he came and spoke to you?—Yes; he came after the gentleman went.

79. Directly the gentleman got into the cab the constable came and spoke to you?—Yes.

80. How long after he spoke to you was it that he put his hand upon your arm?—When he took me in charge—when he took me up.

81. You knew when he took you in charge?—He told me himself—"You go inside; you are in charge." I said "What for?"

82. Did he put his hand upon you then?—Yes, like that (illustrating).

83. You knew then that you were in custody—you knew that he was arresting you?—Yes, he told me that himself. He said, "You go and stop all night."

84. How long was the time between the moment the gentleman got into the cab and the time the constable put his hand upon your arm?—It was not the gentleman. It was the policeman.

85. You have told us the gentleman who had spoken to you got into a cab?—That is right.

86. How long was it before the constable arrested you—two minutes?—About two minutes.

87. You had not moved from the place?—Just to look like this, to see if the 'bus was coming.

88. I want you to tell Lord Russell, before you go into the long conversation you had with the policeman exactly what passed between the policeman and yourself before he took you in charge. About two minutes, you say it was?—Yes. He came up and said, "What did the gentleman say to you?"

89. Now we want to know what passed between you and the policeman before he took you in charge and before he put his hand upon your arm?—Directly the gentleman had gone he came, and he did not come to take me in charge. He said, "Hallo, good girl, what are you doing here?" I said "I am not a girl. I am a married lady." He said, "Never mind."

90. (Earl Russell.) What did he say then?—I do not know—some silly thing. He asked me whether I was married, and how long, and I had no baby.

91. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) "He asked me how long I had been married"?—Yes, and he said to me, "Your husband is no good; you have got no baby." He said, "Come with me, if you be a good girl." I said "My husband will be home; I got a letter this morning; he returns from abroad, and you must let me go." He said, "No, you will be sorry." "Oh," he said, "you are rushing me so much, you are pushing me so much. You are not a nice girl. You are not kind to me."

92. (Chairman.) That was after he had charged you. I want to know what was said?—All the time he was speaking to me he tickled me—he said, "Give me your arm, like two sweethearts." I said, "You are very bad." I wanted to cry. I said, "Let me go; do not be silly; keep your place properly; you do not keep your place of a policeman." He said, "Never mind, as you are so cruel it is inside," meaning I was pushing. "Hallo," I said, "you are dirty mannered; you are no good." There is a street near the station, and he took me down that street—Poland Street, or Argyll Street, I think it is.

93. Where is Poland Street?—The second street you come to after leaving the corner.

94. Argyll Street is in between the two?—Yes.

95. Where is the Tube Station?—At the corner.

96. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The Tube Station is at the corner of Argyll Street and Oxford Street.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Argyll Street runs parallel to Regent Street. The Tube Station is between Argyll Street and Regent Street.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, on the other side.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) This is Oxford Street, this is Regent Street, there is a block of buildings at the corner, and there is a street there.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Which is Argyll Street?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Here is the Tube Station.

(Witness.) There is a street near the station.

97. (Mr. Dickinson.) Can you show us where it is on that? Supposing this is Oxford Circus, and Regent Street is down here, now where is the Tube Station?—The Tube Station is up here, in Oxford Street.

98. This is the road to (———), down Regent Street?—Yes.

99. That is the road towards London, down Oxford Street?—Yes.

100. That is where the Tube Station is?—Yes.

101. Where were you?—Just in front of the door of the Tube Station. It is not far; it is only a second from the corner.

102. You were speaking just now about a little street?—You know the street. He said, "We will go all round." That is the way he brought me with him to the station.

103. (Chairman.) To go to Marlborough Street Station you go down Argyll Street?—I know it is not Regent Street. He took me down a little street.

104. (Mr. Dickinson.) It was after he arrested you that he took you along that street?—Yes, to bring me to the station.

105. (Chairman.) It was Marlborough Street Police Station he took you to. You found that out afterwards, I suppose?—Yes, I think it was. I had never been there before.

106. We understand that. You appeared at Marlborough Street Police Court the day after, before the Magistrate?—Yes.

107. But you were taken to the Marlborough Street Police Station on this night by Policeman Cole?—Yes.

108. (Earl Russell.) While you were talking to the policeman did any omnibus going your way come up?—There are plenty go to Victoria. I wanted a motor-car, for the motor-car is the quickest, and brings me just over the side of Westminster Bridge, and the (———) car will then do for me.

109. Did an omnibus you wanted to get into come up while you were talking to the policeman?—No, I wanted to take one, only it was full, at half-past 10, of people returning from Queen's Hall and different places.

110. Did you say anything to the policeman about going by omnibus?—Yes. He said he had seen me before, a week ago, or a week or two ago. He said: "I think I have seen you before." I said: "I don't remember you." He said: "Hallo, it is not very nice to be out at half-past 10." That is what he said to me.

111. Then you were taken to the police station by this policeman?—Yes, by the man who came in here just now.

112. Then were you taken before another policeman and charged?—No; there was only himself.

113. When you got inside the police station?—Yes; he put me in a little round thing.

114. In a dock?—I said: "My goodness, where am I? Let me send a telegram to my husband." He said: "Oh, what a pity to take a big box like that." I said: "Look in the box." That policeman that came in here just now said: "I am awfully sorry." I said: "It is an indignity what you have said to me; the gentleman called the cab. You said to me; 'Inside.'" I said: "You will have to continue." He said: "I am awfully sorry; pardon me, where is your husband?" He looked awfully sorry, and apologised. He said: "Don't mention anything about what I say to you." I said: "You have taken me for a prostitute; you have called me awfully naughty; it is shocking." I said: "Never mind; now I am here I go to the court; my husband is returning from (———)." I said: "I am going to be here all night." Before then I said my husband was returning.

115. When you came into the station you saw another policeman there with a big book, did you not?—Yes.

116. Something was written down in it?—Yes, in a little place.

117. You were in a little dock—in a little shut-up place in a room?—Yes.

118. Were you told what you were charged with? Were you told what they said you had done wrong? Did the other policeman whom you found there after he had written in the book tell you what they said you had done wrong? Did he tell you what you had done which you ought not to have done?—No.

119. Did he read anything over to you, and ask you what you said?—No.

120. (Chairman.) Did he not ask for your name and address?—No. When he came in he pushed me like that (illustrating). I was standing with a big box. I could not carry it myself. It was for that that I wanted to get a proper bus. At half-past 10 they all return from Queen's Hall, and very often they say, "Madam, you cannot go with a big box."

121. (Earl Russell.) Never mind about the big box. We want to know what the Inspector said to you with the book in front of him when you were at the station?—He said, "Where is your husband?" I said, "My husband is a naval architect." He said, "I am awfully sorry for you, madam

122. Who said that?—The Inspector with the long coat.

123. Did not the Inspector tell you what you were charged with, or why you were brought there?

124. (Chairman.) Did he read out something?—Never read me anything. He only asked me where I lived. He said, "I am very sorry for you. I will send for your husband." My husband came in an hour or two after to fetch me out.

125. (Earl Russell.) Did another constable besides the constable Cole, and the Inspector, come in after you were there, and say anything?—No; only the Inspector said, "I am very sorry." Then he said, "What a silly thing to take a woman like this with a big thing like this. What a silly fellow." He said, "You will not be long here; your husband is coming."

126. The Inspector said that?—Yes.

127. You saw no other constable?—No. I said I had to be home.

128. Then you were taken to the cells. Were you locked up in a cell?—Yes, in a little place, with just a little thing to sit down on.

129. A little separate room with a locked door?—Yes; it is not a room at all.

130. Were you alone there, or were you with someone else?—No one else.

131. Did you see any other woman while you were in custody in the police station?—No; I did not see anybody. I heard people crying and swearing. I had been there two hours, or more than that.

132. (Chairman.) Did no matron come to you? Did no lady come to you?—No, I do not know any lady. A lady took my bonnet.

133. Then a lady did come to you?—That was a lady that belonged to the station.

134. That is what I mean?—Yes; she took my hat pins.

135. (Mr. Dickinson.) What did she do?—Nothing. She took my hat pins. I was crying, and she gave me a drop of water. She said, "Do not cry."

136. (Earl Russell.) Were you crying then?—I was quite ill. She said, "Do not cry," and she brought me some water. She said, "Do not cry; your husband will not be long."

137. You did not see any other woman at all?—No, nobody. There was a little boy came and pulled the bolt.

138. (Chairman.) Do you remember your husband coming?—Yes.

139. Was he brought to the cell, or were you taken from the cell back into the charge room—the room that you had come from—to meet your husband?—My husband was downstairs with a cab waiting for me. Then there was a little boy came in and pulled the bolt, and he said, "Madam, come. Your husband is downstairs with a cab waiting for you." My husband brought the rent book. He said, "All right."

140. (Earl Russell.) You went straight from the cell to the cab without any further difficulty?—Yes, I had no difficulty. My husband gave his name and showed his rent book. He said, "That is all right."

Mrs. N.
5 Dec. 1906.

141. Then you were present when you saw your husband talking to the policeman at the desk?—Yes. I saw my husband talking to the gentleman, and showing him the rent book to prove you pay your rent. He was standing there. I was crying, and as ill as anything. I had to go to a doctor. I felt awfully bad.

142. About what time was it that you left the police station?—Awfully late. I had to take a cab. It was very late. I am sure it would be quarter past one.

143. You and your husband drove off in a cab?—Yes, and my husband was very sorry.

144. The next morning you had to come back and go to the police court?—Yes.

145. Did your husband come with you?—Yes, he came with me.

146. Did he stop with you all the time, or did you have to leave your husband?—No, my husband stopped with me all the time.

147. Did your husband stop with you all the time from when you got to the court up to the time when you came before the Magistrate?—Yes, he stopped with me in the place. He was in another place.

148. Did you have to go and stand with the other prisoners, or not?—Yes.

149. Was your husband standing alongside you while you were there?—No, my husband was standing with other people on the other side.

150. While you were standing with the other prisoners, and before you came before the Magistrate, was anything said to you by anybody? Did anybody speak to you?—I do not think anybody spoke to me only that policeman who came in just now. He spoke to me, with another dark policeman.

151. Policeman Cole and another dark policeman?—Yes. He said to me, "I bring a friend—this one here you see." I said, "What for?" I did not know what he meant. He said, "I have to defend myself. You must pay 5s." I said, "What for?" I did not know what he meant. He said, "You must pay 5s. to the court."

152. (Mr. Dickinson.) You must pay 5s.?—That policeman with a big moustache who came in here brought another policeman, not as big as him—a little dark man, I think—and he said, "You must pay 5s. She must be convicted; I do not want to be fooled." My husband said, "This is very funny."

153. (Earl Russell.) Where was your husband?—My husband was in a little corridor—it was very dirty.

154. How close to you was your husband?—Further.

155. I was asking what the policeman said to you?—What I have told you now—that she must pay 5s.

156. Did he say anything as to what you should do when you got before the Magistrate?—Yes. He said, "Madam, you have to go into the place round there. You must not say anything behind me. I never meant anything by that sort of thing." I said, "I don't want to say that—there are too many people. Look at the shocking thing, saying it before people." I said it to my husband that evening, "What a naughty policeman is that one." He said, "Oh, never mind that, do not mention it in the court; it is too shocking." He said, "If you are asked, you must tell the truth." That is what he said. My husband said, "Don't say anything about the policeman." He smelt of drink; he looked very impertinent and vulgar.

157. (Chairman.) What Lord Russell was asking you was what the policeman said to you before you went into the police court. You were standing outside in a corridor with other prisoners?—Yes.

158. Or with other people charged?—Yes. He came in like that, and said, "Madam, be careful; do not charge me. You have only to say to the Magistrate you are very sorry; do not mention anything about me"—what I told you that he had been frivolous. He said, "You must not say that sort of thing in the court; you must say you are sorry." I said my husband said, "It is a scandal."

159. Did your husband overhear this conversation?—No; my husband was along there.

160. I understand you to mean that the police-constable suggested you should say you were sorry, and that you should submit to pay a fine of 5s.?—Yes. He said, "You do not want to be ridiculous; you want to be discharged." The policeman looked silly. He said, "I bring a friend with me." He said, "You see that young fellow, he has been with me." I said, "What for?" He said, "I have to defend myself; I do not want to be fooled; I have been too quick; I am sorry." The other one—I do not know what he said—I think he is here.

Mrs. X. 5 Dec. 1906.

161. (Earl Russell.) When you got before the Magistrate did you say or do anything?—I was awfully ill.

162. (Chairman.) Did you have a solicitor to defend you?—No, only my husband. My husband said: "You do not want a solicitor for a thing like that. You are quite innocent. You can come here. Anybody can be out at half-past ten at night. The street is for everybody."

163. Did the Magistrate discharge you?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The case was dealt with under Section 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, which means that the magistrate thought the charge proved, but that it was not a case in which to convict. That is what the section says.

(Chairman.) "Mrs. X using insulting behaviour whereby a breach of the peace may have been occasioned at Oxford Street." The constable was Arthur Cole, and the Inspector was Remfrey, whom we have seen before. The only entry is "Charge dismissed, Section 16."

(Mr. Whitmore.) What does that section say?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) "If upon the hearing of a charge for an offence punishable on summary conviction under this Act or under any other Act, whether past or future, the Court of Summary Jurisdiction think that though the charge is proved the offence was in the particular case of so trifling a nature that it is inexpedient to inflict any punishment or any other than a nominal punishment, the court without proceeding to conviction may dismiss the information." It is constantly done, as you know, in cases of first offences, and in cases in which the Magistrate thinks it desirable to follow that course then he acts, and very wisely acts, on the section.

(Chairman.) The thing that strikes me at present is why that charge came to be made. I have not heard the evidence on the other side, I know.

164. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand you said nothing to the Magistrate?—I did not want to; there were too many people.

165. Did you say anything or not?—I never said anything. I only said that the policeman took me just at the corner of Oxford Street, and he walked round here. He came with a smile on his lip and said "Good lady, good girl," and he put me inside. I was awfully ill that day.

166. My question is did you say that to the Magistrate in court?—Never.

167. You said nothing to him?—No, my husband told me to say nothing.

168. You said nothing?—No.

169. Your husband said nothing?—Yes. He put himself very low down. He said, "That man is a scoundrel."

170. Did he say anything to the Magistrate?—I forget. I do not think so. He never said anything. He said "My wife, I was looking for her on my return."

171. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you do not understand the questions I put to you will you ask me to repeat them, because I want you to understand the questions I want to ask you?—Yes.

172. The first question I want to ask you is this: Are you quite sure you had never seen that Policeman Cole who stood there before?—I do not remember seeing that man before I saw him when he took me in charge.

173. So far as you know you had never seen him before?—No, I did not know his face before.

174. You are quite sure about that?—I do not remember seeing him before.

175. When you were taken to the police station and put in the cell were you alone?—Yes, by myself.

176. You are quite sure?—Yes.

177. You were quite alone?—Alone by myself. I was ill, and the lady attending me give me a drop of water.

178. Yes. We shall see her no doubt?—The lady gave me a drop of water.

179. Another thing I want to ask you is this. You told these gentlemen just now that when you were taken to the police station they asked you for your address?—Yes; I gave it to them.

180. And you said that your husband was away from home?—Yes, visiting.

181. You told the Inspector that your husband was away?—Yes; that is right.

182. Just follow this question. At that time did you think that your husband was away?—Certainly; my husband was away two days.

183. You thought he was away from home?—Yes.

184. And you thought that he was away that night?—No, I said "He has come back." My husband says where he goes on business, and he said "I will not be more than two days." He cannot go to (———) and back in a day; it takes sometimes two days.

185. Did you tell the Inspector when he asked you your name that your husband was away from home?—Yes.

186. You told him that because you thought he was away from home?—He was away. That was right. I said "He is away, and he will come home to-night."

187. How long have you been married?—I have been married six years.

188. Have you got any family?—No, no children.

189. Has your husband very often to go away from home on business?—Not very often—sometimes three, four, or five times in a year—every three or four months—not for long, but for two or three days.

190. He has to go away for two or three days at a time; but he has to go pretty often for two or three days?—Not pretty often—about every two months.

191. Was he away several times in the month of March when this happened?—Yes; he had to be away at a place called (———), a shipping place.

192. And he was away a good deal during this month of March?—Not a good deal.

193. Two or three times in March?—Yes, sometimes he went for 24 hours.

194. He would be away for one night, or two nights several times in this month of March?—Not very often.

195. Not very often, but sometimes?—Yes.

196. How long do you say you have been married?—Six years.

197. You were married, were you not, on the 1st April, 1902?—Yes.

198. Four years?—Me?

199. Yes?—More than that.

200. Does that certificate refer to you (Handing copy of marriage certificate.)?—I do not know.

201. (Chairman.) Where were you married?—I was married at (———) Road.

202. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is that the certificate? You can read English?—I can read it a little, but not very well.

203. This says that your husband's name is X?—That is right.

204. And that your name was (———), otherwise (———)?—Yes.

205. It says you are a spinster, and it says that you were both living at (———)?—That is right.

206. And that you were married at the registry office on the 1st April, 1902?—Yes, I know. It is four years.

207. That is four years?—Yes. I knew him two years before marriage.

208. Were you living together for two years before you were married?—Yes.

209. At (———)?—Yes, I am married now.

210. I am not saying you are not. You told these gentlemen that on this day you had been to see a lady friend at (———)?—Yes.

211. Did you tell your husband that?—Yes.

212. Did you refuse to tell your husband who the lady friend was?—No.

213. Will you tell me the name and address of the lady at (———) that you had been to?—I forget the number. She has gone to Paris.

214. Never mind the number. You tell me her name first, and be a little bit careful about this. Remember, you are on your oath, and it will be taken down. Tell me the name of the lady at (———) you had been to?—(———).

215. Is that her Christian name or her surname?—Madame (———).

216. What was the address?—(———).

217. That is a very big place?—I do not know the number.

218. It is not the number. What was the street?—I forget.

219. When did you last see Madame (———)?—I have not been to see her for four months now.

220. Have you seen her since the night that this happened?—No. My husband has been out—me and my husband have been out, going to Leicester, Glasgow or abroad.

221. Were you going to tell us that your husband said you never were to go there again?—Yes, my husband said, "Do not go there any more." My husband said, "If it is like that, you had better stay at home."

222. Did your husband ask you to tell him the name of the place that you had been to at (———), and did you not refuse to tell your husband?—Yes, I refused.

223. What was it that you had got in this box? Was it an evening dress?—Yes, a lady's evening costume.

224. So that you had been wearing an evening dress at some place which you refused to tell your husband about. Is that so?—The lady gave it to me. I taught her French. It was just friendly. That was all.

225. Can you give these gentlemen any idea at all of the street or place where this lady lived in (———)?—It is a long way from here.

226. Was it in a street she lived?—Yes, in a big street—an awful big place.

227. Did she ever write to you?—No, she never wrote to me. She has left; she has gone to Paris.

228. She is not in England. I suppose she never wrote to you?—No.

229. How many times have you been there?—I have only been about two or three months. That is all.

230. I understand you to suggest you went there to give her lessons?—Yes.

231. Lessons in French?—Yes.

232. Although she was a Frenchwoman—Madame (———)?—Yes.

233. So you went to give a Frenchwoman lessons in French at (———)?—No, not in French.

234. But, Madam, you said in French?—That is my mistake; that is all.

235. Let me remind you. This gentleman asked you, "Did you go and give her lessons in Spanish?" and you said, "No, French, and I can speak German and French"?—No, Italian, I said.

236. Italian, Spanish and French?—It was more to keep her company; that was all.

237. I am not going to argue with you. Did you take this box with you from home?—Yes. She gave it to me.

238. Did you take it from home at (———)?—Yes.

239. So that although you were going to give a French lady a lesson in French——?—No.

240. You took an evening dress with you for the purpose of giving her a lesson?—No, not for that. She gave it to me like a friend. She said, "It is good for you."

241. If you had been to some dancing place you would want your evening dress, would you not?—No. She gave it to me friendly—she never used it herself. She said, "If you like to have it you can."

242. I understood you to say this. Please to correct me if I am wrong. I only want you to understand the question. I asked you whether you had not taken the box with your dress from (———), and you said yes?—No, from her house; she gave it to me; I go to (———) with the box.

243. I understood you to say that you had taken it from your house at (———). Let me ask you this. Had you ever taken that box into Oxford Street before?—She gave it to me——

244. No, no. Had you ever taken that box into Oxford Street at night before?—No.

245. Sure?—Yes.

246. Had you ever, about this time, been about in Oxford Street with a box before?—I had been there three weeks before with a box, but not so big—a big flower bouquet.

247. You had a box with you?—A little box.

248. A smaller box?—Yes.

249. About three weeks before about the same time you were in Oxford Street with a box?—Yes, taking the car about 10 o'clock.

250. About the same time?—No, earlier—about 10 o'clock.

251. Had you been to the same place that night?—Yes, and another time I had been to a place called Queen's Hall.

252. (Chairman.) In Langham Place?—Yes, that is right.

253. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Now I am coming to what happened when you got to the policeman. According to your story you had got out of the 'bus that came from (———)?—You must stop, it does not go any further.

254. The 'bus stopped at the corner and you got out?—Yes, to take the motor-car.

255. Then you stood in the street waiting for the motor-'bus?—Yes.

256. While you were waiting there, according to you, two gentlemen spoke to you?—One picked up my umbrella, and the other said, "How are you, Mrs. X?"

257. They spoke to you?—Yes.

258. One you knew, and the other you did not know?—No, I did not know the one who picked up my umbrella.

259. One you knew and one you did not know?—Yes.

260. I will ask you about the one you did know. He asked you to go home in a cab with him?—The one I knew said that.

261. He asked you to drive all the way home?—No.

262. You knew where that gentleman lived, did you not?—Not particularly; I often see him in (———). I very often meet him in (———) where I do my shopping.

263. You told us you know he is employed in a draper's shop?—Yes, he sells me things.

264. But you told us he was employed in a draper's shop?—Yes, he is employed in a draper's shop.

265. And you are in the habit of speaking to him?—No, it is like this, you see. When I go out in the morning to do the shopping very often he is standing at the door, and he would say "Good morning," like this—he is not a friend of mine.

266. I am not saying he is a friend of yours. Did he know your name?—No.

267. I thought you told these gentlemen that that gentleman said at the corner, "Mrs. X, will you come home in a cab with me?"—He said Madam X. Perhaps he knows my name.

268. So he knows your name?—Yes.

269. Do you know his name?—No, I do not know his name; I see him very often in (———).

270. Did you think it was a very odd thing for a man whose name you do not know to offer to take you home at that time in a cab?—Yes, and I refused; I said, "No, thank you."

271. If you had wanted to go home the quickest way the quickest way would be to go home in a cab, would it not?—Yes. I do not know him good enough. He is too young-looking, and my husband would be cross with me.

272. Why did you call that man your insurance agent?—Because he said, "What are you doing; I am an insurance agent," laughing. He said, "I am an insurance agent" for fun.

273. Then you had spoken to him before?—Yes, I see him very often in (———).

274. How came he to tell you that he was an insurance agent?—He told me himself; he said, "I am an insurance agent."

Mrs. X.

275. In giving an account of this matter, have you not said that that gentleman was an insurance agent?—I never said he was my insurance agent. I said, "I think he is an insurance agent." I know he was not insulting, and never said anything wrong. I do not know him at all except like this.

276. Now I will pass for a moment to the other man. The other man you say was a complete stranger to you?—Yes, a complete stranger.

277. You say he spoke to you, and that you did not speak to him?—He said, "Madam, you look awfully embarrassed."

278. Was it shortly after that gentleman had spoken to you that the policeman came up?—Yes. Just as that man had gone the policeman came up. He said, "I saw two gentlemen speaking to you."

279. Do you say that at that time you were standing close (———)?—He never spoke to me only to pick up the umbrella.

280. Do you say that at that time you were standing close to the Tube Station?—Yes, at the corner.

281. Now let me ask you whether this happened. Did you stand for some time at Regent Circus?—No, not for some time. Sometimes you cannot get a car at half-past 10, with people all returning to different parts. I had luggage with me.

282. Whilst you were standing there did you look at several gentlemen and smile at them as they passed you?—No. The last one said, "I beg your pardon." He only apologised; he never said anything. The other one asked me about the cab.

283. Just answer the question. After standing at Regent Circus for some time, did you walk along Oxford Street?—Yes, I walked a little bit—not a long distance.

284. Just as far as the Tube Station?—That is right.

285. And it was there that the gentleman, as you say, spoke to you and not you to him?—He never spoke; he only put one question.

286. Did you hear the gentleman say, "Go away, I do not want to have anything to do with you"?—To me?

287. Yes?—Never; he never said anything like that.

288. Do you understand the question? I suggest to you that he first said, "Go away, I do not want to have anything to do with you"?—No. The gentleman was very kind to me; he said, "Madam, can I assist you to carry your things?"

289. Did you see the gentleman then go and speak to a policeman?—Never—no, he never went, but he took a cab. The other gentleman said, "Do you go to the station?" I said, "No, I go by the motor." He said, "Will you permit me to carry your box for you?" I said, "No, thank you." Then he went into the Tube. The other one went in the cab.

290. After you had spoken to this gentleman, or he to you, did you then walk from the Tube Station in the direction of the City?—I just walked a little bit, and I saw the policeman coming.

291. After he had spoken to you you did walk further towards the City?—No, not Oxford Street.

292. Away from Regent Street—away from the Circus?—Yes, it is all in the same place together.

293. Did the constable then come up to you and say that you must behave yourself and not molest people, as you were walking away from the Tube Station?—He never said anything to me like that.

294. Did he say that you must behave yourself, and not molest people?—He never said that to me at all. He came to me with a smile on his lips—"Hallo, Hullo." I said, "What do you want? What a rude man you are!"

295. Did you then tell him to mind his own business?—Yes.

296. You told him to mind his own business?—Yes, that is right.

297. You understand me. You do not admit that he told you you were not to molest people, but you do admit that you told him that he was to mind his own business?—That is the way—if he comes like this, and says to me, "Hallo, good lady," I say "What do you want?"

298. Did you tell him to mind his own business?—Yes, I told him when he spoke to me like that.

299. After you told him to mind his own business did he cross over Oxford Street to the other side?—No, it was always on the same side, only he go in a little street.

300. Did you then continue to walk towards the City?—No, he took me in a back street—he did not want to take me in Regent Street.

301. A good deal happened before he took you into custody, according to my statement?—Yes.

302. Did you then continue to walk further towards the City?—No. He took me at the same time, and he talked with me.

303. Do you know Hills Place? I suppose you would not, but it is the next turning after the Tube on your right going Cityways?—There are some steps. It is dark, I think.

304. You recollect there are some steps there?—I have seen them; it is a dark place.

305. Did you walk as far as Hills Place, and did you stop in front of another gentleman who was coming from the City, and did you and he then turn round and walk a little way?—Me?

306. Yes?—Another gentleman?

307. Yes?—No, never. There was only the gentleman who picked up my umbrella—no more.

308. After a little while did that gentleman leave you?—Yes.

309. Did you then walk as far as Wardour Street?—Near the station.

310. It is beyond the station—nearer to the City. You know Wardour Street, do you not?—I do not know the names; I know the principal streets.

311. Supposing you had walked as far as Wardour Street, that would be in exactly the opposite direction to which you wanted to go to catch the 'bus you wanted?—Sometimes you can catch a 'bus in Oxford Street quicker—all the Queen's Hall people are coming out, and sometimes you can take it from the other direction, and I went down Oxford Street.

312. I can understand that sometimes when the 'buses are full it is better to walk in the direction in which they are coming, so that you may jump on before they come to a stopping place?—That was what I wanted to do; that is why I went down Oxford Street.

313. I will not say what your object was for a moment, but did you for some reason or another get up as far as Wardour Street?—Yes, with the policeman talking to me.

314. (Chairman.) Did the policeman talk with you?—Yes, the policeman—not the gentleman.

315. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We will see about the gentleman in a moment. Did you get as far as Wardour Street?—Where is Wardour Street?

316-7. Do you tell me you do not know Wardour Street?—I do not know it.

318. It is three or four streets up from the Tube. You did walk some considerable distance, did you not, up Oxford Street, as you now say to catch the 'bus?—Yes.

319. If that is right, how came you to tell these gentlemen that the constable took you into custody by the Tube?—What do you say?

320. How came you to tell these gentlemen that the constable arrested you by the Tube?—No—a little further than the Tube. He looked at me; he was chaffing me and walking with me; he walked with me from the Tube. The gentleman said, "We had better take a cab," and I said, "No."

321. You know how these 'buses run, do you not, that go over Westminster Bridge?—Yes.

322. Is it not a fact that the 'bus that you wanted to catch comes from the Marble Arch?—Yes.

323. And none of them at all come from the City way?—Some come in from Regent Street round the corner.

324. I suggest to you that you know quite well that the 'bus you wanted to catch was coming from the Marble Arch, and that therefore this suggestion of yours, that you were walking eastward in order to catch the 'bus is unfounded?—The gentlemen were annoying me, and I did not feel comfortable, and I said, "Perhaps I shall see another 'bus here," but they were all packed up. Then I saw this policeman looking, and I thought, what is the policeman looking at me for, and then he came with a smile.

325. Do I understand you to say now to these gentlemen that you moved from the Tube?—Yes, I walked.

326. You moved from the Tube because the gentlemen were annoying you, and you saw that the constable was watching you?—Watching me? He looked silly. He saw a woman standing by herself. I said, "I might get a chance to catch one in Oxford Street."

327. Let us leave out the policeman for a moment. Do I understand you now to say that the reason why you moved from the Tube Station was because the gentlemen standing there were annoying you?—Yes.

328. Do not let there be any misunderstanding about it. You say you moved because the gentlemen standing there were annoying you. A moment ago you said you saw the policeman watching you, and saw him speaking to another dark policeman?—He was very bad—awfully shocking. I could not go any further with the big box that I had in my hand.

329. I cannot go into this perhaps at too great length, but I suggest to you that when you got to Wardour Street you stopped and spoke to another gentleman?—No, I did not. There were only these two. I could swear there were no more gentlemen than the one who picked up my umbrella and the gentleman who asked me to go in the cab.

330. And that when you did that the gentleman put his hand on your shoulder and gave you a slight push?—No, he was a very nice man. It was quite the opposite. He said, "Madam, will you allow me?"——

331. Give me your attention for a moment?—He never pushed me at all.

332. I am not now speaking about that gentleman, but I am compelled to ask you this question. You said a moment ago you left the Tube Station because the gentlemen were annoying you?—Yes.

333. And in the next breath you say that one of the gentlemen was a man you knew who offered to take you in a cab?—Yes.

334. And the other was a very nice gentleman who offered to take your box?—Yes, to help me. "Madam, may I assist you?" That is all.

335. How do you reconcile that with the statement that you left the Tube Station because the gentlemen were annoying you?—You look so silly to see all the 'buses filled up at half past 10, and I thought I might get a chance in Oxford Street of getting one. There is another 'bus that goes direct from Shaftesbury Avenue. I said to myself, "There seems no 'bus here to-night, they are so packed." Very often you cannot get a 'bus sometimes for half an hour, they are so packed.

336. I want to ask you what happened about the corner of Wardour Street?—No gentleman spoke to me at all. I said, "I beg your pardon, I will carry my box myself." He said, "I beg your pardon, madam."

337. Will you give me your attention? I am not speaking about any gentleman at the Tube Station. I suggest to you that you spoke to another gentleman at the corner of Wardour Street?—No.

338. Now listen. When you were doing that did this policeman cross the road?—I think he crossed the road.

339. You think he crossed the road?—I do not know where he came from.

340. Did he come up to you and say that he should have to take you into custody—in charge?—Yes. He never said that to me immediately before—he came smiling and talking.

341. Do listen. When he spoke about taking you in charge, was that at the corner of Wardour Street?—Yes, not so far or so high.

342. Did you say, "Give me a chance, I am a married woman, and I ought not to be here." Did you say that?—I said to him, "My husband is returning to-night from abroad." That is right.

343. Give me your attention. Please be a little bit calm, and listen to this. Did you say to him, "Give me a chance, I am a married woman, and I ought not to be here"?—I never said "Give me a chance," or anything like that. I said, "You have made a mistake." I never said, "Give me a chance." I never employed that word.

344. You said, "You have made a mistake." Did you tell him that you were a married woman?—Yes.

345. Did he tell you that you ought not to be there?—I did not say that word—"I am a married woman." I said, "I have to be home; let me alone." He said, "I saw you two or three weeks ago."

346. That is something new. He told you he had seen you two or three weeks ago?—Yes, he said it like that. He told me he saw me. I never saw him. I never take any notice.

347. Just give me your attention. When he took you in charge, did he tell you he had seen you two or three weeks before?—He told me, "I saw you two or three weeks before," or something like that.

348. You understood by that he was telling you he had seen you?—He said to me, "Where do you live?" I remember he said, "You have been here two or three weeks ago with a box." I said, "That is quite right." He said, "One night you returned from Queen's Hall." I said, "Yes; you not take notice of me." He said, "I notice everybody passing." I said, "You not see me pushing gentlemen or rushing gentlemen."

349. He told you he had seen you two or three weeks before?—Yes.

350. That was because he was complaining of your conduct. You understood he was complaining of the way you had behaved in the street?—No, he never said that; he said, "I think I have seen you before."

351. Are you suggesting that that was part of the same conversation in which he touched you under the chin?—Yes; I think it was that. He took a liberty; that is what I think.

352. He took you to the station, did he not?—Yes, in a back street.

353. You started from somewhere about the corner of Wardour Street?—Yes. He said to me, "Come this way; it is no good to bring you by Regent Street." I do not know where he took me.

354. When you got to the police station, the Inspector spoke to you, did he not?—Yes, that is right.

355. And you made no complaint about the policeman, did you?—I say "That man is very wicked."

356. Let me suggest to you what you did say. What you did say was, "The policeman has made a mistake"?—Yes, I say that. I was ill. I do not know what I said; my head was very bad.

357. You said, "The policeman has made a mistake"?—Yes.

358. "I did not insult the gentleman." Did you say that?—"Him." He said, "That woman insulted me." "Him"—no gentleman at all.

359. I will read the whole of the statement first. Did you say to the Inspector, "The policeman has made a mistake"?—Yes.

360. "I did not insult the gentleman"?—No—"him." He said, "The woman insulted me." I say, "I beg your pardon, I never insulted you. I will put you in your place if you take a liberty." It was him.

361. "The policeman has made a mistake. I did not insult him"?—Him. Me call him a gentleman? I do not want to call a policeman a gentleman.

362. Will you let me finish the sentence. "The policeman has made a mistake. I did not insult him, I only spoke to my insurance man. The other man spoke to me." Is that what you said to the Inspector?—Yes, I said "That gentleman." I never said insurance agent.

363. Is that right?—Yes, that is right.

364. Is that all you said to the Inspector?—Yes. I never said that the policeman was rude.

365. You did not tell the Inspector the policeman was rude?—No, there were too many policemen.

366. I do not want to know the reason. I only want to know the fact. I have put to you now in substance what you did say, and you agree that you never told anybody that the policeman was rude. When you got taken down to the cells a woman came then to look after you?—Yes.

Mrs. X.

5 Dec. 1906.

367. Was she kind?—Yes, and she gave me a drop of water.

368. Very kind and very friendly?—Yes.

369. Did you tell her the policeman had been rude to you?—I said "The policeman has been very nasty with me."

370. Did you ever tell her the policeman had been rude to you?—No. I did not want to say anything, I felt too ill.

371. Please be careful. I only want that you should understand the question, and give the answer that is right. Did you ever say anything to this woman who was kind to you that the policeman had been rude to you?—No, I never said anything.

372. But you were crying very much, were you not?—Yes. I said to the woman "He is very rude, that policeman—he is a very rude policeman." I said that.

373. Are you sure of that?—Yes. I said: "That policeman is awfully bad and very rude."

374. I asked you three times whether you said that he had been rude, and you said "No." Do you want to alter that? Do you want to say that you did tell her that the policeman was rude?—"He is a naughty policeman."

375. You must be a little bit careful. I ask you again. Did you say anything to that woman about the policeman being rude?—Yes, I said: "He is a very bad policeman—rude."

376. You are sure of that?—Yes. I said: "He is a very bad policeman—very rude."

377. You are quite sure of that?—Yes. I said: "He is a very bad and very rude policeman." She said: "Yes, very bad policeman sometimes." That is what she replied to me. She said: "I will go and fetch you a drop of water; you look very ill."

378. Now I do want to know this. You came, did you not, before the Magistrate?—Yes.

379. He heard the case and you were allowed to go?—Yes.

380. Was it your wish or your husband's wish—did you desire or did your husband desire—that this case should be brought before these gentlemen? How came it that this case was brought before these gentlemen?—I do not know myself.

381. I just want to inquire. Did somebody come and call upon you and ask you to make a statement?—Yes, a gentleman.

382. How soon after the proceedings in the police court?—I think not very long—I think it was about a week. We were preparing to go out. We have been out for two months—my husband and myself—for a holiday.

383. Did the gentleman come by himself or was there more than one gentleman came?—A tall, dark gentleman came. He gave me a paper.

384. Do you mean a pamphlet?—Yes.

385. Then what did he say?—He said to me: "It will be a big affair." He said: "Will you come?" and I said: "If we are in London I will come." He said: "If you like to come in and explain about the policeman and everything, you can."

386. He said: "If you like to come in and explain you can come?"—Yes. I said: "All right; if I am in London I will come."

387. Did you make a statement to him, and did he write it down? Did you tell him what had happened?—Yes, I told him all about it.

388. Did he write it down?—I do not know. I do not think so.

389. Did he ask you to sign anything?—No, he never asked me, I think. I do not know.

390. Just listen to this. Did you tell this gentleman that in the cell in which you were placed in the police court there were a number of other women?—There are plenty of little places. The women next door were screaming and grumbling and swearing, and, after, a policeman took another woman. There is a little window. I was hearing all the other people. I did not see very much. It is only a small window.

391. Did any of those women speak to you?—No, none. The only woman who spoke to me and attended to the place—no other women spoke to me.

392. Did any women speak to you there about paying money to the policeman?—No—no women told me anything; I only spoke to one woman.

393. Just listen to this. Did you tell this gentleman this—there were several other women in the cells?—Yes.

394. "They told me the policeman who had locked me up had locked them up," and did you also say, "They said he was a dirty dog"?—Not there. I will tell you where that happened; that was the day after. In the morning I had to go in to the Magistrate, and all the dirty women were standing there. She said, "You have been taken in charge, madam." I said, "Yes." "Ah, if you had given him 5s. he would have sent you away." That was not at the police station.

395. I want to inquire about that?—That is where it was. "Fancy a lady here," she said. "Why did not you give the policeman 5s.?—he would never put you in charge." I said, "Why not?" She said, "If you give him something." "Hallo," I said, "I have nothing to give the policeman."

396. Can you explain to me where that was?—Before they go in to the Magistrate. All the women were standing on one side, and the women to bring you to the Magistrate. All the dirty women——

397. Were they dirty women—bad women?—They were swearing and laughing with the policemen, and used dirty words. I saw them talking wicked. They said, "This lady is silly; if she had given the policeman 5s. she would not have been here." She said, "If she had given him something she would not be here." I heard her. Everybody go by their turn.

398. Were the policemen there when they were saying this?—No; the policemen were talking with other policemen—that little dark one.

399. You cannot tell me at all who the women were, so that I can find out?—I never saw those women before. There were a lot of women, three or four of them, talking. It would take a long time.

400. Were there any policemen there at all?—No, not policemen. The policemen were behind, and all the women—one here and one there—said to one policeman coming in, "I have never seen that lady here before." "No," one said, "if she had paid 5s. she would not be here." Those were the words she said—"Putting people like this inside." They were talking all together, of course.

401. Listen to this. I will read the statement as this gentleman says you told it to him: "I told the Inspector I was a married woman, and gave my address, and told the policeman he was a dirty rascal." Did you tell the gentleman that—that you had told the policeman before the Inspector that he was a dirty rascal? A moment ago you said you did not complain?—Yes, I complained; only I had got such a headache. I said, "The nasty man, taking a liberty with me."

402. You told me a moment ago you did not tell the Inspector the policeman had been rude?—I know I say to the woman, "What a shocking policeman is that; what a blackguard."

403. I had better read it. "Whilst I was waiting to be charged, another policeman walked round me, and called out, 'Yes, I know her well. She is in Oxford Circus every night.' They said the parcel I was carrying was an old trick, and too well known." Did you tell this gentleman that?—What is that?

404. I will read it again. This is what you are supposed to have told this gentleman who came to see you. You said: "Whilst I was waiting to be charged, another policeman came in, and walked round me, and called out, 'Yes, I know her well. She is in Oxford Circus every night.' They said the parcel I was carrying was an old trick, and too well known"?—I heard them talking something like that all together—the two policeman—this one and another one.

405. Did you make that statement?—Me?

406. Yes?—No; nothing like that.

407. How came he to give it to the Commission as your statement if you did not tell him? Did you tell him this?—I never said I carried a box.

408. Perhaps you do not understand. The statement seems to me to be a very funny one. There is another statement I should like to ask you about. You told me just now you are quite sure you had never seen this policeman before that night?—No.

409. Quite sure?—I do not remember.

410. Did you tell the gentleman who came to ask you what had happened this. Did you tell him: "I know P.C. Cole by sight, and after my affair at the police court I called to mind the fact that he had spoken to me some months ago, when he was in plain clothes off duty. He said he was a detective. He asked me to have a glass of wine with him. I refused this. I was merely waiting for a 'bus one afternoon." Did you tell the gentleman that?—I never said this "P.C." I know nothing about that word. I know I said that a policeman one afternoon at four o'clock insulted me the same as that man. When he took me in charge, I said, "That is the man I met a month or two before." He said, "Madam, will you have a glass of wine?" I said, "No, think you."

411. Is that the same policeman?—He looked exactly the same man.

412. If I have asked you once, I have asked you half a dozen times, as to whether you had ever seen that policeman before, and you told me positively you had not?—No, I cannot say in that costume. A man in policemen's dress is one thing, in civilian dress is another thing.

413. (Chairman.) Do you still think that Cole is the man who asked you to have a glass of wine?—Yes, I think it is the same man. He has the same moustache and the same physique, only when a man is in policemen's dress he is quite changed. Never one policeman in London has spoken to me before.

414. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Can you give me any notion of when it was that somebody in plain clothes came and asked you to have a glass of wine?—In plain clothes?

415. Yes; it is your own language—not in uniform?—His dress was civil.

416. Do you say now that somebody in Oxford Street asked you to come and have a glass of wine in the middle of the afternoon?—He said, "Will you not have a coffee or light refreshment?"

417. Was that gentleman dressed in plain clothes?—Yes, in the day. He looked like this one; he looked exactly like the same man.

418. At that time did the gentleman say anything to you about what he was?—What was his position?

419. Yes?—No. He said this to me: "I will see you again, good lady." He said: "You refuse to have a glass of wine with me" I said, "What do you mean? I never take any drink. I am a teetotaller. Leave me alone."

420. I am now asking you about an occasion when you say that somebody in plain clothes asked you to have a glass of wine?—Yes; just like him. In the daytime.

421. Did the person who spoke to you then say anything about what his position was?—He said, "I will see you again." He never told me what he was.

422. Are you sure he did not tell you anything about his position?—He told me: "I am a Government man. I will see you again. You do not want to speak to me." I said, "No, thank you." It was in the afternoon, about four o'clock.

423. I must just ask one more question about Madam (———), because I want to trace her.

424. (Mr. Dickinson.) You say he said he was a Government man. Can you tell us in French what you mean by that?—An official of the Government—un officier du Government.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did the policeman, on the night he took you, say anything about £10?—He never told me about £10. He said: "You are not very kind to me; I shall not let you go." I said, "You have made a mistake. My husband has promised me he would be here to-night. He has been out a few days. I have to go home." He said: "You have not been very nice to me; you are rushing me too much—pushing me."

426. Was anything said about £10?—No, he said I was not nice to him and not kind to him. I did not offer him anything. He never said £10.

427. Did this happen. Did the policeman say to you: "I saw you leave that gentleman; I suppose you wanted too much from him, you fly too high. I suppose you want £10; you will not get that." Did he say that to you?—No.

428. You say nothing like that was ever said?—No; nothing was said about £10. He said to me: "I think you are too dear, good lady; you are too proud, you are rushing the men." He said I was very proud or rushing the men. "A man comes to you very nice, and you are awfully proud." I said: "I am a married lady; I live in a small house, and I do not make money in this way." That is what I said to him.

Mrs. X.
5 Dec. 1906.

429. I must ask you about Madam (———), and I must press you to give me some indication of where I can find the house where Madam (———) lived?—At (———).

430. That is a very large place. What 'bus did you go by to it?—I went by a 'bus near a big shop called Maples' furniture shop, and on the opposite side there is a public-house and 'buses.

431. They go right up to (———)?—Yes.

432. When you went by the 'bus where did you get out of it?—I got out right at the top of (———).

433. Did you go as far as the 'bus went?—Yes; I walked after that.

434. You got out where the 'bus stops. Where is it the 'bus stops?—Right at the top of the hill—it is a big hill—after passing all the shops. It is a little street down there.

435. Did you walk after that?—Walked about ten minutes.

436. In which direction?—It is a big place all round.

437. (Chairman.) When you talk of a big place do you mean (———). Do you mean an open space?—Yes, with big grounds.

438. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) How often have you been to this place?—Not very long; I have been about two months altogether.

439. But how many times in the two months?—Sometimes twice a week, sometimes only once, and sometimes I never went at all.

440. Did you only go when your husband was away from home?—Yes. The day is too long for me. I have no children.

441. You only went when your husband was away from home?—Yes.

442. Cannot you give us any indication of how I could find the place where Madam (———) lived?—It was a little house by itself. She has gone out to spend about three months.

443. I know she has gone out, according to you, but I want to know the house she lived in. One moment you say it was a very big, tall place, and another moment you say it was a very little place?—No. I do not mean a little place. The place where she lived, right where the 'buses stopped, has big grounds with little streets all round.

444. Do you not know the name of the street?—No, I do not know the name of the street.

445. Did you ever know it?—I know it is called (———).

446. How did you find it the first time you went there?—She met me here. I knew her before in Paris—in France. She said, "One day come and have tea with me; I am very pleased to meet you. Where are you living?" I said I live down (———). She said, "Come in and see me and keep me company—come with me, if your husband goes out, and he is not here, come in and see me."

447. "When your husband is out come and see me"?—Yes.

448. How did you get there?—I got there by the 'bus.

449. She must have given you some directions as to where to go to?—I have been with her. She meets me.

450. Where did she meet you?—She met me at the Queen's Hall or the Langham Hotel, opposite the Queen's Hall, and she said: "Come with me."

451. Where did she meet you—on the pavement in Regent Street opposite Langham Hotel?—Yes, just in front of the Langham Hotel.

452. Did you meet her on the pavement opposite the Langham Hotel?—Yes. I met her at a proper place—in Queen's Hall, where they play the music.

453-4. Did you meet her in Queen's Hall or did you meet her opposite to the Langham Hotel?—The first time I met her was in Queen's Hall. She said: "I will be here to-morrow afternoon shopping in town; I will meet you here at the Langham Hotel to-morrow afternoon. You can come with me and get a cup of tea at my place." I have been about two months to her place.

455. Do you mean to say the first time you went to her place you went with her?—Yes.

456. Have you no idea what the name of the street was?—I know it was (———). I used to go with her to keep her company.

457. Have you no idea of the name of the street?—No; I never looked.

458. It is a fact, is it not, that when your husband asked you where you had been you refused to tell him?—I said always, "I have been to see my friend."

459. But you refused to tell him the name of your friend?—Yes.

Friday, 7th December 1906.*

IN CAMERA.

Mrs. X.'s CASE—continued.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

Mr. Ernest Cockle, Barrister-at-Law, appeared on behalf of the Complainant (in the absence of Earl Russell).

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I should like Chief Inspector McKay to be present, Sir. He has no personal knowledge of the facts.

(Chairman.) I thought it was Inspector Dew who was present on the last occasion.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, he is from Scotland Yard, but Inspector McKay is from Marlborough Street, and he has been making inquiries in this case. He has no personal knowledge of the facts, and it would be useful to have him in Court.

(Chairman.) You say it would be useful to you.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, Sir.

(Chairman.) Then so be it.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Mr. Bankes mentioned to the Commission yesterday that he hoped to be in a position to ask some further questions of the lady this morning on some information that we have received. Since that, he and I have had a consultation, and we think it right that we should further verify the information that has come to our ears before we found any questions upon it at all, and therefore we should ask the Commission to give us a little time to verify that information, and ask the lady to attend on a later date.

(Chairman.) Very well.

(Mr. Cockle.) That seems to be a reasonable suggestion. I understand we have no more witnesses.

(Chairman.) It is for us to say. We do not appeal to Counsel in this Inquiry as we should if it was an ordinary arbitration or litigation. I think that Mr. Muir's statement is quite reasonable, and it may be that we shall be in a position to say something to Mr. Muir when we have heard all the evidence that may render it unnecessary for him to ask any further questions.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Then I will call the witnesses who have personal knowledge of the facts.

P.C. Arthur Cole, 528 V, sworn.

P.C. A. Cole.
7 Dec. 1906.

460. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you P.C. Cole, 528 of the V Division?—Yes.

461. You were formerly at the Marlborough Street Police Station, and a member of the C Division?—Yes.

462. You were removed at your own request to Wandsworth, on account of your wife's health?—Yes.

463. You have been in the Force some 15½ years?—Yes.

464. How much of that time have you spent in the C Division?—15½ years.

465. The whole time until quite recently you have been there?—Yes, until five weeks ago.

466. Did you regularly take your turn of duty in patrolling Regent Street and Oxford Circus?—Yes.

467. In the course of that duty did you have to deal with the class of women we call disorderly women?—Yes.

468. On the 20th March this year did you see the lady who is now here?—I did.

469. What time was that?—About 10.25.

470. Where was it you first saw her that evening?—Oxford Circus; at the junction of Oxford Circus and Regent Street.

471. Had you been on duty since 10 o'clock?—Yes.

472. What did you see her doing at 10.25?—I saw her standing there at Oxford Circus, I saw her looking up into gentlemen's faces and smiling at them.

473. How long did you observe her?—A matter of a minute or two.

474. What did you see next?—She then went eastwards towards Oxford Street, then to the Oxford Circus Tube Station; she there approached a man who was standing outside, she looked up into his face and smiled, she said something, but I was unable to hear what it was. The man then said to her, "Go away, I do not want to have anything to do with you." The man then entered the Tube Station as if to avoid her, but on seeing me he came out again. He said to me, "These women are a nuisance, constable." I then

* Note.—See page 544 post for the evidence taken on the 6th December, upon which day the sitting was public.

crossed to the opposite side of Oxford Street by Peter Robinson's—that would be on the D Division.

475. You crossed to the north side?—Yes, to the north side. There were a lot of 'buses standing there at the time, and I had to cross between the back of one 'bus and the horses of another 'bus. The next I saw of Mrs. X was I saw her stop a man by Hill's Place.

476. That is a turning on the south side of Oxford Street beyond Argyll Street?—That is so.

477. That is to say, the second turning from Regent Street?—That is right.

478. Going eastwards?—Yes.

479. What sort of place is that Hill's Place?—A place leading down into the back of Marlborough Street Police Station. It goes into Ramilies Street.

480. How do you get down—are there steps there?—There are no steps there. It is a street.

481. Is it a narrow place?—Yes, it is a narrow place; it is narrow as you go to the bottom. It would look like a cul de sac from this end.

482. You saw her at that spot?—Yes.

483. What did you see her do?—I saw her stop a man there. The man got a matter of a yard or two past her, but he again came back to her, and, after a short conversation, they both walked together eastwards along Oxford Street.

484. How far?—To Berwick Street.

485. How many turnings is that along?—The second turning on the right.

486. Beyond Hill's Place?—Yes. There are some steps by Buzzard's, and that goes down into the back of the Marlborough Street Police Station again to Ramilies Street.

487. When they got to Berwick Street, what happened?—They parted; the man she was with came back westwards again, and the lady proceeded eastwards to Wardour Street. She there stepped in front of another man, but the man stepped aside as if to allow her to pass, but she again stepped in front of him, and the man then said something to her, and gave her a slight push. He placed his hand on her shoulder and gave her a slight push. This gentleman then crossed to the other side of Oxford Street.

488. That would be to the north side?—The north side. I omitted to say that at the tube station I cautioned this lady.

489. Going back to that, what did you say to her?—I said to Mrs. X after this gentleman spoke to me, "You must behave yourself and not molest people."

490. What did she say, if anything?—She said, "You mind your own business; that was my friend."

491. Is that all that took place at the tube station?—Yes, that was all, till I turned my back on her and went across to the other side of Oxford Street.

492. When she got as far as Wardour Street, what side of the street were you on?—By then I was on the south side. I crossed over from Wells Street.

493. You crossed again to the south side?—Yes.

494. Were you walking in front of her or behind her?—Behind her the whole time.

495. What happened at Wardour Street?—She there stepped in front of another man. The gentleman stepped aside as if to allow her to pass. I then went to Mrs. X, and I said, "I shall arrest you for insulting behaviour."

496. Before that, had you seen Sergeant Shepherd?—I did see him as I crossed from Wells Street from the other side of Oxford Street.

497. Did you have some conversation with him?—I did say something to him. I forget the exact words.

498. What was the subject matter of your conversation? Were you speaking of Mrs. X or not?—Yes.

499. You had some conversation with him about Mrs. X?—Yes.

500. At Wardour Street you say you spoke to her?—Yes; I told her I should take her into custody or arrest her for using insulting behaviour. She then said, "Give me a chance, I am a married woman, and ought not to be here."

501. What did you do?—I then took her to Marlborough Street Police Station.

502. By what route did you take her?—Down Oxford Street—that would be westwards—to Poland Street, and down Poland Street to Marlborough Street, along Marlborough Street to the police station, which is on the right hand side.

503. On the way, did she say anything?—She pleaded very hard for me to let her go, and she said, "My husband will kill me." I do not remember just the exact words, but she said, "My husband will kill me for this." She pleaded very much, and asked me several times to give her a chance.

504. Did she say anything about a mistake?—She told me several times going to the station that I had made a mistake.

505. At the station, did you tell Inspector Remfry what the charge was?—I did.

506. Did you state the facts to him?—I did.

507. (Chairman.) In Mrs. X's presence?—Yes.

508. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) She being then in the dock?—Yes.

509. What did she say upon your stating those facts?—Do you mean in answer to the charge?

510. Yes?—She said, "The constable has made a mistake; I did not insult him. He was my insurance man, and the other men spoke to me."

511. On the 21st March was Mrs. X brought up before Mr. Denman?—Yes.

512. And you and another officer (Keeble) gave evidence?—Yes.

513. Did the husband give evidence or make a statement?—Yes.

514. Which was it? Did he make a statement in the witness box, or where did he make a statement?—In the witness box.

515. As far as you can remember, it was in the witness box?—Yes.

516. And in the result, did the Magistrate discharge the defendant under Section 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879?—Yes.

517. Did you have any conversation with Mrs. X in the court passage before her case came on?—Yes.

518. How did it begin?—She was joking and laughing with the other officers—I do not know the names of the officers—who were standing in the passage where the prisoners line up before going into court, and she said to me, "Do not be too hard on me; my husband was going to shoot me when I got home this morning." She said, "He has a nasty temper," and she said, "You know my husband gives me plenty of money. I only did it for love."

519. Did anything more pass between you in the passage?—No, not as far as I can remember.

520. Before this night of the 20th March, had you ever seen her?—Yes, I have seen her almost nightly.

521. For how long?—The whole of that month.

522. At what hours?—Between 10 and 12.30. I have seen her get on to one of the late motor 'buses that used to leave there about half-past 12, the Peckham motor 'buses.

523. What have you seen her doing on those nights when you have seen her there?—I have seen her accosting men.

524. Have you ever spoken to her at all?—No, I could not get near enough to her.

525. With regard to the motor-'buses that go across Westminster Bridge so as to enable a person to get on to a Balham tram, some of them go down Regent Street, do they not?—Yes, that is so.

526. Where do they come from before they get to Oxford Circus?—At that time, as far as I can remember, I do not think they went any further than Oxford Circus. They came up Regent Street from Peckham, and they turned down Princes Street and remained in Hanover Square. I remember that because there was complaint of the motor-'buses standing in the centre of the road.

527. That is the Peckham 'buses?—Yes.

528. Are there any other motor-'buses that go across Westminster Bridge than the Peckham 'buses?—No.

P.C. A. Cole. 7 Dec. 1906.

529. Now there is a difference, you say?—Yes, I think that they continue their journey to beyond Baker Street—Finchley, I think.

530. When they come up Regent Street to Oxford Street, do they turn west or east when they are going north. When they are going on their journey that they take now to Baker Street do they turn east or west going north?—West.

531. And coming back do they come from the west?—Yes.

532. Do any motor-'buses which cross Westminster Bridge come from the east?—No.

533. So that a person walking along Oxford Street from Oxford Circus to Wardour Street would not meet any such 'buses?—No.

534. Do you know a house called the Dolphin public-house?—Yes.

535. Have you anything to say with regard to any observation in connection with that house?—Yes, I have seen Mrs. X accosting men and have a conversation with them, and then I have seen her go into the Dolphin public-house with them.

536. Where is that—whereabouts in Oxford Street?—If you come down Regent Street, and turn down Oxford Street westwards it would be about 60 or 70 yards down on the left-hand side.

537. The south side of Oxford Street?—Yes.

538. On the night of the 20th March was Mrs. X carrying a dress box?—Yes.

539. A cardboard box?—Yes.

540. Had you ever seen her carry any such box on any other occasion?—Yes, I think twice before.

541. (Mr. Cockle.) I believe it is said that you made some improper suggestion to this lady yourself?—I did not.

542. That has been suggested, and you took her for a lady, and you had no doubt she was a lady, to whom such a suggestion might be made by anyone?—Yes, I did think so.

543. You deny the suggestion?—I do.

544. You say you had seen her several times before doing this, but you had not interfered with her. You had not spoken to her?—No.

545. I understood you to say that was because you could not get near to her?—I could not get near to her.

546. Surely that is rather strange, is it not? How is it you could not get near to the lady? You had seen her several times?—I had seen her several times.

547. How was it you could have any difficulty in getting near to her?—I say I had not any opportunity, and another thing was I wanted to be careful before I did speak to the lady.

548. The only reason you gave was that you could not get near to her. But you are an active man and could move faster than she could?—Yes, but she was very artful. She would jump into 'buses or into a cab.

549. With regard to this box that she had with her, was that a heavy box?—No, a very light box.

550. But rather large?—Fairly.

551. Not easy to walk with?—A fair-sized box, about 2 feet by 1 foot.

552. But it was not such a box that a lady would carry for many hundreds of yards, would you say?—No.

553. But she did walk the whole way from Wardour Street carrying this box?—Oh, yes.

554. And it was raining?—I do not remember.

555. You do not remember whether it was raining?—No.

556. I suggest to you that it was raining, and she was holding an umbrella besides carrying this cumbersome box?—I forget whether it was raining or not. I could not say.

557. I believe the witness herself said so, but you do not remember?—No.

558. And yet you say under those circumstances she walked all that way?—She had the cardboard box.

559. I believe she said she only walked as far as the Tube station?—Not to me.

560. You are quite sure that she walked all that way in that condition?—I am certain.

561. It may have been raining—you do not know?—No.

562. You seem to have taken very particular notice of the way in which she approached these different men. At Wardour Street she got in front of the man, he moved away, and then she spoke, and then she got in front of him again?—Yes.

563. You are sure of all those details?—Yes, I made sure of it because I had seen her there all the month, and I wanted to be sure. I made up my mind that night to take her into custody after having kept observation on her.

564. Do you know what was in this box?—There was a blouse and some under-linen, and a pair of stockings.

565. (Chairman.) No dress?—No, there was no dress.

566. (Mr. Cockle.) Were they things that a lady would take if she was going to spend the evening somewhere—a change of blouses?—I should hardly think so. There was under-linen there.

567. On these two other occasions had you seen her with this box?—I had.

568. (Chairman.) With the same box?—That I would not say. I think it was a smaller box.

569. (Mr. Cockle.) As a rule ladies who are engaged in this way do not carry boxes with them?—It is not unusual to see them carrying parcels.

570. (Chairman.) As I understand your evidence it was a clear case of a prostitute soliciting men?—Yes.

571. Then why did you not charge her with solicitation?—I did not know her sufficiently to do so.

572. You have just told me that it was a clear case of solicitation?—Her actions were those of a prostitute, but I did not know her to be a prostitute.

573. What?—I did not know her to be a prostitute.

574. But according to what you have told us she had been there every night?—Almost nightly.

575. During that month?—Yes.

576. Soliciting men?—Yes.

577. And you had cautioned her on this very night?—Yes.

578. And notwithstanding your caution she went up and accosted another man?—She did, Sir.

579. Only one man more?—Two more.

580. What further evidence do you think was requisite in the case to make out a clear case of solicitation under the section of the Police Act?—Of course, if a woman has been charged with insulting behaviour I should charge her with being a prostitute on the second occasion if I knew that.

581. (Mr. Whitmore.) If she had been charged before?—If I knew it.

582. On a different occasion?—Yes.

583. (Chairman.) But I think we have been told that the practice is in the case of a constable observing a woman night after night either actually accosting men or smiling at them, or doing anything of that kind night after night, for the constable to go and give her a caution?—Yes.

584. And then if he has given her a caution, and either on the same night or a subsequent night she is observed to accost somebody, then to arrest her for solicitation. That is what we were told, and I think that is the effect of the evidence that we had in another case that has come before us. Is that the practice?—I have not known it to be the practice before.

585. What do you say is the practice?—If a woman is not known to a constable as a prostitute to charge her with disorderly conduct, insulting behaviour.

586. That I can understand, but what according to the practice, as you understand it, is your duty before making a charge of solicitation against a woman?—I told the Inspector what had happened, and I should say it would lie in the discretion of the Inspector.

587. In this case you told the Inspector the facts then as you have told them to us?—Yes, as I have told them to you.

588. (Mr. Muir.) There are two sub-sections of Section 54 which perhaps, Sir, you would like to look at—Sub-sections 11 and 13. The first deals with the common prostitute, and the second deals with persons who use insulting words and behaviour whereby a breach of the peace may be occasioned. It is the 2 and 3 Victoria, cap. 47, Section 54.

589. (Chairman.) I know those sections, and I am much obliged to you, Mr. Muir, for calling my attention to them. I have already looked at them, and was founding my question with reference to them. (To the witness.) Then in this case you told the Inspector the facts?—Yes.

590. And then after a conversation with him he took the charge as one of disorderly behaviour?—Yes, I told him that I wished to charge this woman with using insulting behaviour whereby a breach of the peace might have been occasioned. That was the charge I made against the woman.

591. You made the charge?—Yes, and then I went on to tell him what had happened. The usual practice is that the Inspector always says, "What did you see her doing?". Then I went on and told him.

592. Then I understand that you did not consider when you arrested this lady that there was sufficient evidence that she was a common prostitute or night walker loitering or being in a thoroughfare?—No, otherwise I should have charged her.

593. On what ground did you base that judgment if the evidence you have given us is true?—Her conduct in the street and her previous conduct.

594. But I should have thought if your story is true there was ample evidence that she was a common prostitute or night walker loitering for the purpose of accosting men. Then let me call your attention to what you have told me this morning. After giving the evidence as to what you saw on this night, you said in answer to Mr. Muir, "I saw her almost nightly for the whole of that month"?—Yes.

595. "I have seen her go by the late 'buses—the Peckham 'buses." You subsequently told Mr. Muir that you had seen Mrs. X accost men?—Yes.

596. And go into the Dolphin public-house with them?—That is so.

597. What conclusion did you draw from that as to her character, if that is so?—The only explanation that I can give you of that is that one has to be very careful in calling a woman a prostitute. It would be a serious matter for me if I had called that woman a prostitute and she proved to be something else. Her conduct in the street was disorderly, and that was why I charged her as I did.

598. What I put to you is that if the story you have told us is true the charge that you ought to have made was the charge that she was a common prostitute. You think not?—No, I think not.

599. Do you think you came to that conclusion because you had never actually cautioned her before?—Yes.

600. Before that night?—Yes.

601. If you had cautioned her before that night and she came again and behaved as you say she did behave you would have come to the conclusion that there was sufficient evidence that she was a common prostitute?—I do not think I should.

602. How much evidence do you require before you make a charge of a person being a common prostitute or night walker?—On the proof of her having been convicted.

603. Having been convicted of what?—Of disorderly conduct.

604. (Mr. Whitmore.) Of this charge?—Of this charge.

605. A similar charge you mean?—Yes.

606. (Chairman.) Then you do not think it is safe to charge a woman with being a common prostitute and night walker and accosting or soliciting unless there has been a previous conviction for disorderly behaviour?—I do not think so myself.

607. Have you arrested many women in Regent Street or Oxford Street?—Yes, a good many.

608. On either charge?—On either charge.

609. About how many do you think you have arrested in the course of last year, 1905, or the year before this incident took place in March?—200 I should think.

610. Do you mean about 200 in the course of 1905, or do you mean the year before the arrest of Mrs. X?—Do you mean since? P.C. A. Cole. 7 Dec. 1906.

611. No, I put it to you for the year before this arrest, or, if you like, in the year 1905?—Yes, in the year 1905, about 200.

612. In how many cases out of the 200 did you make a charge of solicitation by a common prostitute?—I do not remember, Sir.

613. In many of them or in very few of them?—Very few.

614. In nearly all the cases you charged them with insulting behaviour which might occasion a breach of the peace?—On, no, Sir—only very few in that way.

615. You said you arrested 200 women?—Not for insulting behaviour. I misunderstood you.

616. For what?—As disorderly prostitutes—for solicitation.

617. That is for solicitation?—Yes.

618. For being a common prostitute or night walker loitering or being in a thoroughfare?—Yes.

619. For the purpose of solicitation?—Yes.

620. To the annoyance of the inhabitants or passengers?—That is so.

621. In about how many of the 200 cases did you make the charge one of solicitation as a common prostitute?—In nearly all.

622. Nearly all of the 200?—Yes.

623. And before making those arrests and charging the woman with being a prostitute and soliciting did you ascertain that there had been a conviction against her?—No.

624. But I thought you told me a few minutes ago that you did not consider it right to charge a woman with being a prostitute and loitering in the public streets, and so on, unless there had been a previous conviction against her for insulting or disorderly behaviour?—Yes, but in some cases I have seen these women accompanying men to brothels in the neighbourhood, and in that case I would charge them as prostitutes. In some cases I have come in contact with them when a brothel has been raided. I had just on three years amongst these women, keeping observation on brothels and clubs, and I knew a good many of them that way.

625. Then it really comes to this, that you exercise your discretion in each case as to what charge you will make against a woman who has been accosting men?—Yes.

626. If she has been previously convicted for disorderly behaviour or if you have seen her actually going into a house that you know to be a disorderly house, or you have seen her when you have raided a house, then you would charge her with being a common prostitute?—Yes.

627. If you observe her accosting?—Yes.

628. Are you quite sure that you are right in this case of Mrs. X? The cardboard box seems to have been a pretty large one?—Yes, it was. I was quite sure of what she did.

629. Were there many people waiting for the 'buses that night?—Yes, there always is just at that place; always a lot of people between Regent Circus and Hill's Place, and then not quite so many people. There are always a lot of people waiting for the 'buses there and a lot leaving the Tube. Just about that time, as far as I can remember now, Queen's Hall was breaking up, and there were a good few people. Then there is St. George's Hall and the Polytechnic, and the people all come that way.

630. This was about half-past 10?—Yes.

631. That is not very late?—No.

632. There are a good many people about at Regent's Circus, I suppose, till the small hours?—There are.

633. Do you really mean that Mrs. X, the lady who is sitting there, behaved in the way that you have described, with a good many people about?—I do.

634. Were there a good many known loose women about at the time?—There were.

635. Women who had been convicted?—Yes, women I knew well.

P.C. A. Cole. 7 Dec. 1906.

636. Were they accosting, too?—I do not remember. I fixed my attention on to Mrs. X.

637. Why did you fix your attention particularly on her?—Because of her having been round there all the month, and seeing her looking into these gentlemen's faces and smiling at them. I had made up my mind to keep observation on her, and if I saw her accosting anyone I had made up my mind to caution her, and if I saw her after that, I intended to arrest her. I should have arrested her when she got to Berwick Street could I have caught her up, but before I had a chance to arrest her she would accost another gentleman.

638. Had you heard her talking on any of these nights?—No, I could just see her talking to them.

639. You had never had any conversation at all with her?—Never.

640. Then you did not know she was a foreigner?—No, I did not.

641. Are you quite certain of that?—I am certain.

642. We have had an opportunity of hearing her give evidence, and she talks in a very voluble way, if not with a foreign accent very marked, yet in a very foreign style. Are you sure it was not something of that about her that attracted your attention?—No, Sir.

643. Had you ever seen her before the month of March, or about that time?—No, I do not remember having seen her before.

644. Not some months ago?—No, I do not.

645. Have you got your notebook for March with you?—No.

646. Did you make any entry in the book about this?—No, I did not.

647. There is a book?—This is the V Division book that I have here.

648. But there was a book, I suppose, in your possession in March?—Yes.

649. Where is that book?—I could not say. I gave it in when I left the C Division.

650. Do you recollect whether you made any entry about this case?—I might have put in the street and the time. I might have done that, but I do not remember having done so.

651. Is it your practice to enter the name?—Just the name and the time and the name of the street.

652. Was any report called for about this case?—Yes.

653. When did you make the report?—I think it was about five o'clock that afternoon, after Mrs. X was discharged from the police court. The Inspector sent up for me to my home.

654. Did you make a written report?—Yes.

655. Did Mrs. X, after you had arrested her, use any words that suggested to you that she thought she had met you before in plain clothes?—No, she did not.

656. Was she crying or displaying agitation in any way during the time you were taking her to the station?—She was very excited, but she did not cry.

657. Was she angry, or was she treating it as a joke, or what did you understand her frame of mind to be?—She wished me to let her go. She asked me several times to let her go. I remember that. She seemed greatly in fear of her husband.

658. Of course; that was very natural, was it not?—Yes.

659. Did you see her umbrella drop?—No, I do not remember that.

660. When the first man spoke to her, how many yards were you from her?—About as far from her as it is to the corner of the room—about 7 or 8 yards.

661. You did not see her umbrella fall?—I did not notice her umbrella.

662. Is it possible that the first time she was talking to a gentleman she was simply thanking him for picking up her umbrella, or something of that kind?—No, sir. It is very light at that station, and the electric lamps were full on.

663. You seemed, from your evidence in chief, to attach very great importance to her smiling, and so on. Do you attach much importance to that as a general rule?—It is the practice of these women to do that.

664. But do you mean to say that it was the smile of the practised prostitute that you are thinking of, or might it have been a light-hearted smile?—Just a smile, and a look up into their faces.

665. The smile of solicitation?—I take it it was not the action of a respectable woman. I might add that I would see her in the Circus walking round people where the 'buses stop at Jay's, and look into their faces, and not speak to them at all. I had seen her do that several times in the month. On that particular occasion she might be simply walking round them and looking into their faces and smiling at them.

666. What you are stating against Mrs. X is very serious. She does not deny, of course, that she was there with the cardboard box, and that she did speak to men on this night. She also admits that she had been there before coming, as she told us, from Hampstead. It is a very serious charge you are making against her, that she had been there almost nightly for the purpose of carrying on her business of prostitution. Are you quite certain that you are not mistaken? This was March 20th, and there had been therefore nineteen days of March, and you say she had been there almost nightly?—I do say so, Sir.

667. Are you positive that you could have not confused her with some other woman?—I am positive.

668. And that even if what you say as to the 20th be in substance accurate, may you not be making a mistake as to the identity of the woman?—Not in the least. She was there almost every night, dressed the same. One night I remember she was dressed in black.

669. Almost dressed the same?—Yes, she used to wear a red dress and a white fur-looking round hat.

670. Was she wearing that on the 20th when you arrested her?—The red dress, I won't be certain about the hat on that particular night.

671. Did the Inspector say anything about the cardboard box in the charge room?—I do not remember.

672. He may have said something?—He may have said something, but I am not certain about that.

673. It would have been a natural thing for him to comment on the box, would it not?—Yes.

674. You do not allege, as I understand your evidence, that the carrying of a cardboard box is a common trick among women of the town, do you?—Yes, sir.

675. You do allege it?—Yes, I have seen women carrying boxes before. I do not say so large as Mrs. X's, but I have seen them carrying smaller boxes.

676. Late at night?—Yes.

677. When they are loitering about trying to find men?—Yes, loitering about.

678. I quite understand that a great many women have to loiter about, even as late as 12 o'clock midnight, with cardboard boxes and other parcels, but they may be quite honest women, may they not?—That is so, sir.

679. Do not you think the presumption is, if a woman has got a cardboard box on a rainy night, that she is all right, and that she is an honest woman?—No, I do not think so.

680. Then I understand that you are of opinion that these women do take precautions to avoid coming in contact with the police?—Yes.

681. They carry things that might tend to support a story favourable to their conduct?—That is so, sir.

682. (Mr. Dickinson.) I understand that on this night in question you first saw this lady in Oxford Circus?—Yes.

683. Tell us exactly the spot in Oxford Circus where you saw her?—Coming up Regent Street from Piccadilly Circus on the side of Peter Robinson's; then you come to Louise's, and she was outside Louise's door.

684. Is that on the south side of Oxford Street?—Yes.

685. There is a circle there?—You would call it the east side of Oxford Street.

686. There are four corners of the Circus?—Yes, Jay's at one corner.

687. What corner is that?—The corner going west. Then there is Dale's at the other corner.

688. That is north-west?—Yes. Then there is the booking office at the other corner and Louise's on the other corner.

689. Louise's is on the south-east corner?—Yes.

690. Then I understand she was standing in Regent Street?—Yes, right at the corner of Oxford Circus.

691. That is where the omnibuses go down towards Peckham?—That is so.

692. What did she do when she was there?—She kept walking round gentlemen and looking into their faces and smiling at them.

693. Is that the spot where the omnibuses stop?—Not on the corner; there are no omnibuses that stop on the corner. They are not allowed to stop within 21 yards of that corner. They always stop by Duncan Smith's, next door to Peter Robinson's.

694. (Mr. Whitmore.) Lower down?—Lower down.

695. (Mr. Dickinson.) Then at that spot she was walking round gentlemen?—Yes.

696. Then what did you see her do?—Look into their faces and smile at them.

697. Did she speak to anybody there?—I did not hear her speak to anyone.

698. Where were you at that moment?—As soon as I saw her, and saw what she was doing, I crossed the road. There is a cab rank in the centre of the road, and I stood behind one of the cabs for a minute.

699. That is in the centre of Regent Street?—Yes.

700. You stood behind one of the cabs in the centre of Regent Street?—Yes.

701. You crossed the road to the pavement?—At the back of the cabs.

702. You being on the other side of the street altogether?—Yes.

703. You saw her cross the street?—No, I did not see her cross. I could see her. She was always very conspicuous, especially when she had her box with her.

704. Where were you standing when you first saw her walking round gentlemen?—When I first observed her, do you mean?

705. Yes?—By Parr's Bank, on the opposite side of Jay's.

706. Then you came halfway across Regent Street?—That is right.

707. And stood by a cab?—Yes.

708. And then you watched her again?—Yes.

709. And she was still doing the same thing?—Yes.

710. Were there any omnibuses passing at the time?—No, I do not think so. I will not say for certain.

711. It was sufficiently empty for you to see her?—Yes.

712. Were there groups of people there?—There were several people there; a good few people. There always are.

713. Now tell me what happened next. What did you see her do?—She then went round the bend into Oxford Street. As you leave Louise's there is a sort of bend—she went round the bend along Oxford Street, and I was very close behind her then.

714. What did you do?—I followed her up.

715. Tell me exactly what happened. At what distance were you from her when she walked round into Oxford Street?—Seven or eight yards.

716. Then she went along the pavement straight to Oxford Street?—Yes, to the Tube Station.

717. And you following?—I following.

718. How close were you the whole of the time?—I was on the other side of Argyll Street, a matter of seven to ten yards.

719. You mean to say you followed her seven yards behind her as far as Argyll Street?—To Argyll Street.

720. She crossed Argyll Street?—Yes.

721. To the Tube Station?—To the Tube Station.

722. What did you do?—As far as I remember I stepped down into the road to cross again when she approached this man who was standing outside, and I heard her say something, but I did not catch what she said. I distinctly heard him say, "Go away, I don't want to have anything to do with you." He then turned his back on her, and walked into the station.

723. When you heard that said how near were you to her?—I must have been as near to her as I am now almost. P.C. A. Cole. 7 Dec. 1906.

724. Were there people standing round the Tube Station?—Yes. People coming out of the Tube Station out of the exit there. They come up into Oxford Street, and there is always a string of people coming up from the trains.

725. I suppose there are omnibuses going even at that time of night?—Oh, yes.

726. But yet you could hear what was said?—Yes.

727. At that distance?—I could not hear what she said, but I heard what he said, and he shouted out. He seemed very angry.

728. How did she meet this gentleman?—She went up to him. This is the entrance to the Tube Station, and he stood this way, and it seemed to me as though he was waiting for someone, and she walked straight up to him and looked into his face and smiled and said something. I do not know what she said, but I distinctly heard him say, "Go away, I don't want anything to do with you." He turned his back on her, and he walked into the station, and he caught sight of me, or I take it that he did, and he turned to me and said, "Constable, these women are a nuisance." I then went to her, and told her she must behave herself.

729. Where did he go to then?—He turned back to the station.

730. Where was she standing when he said, "These women are a nuisance"?—She could not have been very far away. I think she was slightly on the move.

731. Would she have heard what he said?—I could not say that.

732. Would she have seen him speak to you?—Yes, she could see him speak to me.

733. And she did see him?—I will not say that she did see him, but she may have seen him. I will not say for certain.

734. And she continued standing in front of the Tube Station?—No. When I went to caution her I caught her up. She was walking slowly towards Hills Place.

735. That is away from you?—Away from me. When I cautioned her she stopped and turned round, and seemed very indignant at my speaking to her.

736. Did you notice anything in her accent or expression then when she spoke to you?—No, I did not notice it.

737. You even then did not know that she was a foreign woman?—No, I did not notice it at all. She seemed to speak good English, and I did not notice it.

738. Then she was walking towards the pavement?—Yes.

739. Where were you then?—After I spoke to her I crossed to the other side of Oxford Street with a view of keeping observation on her, but I am not sure whether she watched me across the road or no. My back, of course, would be turned on her.

740. And as she walked along the street she met another gentleman?—I saw her, I think it might be a second or two before she got up to this gentleman.

741. Got up to him?—As I crossed to the other side of Oxford Street. There is always a string of 'buses there outside Peter Robinson's; that is another stopping place on the north side of Oxford Street.

742. The 'buses going east?—Yes. I passed between two 'buses, the tail of one 'bus and between the horses heads of another one. Then there would be a 'bus that was in front, and after I passed through the back of that 'bus I should have to pass along that 'bus before I could see Mrs. X again. I saw her then almost up to Hills Place where she met this man. It is rather dark there. I won't be certain whether she had crossed Hills Place or whether she was in the road or on the footway.

743. You say she did pass that man?—She did not catch him up. She spoke to him as he was coming in this direction westwards.

744. She stepped in front of him and spoke to him?—Yes.

745. You say you had seen her almost nightly for a month?—That is so.

P.C. A. Cole.
7 Dec 1906.

746. You told the Chairman that you could not arrest her or could not caution her because she was so artful?—She was very artful.

747. In what way was she artful?—If she saw me approaching she would jump into an omnibus. I have approached her when she has jumped into an omnibus that was going west, and then I have seen her about twenty minutes or half an hour afterwards.

748. Do you mean to say that if a woman is soliciting and she gets into an omnibus, and then you see her back again doing the same thing, after that you are not able to caution her?—I don't usually caution them unless I catch them fair in the act. I like to caution them again. If a woman spoke to a gentleman and I had my suspicion about her, and she got away from me, I would not caution her if I saw her half an hour afterwards, unless I saw her doing something.

749. (Mr. Whitmore.) Something fresh?—Something fresh.

750. (Mr. Dickinson.) Why not? Let me understand what your view of this Regulation is. This woman whom you have practically known to be a prostitute from having seen her a number of nights you see soliciting?—Yes.

751. More than half an hour afterwards you see her again?—Yes.

752. You are able to get up to her and speak to her?—Yes.

753. Do you mean to say you do not think it is your duty then to caution her?—No.

754. When is it your duty to caution her?—When I catch her in the act—that is when I am under the impression it is my duty to caution her.

755. At any rate she was clever enough to get away from you on all those occasions?—Yes. If she went into the Dolphin public-house, which she frequently did, I could hardly follow her into the public-house and caution her. Perhaps she would remain in there for twenty minutes or half an hour. I cannot say I have seen her come out, but I have seen her go in.

756. Then your view is that she undoubtedly knew those nights that she was doing wrong?—Yes. Whenever she was doing this she always used to look about her.

757. How do you account for it then that on this occasion when you were standing close by, and had cautioned her, and she knew you were there, that she went on doing the same thing?—But I did not remain there. I crossed to the other side of Oxford Street. She seemed to take it that I had gone back. There is a policeman on the point, and whether she thought I was the pointsman, and had come over to caution her and had crossed back on to my point again, I could not say. Whether she was under the impression that I had gone, the 'buses having covered me, I do not know.

758. You think she did not see you the whole time you were following after her a few yards behind her?—I do think so.

759. You told us that at the police court you said something to her or she said something to you?—She was joking. She seemed very jolly in the passage of the court.

760. Who was she talking to?—Different policemen and the women—the prostitutes. She got into conversation with the prostitutes.

761. She was talking to different policemen?—Yes.

762. What policemen was she talking to?—I could not say now who they were; I do not remember; but as soon as ever I was warned to attend on account of Mrs. X it all came to my mind. I don't know if he remembers, but I remember saying to P.-C. Keeble "She is not much class the way she carried on at the back of the court." I think those were the words I used. I don't know if he would remember it, but I remember saying to Keeble "She cannot be much class or she would not carry on the same as she is carrying on at the back of the court."

763. What do you mean by "carrying on." What was she doing?—Joking with the policemen. A respectable woman would not do what she was doing, such as laughing and talking with these prostitutes who were in the passage.

764. Then she was talking to prostitutes?—Yes, there was a prostitute on that side of her. I believe she was the first to go in that morning, and I believe the next woman was a prostitute. They were all talking together—all the women in rotation. The women always go in first.

765. You must have been quite close to them at that time because she spoke to you. According to what you say she said to you "Don't be too hard on me; my husband was going to shoot me when I got home this morning"?—That is so.

766. Then you were close to her?—When we go in, the prisoner stands that side and the officer stands this side—immediately opposite.

767. Where were the other women?—Standing by her side.

768. What was she saying to these women. Have you any recollection?—I have no recollection, but I believe she kept saying "I wonder what I will get?" I remember her saying that, and "Do you think I will be fined?" The other women said "They won't hang you; they cannot hang you," or words to that effect. I will not say for certain, but I believe those are the words that were made use of.

769. Is there anything else that you can remember?—No.

770. She was saying "Do you think I will be fined?"—As far as I recollect she made use of those words or words very similar.

771. Were the women saying anything to her about fines?—I don't remember.

772. Were they saying anything about the police generally?—I did not notice them.

773. Did any other policeman speak to her?—Not that I remember.

774. Did any other policeman speak to her when she was brought in in the evening by you?—I don't think so. I did not see anyone speak to her. I will not say for certain now. It is a long time ago—about nine months ago now, I think.

775. I suppose when she told you that she was a respectable woman and had got a husband you must have felt it was important that her character should be spoken to by other people?—I did not take any notice of what she said in that respect, because we have so many of these women who, when you have arrested them, say "I am a married woman" and they have not been married women.

776. She did say she was married the very first thing when you took her up?—Yes, she said "I am a married woman, and I ought not to be here."

777. Did you say to her that you were going to charge her with insulting behaviour?—I said "I shall arrest you for insulting behaviour."

778. And then she said she was not insulting?—Not then. She did not say that till she got to the station, and from the way she spoke at the station I took it that she was under the impression that she was charged with insulting me, because she said: "I did not insult him, the policeman has made a mistake; I did not insult him. That man was my insurance agent, and the other men spoke to me." It seemed from the way she spoke she was under the impression that I was charging her with insulting me.

779. Did she say anything about the man being her insurance man before she got to the station?—No.

780. Were there any cabs near the Tube railway station?—That I do not remember. No, I do not think so. There is a cab stand in the centre of the road.

781. Did you see a cab take up anybody or drive anybody away?—No, I did not. There was no cab in the road. There may have been one standing in the centre of the road, because there is a rank there for two cabs. I will not be certain as to whether there was one standing there or not then.

782. You did not see her speaking to anybody in a cab?—No, I did not.

783. (Chairman.) Did any one of the gentlemen to whom she spoke or who spoke to her get into the cab and drive away?—No. One entered the Tube station and the other came westwards along Oxford Street. The other one crossed the road.

784. From an observation you let fall in the course of your evidence I gather you think that the lady was a very artful person?—I do, Sir.

785. Do you wish us to understand that you had been actually trying on any night before the 20th to catch her and caution her?—Yes.

786. And that you had failed to do so?—Yes, I had failed to do so.

787. It took you nearly a month or three weeks before you were able to catch her and caution her?—Yes.

788. And then you succeeded in cautioning her?—I did.

789. Was it very artful of her to go and accost the very same evening?—She would not have done it had I been following her. I think by her action she was under the impression that I had gone.

790. I am putting that question to you with a view of suggesting still that you made a mistake, and that Mrs. X was not the person whom you had been trying to caution before?—No, Sir, I have not made a mistake.

791. That is my suggestion to you. I have been listening carefully to your evidence. What was the insulting behaviour of the lady in this case?—In stopping in front of the gentleman and obstructing him from going along.

792. It is no use using the words "And obstructing him from going along." I understand you to say she simply stopped a gentleman, smiled at him, and said something in the way of solicitation to him. Is that what I understand you to have observed?—Yes.

793. Simply that she stopped and smiled at a man—putting it in general terms?—Yes.

794. Is that the only behaviour to which you could give the name "insulting"?—That is all.

795. Was it likely, do you think, that Mrs. X, speaking to a man—if it was Mrs. X who was doing so—would cause a breach of the peace?—Yes, because sometimes these gentlemen when they are annoyed by women molesting them and stepping in front of them will strike at them with anything they have in their hand. I have seen them do that.

796. Of course, it is possible, and I daresay you have seen such a thing, but it is very rare, is it not?—I have seen it done.

797. Very likely, but it must be a very rare thing for a man to strike a woman simply because she smiles at him or accosts him in words?—But it is not often that you meet a woman who was so persistent as Mrs. X was.

798-9. Persistent?—She stepped in front of this last gentleman that she spoke to and stepped on one side, and she again stepped in front of him.

800. That is the first we have heard of that?—I gave it in my evidence.

801. That she stepped twice in front of the same man?—Yes.

802. I find this in your report: "He stepped aside as if to allow her to pass, but she again stepped in front of him"?—That is so, sir.

803. You say that when she stopped the first man, what he said was "Go away, I don't want anything to do with you"?—That is so.

804. She did not force her attentions upon him then?—She stepped away from him then.

805. Then came the caution, and then came the other incident?—Yes.

806. (Mr. Dickinson.) I see that you were on night duty in that month of March. I suppose that is for the whole month of March?—Yes.

807. You were on night duty in this particular place?—Yes.

808. When did your night duty begin there?—Did it begin on the 1st of the month?—About the 3rd or 4th, I think. It was on a Monday. We always change the first Monday in the month.

809. Then it would have been something under three weeks that you had been on that duty?—It would.

810. That was the time during which you saw her?—That is right.

811. All that month of March?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Monday was the 5th March.

812. (Mr. Dickinson.) Then it is shorter still. There are 15 days between that and the 20th. So it is a fortnight. I thought you said you had been there almost nightly for a month?—No; I said, "The past three weeks." We were into the third week, I think.

813. You mean all the time you were on night duty?—Yes.

814. You were on night duty at the same place in January?—Yes.

815. Did you see her at that time?—No, not to remember her.

816. It was only during that March night duty that you saw her?—Yes.

817. I see in March you made nine arrests. Can you tell me whether in any of those cases the arrest was for insulting behaviour?—No, I could not.

818. I have no doubt you could find out for us?—Yes, it could be found out.

819. I should like to ask the same question with regard to your January beat on that spot. I see you made 20 arrests in the month of January?—I think that month I was patrolling Oxford Street and Regent Street.

820. I have got you down as being on night duty in Regent Street, Conduit Street, Hanover Street, and so on. Would you be patrolling?—I would be on the beat.

821. The same work as you were on in March?—Yes.

822. On that occasion you made 20 arrests. Is that an exceptional thing with you? I suppose you had been working on this sort of work for some years?—Yes.

823. For how many years had you been at work on this beat?—Just on 14 years.

824. Is 20 arrests in one month an ordinary experience, or exceptional?—I have had more than that in one month.

825. You told us that you made 200 arrests in the course of the year?—I will not be certain on that.

826. I was going to point out to you that in the table which has been put before us it appears that for the six months ending April, 1906, you made 41 arrests in the half year?—Yes.

827. With that information, do you still think that you are right in saying that you made 200 arrests in the course of the year?—I know I made a good many, but I won't be certain to 200. I said about 200, I think.

828. You made considerably more arrests than any other constable in the C Division. Do you know that?—I was not aware of that.

829. Is this particular duty at this particular place restricted to a certain limited number of constables, or do you all take it in turns?—We take it all in turn.

830. Therefore there is no particular reason why one or two constables should make more arrests than the others?—No. I have been patrolling for the purpose of putting down the complaints as to these women. We have received complaints, and then perhaps someone one would be posted to patrol such places as Oxford Street and Regent Street to put it down, and to keep observation on these women, and if you are supposed to patrol you would naturally have no other responsibility, such as looking to the doors or working the beat. If a man has the beat to work, he has the responsibility of that beat.

831. (Mr. Whitmore.) He has other work beside that of watching the women?—Yes.

832. (Mr. Dickinson.) This night, had you nothing else to do but to look to the women?—That I am uncertain of. I was on the beat.

833. When you are on this particular beat, is it supposed to be your principal duty at that time of night to watch the women or not?—Yes, I am supposed to attend to it.

834. But is it supposed to be the principal duty?—Yes.

835. The principal duty is with regard to prostitutes?—Not exactly the principal duty. Of course, I had my beat to work as well. I had just worked my beat. I had gone the first time round. That beat takes 20 minutes to work, and I was just coming round the second time. I started from Hanover Street, and worked my beat, and when I was coming round the second time I observed this woman.

836. Does your beat extend to the east of Oxford Circus?—No.

P.C. A. Cole.

7 Dec. 1906.

837. It does not?—No.

838. Then you ought not to have been east of Oxford Circus under ordinary circumstances?—No.

839. You went outside your beat?—I did.

840. For what reason?—Because I saw this woman committing herself. Having seen her so many times round there during the month, I made up my mind to keep observation on her.

841. And you made up your mind to follow her anywhere, outside your beat or anywhere?—Yes.

842. (Mr. Whitmore.) Is that within the Regulations governing your conduct on the beat?—If we saw anyone committing themselves. My idea was to catch her up and caution her, and tell her to behave herself; and then, if she repeated her conduct, I intended to take her into custody.

843. (Mr. Dickinson.) What would be the good of your cautioning her when she was out of your beat, because you admit that you only wished to caution her at that moment? The first thing to do was to caution her?—Yes.

844. When you have cautioned her outside your beat, you have got no further responsibility for that beat?—Yes; but my idea was to keep further observation on her after I had cautioned her. I intended to arrest her from the time I first saw her. That was my intention. I had made up my mind that night, because she had been round there all that month, and more on my beat than anywhere. She used to get on the corner there—that was her principal place, by Jay's—and that night I made up my mind.

845. In a case like that, when you have seen a woman night after night misconducting herself, do you ever discuss with your superior officer about that woman?—Yes; I had talked it over with my sergeant.

846. You would?—I had already done so that month about this particular woman.

847. Let us know what you said?—You actually had spoken before the 20th?—Yes, certainly.

848. To your sergeant about this woman?—Yes.

849. What did you say?—I could not tell you the exact words.

850. (Chairman.) What is his name?—Sergeant Mead.

851. (Mr. Dickinson.) About when was that?—I could not say the date. It was from the time I went on the beat to the time I arrested her.

852. That we have found out was from the 5th to the 20th?—Yes, between that time.

853. Approximately, could you tell us what date that could have been about?—No, I could not. I am not certain whether it was a night before or two nights before.

854. It was shortly before this happened?—Yes.

855. What did you say to him?—I might have said to him: "That woman is round here again to-night with a cardboard box," or "that woman in the red dress." I might have said that.

856. You might have said, "That woman with the cardboard box." Had you seen her so often with the cardboard box as to refer to her as "The woman with the cardboard box"?—I had only seen her twice before the night I arrested her.

857. (Mr. Whitmore.) With the cardboard box?—Yes.

858. (Mr. Dickinson.) Then you had seen her almost every other night?—Yes.

859. And yet you spoke of her as "The woman with the cardboard box?—Yes.

860. You called her "That woman with the cardboard box," although you had only seen her two nights with the cardboard box and many nights without it?—No; I think on the first occasion I spoke to the sergeant about it I told him she was carrying a cardboard box. I am not certain whether the sergeant has seen her with a cardboard box. I spoke to him of a woman with a red dress hanging about the neighbourhood molesting men, and she was carrying a cardboard box, and I may have said, "That was to take off the suspicion."

861. You had spoken to him; that you remember distinctly, and that he will remember?—Not exactly the words; I would not guarantee them.

862. But you had in mind this particular woman and two or three days before this happened. What did he say? What was the result of that conversation?—He said: "Well, if she commits herself, you must take her into custody. If you see her committing herself, keep observation." But he always said: "Be careful, mind you."

863. Had you any doubt about that woman at that time when you spoke to him as to whether she was a prostitute?—Yes. I could not swear she was a prostitute. I should not have given her such chances had I known her to be a prostitute.

864. Did you make any inquiries of other police constables who had been on the beat?—P.C. Mead and Keeble. We had also talked about her.

865. You had spoken of her with P.C. Keeble?—Yes, we talked her over. I forget the words that were used. I don't remember what was said. He might have said something about the girl in a red dress. He might have said on my first time round, "That woman has gone round here again with that red dress on," or something like that.

866. Of course, you think it is very important that you should not make any mistake in these matters?—Certainly.

867. Did you talk it over with anybody else?—No.

868. I suppose you think it would be essential and most valuable for you if other constables had seen her doing the same thing?—Yes.

869. Who was the constable on that beat in the month of February, before you went on?—I don't know.

870. This return that has been put in shows the day and night duty beats, and shows the streets at which the officers were posted in certain months. It is only a certain limited number. When you consulted P.C. Keeble, why did you select him?—He was on the point there. He would have an opportunity of seeing her, although one week he would be on the early turn, which would finish at nine o'clock, and the other week he would be on the late turn, and he would be there from nine to one.

871. What duty was he on on that night?—He has a fixed beat there by Jay's at the corner.

872. By Jay's, which is on the other side of the street to that on which she was?—Yes.

873. He was the man who during that month was on the point there?—Yes, but not every night.

874. Were there any other constables there at that point?—Yes, I think there were—P.C. Garrett, 334. He was on the opposite relief, as far as I can remember; and I think I have spoken to Garrett about her, too. I am almost certain I have.

875. You think you spoke to Garrett before you took her up?—Oh, yes.

876. Is there anybody else?—I don't remember anyone else. I may have spoken to someone else about her.

877. Then, so far as you were concerned, you have no shadow of a doubt that this was a woman whom you had been thinking of and speaking about before the night in question?—There is not the slightest doubt; this is the woman.

878-9. She had a red dress on, I suppose, at the police station when she was brought in?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I did not like to ask the witness what he had said to Sergeant Shepherd on the night of the 20th March as to which you were asking. We have the fact that he did speak to the sergeant. It may not be in his report, but he said in his evidence to-day that he saw Sergeant Shepherd and spoke to him about this woman.

880-1. (Mr. Dickinson.) We had better ask him and get it on the notes. You told me just now you did not speak to anybody else?—I do not remember saying that.

882. I was asking whether you had spoken to Sergeant Shepherd, Garrett, Mead, or anybody else?—I understood you before that night—before I arrested her.

883. Yes.—The only occasion I spoke to Sergeant Shepherd about her was after I crossed Oxford Street.

I continued on the opposite side of Oxford Street, and as soon as ever she left this man who came westward I crossed Oxford Street with the intention of arresting her, because I had cautioned her, but before I could catch her up she had already stepped in front of this man by Wardour Street. I intended after she left this man to take her into custody.

884. "After she left this man." That was the man that had spoken to you, and had gone into the Tube station?—The one she had stopped at Hills Place.

885. You say you saw her stop a man at Hills Place. Where were you at that moment?—I was on the opposite side of the road.

886. (Chairman.) She stepped in front of another gentleman who was proceeding in the opposite direction, and after a short conversation they walked together to Berwick Street where they parted?—Yes; that is, the gentleman.

887. Do you mean to say that you crossed the road to arrest her that moment?—Yes, after she left him.

888. After this conversation with this gentleman?—Yes.

889. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did this gentleman turn back with her?—Yes, and walked eastward.

890. Then what did he do?—He left her.

891. And went back again?—Westward.

892. That you saw?—Yes.

893. Then she went on and stepped in front of another gentleman?—Yes, that is so.

894. When did Sergeant Shepherd come?—When I crossed Oxford Street there—about Wells Street it was. I left the pavement just as she was parting from this man. That was the man she took to Berwick Street. As I crossed the road I saw Sergeant Shepherd coming along on that side following them up.

895. On the south side?—On the south side.

896. Going in the same direction as you were going?—Going in the same direction. Then when I got up to Sergeant Shepherd I said to him "Have you seen that woman stop any men," and I think he said "I saw her stop this man that she has just left." I said "I have seen her before and cautioned her, and I am going to arrest her," and I left Sergeant Shepherd with that intention.

897. What did Sergeant Shepherd say?—I am not sure; I think he said "Make sure of her." He might have said that. I cannot be certain; I cannot be sure of the exact words he did make use of. He said something. I did not waste any time.

898. You made sure that she was a prostitute?—No, I did not say she was a prostitute.

899. You, of course, were anxious to be careful?—Yes. Sergeant Shepherd might have said "You will be careful."

900. You were convinced that she had solicited another man, and then you took her up?—I intended to. I did not waste any time because I had lost her before. I hurried to catch her up, but before I could catch her up she, as I say, stepped in front of this other gentleman.

901. You thought it was a clear case of prostitution or soliciting?—Yes.

902. Nevertheless you charged her with insulting behaviour?—I did.

903. Your explanation of that is because that is the first time?—Yes.

904. That is your only explanation?—Yes—to my knowledge. I did not know the woman before that month.

905. (Chairman.) I now gather (correct me if I am wrong) that you crossed the road with the intention of arresting her when she and the gentleman, whom we will call No. 2, parted?—That is so.

906. The exact way in which you describe the matter in your report is as follows: "She walked to Hills Place where she stepped in front of another gentleman who was proceeding in the opposite direction, and after a short conversation they walked together to Berwick Street where they parted, the man returning in the direction from which he had come." That might have been a mere friendly conversation with somebody she knew, might it not?—It may have done.

907. Then how did it carry the case any further against her?—Because I had already cautioned her. P.C. A. Cole. 7 Dec. 1906.

908-9. The mere fact that you had cautioned her did not disentitle her to go and have a conversation with a friend. I am not saying that gentleman No. 2 was a friend. Do not misunderstand me. You gave your report on the 22nd, and I have read you the exact words: "She stepped in front of another gentleman who was proceeding in the opposite direction, and after a short conversation they walked together to Berwick Street where they parted." That is quite consistent with her having known the gentleman before, was it not?—She may have known him, but from the way she stopped him it did not appear as though she knew him.

910. You think she stopped before him as though he were not an acquaintance, but a complete stranger?—Yes.

911. At any rate, they had this conversation apparently of a friendly character?—They were walking along talking.

912. They were not quarrelling?—No.

913. How did that carry the case any further?—Because I had already cautioned her.

914. Yes, but what you have said there is quite consistent with the gentleman not in the least objecting to enter into conversation with her. I will put it in that way. It was not a question of insulting behaviour. Put it as high as this—say it was some evidence that she had solicited this strange man?—That was my opinion.

915. The gentleman did not object; on the contrary, he entered into conversation with her?—He did.

916. How is that insulting behaviour. How did it carry the case further against her?—In my opinion it did. I told her if she stepped in front of another man after having cautioned her I intended to take her into custody.

917. If she accosted another man?—Yes.

918. I can understand if you thought her stopping this other gentleman was the stopping of a stranger for the purpose of solicitation that it did carry the case further against her, that is to say, it carried the case of solicitation against her, but how does it carry the case of insulting behaviour any further?—(No answer.)

919. The words are "Insulting behaviour which may cause a breach of the peace." Assuming her behaviour was insulting in speaking to a strange man, it did not occasion a breach of the peace, and it did not in that case?—(No answer.)

920. (Mr. Dickinson.) I should like to ask you this. Where exactly was Sergeant Shepherd?—He was coming a few yards behind.

921. But at what street? Argyle Street is the first, and then there is a little street with some steps which go down to Oxford Circus Avenue?—There are no steps there.

922. What is the turning that goes down into Marlborough Mews?—Those are the steps to the mews.

923. There are steps which go down to Ramilies Street?—It is Hills Place where you go down to Marlborough Street—to the mews.

924. Hills Place is further east than Ramilies Street?—No, further west.

925. (Chairman.) I understood you met Sergeant Shepherd on the north-west side of Oxford Street?—That is so.

926. And you had a conversation with him?—Yes.

927. (Mr. Dickinson.) I understood you to say that when you were on the north side of Oxford Street you saw Sergeant Shepherd on the south side following them?—Yes. I did not observe Sergeant Shepherd until I crossed the road. Where he came from I do not know.

928. You first of all crossed Oxford Street at the Circus?—Yes.

929. Then you got on to the north side of the street. How far along the north side of the street did you walk until you saw her accost a gentleman at Hills Place?—A matter of a few yards, just past the 'buses; that would be at the corner of Great Portland Street.

930. You were just crossing Great Portland Street

P.C. A. Cole. Dec. 1906.

when you saw her on the other side accost No. 2, as we call him?—Yes.

931. That is not Hills Place opposite, is it?—No.

932. Where is Hills Place?—On the opposite side. It is immediately across like that.

933. There is Oxford Street, there is the Tube, and there is Argyll Street. You crossed over there, and you walked as far as Great Portland Street?—Yes.

934-5. This is where you saw her accost No. 2?—Yes.

936. Then what did you do?—I continued along Oxford Street.

937. How far?—To just about Wells Street.

938. Is that Wells Street?—Wells Street would be over here.

939. Then when you got to Wells Street you crossed over. You saw her again then, I understand?—I did not lose sight of her afterwards.

940. And you saw her stop No. 3?—From Hills Place I never lost sight of her.

941. Where did you first see Sergeant Shepherd?—Between Poland Street and Wardour Street, following up behind.

942. That was before she got to Berwick Street?—Yes.

943. At Berwick Street she accosted a third man?—No, the second.

944. Hills Place was No. 2. Then she walked with that man to Berwick Street, and then the man left; and then behind her was Sergeant Shepherd?—Yes.

945. I want to know where you saw him?—Behind her.

946. Did you see him east or west of Berwick Street?—West of Berwick Street.

947. West of Berwick Street?—West of Berwick Street.

948. Then you crossed over and met him between Wardour Street and Berwick Street?—No, between Poland Street and Berwick Street.

949. You saw Sergeant Shepherd on that side, and then you crossed over. What would be the distance between the place where you overtook Sergeant Shepherd and the place where you arrested her?—About 50 yards at the corner of Wardour Street.

950. (Chairman.) What time was it you first saw her?—On this night.

951. Yes?—As near 25 past 10, as near as I can say.

952. What time did you arrest her?—I think I had her under observation some 20 or 25 minutes.

953. Tell me when these Peckham 'buses run. Do you know what interval elapses between one 'bus and another at that corner?—Every four or five minutes.

954. The late Peckham 'buses run about every five minutes?—Every five or seven minutes.

955. We are talking of motor 'buses, to begin with?—That is what I am.

956. They were running last March, were they not?—Yes, she used to catch one of those sometimes, because I have seen her get on to one as late as half-past 12—the last one.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) She could go as far as Westminster Bridge, and then she could get on a tram.

957. (Chairman.) Mrs. X told us she went to the tramway. Those 'buses which you call the Peckham 'buses you say go every five or seven minutes?—Yes.

Sergeant PETER SHEPHERD (39 C), sworn.

958. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you a sergeant of the C Division?—Yes.

959. You have been in the Metropolitan Police for 15 years?—Yes.

960. On the evening of the 20th March, what duty were you on?—I was patrolling from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m.

961. Where is your Sub-Division?—The boundaries are Berwick Street and High Street, Bloomsbury.

962. Did you go along Oxford Street?—Yes.

963. Did you see Mrs. X that night?—Yes.

964. Where did you see her first?—Hovering about the Tube Station at Oxford Circus.

965. For how long was she under your observation there?—Not a minute before she walked away.

966. What direction did she take?—East, along Oxford Street.

967. Did you see her do anything?—Yes.

968. What did you see her do?—Stop a man at Hills Place.

969. What took place?—Walked away eastward.

970. Who did?—Mrs. X and the man who she stopped—walked away as far as Berwick Street, where the man left her.

971. What is the distance between Hills Place and Berwick Street?— I should say about 200 yards.

972. Did you see P.C. Cole?—Yes.

973. Where did you see him?—Between Poland Street and Berwick Street.

974. Did he speak to you?—Yes.

975. What did he say, or what did you say to him?—He said to me, "Have you seen that woman stop anyone?" I said, "Yes, I saw her stop a man at Hills Place." He said, "I have already cautioned her, and I am going to take her into custody. I have seen her before," and he walked past me.

976. Was anything more said between you that you remember?—No.

977. What did you do?—I remained at Berwick Street. P.C. Cole walked on towards Wardour Street. About two or three minutes afterwards P.C. Cole had Mrs. X in custody, walking towards the station.

978. Where were you at that time?—At Berwick Street.

979. Is that all you saw of it that night?—Yes.

980. Had you seen Mrs. X before?—No, sir.

981. (Mr. Cockle.) You say you did not know Mrs. X?—No.

982. Had you not been on duty at this place before?—Yes.

983. For how long?—A whole month, I think.

984. At that place?—Walking about.

985. That was part of your duty?—Yes, round about there.

986. You had been frequently there at this time?—Yes.

987. Every night practically?—Yes.

988. And you had never seen her?—No.

989. You say that when you spoke to P.C. Cole when you were between Poland Street and Berwick Street he said he had cautioned her?—Yes.

990. And he was going to arrest her?—Yes.

991. That was what he said to you then?—Yes.

992. He was determined to arrest her then?—Yes.

993. (Chairman.) Have you made any report in this case?—Yes.

994. On what date?—On the 21st.

(Mr. Dickinson.) You began, Mr. Muir, by asking him about the 20th March.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, that is right. She was charged on the 21st.

995. (Chairman.) Your report was made, you say, on the 21st?—Yes.

996. Is that before or after?—After she had been in front of the Magistrate.

997. Were you in court?—No.

998. Had you, when you made your report, learned that the Magistrate had dismissed the case?—I had.

999. But under Section 16?—Yes.

1000. You knew that fact?—Yes.

1001. Seeing that the Magistrate had dismissed the case, were you asked to make a report?—I was asked to make a report by Sub-Divisional Inspector McKay on what I had seen her doing on the evening of the 20th, the night she was arrested.

1002. Did he say why you were to make the report?—No, Sir. I think he told me to make a full report of the facts—what I saw her do.

1003. Had you spoken to Inspector McKay before that about the case?—No.

1004. Had you gone to the charge room on the 20th?—No, Sir.

1005. You remained on your patrol duty?—Yes.

1006. The report that has been handed to me is dated the 22nd March?—I think that is an error. I think it was the date on which she was discharged. Sub-Divisional McKay asked me to report.

1007. On the 21st March?—Yes.

1008. This is the original report. Just look at that (handing report to witness)?—Yes, this is my handwriting. This is dated the 22nd March.

1009. When did you write it?—It was in the evening, but I will not say positively that it was on the 21st or 22nd, but I am sure that it was the day she was discharged.

1010. Where did you write that out?—At the station.

1011. Had you seen anybody except Inspector McKay in reference to this case before you made that report?—No.

1012. What materials had you got before you? You were not present in the police court. You had seen, or rather Inspector McKay had come to you and spoken to you. What else had you got before you when you made your report?—Nothing before me further than Sub-Divisional Inspector said the woman was discharged.

1013. The woman?—The woman—Mrs. X.

1014. Was that the first time that you had heard the name Mrs. X?—Yes, I believe it was.

1015. Inspector McKay, you think, did refer to her by name?—Yes, by name.

1016. Did that have any meaning to you?—No, not then. He said it was a woman that P.C. Cole had arrested, and that P.C. Cole had told him something of what I had seen.

1017. Had you any entry in your note-book about the matter?—Not then, Sir.

1018. Have you got it now?—No.

1019. Why did you say, "Not then"?—I had no entry further than the report which I was able to make out.

1020. But I am referring to your note-book. I suppose the sergeant on patrol duty keeps a note-book as well as the police-constable?—Yes.

1021. And you had a note-book on that night?—Yes.

1022. Did you make any note in it about this case?—No.

1023. Have you got your book here?—I have got my book here.

1024. The book of March?—No, not the book of March.

1025. You have taken that little book out of the case?—It is complete, and is full now.

1026. You have handed it back?—Yes.

(Chairman.) I should like to look at that, Mr. Muir.

(Mr. Muir.) If you please, Sir, we will have it found for you.

1027. (Chairman.) Was Mrs. X in sight of you when Cole spoke to you?—Yes.

1028. How far from you?—I should say about 15 yards—about 15 yards.

1029. That was in the eastward or City direction?—The City direction.

1030. Did you walk with him, or did he stop and speak to you?—We walked together.

1031. You were on patrol duty of a general character, I rather gathered from your way of answering the learned counsel?—Yes, Sir.

1032. You were not told off specially to watch women soliciting, or committing other offences in the street?—Oh, no, Sir.

1033. Did you notice Mrs. X stop anybody or accost anybody on that evening of the 20th?—Just the one at Hills Place that I have already mentioned.

1034. What do you mean by stopping or accosting in that case?—She walked in front of him as he was walking in the opposite direction. He was walking westwards, and Mrs. X was walking eastwards. She walked right in front of him. Then he passed, I suppose, about two steps, and then he turned round, and then they walked away together eastwards.

1035. That was the only act or series of acts that you had seen Mrs. X perform on that evening?—That is so, Sir.

1036. And you had never seen her before at all?—No, Sir.

1037. Did it strike you that there was anything disorderly in the proceeding?—It did after what I was told.

1038. But you had not been told anything at that moment?—Before I was told.

1039. You had seen that before Cole had come to you, according to his story, which I understand you confirm?—But I was told before that by P.C. 91 (Keeble).

1040. It is rather unfortunate you did not mention before that you had seen Keeble. I certainly understood from you, and I have your report before me, that it was Cole who first called your attention to this woman?—Oh, no, Sir.

1041. Very well, now let us see. The question I put to you was whether all that you had seen was Mrs. X stepping in front of this gentleman, and then after he made a movement they both turned and walked away in conversation?—That is so, Sir.

1042. I asked you whether you thought that behaviour was disorderly—I think that was my question?—Yes.

1043. If nothing had been said by anybody to you, would you have considered that behaviour disorderly at all?—No, probably not.

1044. I want rather to know your state of mind. Do you think that the mere fact of two people stopping, even though they appear not to know each other, and having a little talk, is disorder?—No.

1045. Or insulting behaviour?—No, sir—unless we know them.

1046. That, without some other circumstance, would not attract your attention at all?—No, it would not.

1047. What was the other circumstance in this case?—I was informed by P.C. 91, Keeble.

1048. Strictly speaking, you know well enough that that would not be evidence, because I do not suppose Mrs. X heard the conversation with Keeble?—No.

1049. But still we, in our inquiry, think it right to take it. Where did you have the conversation with Keeble?—In Regent Street.

1050. How long before?—About two minutes before—two or three minutes before I saw Mrs. X.

1051. We have it, and I suppose there is no doubt about it, that Keeble was on point duty?—Yes.

1052. What was he doing in Regent Street?—It is part of his point. It is the west corner of Regent Street.

1053. But he stands in the middle of the road, does he not?—No.

1054. Not necessarily?—No.

1055. He was not regulating the traffic then?—No, not then.

1056. How would you define his point duty, then?—He is there in the daytime to regulate the 'buses proceeding west, but at that time there are not many 'buses there, and his duty is principally to see to these women, and disorder, and anything of that sort.

1057. Has he got any special instructions that the man on the beat has not got, or that the patrolling sergeant has not got?—No.

1058. Then it really amounts to this, that though he is still at night time on point duty, he is not guilty

Sergeant P. Shepherd.

7 Dec. 1906.

of any breach of his duty in leaving the centre of the road and going on the pavement?—No.

1059. Keeble was on point duty. Did you go up and begin a conversation with him?—No.

1060. I am not suggesting it was wrong for you to do so. You were patrolling, and I do not suggest there was anything wrong in your stopping to talk to any constable who you see, but did you, in fact, stop and say "Good evening" to Keeble, or enter into conversation with him in that kind of way?—No.

1061. Did he stop you?—He came across to me.

1062. What did he say?—He said, "All right, sergeant, there is a woman gone along Oxford Street east which I have seen several nights in the Circus speaking to gentlemen, and I should like you to see her to see whether you know her. She is dressed in red, carrying a cardboard box in her hand." Then I went into Oxford Street, and then I saw the woman whom he had described to me.

1063. Had she anything in her hand but the cardboard box, or was she carrying anything else?—No, I do not think she had, she had just the cardboard box.

1064. Was it a nice night?—Yes, Sir, I think it was.

1065. Had she an umbrella?—I would not be positive.

1066. Did you witness the arrest?—No.

1067. And, as I understand it, the first thing that you heard about the matter afterwards was Inspector McKay's statement to you?—I think it was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

1068. You were at the police station then, I suppose, and not at the police court?—No, I was at the police station.

1069. And Inspector McKay had come from the court then, I suppose?—Yes.

1070. The proceedings at the court for the day were over, as far as Inspector McKay was concerned?—Yes.

1071. Did you attend at the station, in pursuance of your duty, or did you go earlier than usual, or was it a mere casual visit to the station?—A casual visit.

1072. When the Inspector asked you to make a report under the circumstances that you have told us, did you set about it at once?—Yes.

1073. You had been on duty from 10 to 6?—Yes.

1074. And you had then been off duty, I suppose, between 6 o'clock and the time you went to the station?—Yes.

1075. Had you been home?—Yes.

1076. Are you sure you had not seen any other constable to talk about this matter between 6 o'clock in the morning and the time you made your report?—No, Sir, I did not.

1077. Did you make your report, thinking that there might be some question raised as to the propriety of the arrest by P.C. Cole?—No, Sir, I did not. I was not prejudiced in any way, in my own mind.

1078. I did not ask you whether you were prejudiced. I said, did you think that the report was called for, because it was felt by Inspector McKay, or somebody else, that there might be some doubt raised as to the propriety of the action of P.C. Cole?—No, nothing entered my mind at the time.

1079. We have it from P.C. Cole that he arrested about 200 women in the course of the year 1905. How many women did you arrest in 1905? I am not suggesting there is anything wrong in your arresting them. I only want to know the number, roughly. I do not wish to press your memory?—About 20, I suppose. It might be less or it might be more. I could not tell you approximately.

1080. It was not a very large number in any case?—No.

1081. Was there a report called for in any one of those cases?—No.

1082. Were you asked to make a report in respect of any of the arrests made by P.C. Cole in 1905?—No, Sir.

1083. Then I may take it that, so far as you are concerned, going back from March of this year into 1905, reports being called for in a case of this kind was a thing that you do not remember?—No, Sir.

1084. Were you not a little surprised at being asked to make a report about this particular case?—I might have been.

1085. Of course, you might have been, sergeant; that is not an answer that is of any value to me, and not one that I should have expected from you. Did it occur to you that the calling for a report was a little unusual?—Oh, yes.

1086. Then you did feel some surprise—at least, that kind of surprise which everyone feels when something unusual happens?—That is so.

1087. Then did it not occur to you that the reason for calling for the report in this case was that the propriety of the arrest might be questioned by somebody?—Yes, it did.

1088. Then I suppose you determined that you would make a truthful report, and one that should be of real assistance in deciding whether the arrest was a right and a proper arrest, or not?—Yes.

1089. Did you think it worth while mentioning the conversation with Cole, for instance?—No, I did not.

1090. Did you think it worth while putting down the conversation with Keeble?—Prior to my making up the report, do you mean?.

1091. Yes, when you were making the report. You have told me that you knew there was some reason—probably the fact that the propriety of the arrest might be questioned—for calling for the report?—Yes.

1092. You told me you wished to make a report that would be truthful, and that would throw light upon the question?—Yes.

1093. How came it that you omitted the conversation with Keeble and with Cole from that report?—That was after I made out the report.

1094. The question with Keeble and Cole did take place after you made your report?—Oh, no, Sir, it did not; but I did not detail in full in the report how I was first acquainted with the woman's presence in the street or the conversation with Cole.

1095. But it was very important, was it not?—I see it now.

1096. So important that when the matter is further questioned, and you are brought here and examined by learned counsel, you remember the conversation with Cole?—Yes.

1097. And then, when you are examined by me, you remember the conversation with Keeble?—Yes, Sir, I do.

1098. And you told me a few minutes before that the reason why you attached any importance to Mrs. X's behaviour when she conversed with this apparently strange gentleman was that Keeble had already spoken to you about her?—Yes.

1099. Does it not strike you as unfortunate that you did not mention that in your report?—Yes, I can see that now.

1100. You did take some care with your report, did you not?—Oh, yes.

1101. I notice you say this: "The gentleman who I saw her stop did not appear to be acquainted with her, as he walked two or three paces past her before he stopped"?—Yes.

1102. That shows that when you made the report you thought it was very important to exclude the idea that she was simply talking to a friend?—Yes.

1103. You were applying your mind to your work, were not you?—Yes.

1104. Is it not odd that you did not apply your mind to such purpose as to recollect the very conversation with Keeble that had put you on the track of the lady in question?—Yes, Sir; I see that it is now.

1105. You say that you never had seen Mrs. X before?—No.

1106. The cardboard box was rather a large one, was it not?—Yes, Sir; it was about 20 or 24 inches long and 12 inches wide.

1107. Is it a sort of box that a lady of the town would carry about with her, do you think, in order to delude the police?—It did not appear, to my mind, then, Sir.

1108. You did not think so?—No, I did not.

1109. We have been told, and from general knowledge we may pretty well guess, that prostitutes do carry things as a kind of blind?—Yes.

1110. You well know that?—Yes.

1111. There are tricks of that kind?—There are.

1112. Have you ever known a cardboard box so large as this being used by way of a trick?—No, Sir, I never did.

1113. You talk of the dress being red. Did you notice it was red when you were following the lady who Keeble had talked to you about?—Yes, Sir, I did.

1114. Red dresses are very commonly worn, are not they, by prostitutes and gay women, whether they are prostitutes or not?—Yes.

1115. The redness of the dress, therefore, is not, in your experience, a very good means of identification?—No, not alone.

1116. What kind of a hat had Mrs. X on on that night?—She had a round hat on—light.

1117. Apart from what you saw of her stopping a man, apparently a stranger, was there anything in her dress or her behaviour that struck you as loud and unladylike?—No.

1118. You would not describe her dress as loud and unladylike?—No, not unladylike.

1119. There seems to be no doubt at all in your mind that it was Mrs. X who you saw stop this man; and in your mind there is no doubt that it was Mrs. ——, the one who was arrested?—No doubt whatever.

1120. Did you see her actually arrested?—No, Sir, I did not.

1121. Then it is possible that the woman in the red dress who stopped the man near Hills Place, and walked with him, may not have been Mrs. X?—Oh, it was Mrs. X.

1122. Because of the cardboard box?—Yes.

1123. Not because of the red dress?—No—the cardboard box and the dress.

1124. But you did not see her arrested?—No, Sir.

1125. You think there can be no mistake about the matter?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I do not know that the witness quite follows your word "arrest." The actual arrest and being in custody are two different things, in his mind.

(Chairman.) He saw P.C. Cole bringing the lady back, and I am not asking him any question about that.

(Witness.) I quite follow you, Sir.

1126. (Chairman.) The learned counsel very properly intervenes. I was not asking whether you saw Mrs. X in custody of P.C. Cole, because there is no doubt about that fact?—None whatever.

1127. But you saw the lady in the red dress and the cardboard box having a conversation with a man who you thought was a stranger?—Yes.

1128. They parted, and she went on?—Yes.

1129. Then the next you see of her after that is with the red dress and the cardboard box in the custody of P.C. Cole?—That is so, Sir.

1130. What I was putting to you was that if you did not see the arrest it is possible—I do not say it was probable, but it is possible—that the lady who stopped this man and had the conversation in your presence was not Mrs. X at all?—It is improbable.

1131. Because you are certain she had a cardboard box when she stopped the man and had the conversation with him?—Yes.

1132. I am not putting these questions idly to you because you were not in court the other day when Mrs. X was examined, and she does not admit that she walked past the Tube station—or, if she did, it was only a few paces—and she absolutely denies that she had any conversation with the man beyond the Tube station. So that you see I am not asking you these questions idly. You are sure that you actually recollect that the lady with the red dress who you are talking of had a cardboard box with her?—Yes.

1133. Now, again, knowing there was going to be a question, and you being an experienced officer, and knowing the conflict of evidence that takes place in police courts, how came it that you did not mention anything about the cardboard box in your report? It is a very noticeable thing, a large cardboard box. The red dress you told me is not a good means of identification?—No, Sir. When I was instructed by Inspector McKay to make out a report, I was only asked to give a report of what I saw.

Sergeant P. Shepherd. 7 Dec. 1906.

1134. A report of what you saw?—Yes.

1135. I have no doubt Inspector McKay used words to that effect. Inspector McKay would not, of course, direct you as to what you were to say?—No.

1136. But you have told me that you were rather surprised at having to make the report, and that you knew, therefore, or inferred, that there was some question as to the propriety of P.C. Cole's action in arresting this woman at all?—Yes.

1137. Inspector McKay may have said, "Say what you saw," but you were careful also to put down what was an important fact—that the gentleman who you saw her stopping did not appear to be acquainted with her, as he walked two or three paces? That is not a statement simply of what you saw. In a sense it is, but you are endeavouring to describe the character of the acts you saw?—Yes.

1138. You quite follow what is in my mind?—Yes.

1139. I am a little puzzled at so experienced an officer as you omitting anything like a description of the lady with a cardboard box, and so on. However, you have said what you have to say?—Yes, Sir.

1140. (Mr. Dickinson.) I want to ask you a question about that report. You see the report is dated the 22nd?—Yes.

1141. This report, as you already know, is dated 22nd March?—Yes.

1142. You have told the learned Chairman that you are certain you made the report on the day on which the case occurred at the police court?—Yes, I believe it was.

1143. That was not the 22nd?—That was the 21st.

1144. Just try and charge your memory as to this. At what time of the day did you make this report?—About 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

1145. Where did you make it?—In the police station.

1146. When you made it was Inspector McKay there?—Yes, I believe he was; he was in the office.

1147. He signed this report?—Yes.

1148. So I presume he read this report?—Yes.

1149. After you had written it?—Yes.

1150. Then you would say that your dating it the 22nd was a mistake?—It must have been.

1151. You say, "With reference to report called for re Mrs. X charged on the 21st instant, I beg to report that at 10.35 on the 21st instant I was proceeding east along Oxford Street." There, again, you have got it wrong?—Yes, I have.

1152. You are quite certain it must have been a mistake in calling it the 21st?—Yes, it must have been a mistake.

1153. Now, I want to ask you, when you wrote, "With reference to report called for re Mrs. X charged on the 21st instant with insulting behaviour," where did you get that information from?—From Sub-Divisional Inspector McKay.

1154. Had he said that she was charged with insulting behaviour?—Yes.

1155. What had he said to you?—He told me to make out a report if what I saw respecting Mrs. X that P.C. Cole had charged with insulting behaviour.

1156. Is that a usual phrase, "charged with insulting behaviour"?—Yes, it is quite common.

1157. Common in what cases?—We have people charged with insulting behaviour.

1158. In what cases?—Cases where women have been charged with insulting behaviour.

1159. Is soliciting in the streets termed "insulting behaviour"?—It is insulting behaviour.

1160. Is it termed so? Is it called so in the charge?—Yes; not in all cases, but in cases where the constable or the officer arresting does not know the woman as a prostitute.

1161. Is that a recognised system?—Yes.

Sergeant P. Shepherd. 7 Dec. 1906.

1162. That is supposed to be the proper course?—Yes.

1163. That when the constable does not know her to be a prostitute, he charges her with insulting behaviour?—That is to say, provided he has evidence to substantiate that charge.

1164. Exactly. But what evidence of insulting behaviour is necessary to substantiate the charge?—Stopping men in the street, catching hold of them by the arm, and stopping them, after having been previously cautioned.

1165. No doubt you know that the section under which you proceed is with reference to "using abusive or insulting words or behaviour with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, or whereby a breach of the peace may be occasioned"?—Yes, that is so.

1166. Merely soliciting a man does not provoke a breach of the peace?—It may give rise to it.

1167. Do I understand that it is a common practice to proceed under that section in ordinary cases of solicitation when a woman is not known to be a prostitute?—Yes.

1168. Has that been a practice of long duration, or only recently?—Only recently.

1169. Since when?—I could not give you the date.

1170. Has it been the practice during the course of the last year?—Yes.

1171. Or further back?—Yes, further back.

1172. Have there been many cases of that kind in this division, and at this Police Court?—Yes.

1173. Cases of women who have been charged with solicitation where the charge has been under this section?—Yes.

1174. And in their cases evidence is given of solicitation?—Much about the same; but where the woman is not known to the constable as a prostitute.

1175. If a woman is known to the constable as being a prostitute——.—She is charged.

1176. Knowing her to be a prostitute, I suppose, means that she has been previously convicted?—Yes, in cases; but where a woman has been known to walk about the streets, although she has not been known to be convicted, yet the constable may know her to be a prostitute.

1177. I want you just to tell me again what happened on this evening. Here is a map. That is Oxford Circus, and there is Oxford Street. That being the case, where did you come from first?—Along the east side of Regent Street.

1178. Where did you see Keeble?—Here.

1179. You came up on the east side of Regent Street to Oxford Circus, and Keeble walked across from the west side to you?—Yes.

1180. Then he used the words you have said?—Yes.

1181. You walked round that corner into Oxford Street?—Yes.

1182. When did you first see the woman?—She was hovering round the Tube Station.

1183. She was standing in front of the Tube Station?—Yes.

1184. You saw her?—Yes.

1185. You are perfectly certain?—Yes.

1186. What happened next?—She went along towards here.

1187. The Tube Station being at Argyll Street. There is the Tube Station on the east side of Argyll Street, and in front of the Tube Station you say you saw her hovering about?—Yes.

1188. With her box?—Yes.

1189. You have no hesitation in saying that?—None whatever.

1190. After that tell me exactly where she went?—She went along here to Hills Place.

1191. What happened there?—She stopped the man here.

1192. She stopped the man whom we have called "No. 2" at Hills Place?—Yes.

1193. What happened?—She walked along.

1194. You being where at this time?—About here.

1195. Then she walked along, and you followed her?—Yes.

1196. About what distance were you behind her?—About 20 yards.

1197. She came along as far as Hills Place, and there she met this man who passed her?—Passed her a few steps, and then came back, and they walked eastward.

1198. They walked eastward as far as where?—As far as Berwick Street.

1199. What happened next?—Cole came up between Poland Street and Berwick Street.

1200. Where did Cole come from?—He came up on the other side of the road. He came from behind me. He touched me on the arm between Poland Street and Berwick Street.

1201. He went in front of you?—Yes, he passed me.

1202. You followed?—I remained at Berwick Street.

1203. What did you remain there for?—The man and woman parted, the woman went further on, and Cole followed on. I remained at Berwick Street.

1204. How far were you behind the woman when she parted from this man?—About 20 yards. I kept behind her.

1205. You and Cole were then together?—We were together when they parted.

1206. Cole walked after her?—Yes. Cole left me and went on behind her after she had parted from this man.

1207. When the man parted from her did she turn round?—No; she went right on towards Wardour Street.

1208. She did not see you?—Not to my knowledge.

1209. Then what did you do?—I remained at Berwick Street.

1210. Why did you stop at Berwick Street?—I was going down through Soho, and I was going through Berwick Street. I generally used to go through there.

1211-12. But you stopped?—I stopped.

1213. For what purpose?—For no purpose whatever, but merely to go down Berwick Street. I was going down Berwick Street.

1214. What was the next thing you saw?—I saw Cole come back with the woman in custody.

1215. And pass you?—And pass me.

1216. Where?—At Berwick Street.

1217. How long did you have to wait there?—I was not there more than three minutes, or three and a half minutes. I was not there five minutes.

1218. I suppose Cole saw you when he passed?—Yes, he saw me.

1219. What do you say this woman was doing at the Tube Station?—She was hovering, to my mind, wondering which way to go.

1220. Did you see Cole anywhere there?—No.

1221. You never saw Cole until he crossed the road?—No. Between Poland Street and Berwick Street was where I saw Cole first.

1222. Do you know what Cole's account of this was. Of course you have not heard his account in this room, but do you know what his account was?—No.

1223. Was Oxford Street fairly empty at that time?—No; there were a good many people going down there then.

1224. I suppose as you were going after the woman you walked at the ordinary rate?—I kept a certain distance behind.

1225. You did not see her before she got to the Tube Station?—No.

1226. But you know she had gone out of Oxford Circus towards the Tube Station —Yes.

1227. I think you said that Keeble told you "A woman has gone along Oxford Street"?—Yes.

1228. He must have meant, I suppose, "had just gone along"?—Yes.

1229. By his saying that to you would you take him to mean that if you walked after her you could catch her?—Yes, I could have done so. Only two or three minutes had elapsed from her going to my speaking to Keeble.

1230. It is only a minute or two minutes walk to the Tube Station?—About that.

1231. Had you ever heard of this woman before that evening?—No, I never had.

1232. What is your relationship to Cole as regards your position in the force. Are you in command of him?—Yes.

1233. How is the force organised there. I suppose you were responsible for all the police on that beat in that particular section at the time of the working of it?—Each section has their respective sergeants, and I am supernumerary. My duty was to go round the whole of the sub-division, and to call in at the station and see if there were any inquiries to be done during the night, and I should have to do it.

1234. Was that only on that night, or would you have been in that position during the previous fortnight?—Not the whole month. I may have had to go and do station duty.

1235. Were you the immediate superior officer to Cole?—No, not the immediate superior officer to Cole. He had a sergeant over him.

1236. Who would be the sergeant?—Sergeant Mead.

1237. In the ordinary course of duty he would not have spoken to you about prostitutes in the street?—No, I do not suppose he would.

1238. Did you wait at that spot because you knew he was going to take this woman up?—No, I did not.

1239. I want to know why you waited?—We generally wait at the corner of a street and look back, or look one way or another.

1240. Then his statement to you that he was going to arrest this woman had no effect on your mind?—Not in one way, as I consider P.C. Cole a very responsible and reliable officer.

1241. Cole came up to you and said: "I have cautioned her, and I am going to take her into custody." When you said you had seen her before, and he said: "I have cautioned her," what did you take it he was referring to?—I understood he had cautioned her as to her action in the streets by stopping men.

1242. To whom did you think he referred then when he said: "I have cautioned her"?—Mrs. X.

1243-44. Why her?—He was following her, and I was following her then.

(Chairman.) What Cole said to Sergeant Shepherd was: "Have you seen that woman stop anyone?"

1245. (Mr. Dickinson.) Is that what Cole told you?—Yes.

1246. Was that the first thing he said?—Yes.

1247. (Chairman.) That is exactly what Sergeant Shepherd said. Cole said: "Have you seen that woman stop anyone? I have already cautioned her. I am going to take her into custody. I have seen her before." Then Sergeant Shepherd said some words which I did not take down—"Take care," or some words to that effect?—Yes, I did so. Sergeant P. Shepherd. 7 Dec. 1906.

1248. (Mr. Dickinson.) When he asked you whether you had seen the woman stop anyone did you tell him you had?—I did. I told him I had seen her stop a man at Hills Place.

1249. When you saw them going was she going quite quietly with him?—Yes.

1250. (Chairman.) Are you quite certain you told me everything that Keeble said to you?—Yes, I am.

1251. What I took down was this: "All right, Sergeant." I suppose that is a kind of general form of salutation?—Yes.

1252. "A woman has gone along Oxford Street eastward which I have seen several nights at the Circus speaking to gentlemen, and I should like you to see her to see whether you know her"?—Yes.

1253. Was that all?—That was all. He told me about her being dressed.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Dressed in red, and carrying a cardboard box in her hand.

1254. (Chairman.) You said you were following a lady in red when Cole came to you?—Yes.

1255. Why did you go on with Cole?—I was not going as far as Wardour Street, I was not going down Wardour Street, and Cole had already passed me.

1256. You were not going as far as Wardour Street?—No.

1257. Then I understand if you had not met Cole you would not have gone on after the lady in red with the cardboard box?—Probably not after I saw her leave the man.

1258. Then so far as your observation went she had been guilty of no insulting behaviour?—No, not then. I should not have cautioned her that night. Had I have seen her on a subsequent night I should have done so, and I should have kept her under observation and cautioned her.

1259. You had not cautioned her on this night?—No.

1260. But you say that after what you saw that night if you had seen her on a succeeding night you would have cautioned her?—Yes, I would.

1261. Even although the only thing you had noticed was her stopping and having a conversation with the man and walking away with him, and this man leaving her. I do not follow that distinction. It seems to me if a man and woman stand and talk their behaviour is just as insulting as if they walked a few paces together?—Yes; but what I wish to imply is this: I would not have cautioned her that night. Had I seen her on other nights stopping men I should have cautioned her, and if she unheeded my caution, if I had seen her again, I would have taken her into custody.

P.C. Arthur Cole (528 V), recalled.

1262. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you spoke to this woman at the Tube you cautioned her there?—I did.

1263. Then I understood you to say that she walked away from you?—When I cautioned her? No, I did not say she walked away.

1264. What did she do?—When I cautioned her, and as soon as ever I spoke to her I turned my back on her, because she sort of turned round and said to me, "You mind your own business. That is my friend." Then I almost immediately walked across to the other side of Oxford Circus with my back turned to her.

1265. What did she do then?—I would not be certain what she did. I went to cross and I was between two 'buses—between the back of one 'bus and the horses' heads of another. P.C. A. Cole.

1266. And you lost sight of her?—Yes.

1267. For how long?—Three or four minutes. When I got past the 'buses—I should have to pass the 'buses before I got to Great Portland Street—I saw her again, and then, when I saw her, almost immediately she accosted this man.

1268. When did you first see Sergeant Shepherd?—When I was crossing from Oxford Street to the other side of Oxford Street, between Poland Street and Berwick Street.

P.C. Henry Keeble (91 C), sworn.

1269. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Have you been in the Metropolitan Police Force for four and a half years?—Yes.

1270. All the time in the C Division?—Yes.

1271. How long have you been doing duty in Regent Circus?—On point duty for months past. P.C. H. Keeble.

1272. How many years have you been doing that duty?—Ever since I have been a constable.

P.C. H. Keeble.

7 Dec. 1906.

1273. On March 20 of this year were you on point duty at Regent Street?—Yes.

1274. Does your duty begin at 9 p.m. until 1 a.m.?—Yes.

1275. About half past ten at night what would be your principal point duty?—To look after the people passing by.

1276. Do you know Mrs. X?—Yes.

1277. When did you see her for the first time?—During the week ending March 11.

1278. Where?—Round Oxford Circus.

1279. At what hours?—Between nine and about twelve.

1280. What have you seen her doing?—I have seen her looking in men's faces smiling. I saw her speak to two men one night, and then cross the road and get into a motor 'bus for Peckham.

1281. Do you remember how she was dressed on these occasions before March 20?—Usually in a red dress.

1282. Did you notice anything else with regard to her?—Once or twice she has been carrying a small cardboard box.

1283. On March 20 did you see her?—Yes.

1284. Where did you see her?—On the west side of Regent Street.

1285. How long was she there in your sight?—About a quarter of an hour.

1286. What was she doing?—Walking about the Circus looking into people's faces.

1287. At what hour was this?—Between ten and half past as far as I remember.

1288. After she had been under your observation for about a quarter of an hour what became of her?—She crossed the Circus towards the Tube Station.

1289. Did she get out of your sight then?—I lost sight of her about a couple of minutes.

1290. What did you do?—I saw her turn out of Regent Street to go towards the Tube Station. I saw Sergeant Shepherd coming out of Regent Street, and I crossed over to him and reported to him. I said, "A woman has been going down here wearing a red dress and carrying a cardboard box. I should like you to see if you know her."

1291. What did he do?—Crossed to the west side of the Circus.

1292. When did you next see Mrs. X after that?—At the station.

1293. At the police station?—Yes.

1294. When?—The same evening.

1295. Where at the station?—In the charge room.

1296. How did you happen to be there?—I was sent for by the Inspector.

1297. In connection with her case?—Yes.

1298. Did you tell Inspector Remfry what you had seen of her that night?—Yes.

1299. And previously?—Yes.

1300. In her hearing?—Yes.

1301. Do you remember whether she said anything?—I cannot remember now.

1302. Were you present in court the next day?—Yes.

1303. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You gave evidence at the police court?—Yes.

1304. (Mr. Cockle.) You say you first saw her during the week ending the 11th March?—Yes.

1305. You were on duty before that time there all the week?—I had been there the week previous to that.

1306. How often did you see her that week?—That week I finished at 9 o'clock at night.

1307. Was it at the beginning or at the end of the week you saw her?—I saw her three times during that week.

1308. Were you there every night?—Yes.

1309. Did you see her there every night?—I saw her three times. That is all I remember now.

1310. You say she was carrying a small cardboard box?—Yes.

1311. Can you tell us about what size it was?—On the night of the 20th she was carrying a box about that length and that width (illustrating).

1312. About 24 inches long?—I should say 2 feet by 1.

1313. A small box?—Yes.

1314. On this date she had a box about that size?—Yes.

1315. You spoke to Sergeant Shepherd?—Yes.

1316. He is not your sergeant?—He was patrolling. He is not my sergeant.

1317. Was it your duty to speak to him about this matter?—It was.

1318. How is it you mentioned the matter to him?—Because I was not positive; I wanted to know for certain. That is the reason I spoke to Sergeant Shepherd.

1319. You wanted him to inquire into the matter?—To see if he knew her.

1320. You did not see her at the Tube Station?—No, I could not see the Tube Station from where I was.

1321. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Your week begins on Monday, does it?—Yes.

1322. (Chairman.) That is what you meant by saying during the week ending the 11th March?—Yes.

1323. When was it before the 20th that you had last seen Mrs. X, or the lady with the red dress?—I think that would be about the 9th March.

1324. That was the Friday week before Wednesday, the 20th?—Yes.

1325. Had she a box with her upon that occasion?—I cannot say for certain.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Tuesday was the 20th.

1326. (Chairman.) Somebody told us that the 20th March, upon which this all took place, was a Wednesday. It was a Tuesday apparently.

1327. On the Friday you had seen Mrs. X?—Yes.

1328. The Friday week before she was brought into the station?—Yes, I will not be certain of the date—that it was on the Friday.

1329. Have you made any notes about this particular woman with the red dress and with the box?—I may have spoken to Sergeant Shepherd and P.C. Cole.

1330. Have you made any entry in your note-book?—No.

1331. How many times before the Friday, or the date as to which you are not exactly certain, had you seen her before March 20th?—Three or four times.

1332. All comparatively recent, I understand?—Yes, it was during that one week.

1333. Did you ever see her during that week get into a motor-bus?—Yes, I saw her get into a motor-bus one evening.

1334. And go on?—Yes.

1335. Did you see what became of her on any of the other evenings?—No, I did not see her go away other evenings.

1336. Although you made no note, and I do not suppose you will pledge yourself as to whether it was a Thursday or a Friday, you are certain that in the week ending March 11th you saw her three or four times?—Yes.

1337. Certain of that?—Yes.

1338. You gave evidence at the police court?—Yes.

1339. Did you say anything there about having seen her before March 20th?—Yes, I stated I had seen her there during the week ending the 11th March.

1340. Are you certain you said that?—That is the evidence to the best of my recollection now.

1341. The Clerk took down your evidence in the usual way, I suppose?—Yes.

1342. Did you not, in fact, tell the Magistrate, "I did not see her the week before last"?—No. I did not see her the week before that would be.

1343. The week before last. That would be the week ending Sunday, the 11th. I will hand you the note. Look at it, please (handing). That is what the Clerk has taken down?—I think, according to the best of my recollection, it was the week previous.

1344. You say "according to the best of my recollection," but the Clerk was there. He had no interest in making any mistake, and he is very unlikely to have made a mistake about the word "not." The words in the copy sent to us are, "I did not see her the week before last." If you bring your mind to the 20th March, which was Tuesday, the week before last was the week ending March 11?—Yes, it would be.

1345. If the Clerk took that down, how do you account for your statement here to-day that you actually told the Magistrate that you had seen her several times in the week ending March 11th?—I cannot say, I never saw her while I was on early point duty; it was the week I was on late point duty I saw her.

1346. Of course it must have been a week when you were on late duty if you saw her at the hours you mentioned.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There are two newspaper reports, one of which implies and the other states that he said what he has said now.

1347. (Chairman.) I have put it to the witness. I will leave you to deal with that in re-examination, if it is a blunder. It naturally attracted my attention. We have generally found that the notes are pretty accurate. At any rate, I have called attention to the word "not.'

1348. You say, according to your recollection, you told the Magistrate you had seen the lady in question three times in the week ending March 11th?—Yes.

1349. Were there in March a great many women about in that quarter of London soliciting?—Yes, there were.

1350. More than usual?—No, I do not say more than usual.

1351. How many women do you think you noticed in the week ending March 11th loitering about and soliciting, or appearing to solicit men?—I should think 150 a week about there every night during the four hours that I am on duty.

1352. Do you take particular notice of them, with a view of identifying them if necessary?—If I know them, and if I watch them. If I saw them committing themselves I should take them into custody.

1353. I am not suggesting that you would not do what you conceive to be your duty. The question I put to you was one slightly different. Do you make it a practice, when you are on late point duty, to notice women who are loitering about or soliciting, or who are apparently there for the purpose of soliciting, if your back is turned?—Yes, I always take notice of them.

1354. How do you mean you take notice of them?—If I saw a woman loitering about that I thought was a prostitute I should watch her.

1355. What are the points that you notice. You say there were 150 women walking this street at night. I suppose there are between the hours of 9 and 12 thousands of women who walk about in the sense of going backwards and forwards before you?—Yes.

1356. Thousands?—Yes, I dare say there would be.

1357. Hundreds, at any rate. I mean it is a great corner for 'buses, is it not?—Yes.

1358. And, like all well-known points, I dare say it is a place where people meet each other by appointment, and so on?—Yes.

1359. Then, there is the Queen's Hall, which is not very far?—Not very far.

1360. And some of the Oxford Street shops keep open pretty late?—Only shops like tobacconists.

1361. At any rate, there is a great concourse of people there every evening, is there not?—Yes.

1362. And, apart from women whom you suspect, rightly or wrongly, of being women of the town?—Yes.

1363. You told me you try to take notice, or that you do take notice of women who loiter there for the purpose of prostituting themselves. What are the points about them that you take notice of in your mind with a view of identifying them?—If I was to see a woman there, if I thought that that was what she was, and I was not certain of her, I should watch her for two or three nights to make sure.

P.C. H. Keeble.

7 Dec 1906.

1364. Yes, but how could you say that is the same woman. The identification of anybody's face is not easy unless you have very, very long opportunity of observation?—I should stand there and I should also follow the woman to the point, perhaps, where she stopped.

1365. That is, following a particular woman to see what she is doing. That gives you an opportunity of observing a particular woman?—Yes.

1366. What I am suggesting to you is that it is not always easy for a man, even if he is pretty experienced, standing at a corner, to be perfectly certain as to the identity of a particular woman?—If you saw a woman there two or three nights you would take particular notice of it.

1367. But a good many of them have one dress one night and one another night, have they not?—Yes, some of them.

1368. Does that play a large part in your mental observation of taking note of them?—It does.

1369. And, of course, the face and the appearance?—The appearance of them.

1370. Now, do you mean to say that you are absolutely certain that it was Mrs. X that you saw in the week ending March 11th?—Yes.

1371. She admits she was there and got into a motor-'bus on one occasion, if not on more occasions, about that time. Are you quite certain that you are not mistaking her for somebody else?—No, I do not think so.

1372. You are not confounding the lady who got into a motor-'bus for Peckham with a lady dressed much like her, it may be, who was loitering there for another and an improper purpose?—No.

1373. Do I understand you to say that when you were on what I call the Jay side, or the westward side of Oxford Circus, and saw Mrs. X on the evening of the 20th, she did anything improper then?—No, I did not see her do anything improper then.

1374. Not speaking to anybody that night?—No.

1375. All you had seen of her was that she crossed over the road?—Yes.

1376. That would be going to the place where the motor-'buses for Peckham would be stopping?—The motor-'buses for Peckham stop in Regent Street.

1377. On the eastward side?—Yes.

1378. That would be on the opposite side to what I call the Jay side?—Yes.

1379. On what day did you make a report upon this matter?—On the evening of the 21st.

1380. Who asked you to make a report?—Sub-Divisional Inspector McKay.

1381. What did he say when he came and asked you to do it?—He asked me what I knew about this woman, and told me to make a report.

1382. "Do you know about this woman?" Were those his words?—He asked me if I knew this Mrs. X.

1383. "This Mrs. X"?—That was the woman who was at the police court in the morning.

1384. You had been at the police court and had given evidence?—Yes.

1385. So when you said "This Mrs. X," you knew, of course, to whom he was referring?—Yes.

1386. What did you say?—I told Mr. McKay what I had seen her do.

1387. Did anything else pass between you?—He told me to make out a report of what I had seen her doing.

1388. Had you ever made a report before in a case in which the accused had been charged with solicitation or with insulting behaviour?—No.

1389. Then it struck you as unusual that you should have to make a report?—No, because I had heard other men say that they had had to make them out.

1390. You had heard other men say that they had had to make a report about this case?—No, not about this case.

1391. But about other cases?—Yes.

1392. You have given a full statement, I under-

P.C. H. Keeble.

7 Dec. 1906.

stand, of what Inspector McKay said to you? Why did you think a report was being called for?—That I could not say.

1393. You simply complied?—I complied with what Mr. McKay told me to do.

1394. Did you not wonder why you were asked?—No.

1395. Had you been at all surprised by the decision of the magistrate?—Yes, I was surprised.

1396. He had found her guilty. He discharged her under Section 16. You know what that means, do you not?—Not sufficient evidence, I believe.

1397. Did you not know, when you were asked to make a report, that the magistrate had in effect found that Mrs. X had been guilty of insulting behaviour, and that he said he would discharge her under Section 16, and not fine her or otherwise punish her?—I did not quite understand that.

1398. You thought she had been let off?—Yes.

1399. Was it because of her being let off, as you thought, that you were asked to make a report about it?—I did not know the reason of making it at all.

1400. You thought it was unnecessary?—I did at the time.

1401. Did you recollect at the time that you made your report that you had spoken to Sergeant Shepherd about the very same person?—I did think of it, but I did not think it necessary to put it into the report.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) This is the original telegram. It is 5.40 p.m. (handing.)

(Chairman.) I understand the reason one of your witnesses will give us is that there had been a comment in the newspapers on the case?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes. That is the original telegram. It is 5.40 p.m.

(Chairman.) The report before me with regard to it says the report was called for about 3 o'clock.

1402. At any rate, you were not curious about the matter at all, as I understand you?—No.

1403. You did not, in fact, put in your report anything about the conversation with Sergeant Shepherd?—No, I did not.

1404. (Mr. Dickinson.) I understand from what you say that you saw Mrs. X in the week ending March 11th?—Yes.

1405. And the following week you were not there at those hours?—No, not after 9 o'clock.

1406. Was this the first time that you saw her in this week beginning the 19th?—Yes.

1407. That was the first time?—That was the first time.

1408. So really you had only seen her twice before, and that was more than a week ago?—Three, or perhaps four, times. I would not be certain.

1409. What made you cross over the road, and go and speak to Sergeant Shepherd?—Because I was not certain of her. I did not know her to be a prostitute—not for certain.

1410. How long had she been there that evening?—I should say about a quarter of an hour.

1411. Where had she been?—Walking about on the west corner.

1412. Walking about close to you?—Yes.

1413. Where were you all that time?—Perhaps round to the south-west corner of Regent Street, Swallow Passage, and round to Jay's.

1414. How far do you walk when you are on point duty?—You are allowed to go one hundred yards, and keep your point in view.

1415. Your point being Oxford Circus?—At the corner of Regent Street—at Jay's.

1416. You had been walking a little bit down Regent Street?—Yes, just to the corner.

1417. And she had been walking about opposite Jay's?—Yes.

1418. How long do you say she had been there?—Say perhaps quarter of an hour, to the best of my recollection.

1419. Then you saw her cross over?—Yes.

1420. Then I understood you to say you lost sight of her?—I lost sight of her for perhaps a couple or three minutes. I turned the corner; there were several 'buses there, and they got across the crossing.

1421. When did you see her again?—Turning from the east side of the Circus into Oxford Street—on the opposite side of the Circus.

1422. On the south side?—On the east side of the Circus.

1423. You saw her go round the corner?—Yes.

1424. Did you see Cole?—I did not.

1425. Did you know that Cole crossed Regent Street?—I did not.

1426. Had you any other reason for speaking to Sergeant Shepherd about her than that you had seen her three times a week before that and that evening?—Nothing at all.

1427. Had you kept her in your mind at all in the meantime?—Yes, I had.

1428. Why?—Perhaps I should say to Cole, or perhaps to Sergeant Mead, "That woman in the red dress," or perhaps I might say, "That woman with the cardboard box is about here."

1429. What do you mean by "Perhaps I should say"?—Perhaps I should say if I had seen her, or they might say it to me if they had seen her.

1430. Did they say that to you?—They had said it.

1431. (Chairman.) About this lady?—Cole said to me, "I have seen that woman with the red dress to-night," or words to that effect.

1432. (Mr. Dickinson.) Can you remember when he said that to you?—He said that to me the week I was late. That would be about 11.

1433. Cole was on that particular beat on that month?—Yes.

1434. About the second time that you saw her he did speak to you?—Yes.

1435. Where was that—On the west side of the Circus that would be.

1436. Have you ever been both together when you have seen her?—I cannot say.

1437. You had only seen her three times?—That is all.

1438. Had you been on that point before that date?—One week earlier.

1439. Had you ever seen her then?—No. The week previous to that I remember finishing at 9. I had not seen her.

1440. Then what was the cause of Cole talking to you about this woman if you had only seen her three times that week?—It may be that he pointed her out to me, or I pointed her out to him.

1441. Did you point her out to him?—I cannot say whether Cole pointed her out to me, or whether I pointed her out to him.

1442. If one of you pointed her out to the other then there must have been a time when you were both together, and saw her?—I think there was one night.

1443. Where was it?—That would be at the corner of Oxford Street.

1444. Can you tell me at all which night that was?—I do not know for certain, but I fancy it was the Wednesday or the Thursday night. I cannot say for certain.

1445. That would be on the Wednesday or Thursday night in the week ending the 11th?—Yes.

1446. (Chairman.) Friday was the day which you spoke of to me as being the day of the week on which you had last seen her before the 20th?—Yes.

1447. Is the occasion which Mr. Dickinson is asking you about the same occasion when you and Cole were together and saw her?—I cannot say for certain; it is some time ago; I cannot remember.

1448. (Mr. Dickinson.) At any rate, you say there was a time when you and Cole talked about this woman?—Yes.

1449. What was it that you said about her?—I believe I asked Cole if he knew this woman.

(Chairman.) Pointing to her or what?—I cannot say whether it was Cole said it to me or I said it to him now.

1450. (Mr. Dickinson.) You said, "Do you know this woman"?—Yes.

1451. What happened then?—I cannot say what he said now. I cannot tell you the exact words. I put it to him.

1452. And you cannot say which of you it was asked about her?—No, I cannot.

1453. Had you had any conversation about her with anybody else?—Sergeant Mead had asked me if I had seen this woman.

1454. When did that happen?—That would be in the same week.

1455. When you were on duty?—Yes.

1456. Recall the circumstance. Where were you in Oxford Circus?—At Regent Street point.

1457. In the evening?—Yes, between 9 and 1.

1458. It would be between 9 and 1?—Yes.

1459. Try and remember what happened then.

(Chairman.) You are asking what happened with Sergeant Mead.

1460. (Mr. Dickinson.) Yes. He said Sergeant Mead spoke to him about the matter. Who spoke first?—I think I mentioned to Sergeant Mead earlier about seeing this woman, and one night afterwards—what night it was exactly I cannot say—he may have said to me, "Have you seen that woman with the red dress?"

1461. You having said to him before something about this woman?—Yes.

1462. Then you think he came to you and said, "Have you seen her?" What did you say? Did you tell him you had seen her?—Whether I had or not I cannot remember.

1463. You knew then which woman you were talking about?—Yes.

1464. You knew her then by sight?—Yes.

1465. You say that was Mrs. X?—Yes.

1466. Had you ever spoken to Sergeant Shepherd about her before?—No, never.

1467. I suppose you had had opportunities of speaking to him before?—No, I had not seen him before.

1468. What did you think he would do with this woman? Did you ask him to follow her?—I gave him a description of her, and asked him whether he would go and have a look at her to see if he knew her.

1469. You were wondering who she was. Is that it?—Yes.

1470. Had there been any question before as to who she was?—Not that I am aware of.

1471. Are you acquainted with most of the prostitutes who frequent that place. Do you know something about them?—I know them all that come there nightly by sight.

1472. Do you also know something about them?—I know them as prostitutes.

1473. You know they are prostitutes, apart from your having seen them in that place?—Yes.

1474. But this woman, of course, you did not know?—I did not know.

1475. What time were you sent for to the station?—About 11 o'clock.

1476. It is only a few minutes' walk, is it?—Yes.

1477. Did you know what you were sent for?—Not for the time being.

1478. Then you went to the station?—Yes.

1479. What was said to you when you got to the station?—The Sub-divisional Inspector said, "Do you know this woman?" I said, "Yes." He asked me what I knew about her, and I told him what I knew.

1480. (Chairman.) Had you ever spoken to the lady in red whom you saw three times in the week ending March 11th?—Never.

1481. You had never spoken to Mrs. X?—No.

1482. Did she strike you as foreign-looking?—No, I cannot say that she did.

1483. I think you, amongst others, said you had seen her go into a public-house or restaurant?—No, I did not say so.

1484. When she was talking to any of the men you saw her speaking to, was the lady you are thinking of, the lady that you saw, talking in an excited kind of way?—No, I cannot say that she was—in a quiet manner.

1485. Quite quietly?—Yes.

1486. She did not use her hands and arms in speaking?—No.

1487. A good many people do that, do they not, in talking in the streets; they gesticulate a good deal?—Yes, a lot of these foreign people do.

1488. Especially foreigners?—Yes.

1489. Then the lady in red that you saw three times in the week ending March 11th, whenever you saw her talking, did not strike you as behaving like a foreigner?—No.

1490. When was it that you had a conversation with Sergeant Mead?—That would be during the same week; but the exact date I cannot say.

1491. That would be before the police court proceedings?—Yes, that would be during the week ending the 11th.

1492. Was it in the street?—Yes.

1493. While he was on duty?—Yes.

1494. And while you were on duty?—Yes.

1495. And this lady in red was a novelty to the corner?—Yes.

1496. You did not know who she was?—No.

1497. And Sergeant Mead did not know who she was?—No, he did not know who she was.

1498. So that as early as the last week but one before the evening of the 20th this woman in red was the topic of discussion among the police?—Yes.

1499. None of you appear to have seen her before that week?—I had not seen her before that week.

1500. You had not heard from anybody that they had seen her before the week ending March 11th?—No.

1501. In your report in the first part you say, "I beg to report seeing her." By that, I suppose, you meant Mrs. X, the lady you had seen at the police court?—Yes.

1502. "I beg to report seeing her at Oxford Circus three nights during the week ending 11th March, 1906, between 11 and 12. One night I saw her speaking to a man in Swallow Passage, and after she left him I saw her speaking to another outside Jay's, at the corner of Regent Circus. She left him and crossed Regent Street and got on to a Peckham 'bus." That you mention in your report. You thought it worth mentioning?—Yes.

1503. I agree you are right in mentioning it; but it does not seem to me that there was any impropriety at all in what you are describing the lady as having done. You are a constable on point duty, and you see a lady talking to a man, and after she left him you saw her speak to another, outside Jay's, and then she goes and catches her 'bus?—Yes.

1504. Is there anything improper or insulting in that behaviour?—Not that night.

1505. I do not suppose you do know, but Mrs. X has admitted that she had been more than once at that corner, and had gone off in one of the motor 'buses, and had gone over Westminster Bridge. Supposing it was Mrs. X that you saw that night, does it strike you as likely to have been Mrs. X, whom you saw on the other evenings?—I know it is the same woman as I say.

1506. Why?—By her face.

1507. But you told me you had never talked to her?—I had never spoken to her.

1508. And you told me that whenever you saw her talking, she talked quietly, and did not behave like a foreigner?—Yes.

1509. Are you aware that she is a foreigner?—I was not aware of that.

1510. Not at this moment?—No.

1511. When did you first know that? You were at the police-court, were you not?—Yes.

1512. Did not you hear her talk there?—Yes, I heard her speak there.

P.C. H. Keeble.

7 Dec. 1906.

1513. Did not you see that she was a foreigner then?—I did not take any particular notice.

1514. Did you hear her talking to anybody outside at the police-court, before she had been taken in the passage?—No, I cannot say I heard her speak to anybody in the passage.

1515. On the night when you saw this lady getting into the 'bus, had she a parcel with her?—I cannot say for certain.

1516. Had the lady in red that you saw three times in the week ending March 11th a cardboard box with her on any of those occasions?—She may have carried a small parcel.

1517. Of course she may have carried a small parcel, we know that; but can you say for certain?—No, I cannot.

1518. Then before your conversation with the sergeant on March 20th, had you seen the lady doing anything which you could describe as "insulting behaviour" on any occasion?—No, I had not.

1519. The only thing mentioned in your report is the incident which you describe in this way: "I saw her speaking to a man in Swallow Passage, and after she left him I saw her speaking to another outside Jay's." And then she got into the 'bus?—Yes.

1520. Is there anything more you can recall against the conduct of the lady in red than that?—Nothing, only walking about the Circus looking into men's faces and smiling.

1521. You are assuming always that the lady in red is always the same lady in red as I understand?—Yes.

1522. Do you think that the lady you saw get into the motor 'bus with the red dress on is the lady that you saw on other occasions loitering about the Circus?—Yes.

1523. Are you quite certain about that?—Yes, I am certain.

1524. Now, why? Give any single instance that makes you absolutely certain that there may not have been two ladies in red loitering about the Circus in the week ending March 11th?—Being a stranger to me, I should take more notice of her than of any other woman.

1525. Quite; and I quite follow, from what you have said, that there had been a new arrival, so to speak, who usually dressed in red, at Oxford Circus. That I quite follow. And the police were on her track, if I might use a colloquialism, were they not?—Yes.

1526. You knew from Sergeant Mead, a little over ten days before, that she was actually cautioned, and Sergeant Mead had been speaking to you about her?—Yes.

1527. And other constables had been talking about this lady in red—is that not so?—Yes.

1528. That is common ground between you and me. What I am suggesting to you is that the lady who behaved, for aught that appears in your report, quite innocently—because your report says that she got into a motor 'bus and drove off one night in the week ending March 11—may not be the same lady as the new arrival that Sergeant Mead was thinking of. That is what I am suggesting to you?—It was the same lady that I had seen there previously.

1529. You had seen her on other nights when she did not get into a motor 'bus and go away?—Yes.

1530. Do not think I am necessarily suggesting that you are not treating us with perfect honesty, but I ask you, as being one who has to thread my way through this evidence, can you give me any point, or circumstance of identification, upon which you base your certainty as to the identity of the two people, if there be two people?—Nothing more than the dress and the dark hair.

1531. Let us take that point and analyse it a bit. All this was at night-time, was it not?—Yes.

1532. What kind of artificial light was there?—A big electric arc lamp.

1533. That was there in March, was it?—Yes.

1534. Since that light has been there I suppose there has not been actually so much solicitation there as there used to be?—That I cannot say. I have not been there, so I have not seen.

1535. Do you say it was quite light enough for you to notice whether a woman has very dark hair?—Yes, practically it is.

1536. What I mean by that is this: Could you say whether her hair is quite black and glossy, or whether it was, for instance, black or dark brown?—No, I could not say that for certain—only dark hair.

1537. Anything else besides the red dress and the dark hair?—Not that I can say now.

1538. Do you say that some of these women are in the habit of carrying a cardboard box, or some parcel, so that it may serve as a kind of blind with a view to tricking you and other constables?—Yes, they do.

1539. Can you ever remember one of that class at night time when she is on business, so to speak, carrying a cardboard box, or such a large cardboard box as Mrs. X was carrying on that night, March 20?—No, not so large.

1540. That is a very noticeable thing, is it not?—Yes.

1541. (Mr. Dickinson.) What was the weather that evening?—It was a dry night as far as I remember now.

1542. (Chairman.) You mean the night of March 20?—Yes, as far as I can remember now it was a dry night.

1543. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have here a newspaper report (it is not identified; I think it is from the "Daily Telegraph," but I will verify that) which says this: "Constable 91 C said he had seen Mrs. X in the West End on several nights." Is that correct. Is that what you did say?—Yes.

(Mr. Cockle.) I understood this constable to say that as far as he can remember the night of March 20 was a dry night?

(Chairman.) You ask him the question.

1544. (Mr. Cockle.) Are you certain about it?—I am not.

1545. You cannot swear it was not a wet night?—No.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I understand you will be able to give me particulars of all the arrests made by Cole during those two months that have been referred to?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Chairman.) Mr. Dickinson means, I think, you should distinguish between charges of solicitation under the one section and charges of insulting behaviour under the other.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Quite. I daresay you will remember that the Chief Commissioner, in giving his evidence, referred to the difficulty the police were under as to magistrates taking particular views as to under which section they should convict. Some prefer to deal with it as insulting behaviour, others prefer to deal with it under the Vagrancy Act as disorderly, and others will not convict of common soliciting to the annoyance of the public unless some member of the public attends and says that he has been annoyed. It is somewhat similar to the highly artificial construction which was put upon the Streets Act with regard to betting before there were any bye-laws.

IN CAMERA.

MRS. X's CASE—continued.

PRESENT.

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman.)
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law.)
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law.)
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Secretary.)

Mr. GRAHAM MOULD (Barrister-at-Law) appeared (in the absence of Earl Russell) on behalf of the Complainant.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have had the original note from the police court produced, and it is on the right-hand side of that book. (Producing book.) I find that instead of the "Did not see the week before last" being two parts of one imperfect sentence they are in fact two imperfect parts of two sentences. I have here a letter from Mr. Savill, the Chief Clerk of the Marlborough Street Police Court, addressed to Messrs. Wontner and Sons, which I think I ought to read in explanation of the copy which was sent to the Commission. "My attention has just been drawn to the case of Mrs. X for the first time since my note was made on 21st March last. I have no recollection of the case, so many others have intervened, but I see at the end of my note of the evidence for the prosecution two uncompleted sentences, viz., 'Did not see . . . . .' and 'The week before last. . . .' In the copy supplied to you and now shown to me I see that these two pieces of sentences have been read as running into one, and the word 'her' between the two parts has been pencilled as a suggestion. That reading is not that which I adopt. I have no doubt that I was interrupted at my desk, so that I lost the latter part of the sentence commencing 'Did not see . . . . .' and that I waved aside the interruption and proceeded to take the next answer from the witness, when the interruption, persisted in, caused me to lose the latter part of the last sentence also; and I imagine that I had no opportunity of recovering the lost words until the discharge of the defendant seemed to render it difficult (if even apparently necessary) to get the constable back in the box for the purpose. At all events my 'T' in 'The week before last' is my capital 'T,' and I have no doubt that the words are part of a new sentence. If the copy of the notes supplied to you had been referred to me my instruction to the copyist would have been to ignore the two uncompleted sentences as amounting to nothing, and that is the only interpretation of them which I think it is right to adopt. I am told that the notes were asked for and supplied in a hurry during my absence, and no doubt that also accounts for the fact that in the copy of the note supplied to you the evidence of Mr. X taken on the back of the page in my note book had been overlooked and altogether omitted. I much regret that you should have been misled by your copy, and that the interruption to my note should render my note less useful to the Commission than it would otherwise have been." 10 Dec. 1906.

(Chairman.) Mr. Mould, this interposition of Mr. Muir's arises in consequence of what took place before us, on Friday when P.C. Henry Keeble was called before us and gave us an account of incidents that had come under his notice, and which were relevant to the Inquiry. In cross-examination I put to him the question whether he had said before the magistrate, "I did not see her the week before last." If he had done so he would have been in direct conflict with the evidence which he had just given before us on Friday. He said he had no recollection of saying that before the magistrate, and on the copy that was actually shown to him it appeared he said "No, I did not see her." If I am wrong, when we get the shorthand note of the proceedings, any error of mine will become apparent. It was a very glaring contradiction, and it is in consequence of that that Mr. Muir has now read a letter from the gentleman who made the notes at Marlborough Street, and he also produces this book. The only addition is that there is a continuation on the back of the page in the clerk's handwriting relating to Mrs. X's case. No. 11 continued. Then the husband of Mrs. X is called. I am now going to read the expanded note. It is abbreviated in the actual note before me. "Defendant is my wife. Married five years. I was called to bail her at the police station, I found that she had a large box with her. She had been to London on some business. Not with her when arrested. Discharged." That is all, and that is the explanation of what Mr. Muir wished to read.

(Mr. Graham Mould.) I quite follow, Sir.

Sergeant HENRY MEAD, 27 C, sworn. Sergeant H. Mead.

1546. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you police-sergeant 27 of the C Division?—Yes.

1547. How long have you been in the police force?—Eleven years in April.

1548. And all that time have you been in the C Division?—No.

1549. How long have you been in the C Division?—Twelve months.

1550. What division were you in before that?—The A Division, and previous to that I was in the P Division.

1551. What district is the A Division?—Whitehall.

1552. During the twelvemonths that you have been in the C Division have you had experience of regulating the streets with regard to women?—Yes.

1553. Were you on night duty in March of this year?—Yes.

1554. Do you remember when you began your night duty?—The 5th March.

1555. Were you on night duty for the remainder of that month?—Yes.

1556. Did you see Mrs. X at all?—Yes, frequently.

1557. When for the first time?—I could not tell you the date, but somewhere about the second or third night when I was on night duty.

1558. That would be the 6th or 7th March?—Somewhere about that.

1559. Had you ever seen her before that month?—No.

1560. Where did you see her then?—Opposite Jay's, in Oxford Street.

1561. What was she doing?—Accosting gentlemen.

Sergeant H. Mead.

10 Dec. 1906.

1562. How was she dressed?—She was dressed in red with a white furry hat.

1563. Have you seen her carrying anything at any time?—Yes, she generally carried a square box about a foot square.

1564. What sort of box?—Cardboard.

1565. While you were on night duty did any other officer speak to you about Mrs. X?—Yes, P.C. Cole spoke to me first about her, and said: "There is a woman here accosting gentlemen over against the 'buses, sergeant." I said, "If you see her commit herself, Cole, take her into custody, but, mind you, caution her and be careful, and do not make any mistake."

1566. Did he describe the woman to you?—Yes.

1567. How did he describe her?—He described her as a woman carrying a cardboard box, and dressed in red with a white hat.

1568. Can you tell us approximately when it was that Cole first mentioned this?—I could not tell you the date, but it was the 7th or 8th March, I should say.

1569. Had you seen her up to that time?—No, that was the first time I saw her when Cole called my attention to her.

1570. The same night?—Yes.

1571. Did you see her before or after Cole had described her?—Yes, I saw her after.

1572. I want to make my question quite clear. On that night when Cole first spoke to you about her and described her, had you seen her before he described her, or did you see her for the first time after he described her?—For the first time after he described her.

1573. Where?—At Jay's, close to Swallow Passage.

1574. Besides seeing her on that night did you see her on other nights afterwards?—Yes.

1575. How often altogether?—I saw her several times during that week and the week after.

1576. At what hours?—Between 10 and 12.

1577. In what place?—Oxford Street—generally on the Swallow Passage side.

1578. That is Jay's side?—Yes.

1579. Do you remember any particular incidents with regard to her?—Yes, I saw her go up to a gentleman one night, she looked into his face, and got into conversation with him, and they walked into the Dolphin public-house together.

1580. Do you know Keeble?—Yes.

1581. Has he ever spoken to you about her?—Yes, during the same week he spoke to me about the woman following and accosting gentlemen. He gave me the same description as Cole.

1582. Is there a police-constable named Harrod, whose number is 434 C?—Yes.

1583. What duty did he take with relation to Keeble?—When Keeble was on early duty, 434 was late on the same point.

1584. Did you ever have any conversation with Harrod about this woman?—I believe I did speak to him once, but that I could not swear to now.

1585. According to your practice in that division, if you had seen her accosting men what would you have done?—I should have cautioned her, and then if she had not desisted taken her into custody.

1586. On what charge?—Insulting behaviour, being not known as a prostitute.

1587. You made a report on this matter on the 22nd March?—Yes.

1588. That was quite a short report?—Yes.

1589. Who called upon you for that report?—Sub-divisional-Inspector McKay. He called for it when I paraded at 9.30 p.m. on the 21st. I made it out on the 22nd in the morning.

1590. Did you know that Mrs. X had been charged?—Yes.

1591. And discharged?—Yes.

1592. Did you know under what section or circumstances she was discharged?—No.

1593. Did you report what you thought material?—Yes, I did not consider it necessary to detail what was said between me and the constables, and I had no material then for any evidence to give before the magistrate as he would not have taken any notice, I am sure, of my seeing her previously. She was charged with what she had done that night.

1594. Being charged with insulting behaviour only, and not with being a common prostitute?—Yes.

1595. Your view was that only what happened that night would be taken into consideration?—That is all.

1596. (Mr. Graham Mould.) There are a great number of women who frequent the Circus, are there not?—Yes.

1597. I think one of the witnesses gave the number in his evidence as about 150 or 200 nightly?—I could not say how many there may be, but it is a great number. It is impossible to count them.

1598. But a considerable number?—Yes.

1599. Until your attention was called to this lady by P.C. Cole you had not noticed her?—No, I had not.

1600. You were on duty at that point?—Yes, I had a section.

1601. And it was only after P.C. Cole spoke to you that you saw any conduct to excite your attention?—That is right.

1602. When do you fix the date that P.C. Cole first spoke to you about her?—About the 6th or 7th. I could not say for certain. I never took a note of it.

1603. About the 6th or 7th?—Somewhere about that time. I commenced night duty on the 5th, and I know it was the beginning of the week—perhaps Wednesday.

1604. And between the 6th and 7th and the 20th, the date of the arrest, you saw nothing to justify you in arresting her?—I saw her accosting gentlemen, but no one complained and no one seemed to me to be annoyed, and I did not take any action.

1605. No one seemed to you to be annoyed?—No.

1606. It would have been your duty if anybody had been annoyed for you to have cautioned or arrested her?—Yes.

1607. And, in your judgment, there was nothing calling upon you to caution or arrest her?—Not that I saw. If I had done, I should have done so.

1608. I am only asking you for what you observed. Do you remember the box that this lady was carrying?—Yes.

1609. Am I right that it was a very large box?—Not a very large box. I should say about 18 inches square.

1610. Supposing that was carried as a blind, is not that an extremely big box to carry for that purpose?—I do not think it is excessively big if a person wanted it for a blind for that purpose.

1611. I will put it to you in this way. Have you ever known a case in which a prostitute did carry a box of that size?—No, I have known them carry parcels.

1612. You have never known a case in which a prostitute carried a box of that size?—No.

1613. Have you your report? (Report handed to learned counsel.) I think you said you were called upon to make this report on the 21st March?—Yes.

1614. And your Sub-Divisional Inspector, McKay, called for it?—Yes.

1615. And you knew at that time that Mrs. X had been charged and discharged?—Yes.

1616. I may take it that it was not a very usual practice to make reports in cases of this kind?—We often are called upon to make reports in different cases. There is nothing unusual in making out a report on a case.

1617. Am I right that it would be the exception and not the rule to make a report?—You can take it in that way.

1618. That would be so?—Yes.

1619. (Mr. Whitmore.) When a prisoner has been discharged, do you mean?—Yes.

1620. (Mr. Graham Mould.) You knew, therefore, the Magistrate having discharged this woman, that the matter became one of some importance?—I did not know under what circumstances the Magistrate might have discharged her. Sometimes the Magistrates take a lenient view of a case.

1621. Did it not occur to you that the evidence that you have given here to-day and that you stated in your report, namely, that you had seen this woman during the last three weeks frequently standing near Jay's accosting men, was most material, when the point was whether she had been guilty of this disorderly behaviour?—Yes.

1622. And did not the fact that your attention had been called to her by other constables seem to you to be material?—Yes.

1623. (Chairman.) I do not know whether you have seen the charge sheet, Mr. Mould, but the charge sheet simply contains a charge of insulting behaviour, and while it does seem to me that Sergeant Mead's evidence would have been distinctly relevant to the issue whether Mrs. X was or was not a common prostitute or night walker, as he was not able to say that he had seen her on the 20th it would obviously have been irrelevant to the issue before the Magistrate. I am only suggesting that to you. The same point occurred to me, but that does seem to be an answer to it.

1624. (Mr. Graham Mould.) I am much obliged to you, Sir. I see the charge was rather narrower than I at first understood, and therefore I will drop that point. (To the witness.) But I do want to ask you, Sergeant, whether, in making this report, knowing that a question had occurred, whether these conversations with the police-constable did not strike you as material?—No, they did not strike me as material then. If I had known the case was going to take the course it has taken, I suppose I should have made a longer report.

1625. Do you ever in your reports put in conversations you have had with other officers?—I have never done so, Sir.

1626. I want to get this quite plainly from you. During the three weeks that you were on duty no one ever complained to you of having been annoyed by this woman?—No.

1627. (Chairman.) I do not gather from your evidence that you were at the police court?—No, I was not at the police court to give evidence.

1628. Then, of course, you would have no opportunity of seeing Mrs. X as Mrs. X?—I saw her as Mrs. X at the police station on the morning of the 22nd, when she was bailed out.

1629. Where were you in the police station when she was bailed out?—I went into the charge room.

1630. What for?—To get my tea bottle. I left my tea bottle on the box and I went to get it.

1631. What time was that?—About a quarter to 3 or ten minutes to 3. I could not exactly say now.

1632. It was purely accidental?—Purely accidental.

1633. Rather fortunate, was it not?—Well, I was there, Sir.

1634. You anticipated another question I was going to put to you, whether when you made your report you had seen Mrs. X as Mrs. X?—I did not know her in the street as Mrs. X.

1635. Then, you did not know her name at the police station?—No, not till afterwards. I saw her then, and I gathered the name afterwards. When I made out my report I reported her as Mrs. X, having seen her.

1636. But what I am suggesting to you is that it was very likely true that you saw a woman with a red dress and a white hat, as you say in the first instance, going into the Dolphin public-house?—Yes.

1637. It does not necessarily follow that because you saw a woman with a red dress and a white hat going into the Dolphin public-house that it was Mrs. X?—I kept observation on this woman myself, and I am positive of her.

1638. Do you agree with me it does not necessarily follow?—No.

1639. It may have been a case, for instance, of remarkable personal resemblance?—Yes.

1640. Such cases do occur?—Yes.

1641. Am I to understand that on every night that you saw this lady in red—Mrs. X you say she was—she had always then a cardboard box with her?—No.

1642. Not always?—No, not always.

1643. On the occasions when she had not the cardboard box had she any parcel or anything else with her?—No.

1644. On the night, for instance, that she went into the Dolphin public-house had she any cardboard box with her?—Yes, she had a cardboard box that night.

1645. Did you see what became of her after she went into the public-house?—No, I did not stop to see her come out.

1646. How many times had you seen a lady in red with a cardboard box during that month?—I could not tell you now how many times I saw her with a cardboard box. I saw her with the cardboard box and without it.

1647. You told the learned counsel, Mr. Mould, that you had never seen a prostitute who was convicted carrying a cardboard box?—No.

1648. Am I right in gathering from you that you did not conclude that she was a prostitute when she went into the Dolphin public-house?—No, I did not—not at that time.

1649. How long before the 20th was it that you saw the incident of the lady going into the Dolphin public-house?—That I could not say. I never made any notes.

1650. No note at all?—No.

1651. Do you not make any notes in your notebook when you are on duty there with regard to these cases?—No, I did not on that occasion or on any other.

1652. Do you agree with what has been stated to us by, at any rate, one of your colleagues in the Force that red is a very common colour to be worn by these ladies?—Yes, it is a common colour.

1653. When you told me a few minutes ago that you are positive that the lady who went into the Dolphin with a cardboard box and the lady who was walking about near Jay's in March was the same lady who you saw in the police station when you went to fetch your tea-bottle—on what do you found that positive statement?—I had seen her several times, and I had taken special notice of her.

1654. That does not carry it any further. Supposing it is suggested to you that there was more than one lady with a red dress—you are aware, of course, that Mrs. X admitted that she was there several times with a cardboard box waiting for a 'bus?—No, I have not heard of that.

1655. You did not know she admitted that?—No.

1656. Your evidence may be quite true, and yet it may be that Mrs. X is not a loose woman at all—she may have been lawfully there with her cardboard box and gone into the Dolphin, speaking to friends and waiting for the 'bus. That may be so, may it not? It is a matter of identity I am suggesting to you?—A lady would never stop and accost different gentlemen.

1657. The question is whether it is the same woman in red that you were observing?—Yes, I am sure of it.

1658. Now why? You have now taken my point. Why are you so sure?—Her features.

1659. You are sure of her features?—Yes.

1660. What was the noticeable feature?—I could not express the noticeable feature.

1661. Then it hardly helps us. It becomes simply a general impression on your mind that it was the same lady that you saw night after night. I am only putting it to you?—Yes.

1662. Did you ever talk to her?—No, I never spoke to her.

1663. Are you certain she was a foreigner, for instance?—No.

1664. You do not know whether she was a foreigner or not?—No.

1665. Do you know now whether Mrs. X is or is not a foreigner?—I saw it on the charge sheet.

1666. You saw her name on the charge sheet?—Yes.

1667. I do not know how that could come on the charge sheet. She is the wife of a British subject.

Sergeant H. Mead.

10 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Nothing about a foreigner appears on the charge sheet.

1668. (Chairman.) How do you explain your assumption?—I saw her name on the charge sheet, and that is all I know about the woman. I did not know that she was a foreigner.

1669. Then you do not know now, and you did not know when you looked at the charge sheet whether or not she was a foreigner?—No.

1670. I suppose she is a British subject, but a foreigner in the sense that she speaks other languages better than she speaks English?—Yes.

1671. You had no conversation with her at all?—I never spoke to her.

1672. And you found your evidence as to her identity upon her features?—Yes.

1673. Can you tell me any noticeable feature?—She had rather a broad face, I considered.

1674. Apply your mind to it and see if you can suggest anything that would be likely to afford you a ground for saying it was not a mere case of general resemblance, but the person was the same person?—No, I think that is all.

1675. How near were you to her at any time?—Three or four yards from her. Sometimes I was right close to her when she was amongst the people where the 'buses stopped.

1676. Your being close by the woman does not carry it very much further, does it, because we know there were at least 150 to 200 women plying their business in the month of March? It is a mere estimate, of course. You were looking after, or ought to have been looking after (I am not suggesting you did not do your duty), from 150 to 200 women who were all doing the same kind of thing?—There were a good many there. I could not give any idea of the number there are, but there are a lot of women round there.

1677. A lot of women whom you had good ground for suspecting to be prostitutes?—Yes.

1678. Take it to be so, but there are also a very large number of women who are not prostitutes at all?—Yes.

1679. This was only half-past 10. It is not a case of the small hours of the morning when, after the streets are emptier, individuals attract particular attention?—(No answer.)

1680. You never made it your business on any one of these evenings to watch this woman in red particularly?—I have stood there and watched her.

1681. We know from evidence that has been given before us that one police-constable on the 20th March made up his mind to watch her intentionally and deliberately on that evening?—Yes.

1682. Am I to understand that on any of these evenings you made a mental note, so to speak, about her, and said, "Now I will follow her up for the next five or ten minutes or a quarter of an hour"?—I never followed her up. It was a general conversation about this woman between me and Cole and Keeble.

1683. "About this woman"—that is exactly the question. That there was some conversation about a woman in red is extremely likely, and conversations about a woman variously described which I can understand. We have it, for instance, that she was a novelty on the corner?—Yes.

1684. That she, whatever she was, was a novelty. The question is, were these conversations about Mrs. X, and it is on that I want you to help us?—I feel positive it is the same woman.

1685. You have said that, and I wish to give you every opportunity of adding anything to your evidence on that. It is not the first time you have given evidence in cases of this kind, or in other cases, so I am not going to suggest various things to you, and I am not in the least endeavouring to make you deviate from the truth. I only want to give you, an expert in these matters, an ample opportunity of saying anything that will lend greater weight to your statement that it was the same woman?—(No answer.)

1686. I am just thinking of things you have omitted. I am afraid, whatever you say now will not have the same weight in my mind, but I have always thought that eyes and hair play some part in the question of identity and recognition?—Yes, but I never took much notice of the eyes and hair.

1687. Then those are barred. The only thing you have said is the broad face?—Yes, and the general features.

1688. There is the lady sitting over there?—Yes.

1689. Do you say that is the woman you saw?—Yes, that is the same lady.

1690. You mean the woman you saw in the station?—Yes.

1691. Is she the lady who went into the Dolphin?—Yes.

1692. Am I to understand that when constables talk to you, as their sergeant, about women attracting attention at this corner, you make no note at all about the matter?—It is not the rule to make a note in your pocket-book.

1693. Do you not think it would be a very good thing if you did?—You would have a good number of notes to take.

1694. But when a question of identity arises, the number of notes adds to the difficulty of any tribunal getting at the truth of the matter. I understand Cole spoke to you about this lady in red?—Yes.

1695. You yourself had seen her?—Yes.

1696. You make no note of the thing at all. It may be suggested by Mr. Mould (do not think I am necessarily suggesting it) that all these conversations between constables about a lady in red are all afterthoughts on the part of the constables. There is not a word about these conversations in your report?—No.

1697. It might be suggested, might it not, by Mr. Mould in court (not before this Commission) that it is easy for constables to invent conversations between themselves?—I do not think they invent anything in cases like this.

1698. Mr. Mould might suggest that this conversation of yourself and Cole was an afterthought?—No, it is not an afterthought.

1699. No; but if Mr. Mould suggests that, what can you point to to make the conversation more certain than your own words?—Cole would speak to me about it, and I would stop with Cole and see the woman. I stopped and saw the woman, with Cole.

1700. It is very unfortunate that you did not make a note of the fact that you did stop. That would have given additional force to your evidence, would it not?—Yes; I could have made a longer report, too.

1701. You are quite certain that Cole did speak to you about it, and not some other constable—Yes, I am sure it was Cole.

1702. (Mr. Dickinson.) When did you see her at the police-court?—I did not see her at the police-court; I saw her at the police-station.

1703. Did you at that moment know that her name was Mrs. X?—Yes; I thought it was the same woman that I had seen out in the streets. I did not know her name.

1704. Did any conversation pass about her?—Cole told me that he had locked the woman up who was carrying a cardboard box

1705. Did you see her after that?—Yes, I saw her after that.

1706. I suppose you were curious about it?—Yes.

1707. You had gone to the police-station. What for?—Being near the station, I went in for my tea-bottle.

1708. What time in the morning was that?—About a quarter or ten minutes to 3—I could not say to a few minutes.

1709. Where was she?—She was being bailed out.

1710. At that moment?—Yes.

1711. You saw her husband, too?—Yes.

1712. Was Cole there at that moment?—No.

1713. When exactly did you first know that her name was Mrs. X?—When I saw Cole the first time.

1714. She being where—in the cell?—Yes.

1715. He told you about charging her?—Yes.

1716. Did he tell you she was a married woman?—Yes.

1717. And that her husband had been sent for?—Yes.

1718. Then you waited there until she was bailed out?—I did not. I only walked into the station and out again.

1719. Then I do not quite understand it. You said Cole had gone—he was not there?—This was when she was being bailed out. She had been there some time. Cole was not there then.

1720. When had Cole told you this?—He told me this previously, in the street.

1721. You met him in the street?—Yes.

1722. When was the last time before the 20th that you had seen her?—I saw her that week; but I could not tell you the date, because I never took any notes.

1723. Tuesday was the 20th?—Yes.

1724. You cannot remember at all?—No, I cannot.

1725. You first of all saw her about the 6th?—The 6th or 7th, I could not say which.

1726. Were your duties always on that beat?—Yes, round that district.

1727. All that month your duties were round that district?—Yes.

1728. How often did you see her between the 6th and the 20th?—I saw her a good number of times, but I could not tell you how many. It would be three or four times during that week.

1729. Three or four times during each week?—Yes.

1730. That is to say, three or four times during the week from the 6th to the 13th, and then again three or four times during the week from the 13th to the 20th?—Yes.

1731. So that you saw her there almost every night?—Yes, almost nightly.

1732. What did you see her doing?—I saw her go up to gentlemen, and look at them in the face and smile, and try and get into conversation with them. The gentlemen walked away and did not complain, so I did not interfere.

1733. How often on any one night did you see her do that?—Once or twice; I could not say any more, because she would jump into a 'bus or move away into some other place.

1734. (Mr. Whitmore.) On the same night?—Yes.

1735. (Mr. Dickinson.) Supposing you had seen her once or twice on the Monday, and again once or twice on the Wednesday, and again once or twice on the Thursday or on the Friday, would not that be a case in which you could interfere?—Not necessarily so.

1736. What do you mean?—I did not take the woman to be a common prostitute, and I do not think, myself, it would have been advisable to interfere unless some person had complained. If some gentleman had complained to me of being annoyed, I should have taken action.

1737. What do you understand by a "common prostitute"—a person who has been convicted?—Yes; one that I know walks the streets nightly. You know from her general character that she is a common prostitute.

1738. You having been there for some time, and I suppose you know most of the women?—Yes.

1739. Should I be right in saying you know their names?—No, unless we have them in custody. That is the only time that you know their names. Of course, some policemen know a lot of them by having had them in custody, and being charged, and entering it in their pocket-book.

1740. That is the only class of persons that you would approach, even if you saw a woman constantly there, night after night, each week?—Yes; I should not interfere unless some gentleman complained.

1741. Have you any instructions to that effect?—Our instructions with regard to common prostitutes are that we must see some act or some offence committed.

1742. That you had seen?—Yes; but I did not know the woman was a common prostitute.

1743. What else?—You must satisfy the magistrate that she is a prostitute, or some person must complain.

1744. Between the 6th and the 20th what you had seen was sufficient to convince you that she was plying the trade of a prostitute?—Yes.

1745. You have no doubt this woman, whoever she was, was plying the trade of a prostitute?—Yes.

1746. How long in a case like that would you allow it to go on?—I should allow it to go on until somebody spoke to me about her conduct.

1747. You would allow it to go on until some private person spoke to you?—Yes. I should have to get the gentleman who complained to give me his card, if possible.

1748. Have you really got any general instructions—I do not mean written or formal instructions—that that is to be done?—No.

1749. Is that the usual habit of the police?—That is what I should think.

1750. Still, it must be a common practice?—I should always ask a gentleman, if he complained to me, to give me his card for the police court.

1751. I understand that. You say if you had seen a woman plying the trade of a prostitute night after night, and week after week, you would not caution her, and would do nothing to her until some private individual had complained to you?—If he complained I might caution her, but I should not charge her unless she was known to be a woman of immoral character.

1752. Of course, that is not what Cole did?—Cole cautioned her.

1753. Cole told us that he had made up his mind, having watched her for some time, and that he came to the same conclusion that you came to—that she was plying the trade of a prostitute, and that he would arrest her, and that that is the reason why he followed her into Oxford Street?—Yes.

1754. So far as that goes, you would not approve of that?—He followed her up and saw the offence committed. I take it a gentleman complained to him of her conduct.

1755. You said you were quite close to her at times?—Yes.

1756. Were you quite close to her when she was addressing a gentleman?—Yes.

1757. Did he speak to her at all?—He never spoke to her at all; he only told her to go away, and he did not want to have anything to do with her.

1758. Did they enter into conversation at all?—Yes.

1759. Entering into conversation is consistent with meeting a friend?—Yes; she approached a gentleman and looked up into his face to attract him, and to get into conversation.

1760. Have you ever discussed this case with any superior officer?—No.

1761. Have you never discussed it with any superior officer?—There was nothing unusual in the case. If there had been, I should have done so.

1762. Wait a moment. There is something unusual in this case. This was a woman whom you had never seen before, and you could not say that she was a common prostitute before she was taken up. Did you not discuss the question with your superior officers?—I do not think there would have been any good done by it, because he could not have done anything in the matter, or have assisted in any way. Cole was a reliable man; he is a most experienced officer, and I left it to him to act, if necessary. I told him to caution her, and be careful, and make sure that some person or gentleman was annoyed by her conduct; and I left Cole to act.

1763. You having had great experience in these matters, I should like to know what you say about this. We have heard that when young girls are first seen on the streets, attempts are made to stop them from going on the streets?—Yes.

1764. Both by private associations and by the police?—Yes.

1765. If a constable were to see a young girl in the streets, and he had any idea that she was on the streets for immoral purposes to get a living, he might caution her and advise her for her good, which is often done?—Yes.

1766. That would be all? It would be left to the individual action of the police?—Yes.

Sergeant H. Mead.

10 Dec. 1906.

1767. You do not mention it to headquarters at all?—No.

1768. Then I take it that, so far as the police are concerned, the question of arresting any woman for prostitution practically lies with the sergeant?—It does not lie with the sergeant any more than with a police-constable.

1769. But Cole himself did not like to do anything until he had mentioned it to you?—No; of course, a police-constable would mention it to his sergeant.

1770. Exactly. He did consult his sergeant?—Yes.

1771. Your view would be that in practice any consultation would not go any further than the sergeant?—I would not say that.

1772. It does not go further?—It might do. I never spoke to my superior about it.

1773. Although you must have known this was a risky case, because you said so. You said "you must be careful"?—It was consistent with my duty. I always tell a man to caution her or to advise her.

1774. If a person has been convicted under this Section for using insulting behaviour, and is again seen on the streets, would she then be charged?—She would be charged as a common prostitute.

1775. That would be the rule?—Yes.

1776. You said that the box she was carrying when you saw her was about 18 inches square?—Yes.

1777. Would that be the box?—It might be. Perhaps it was about the size of the box over there.

(Mrs. X.) It was this one; my friend gave it to me at the time I left her, and I had it at the time the man caught me. There is the name and address, and a lady will come in a minute to prove it.

1778. (Mr. Dickinson.) Are you sure that the box you saw her carrying was as large as that?—Yes, about as large as that.

1779. We have had evidence from Cole that the box she was carrying that evening was a larger box than any she had carried before?—That I could not say; it would be about the same size as that. I could not be positive about the dimensions.

1780. (Chairman.) You say the box was about 18 inches square, and Cole said it was 2ft. long. That is the box she had with her on the 20th. Cole's description is actually accurate if that is the box to which the remark applies. Everybody else says that the box which the lady carried on the days before the 20th was a much smaller box, or, at any rate, a smaller box.

1781. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I do not know whether it is quite clear. Did you see the box she had on the night of the 20th?—I could not see the size of it; I saw the top of the box.

1782. Did you see it at the station?—Yes, but I could not be positive of the dimensions of it.

1783. Are you able to form a judgment as to whether it was the same box which she had been carrying on the previous days or not?—I took it to be the same box.

1784. (Chairman.) Just think of what you have been saying to Mr. Muir. You incidentally went into the police station at a quarter to three to get a tea bottle. Do you really mean to say that you noticed the cardboard box there at all?—Yes, I saw the top of the box.

1785. You saw the top of the box?—Where these people were. I did not walk close to them; I walked to the charge-room door to get my tea bottle.

1786. The suggestion is not that the box was not there, but the suggestion is that you do not recollect it so positively as you told Mr. Muir. That is my suggestion?—I cannot recollect the box; it is so long ago.

1787. Do you really at this moment, looking back to the early morning of the 21st March, say that the image of the police station rises before your mind, and the image of the box also rises before your mind?—No, I cannot say it is clear in my mind.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Inspector Remfry is here, and we have his report, but it does not seem to me that he adds anything to it, or that there is anything in it that Mrs. X has not herself admitted. Shall I examine him?

(Chairman.) I do not think on this individual case he adds much to it. You might put it generally: "You remember Mrs. X being brought to the station, and subsequently you were asked to make a report," and put in his report.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) If you please.

Inspector JOHN REMFRY, sworn.

Inspector J. Remfry.

1788. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Your report is accurate to the best of your knowledge and belief?—To the best of my knowledge and belief.

1789. It was made on the 21st March?—It was made on the 21st March.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There is only one thing I might call attention to. You will see in the report there are the words, "I only spoke to my insurance man." Mrs. X denies that she used that word "my."

1790. (Mr. Graham Mould.) This report of yours was made in March last. Can you be sure of the exact language that was used when Mrs. X was charged?—To the best of my belief it is as in my report.

1791. I quite understand that, but may I not put it to you in this way. Did you take down the words at the time?—I did not.

1792. Therefore the words which are put in your report are what you remember to the best of your belief?—That is so.

1793. And whether the particular word "a" or "the" was used you cannot remember?—I could not say now, but to the best of my belief it was as is in my report.

1794. You did not take down the words?—I did not take down any words of it whatever.

1795. (Chairman.) Can you charge your memory and give us information on this point. Did P.C. Cole, when you asked him what the charge was, or when he began to say what the charge was without your asking him, use any general language? Did he use the words taken from the Section of the Act of Parliament, or did he simply state the facts?—To the best of my recollection now, he said: "I charge this woman with using insulting behaviour." I would not pledge myself, because I had not heard anything of this case, and I have had so many cases through my hands that I cannot remember.

1796. That I understand. Then I take it you really do not know whether he used any formal words at all, or whether he simply stated the facts of the case, and you put the charge you thought fit?—That is so.

1797. Your report reads as follows: "The police constable stated that he saw the woman stop three men by placing herself in front of, and speak to, them, which action they resented. As he had previously cautioned her for a similar thing that evening, and had seen her in Oxford Street speaking to men during the past month, he took her into custody. She was charged."?—Yes.

1798. Charged with using insulting behaviour?—Charged with using insulting behaviour.

1799. Taking the statement made by P.C. Cole to be substantially true, does it not occur to you that it ought to have been a charge of soliciting as a common prostitute?—I was not in a position to know the woman was a prostitute. I could not see from the evidence, and the police constable was unable to state to me, that the woman was a prostitute, and on that it was a difficult thing for me to charge a woman whom I did not know, and whom the police constable was unable to say was a prostitute with being a prostitute, and the best course I thought was to charge her with insulting behaviour.

1800. I quite follow that, but may I ask you, as an experienced inspector in charge of this station, where the evidence of any insulting behaviour on the part of this woman was. Where was the insulting behaviour within the Section supplied to us which would justify the charge at all?—By stopping men and placing herself in front of them, and no doubt using words to them which the police constable was unable to hear, and which the men resented by pushing her away from them.

1801. There is not a word about pushing in this report; the words are "which action they resented"?—I took that to be resenting it. That is what I should convey by resenting—by pushing her aside.

1802. I have not been supposing that these were the exact words used by the police-constable; I do not suppose he used the word "resented," did he? He might have done?—That is what I meant to convey.

1803. It is rather awkward if he did say to you, after mentioning that he saw the woman stop three men, "By placing herself in front of, and speak to, them, which action they resented." If he did so, that is speaking quite inaccurate, according to his own story, because he told us that one of the men, at any rate, turned and walked with this person for some little distance in an amicable manner, and then he seems to have bade her good-night and went off. That is not resenting her action. That is why I am putting this to you. We will take it that in substance what the police-constable told you is accurately stated in your report?—Yes.

1804. Did you consider in your mind as to what the charge ought to be?—Yes, I weighed up the facts in every way to the best of my judgment at the time, and I could see that we could not charge the woman with soliciting as a prostitute; we did not know her; and I thought the best way to deal with it was to charge her with using insulting behaviour, stopping men, which action we know was resented.

1805. You were the Inspector, and you were standing between the police-constable and the public in general. Did it not occur to you that it might be proper to refuse to take the charge?—But the evidence was too much against the woman, and she gave me no grounds to show that the evidence was false.

1806. She was not bound to say anything. You are the Inspector in the charge room. What the White Book says is that "The greatest care is to be exercised in the investigation of charges." With regard to the statement in the report I am bound to say I see very little evidence indeed of any insulting behaviour. You know the Section, do you not?—Yes.

1807. It ends with the words, "With intent to provoke a breach of the peace."?—It does.

1808. This woman's conduct does not indicate to my mind that she intended to provoke any breach of the peace?—The breach of the peace may have been committed.

1809. There is nothing in what Cole said which shows that she intended to provoke a breach of the peace. The Section goes on, "Or whereby a breach of the peace may be committed." What is there here to show to you that if she had not been arrested a breach of the peace may have been committed?—The action of the men, I take it, resenting her conduct. If they had struck the woman, as we know has been done, there would have been a breach of the peace. It is our duty to prevent such things as that, and in this case where the officer saw the woman was acting aggressively by stopping men, that is where, I take it, the insulting behaviour would have come in.

1810. Fortunately for me, at any rate, I have not to define the meaning of "insulting behaviour" here, but, without analysing the meaning of it, I should not have thought that the mere fact that a woman said "Good-night" to you or smiled at you in passing along the street would be insulting behaviour. Do you think so?—It is an action that many a man resents done in the spirit in which it is done by these women. We get many complaints of women stopping men in a similar way; and that is the only way we can deal with women whom we do not know.

1811. At any rate, we will take this report to be literally accurate as to the practice. I understand you to say that, that being so, the proper and usual thing for you to do was to take the charge under the Section as to insulting behaviour?—Yes.

1812. In cases of this kind, where the evidence does not go further than it does in this case, you would not take the charge of soliciting as a common prostitute?—No.

1813. Not as a rule, at any rate?—No, not as a rule. Without we are actually sure of our woman we should not take the charge, because it is a very bad thing to bring against any woman if we are not in a position to prove it.

1814. But when you are perfectly clear there has been repeated accosting, and there has been a caution, and yet you cannot say that she is a prostitute, you take the charge as one of insulting behaviour?—Yes.

1815. I understand that that has been passed by the Magistrate in many cases, and that there have been many convictions of that kind?—Yes.

1816. It is so at Marlborough Street Police Court?—Yes.

1817. About how many arrests, do you think, of women for accosting in the streets occurred during the year 1905?—I could not give you the number specifically.

1818. P.C. Cole told us that he had arrested between 150 and 200?—There was a large number, but I could not pledge myself as to the number. I have not gone into the numbers, but we have a great number of women charged in that way. I might say that although women have been charged with insulting behaviour, when we have got them to the police court they have been known to be prostitutes, and cases have come under my own notice. When an officer comes in perhaps he is not able to say a woman is charged with being a prostitute. We could not have a woman charged as a prostitute unless we knew that the officer could prove it.

1819. As far as the accused herself is concerned, it does not seem to me to matter very much under which Section the charge is made. It is equally disgraceful?—It is so.

1820. It seems to me that very nearly the same stigma attaches to the woman ever afterwards?—It is a serious thing.

1821. (Mr. Dickinson.) How long have you been at this police station?—I have been there about thirteen months.

1822. Have you been Inspector there thirteen months?—Yes.

1823. What number of cases do you have brought in on ordinary nights?—I may say about a dozen to fifteen. I have had as many as twenty, and I have had as few as six.

1824. Between what times?—Between, we may say, 10 o'clock at night and 6 o'clock in the morning; our busiest time may be about half-past eleven till about a quarter to two.

1825. When a case is brought in I understand it is your custom to examine the police constable a little about the particulars of it?—Yes.

1826. Am I right in this case in presuming that you asked him what had happened?—Yes.

1827. You always get an account from them yourself?—Yes.

1828. And you write out a charge?—Write out a charge on the charge sheet.

1829. And then you read it to the prisoner?—Yes.

1830. Is there any reason why you cannot put down in writing what is said both by the constable and by the prisoner?—I am afraid it would be a difficult question; it would mean having another officer there. Many times we have as many as half a dozen prisoners coming in one after another, and they are all waiting.

1831. You told us you have had from six to twenty in the course of a night?—Yes.

1832. On an ordinary occasion you would have leisure?—We have got a lot of work besides taking charges. Another thing is that the prisoners in these cases are very often in a half-muddled state, and the words which they would use we should have great difficulty in taking down. It might be practicable if we had someone there to write it down, but I should not like to pledge myself that it would be practicable very often, because we have them in a half-muddled state—drunk. Some of them are in the charge room, and some are in the witness room; and sometimes it would be a practical impossibility.

1833. You sometimes make a police constable write out a report?—Yes, if it is a serious case.

1834. (Chairman.) Following up for a moment what

Inspector J. Kemfry.

10 Dec. 1906.

you have been saying to Mr. Dickinson, it appears to me that your evidence points to the inadequacy of the police accommodation?—That is not a matter for me.

1835. Mr. Dickinson is suggesting that there should be more written down of what takes place when the charge is made. That could be easily managed, could it not, if there was, for instance, one room under the charge of one Inspector into which arrested persons were brought first, and a second room in which you, as Inspector, were sitting to take the charge, and a few minutes were allowed to elapse between each case while you were filling up the charge sheet and asking questions, and doing what the White Book points out you have to do—to exercise the greatest care in the investigation of the charge. Does it strike you that if you had more room at the police station the work could be facilitated?—The work could be facilitated. We should have greater quietness in dealing with each particular case.

1836. Is not that desirable?—It is desirable, and it would give the prisoner every benefit.

1837. (Mr Dickinson.) In this particular case I have your report before me which you wrote on the 31st. In that report you say when charged: "She replied, 'The policeman has made a mistake; I did not insult him; I only spoke to my insurance man; other men spoke to me.'" These words, which are set out in your report as being exactly what she said, are merely what you remembered she had said the day afterwards?—The day afterwards.

1838. Surely it would be very much better if you are going to make use of the words the prisoner uses to write them down at the time.

(Chairman.) I think that is provided for.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is.

1839. (Chairman.) "Any observation he makes" (that is the prisoner) "is to be noted and attended to." One of your colleagues told me he did not think the word "noted" there necessarily meant written down?—In cases of this kind I have never seen it down during the whole of my career.

1840. (Mr. Dickinson.) I want to get at what the system is. You say it is not done?—It is not the practice in cases of this kind.

1841. It is not the practice in cases of this kind to write out what the prisoner says or what the policeman says?—It is the practice in serious cases.

1842. (Chairman.) "The statement made by a prisoner when charged at the station" (I read that as being formally charged) "is to be accurately taken down at the time by the officer on duty and reported to the Magistrate who hears the case." It is perfectly general?—I have always seen that done in serious cases, but never in cases of drunkenness, or in cases of this sort.

1843. (Mr. Dickinson.) But, after all, you say it is is done in what you call serious cases?—Yes.

1844. Surely there can be no more serious case than an accusation of this kind brought against a woman by the police.

(Chairman.) I presume the Inspector is referring to misdemeanour and indictable offences.

1845. (Mr. Dickinson.) You put down in writing what her words were: "The policeman has made a mistake; I did not insult him; I only spoke to my insurance man; other men spoke to me." Are you certain she said: "Other men spoke to me"?—At the time of making the report I should say that was correct.

1846. When did you make the report—at what time in the day?—If I remember rightly it was about 7 o'clock in the evening.

1847. About 24 hours afterwards?—Not quite 24 hours.

1848. That was not all she said, was it?—No. She told me she was married, and so on, and she told me that she lived with her husband at ——.

1849. She did tell you she was married?—Yes.

1850. Did she tell you anything about her husband?—She told me her husband was a naval surveyor, and he was away at ——, and he was very often away

1851. She said he was away?—She said he was away at ——, and he was very often away.

1852. If he was away why should you telegraph?—She told me he was coming back that night.

1853. She did say that?—She said that to the best of my recollection.

1854. She told you he was coming back that night?—Yes.

(Chairman.) In fact he was back.

1855. (Mr. Dickinson.) She was clearly anxious to get hold of her husband?—She was clearly anxious because she gave me a wrong address for a start. She gave me 301a, ——.

1856. She gave you a wrong address?—Yes; she gave me a wrong number.

1857. That was a slip?—That was a slip, no doubt, I do not doubt it for one moment. After I got into conversation with her to ascertain her definite abode that was probably where I gathered more information from her as to her husband.

1858. (Chairman.) You saw the cardboard box, did you not?—Yes.

1859. That struck you, of course, as quite unusual in this class of case. We have had it from all the other witnesses that they had never seen a lady of this kind with a box like that before?—I cannot say I have seen them with a box as large as that, but in these cases they have rolls of music, papers and parcels.

1860. That is not the case, I suppose, with the most hardened practitioner?—No, I do not think it would be. I may be a prejudiced person, but it seems to me it is a case of artfulness, if I might say so.

1861. We have it, and I think one's experience justifies one in believing that these articles may often be used as blinds, or tricks, to evade the police?—That is the impression I have formed.

1862. Mrs. X has frankly admitted that she had been at this very corner rather late at night on more than one occasion with a cardboard box, and she says she was going to catch a bus. What you have recollected and put in your report as being her statement is clearly very favourable to herself, is it not. You took it as such, did you not?—Yes.

1863. "The policeman has made a mistake; I did not insult him." I gathered from her evidence that she thought she was charged with insulting the policeman, whereas, in fact, she charges the policeman with having insulted her. It is odd that your report quite confirms something that she said on Friday. When I say it is odd I do not wish to impute that your report is otherwise than what it ought to be, but it is a peculiar circumstance that those words in your report absolutely confirm the statement that she made. Then with regard to: "I only spoke to my insurance man; other men spoke to me"; that is not uncommon. If a reasonably attractive woman is standing at a corner waiting for a bus it does happen I suppose that men speak to her?—Yes; it does take place no doubt.

1864. In your experience have you not observed that men very often speak to women before the women speak to them?—That is so.

1865. And that men very often, or sometimes, at any rate, make a mistake, and speak to quite an honest woman?—Yes; and very often we have had them charged; they will not go away when they are told; but they are accosting these women themselves. We have had to deal with them.

1866. You have known cases in which men have been charged with using insulting behaviour?—Yes, stopping women and not letting them go. We have had to bring them in for that; and that is the only section under which we can charge them.

1867. That has not been stated to us before. There are cases in which men who have been accosting women have been dealt with under this very section?—Yes.

1868. (Mr. Dickinson.) Had you heard anything about this woman in red before the 20th?—No, nothing.

1869. (Chairman.) When you are taking the charges have you any complete writing materials, or desks, as a rule, in the room?—There is a desk there with the charge sheet; the other desk is in the other office where our books are; and we have all the matters that occur during the day to write up.

1870. We shall be able to have a look no doubt at such police stations as we think it necessary to have a view of?—Just so.

1871. But what do you say to my suggestion that there might be a duplication of rooms, and that all the prisoners might be taken first of all into what you now call the charge room, and that then they should be taken singly with the constable charging them, and any witnesses into another room in which an inspector charged with the actual duty of taking the charge would be sitting, and where he would be able to proceed with the charge quietly and in peace?—I think that would be a good suggestion, and it would do away with a good deal of noise and interruption which we now get with other prisoners coming in.

1872. (Mr. Dickinson.) There are cases, I suppose, in which a woman is brought in on a charge like this, and you do not take the charge?—Yes.

1873. Are there such cases now and again?—I should say yes. None have come under my own experience.

1874. (Chairman.) You have been there 13 months, which is a considerable period. Do you recollect a charge being refused?—Not of this sort.

Inspector J. Remfry.

10 Dec. 1906.

1875. (Mr. Dickinson.) Of any other sort?—Yes.

1876. What kind; drunk and disorderly?—Yes, drunk and disorderly.

1877. Can you tell me how many cases during twelve months there have been where you have refused to take the charge brought by a constable?—I could not say; I have not looked the matter up.

(Chairman.) I do not know whether it applies to all police stations, but the returns we have, at any rate, apply to some.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) To C Division.

1878. (Chairman.) To C Division, and to some other division.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose then you would have to make out a report?—Yes.

1879. A report would be called for?—Yes.

Inspector FRANCIS McKAY, sworn.

1880. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are sub-divisional inspector of the C Division?—Yes.

1881. Do you produce two returns showing the arrests made by P.C. Cole first for the period of 12 months ending 31st March, 1906, and, secondly, for the months of January, February, and March, 1906?—Yes.

1882. Have you extracted those from the charge book?—Yes.

1883. And they are correct?—Yes. I can also give you the number of charges which have been taken of this kind during the present year.

1884. (Chairman.) Whether the woman had been charged under the Solicitation Clause, or under the Insulting Behaviour Clause?—That is so.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Here is one return called: "Return giving particulars under charges (A) preferred by police; (B) preferred by private persons, and refused at police stations within the Metropolitan Police district during the years 1904 and 1905, and the six months ended 30th June, 1906." It seems to be quite general. It includes drunk and disorderly, assaults, and all other offences.

(Chairman.) What evidence does Inspector McKay give with regard to this particular case?

1885. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) There were a number of women arrested on this night, the 20th and 21st March?—Yes, there were.

1886. Will you look at the charge book, please, and tell me were there any of those disorderly women in the charge room when Mrs. X was there being charged?—No.

1887. That appears from the charge book?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I think Mrs. X afterwards gave up this point.

(Chairman.) I am only speaking from recollection, like yourself, but I think Mrs. X said there were no other women in the police station, and that the conversation with the women took place at the police court.

1888. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) There were a number of such women waiting for their cases to be heard by the Magistrate that morning?—There were.

1889. With regard to this case, did you have a conversation with Mr. X, the husband of Mrs. X, at the police court on the morning of the 21st of March?—I did.

1890. You have set out the result of that conversation in your report of the 21st March?—Yes.

1891. That is accurate?—Yes.

1892. What you say in your report is practically all you know about the case?—Yes.

1893. Is that Cole's notebook (handing)?—Yes.

1894. On the left-hand side there is Cole's entry?—Yes.

1895. Is this Keeble's book (handing)?—Yes.

1896. And is that Sergeant Shepherd's book (handing)?—Yes.

Inspector F. McKay.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There is nothing in either of those books.

(Chairman.) I will take your word for it.

1897. (Mr. Dickinson.) What are the initials put on this book of Cole's?—They are the initials of the Inspector who deals with the report.

1898. Do all these notes come before the Inspector or not?—Any reports, that is to say, the report is entered in the occurrence book. All these reports that the constables make are entered in the occurrence book, and the Inspector initials the pocket-book to show that he has done it.

1899. (Chairman.) What you mean by the "occurrence" is an accident to an individual?—Yes; or a constable being called to a public-house, or to a private house, or something of that sort, and he takes names and addresses.

1900. (Mr. Dickinson.) From this return of some women who had been arrested by Police-constable Cole, I see that out of 109 cases there were 19 for drunkenness. I suppose they would be prostitutes?—They might be prostitutes, but not charged for that.

1901. Eighty-eight were charged with being prostitutes and 2 under the section with regard to insulting behaviour?—Yes.

1902. I understood Police-constable Cole to tell me that it was the usual thing to charge them under the insulting behaviour section?—Yes; he is perfectly right. He has not himself charged many with insulting behaviour. I do not think there is another man in the Metropolitan Police Force who has more experience of dealing with prostitutes than Cole. He has had facilities for knowing prostitutes more than any other man, his duties have been such, and where another man would not know a prostitute he would, so that when he knew they were prostitutes he would not charge them with insulting behaviour.

1903. Do you mean that he was entrusted with that duty?—Yes. If I wanted a man to deal with prostitutes I should certainly select him, because he knows them so well.

1904. He knows them so well from having served in that district?—Yes, and his duties have been such; he has been employed to keep observation on disorderly houses and brothels, and he has had opportunities for getting acquainted with them more than any other men who have not been employed on that duty.

1905. I suppose they know him?—Yes, well.

1906. Therefore they can very easily avoid him?—And they do, I am sure.

1907. (Chairman.) A new woman would not know him?—A stranger would not. A great number of these prostitutes soon come to know a constable, and they avoid him.

1908. Cole is not now in the C Division?—No, not now.

Inspector F. McKay.

10 Dec. 1906.

1909. When was he moved?—About the middle of October last.

1910. Why was that?—For the benefit of his wife's health. His wife was suffering from insomnia, and the doctor ordered his removal.

1911. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose what you have said is the reason why he appears to arrest more prostitutes than almost any other constable?—I have a Return here respecting the number of people who have been charged this year with insulting behaviour, if you would like to look at it. Since the 1st January, 1906, 578 were charged under the Vagrancy Act, Section 3, of 5th George IV., and 128 people were charged under Sub-section 13 of 2 and 3 Victoria.

1912. Has that been rather a recent alteration?—Yes, that is to say, it is somewhat recent for this reason: We had a great amount of difficulty in dealing with complaints. I think a little over two years ago there were a number of complaints, coming from gentlemen going home from their clubs in the evening, about women soliciting them in the street, and the question was brought before the police by myself, and they told me that they did not know these women to be prostitutes; they had seen them walking about there, but they did not know them to be prostitutes. They could not prove they were such and the Magistrate refused to convict them unless they did so. Then they fell back on the present section.

1913. When was that?—I think about 2½ or 2 years ago.

1914. With the knowledge of the Magistrate?—Yes, with the knowledge and sanction of the Magistrate. I pointed that out to the Magistrate's Clerk at the time, and he thought it would be a very good thing to rid the streets of these people. There are a great number of women, I know, who are not prostitutes, and I have gone up myself in plain clothes, because I knew it was dangerous to charge them with being common prostitutes. We have found this Act to be of great service, and I am glad to say a number of women—in fact, I believe more than three-quarters of them—we do not see now; they have left the streets; they saw the folly of it. I heard a question asked of Inspector Remfry about the seriousness of the charge. I would not look at a charge under Sub-section 13 with the same seriousness that I would look at a charge under Section 3 of the Vagrancy Act. I think it is more flagrant than under the Police Act, and the penalty is much more severe. With regard to a number of these cases of insulting behaviour, the Magistrate discharges them under Section 16 of the Act of 1879; that is, the Summary Jurisdiction Act, and I am glad to say it has been very useful in that way, because these women have gone back to their employment, or have left off coming to the streets. A great number of them have been in employment.

1915. The evidence that the Magistrate wants is evidence that a woman has spoken to a man?—That she has accosted men. I mean to say after being cautioned. That must be proved.

1916. (Chairman.) You are rather suggesting that some of the women who accost men in the street are women who are employed by day in respectable occupations?—Yes; I know a great number of them. I think it would not be fair, and I think it would be entirely wrong of us to charge them with being common prostitutes. We have the evil of solicitation in the streets, which is undoubtedly an annoyance, to get over. Gentlemen ask us to keep order in the streets, and we try our best at times; but sometimes we have a difficulty in doing it which private persons do not realise.

(Mr. Graham Mould.) Would you allow me to put a few questions to the witness?

(Chairman.) Certainly.

1917. (Mr. Graham Mould.) In your report you say that Mrs. X made no complaint against the police?—That is so—not to me.

1918. Just think a moment. Was not her whole attitude that of an honest woman charged with a very atrocious offence?—If you ask my opinion, my opinion is, no. Her attitude was certainly that of a person who tried to conceal her actions from her own husband.

1919. You say she made no complaint against the police?—That is quite correct. I had a conversation with her at the back of the Court after she was removed from the dock, when she fainted. She then explained to me how she came to faint on seeing her husband in Court, and the difficulty she had in reconciling him.

1920. (Mr. Dickinson.) Her husband came with her to the Court?—Yes.

1921. How could she say that?—I do not know. That is what she told me at the back of the Court—when she came to the Court she saw her husband standing there, and the sight of him overcame her, and she fainted. They came to the Court together, but she had to surrender to her bail. She came in by a different entrance; he was standing in the body of the Court.

1922. But she had been home?—Yes, but she came back in the morning.

1923. I do not understand how seeing her husband in Court could surprise her?—I do not know.

1924. (Mr. Graham Mould.) Your opinion, then, was this—that her sole object was to conceal it from her husband?—No; she could not possibly do that, because her husband knew.

1925. If she made no complaint against the police she was admitting the justice of the charge made against her—if she acquiesced in it? Is that your view?—No, I do not say that; I do not go so far as that.

1926. You do not go so far as to say that she acquiesced in the justice of the charge made against her?—No, she certainly did not do that. She did not plead guilty.

1927. I am not suggesting that she pleaded guilty; but did she tacitly, or covertly, acquiesce in the justice of the charge made against her?—No, she did not.

1928. I put to you that her whole attitude from beginning to end was one of complaint?

(Chairman.) That is quite consistent. This is a police report, made by you to Superintendent Mann. It is a report made to a superior officer. I understand him when he says Mrs. X made no complaint against the police to mean she made no complaint against the policeman of harsh treatment or brutality in effecting what he conceived to be his duty?

(Mr. Graham Mould.) I am obliged.

(Chairman.) There is a distinction. She had maintained at the station and in Court that she was an innocent woman, and that the policeman had made a mistake; but, as a matter of fact, on Friday she told us that she did complain of Cole's action, and that he had himself come up and insulted her. (To the Witness.) When you say that she made no complaint against the police, I suppose that means neither in your hearing nor at the police court?

(The Witness.) That is so.

(Chairman.) She did say before us that at the police station she complained of Cole having commenced the conversation with her, and that she repelled his advances?

(Mr. Graham Mould.) If you please.

(Chairman.) She does not appear to have repeated that at the police court, I am bound to say, from the notes of the evidence.

(The Witness.) That was so stated at the police court, because I was present.

1929. (Mr. Graham Mould.) Is not Oxford Circus the dividing line between Vine Street Police Station and Marlborough Street Police Station?—No.

1930. Where is the dividing line there?—The dividing line is well down Regent Street, towards Piccadilly Circus.

1931. Is there any dividing line at Oxford Circus?—No; my division takes me from Park Lane to High Street, Bloomsbury.

1932. Would all the officers on duty in Oxford Circus be attached to the same police station?—Not on the other side of the road. The officers on the north side of Oxford Street would not be attached to Marlborough Street.

1933. Was it the police-constable's duty to cross, as I understand he did cross, the Circus to make inquiries?—To cross to a sergeant?

1934. Yes?—Yes, distinctly.

1935. That would be part of his ordinary duty?—Yes.

Inspector JOHN REMFRY, recalled.

Inspector J. Remfry.
10 Dec. 1906.

1936. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Did Mrs. X make any complaint in your hearing of the behaviour of Police-constable Cole towards her?—No. To the best of my recollection it is the first I have heard of it.

1937. (Chairman.) You did tell us that she said a good deal more than you stated in your report —Yes, but not in the nature of a complaint against the officer.

(Chairman.) Now, Mr. Mould, if you like to ask any question on that point you can do it.

1938. (Mr. Graham Mould.) This lady is a very talkative lady, is she not?—Yes.

1939. She speaks somewhat rapidly and says a good deal?—She does speak rapidly.

1940. I think you said so before, but you do not suggest that all she said is what you have put down here—"The policeman has made a mistake; I did not insult him; I only spoke to my insurance man—the other men spoke to me"?—That was after I read the charge over to her. I had more of a conversation with her after she was in the cell, when she gave me a wrong address, and when she furnished me with particulars of her husband.

1941. Did she not in the course of that complain of the conduct of Police-constable Cole?—To the best of my recollection no; not at any time did she complain of his conduct.

1942. You would hardly like to pledge yourself that she did not do so. It is a long time ago?—It is a long time ago, Sir, but to the best of my recollection there was no complaint of the officer's conduct.

1943. (Chairman.) That is ambiguous, and does not carry the thing any further. The suggestion that she made to us on Friday was that Police-constable Cole, when she was standing at the corner, waiting for her motor-'bus, came up to her and chucked her under the chin, and used some words that I do not exactly remember now, but there was this suggestion, that she did not know he was accusing her of any offence, but that she refused his advances?—It is the first time I have heard of that complaint against the officer. If it had been so, I should have attended the court myself, and I should have made a note of such a thing as that.

1944. (Mr. Graham Mould.) But that being the conversation with the prisoner, would it in your judgment have been your duty to make a report of such a conversation?—Certainly, I should have wanted to know from the police constable what had happened if such a complaint had been made about him.

1945. In the case of a woman who had never been charged at a police court before, is it unlikely she would lose her head on that occasion?—No, I do not think that she would.

1946. Do you get prisoners, especially people who are not accustomed to be in police courts, who forget the most material things?—No, I cannot say that I do.

1947. (Chairman.) Was she crying, according to your recollection?—I do not think so.

1948. Was she gesticulating, talking volubly and talking fast?—She was talking, but there was nothing very material as far as my recollection goes as to things.

(Mr. Graham Mould.) I do not think I can carry it any further, Sir.

1949. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Did she say anything at all to this effect—I am reading my friend, Mr. Bankes's note—"The police-constable said with a smile, 'Hullo, good lady.' I said, 'He only asked me to go in a cab.' He said, 'Come with me.' The police-constable asked me to give him my address. He"—that is, the police-constable—"touched me on my chin. He said, 'Have you got a baby?' I said, No. The police-constable said, 'Husband is no good.' I said, 'How do you know?' I said, 'My husband is an Englishman.' I said 'You rascal, leave me alone.' He said nothing. I had never seen the policeman before. He placed his hand on me and took me in charge. He told me he arrested me. 'Hullo, good girl, what are you doing here?' I said, 'I am not a girl; I am a married lady.' He asked me how long I had been married, and he said, 'Your husband no good. You have no baby.' He said, 'Come with me if you be good girl.' I said, 'I have a letter from my husband.' He said, 'Not kind person.' He said, 'Inside, allez vous en.' I said, 'You are dirty mannered.'" That is the whole of it with regard to the insulting behaviour of the constable. Did she make any complaint of that kind at all at the police station of the constable having said her husband was no good and asking her whether she had a baby?—No, Sir, to the best of my recollection there was never a word said to me of that.

1950. Would you have recollected such a conversation?—I should have.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is all the evidence I have here to-day, Sir. I still have to consider the question of giving further evidence.

(Chairman.) Very well.

(Mr. Graham Mould.) I am instructed to say, Sir, that some of the friends of this lady can come here and speak as to her character if you think it would be desirable that they should do so.

(Chairman.) I think so, undoubtedly. We are not going to say anything about what we think. We must leave it to you.

(Mr. Graham Mould.) I quite appreciate that, Sir. They are not here at this moment, but I am instructed they can be here on any adjourned sitting, and with your permission I will have them here.

(Chairman.) I do not know that we ought to make any suggestion, but at any rate, if we do make it we make it in this sense, that you will not be prejudiced in our minds if you do not adopt it. Do you follow me?

(Mr. Graham Mould.) Yes, Sir.

(Chairman.) There was one gentleman who was mentioned on Friday—I do not know his name, and it was not given, because Mrs. X could not recollect it. She said he was a person who she referred to as her insurance agent. She said he was a gentleman who she had met several times at ————, and he happened to be in a cab or was going into a cab on this night of the 20th March, just near where she was at the corner of Oxford Circus. He asked her to go home with him in a cab, and although it would have been a more direct and better way for her to go, she very properly said, "I will wait for my motor 'bus," or words to that effect, and she would not go with him. If you like to call that gentleman, for instance, some light might be thrown upon the matter, but do not take it as our suggestion. That is only in answer to what you have said.

(Mr. Graham Mould.) I understand you would not offer any objection to my calling him. I will put it in that way.

(Chairman.) Not at all.

(Mr. Graham Mould.) There is just one question I should like to put to P.C. Cole. As you are aware, I am conducting this case under some difficulty, but you have given me a great deal of indulgence. I do not know whether it would be convenient if I put the question now?

(Chairman.) What is the question?

(Mr. Graham Mould.) The question I wish to put to him would be with regard to the conversation which he had with Sergeant Shepherd. I wanted him to confirm that conversation, and then to ask him some questions upon that.

(Chairman.) Very well, you can do that.

P.C. Arthur Cole, 528 V, recalled.

P.C. A. Cole. 10 Dec. 1906.

1951. (Mr. Graham Mould.) I wish to ask you one or two questions. Do you remember (I think you gave it in evidence) a conversation you had with Sergeant Shepherd between Poland Street and Berwick Street?—Yes.

1952. I want you to tell me exactly what you said to Sergeant Shepherd on that occasion?—As far as I know, I said to him, "Have you seen this woman stop anyone?" and he said, "Yes, I saw her stop someone further up by Hills Place."

1953. Anything more?—I said, "Well, I have seen her stop several men, and I have already cautioned her, and I am going to arrest her."

1954. You had already cautioned her, and you were going to arrest her?—Yes.

1955. Am I right that you saw her at Hills Place stop somebody?—Yes.

1956. Were you near to her at that time?—I was on the other side of the road.

1957. Can you tell me how far it is from Hills Place to Wardour Street?—I should say from 200 to 250 yards.

1958. I suggest it is rather more than that—perhaps 400 yards?—It may be—I did not take much notice of it.

1959. You made up your mind at Hills Place to arrest her?—Certainly, after having cautioned her.

1960. When was the caution given?—At the Tube Station.

1961. Was she walking quickly or not?—No.

1962. Why could you not, in fact, arrest her before Wardour Street? She was not walking quickly. There are 400 yards after she committed the offence for which you had made up your mind to arrest her at Hills Place. Why did you let her go so far as Wardour Street before you arrested her?—I waited till she separated from this gentleman, because he might have been a friend of hers.

1963. The Hills Place offence is the offence upon which you had determined to arrest her?—If she separated from this gentleman.

1964. Would you have arrested her if she had not separated from this gentleman?—No, I do not think so.

1965. You do not think you would have arrested her if she had continued with this gentleman?—No.

1966. This offence at Hills Place did not imperatively call for her arrest?—She stepped in front of this gentleman at Hills Place.

1967. This is what I want to get at. Do you say that at Hills Place you had made up your mind to arrest her whatever happened?—Not if she had gone away with him, of course.

1968. It was only because the gentleman left her that you arrested her at Wardour Street?—Not because he left her, but because she stopped him.

1969. I think you charged a third offence at Wardour Street?—Yes. Before I could reach her she stopped another gentleman.

1970. You could not reach her before?—No.

1971. She was not going quickly?—No, she was not going quickly.

1972. Were you in doubt, in fact, at one place whether you ought to have arrested her for that?—No.

1973. Does that account for your slowness?—No.

(Chairman.) That is all the evidence that can be called to-day.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

Thursday, 6th December 1906.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

6 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Would you kindly allow me, Sir, to ask for your direction with reference to some of the witnesses in Harding's case. I was not here myself, but when Harding was cross-examined certain statements were put to him of tradesmen in the district. Of course, before this Commission you are not strictly bound by the rules of evidence, and I desire to know whether you would hear those witnesses if I get them here, because they are not here at the moment, and I should have to send for them. The evidence is not strictly admissible, and it is entirely a question for the Commission whether you would desire to hear it.

(Chairman.) They are witnesses as to the character of the locality and the character of Harding himself.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is so, Sir.

(Chairman.) I do not know that you need call all. We do not want too many, but we would certainly hear one or two of them.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Then we will make a selection.

(Chairman.) What you say about our not being bound by the strict rules of evidence is, of course, true. We are endeavouring as nearly as we can, having regard to the Inquiry which is entrusted to us, to adhere to those rules, but we do think that in this case the evidence of the gentlemen whose names were suggested by Mr. Muir in cross-examination would throw light, if they bear out the statements suggested, on the condition of things in this neighbourhood.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Then I shall have a selection made, and they will be sent for. Then another matter with reference to this case is this: I understand that Harding suggested that the summons was the result of a failure to identify him on another charge on the 18th September. I am also told that in cross-examination he withdrew from that. I do not know whether you are satisfied about that, because if not I have got here the reports showing exactly how the summons came to be issued, and I have got the report here of the Sub-Divisional Inspector of the 14th September, in which he states the facts, and says, "The police constable was unable to arrest Harding at the time, and I respectfully suggest that he should be summoned." That was on the 14th. Then Acting Superintendent Monk recommends the summons. In the ordinary course that has to come before the Commissioner, and it was authorised, and the summons, as you know, was issued before the incident occurred about identifying Harding.

(Chairman.) I understood that Harding did withdraw the suggestion, but I think you may well put in the police reports. 6 Dec. 1906.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Very well, Sir, I will do that.

(Mr. Dickinson.) With reference to those police reports, we have had that report before us.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Have you, Sir?

(Mr. Dickinson.) I have seen it, and I was wondering where it was. Have we got copies of all the police reports?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) In Harding's case there are no reports about the incident of the arrest. The reports have reference to his being summoned.

(Mr. Dickinson.) That is one of the reports.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) What I wanted to know was whether we have got those reports.

(Chairman.) We have a report from Inspector Wright.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The first one is dated the 14th September, and that has reference to the issuing of the summons. Then there is no other report than the 28th September, which has reference to the question of the dismissal.

(Mr. Dickinson.) That is the one signed by Wright.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) There are no other police reports in this case.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, Sir. There is one of the 23rd October, but you have got them all, whatever they are. There are only those three.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Yes, we have got that one.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Then I call your attention to that report of the 14th September, recommending the summons, and I will call now, because he desires to get away, Inspector Wensley.

(Earl Russell.) May I make an application to be furnished with copies of these reports which are being quoted from?

(Chairman.) I think Mr. Bankes ought to hand you the one that he quoted from.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly. I do not think the others bear on this point.

Inspector FREDERICK WENSLEY, sworn.

22483. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think you are Local Inspector of the H Division?—I am. Inspector F. Wensley.

22484. I think about 8 p.m. on Tuesday, the 18th September, you were informed that there were eight men detained at Commercial Street police-station on suspicion of committing various larcenies?—I was.

22485. And you went there and went into the room in which the eight men were?—I did.

22486. Were they placed there for the purpose of identification?—They were.

22487. Was Harding one of them?—He was.

22488. Do you know him?—I did know him.

22489. Did he speak to you?—He did.

22490. What did he say?—He said, "Mr. Wensley, I want you to stay here to see that I get a fair show," or words to that effect.

22491. I think you stayed in the room during the time that the people were called in to identify these men?—I did.

22492. And we know that Harding was not identified?—He was not identified.

22493. And after that did Harding speak to you?—He did.

22494. What did he say?—He said, "I am satisfied; thanks very much for stopping."

22495. Is that all that took place?—That is all that took place.

22496. In his examination-in-chief Harding suggested that you had said to him when they failed to identify him, "Well, Harding, we will have you for another offence," or words to that effect?—I said nothing of the kind.

22497. Is that absolutely untrue?—Absolutely untrue.

22498. At that time did you know anything about this assault?—No, not a word.

22499. (Earl Russell.) Did you not say something of that kind to him—that if you did not have him for that you would probably have him for something else?—No.

22500. When a Jewish man was called in, let me remind you?—No, I do not know that there was a Jewish man called in—there may have been; there were a number of persons, but I am sure I could not tell you what their persuasions were—whether they were Jewish or English.

22501. You say nothing of the kind was suggested?—Nothing whatever.

22502. No conversation about any other possible offence he might have committed?—No.

22503. Simply what you have told us?—Simply what I have told you.

22504. (Chairman.) Had you been acquainted with Harding before?—I had seen him. I knew him by repute, and I have also seen him.

22505. That is not an answer to my question. Had you known Harding before?—Yes.

22506. Personally?—Personally.

22507. Is there a good deal of larceny committed, according to your experience, in that neighbourhood of London?—There is.

22508. Larceny from vans and from the person, and so on?—There is, Sir.

22509. Of a petty kind, I gather?—Yes; and sometimes of a very serious character. I have been in this particular district for something like 17 years, and sometimes there are larcenies of a very heavy character, especially with regard to vans, and such like, and even from the person.

22510. What do you mean by larceny of a heavy character from a van?—Property to the value of something like £200 or £300 stolen at a time—a horse, van, and its contents taken away. Quite recently we had a load of tea valued at £230 taken away. I am engaged at the Sessions now with a case of a somewhat similar character, where £70 worth of property was involved.

22511. We heard in the course of the proceedings yesterday and the day before of certain gangs or cliques of boys and young men. Do you know anything about the existence of such gangs or cliques?—They do exist from time to time, and of course they are broken up as occasion arises. Observation is kept on them, and they are broken up. For instance, in the very case I have referred to—that load of tea—we arrested nine men, eight of whom were convicted, and that was a recognised gang. In the present instance, where I am now attending the Sessions, there were six prisoners in that, and four of those were recognised as a gang—all convicted men.

22512. Do the young men and boys who belong to this gang infest the streets to any extent?—To a very serious extent.

22513. Does not that strike you as rather inconsistent with their being a gang formed for the purpose of professional thievery?—The opportunities and facilities of the district that I am in give rather special facilities to it. There are very many common lodging-houses, and all that sort of thing, that these men congregate in, and more so than perhaps they would in another district. There are lodging-houses capable of holding 600 or 700 men. I should think probably altogether in the district I am now in there are 30,000 or 40,000 men living in these common lodging-houses; the majority of them are of the ne'er-do-well type, and many of them are criminals.

Inspector F. Wensley.
6 Dec. 1906.

22514. What I was suggesting to you was that if the gang was a gang of men formed with a view of committing crimes against property so as to make a kind of livelihood out of it, or to add to their scanty gains, they would rather work quietly, would they not?—They do in a sense work quietly, but still they exist in numbers, and they infest certain localities.

22515. In fact, it is very difficult to say where the hooligan ends and the thief begins?—It is in this particular district.

P.C. MICHAEL CANN (47 H R.), sworn

P.C. M. Cann.

22516. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) How long have you been in the Police Force?—22 years on the 12th May last.

22517. I think you are attached to the Commercial Road Station?—Commercial Street.

22518. I believe you are off duty now, are you not?—I am on the sick list.

22519. Is that in consequence of an assault committed on you last Saturday?—Yes.

22520. That is why you are not here in uniform?—That is why I am not here in uniform. I am under the doctor's orders.

22521. Do you remember being on duty in Bacon Street at about half-past 11 on the 12th September last?—Yes.

22522. I need not go into the details, but a window was broken, and two men were arrested, called Williams and Callaghan?—That is right.

22523. Who was the first man who was arrested of the two?—Williams was the first man.

22524. Who arrested him?—I arrested him.

22525. Were you then thrown to the ground by somebody?—I was thrown to the ground by him.

22526. Then I think Callaghan drew your truncheon while you were on the ground?—Quite right.

22527. Then there was a struggle, and you were thrown again?—There was a struggle, and I threw Williams away from me, and grasped my truncheon. I was not going to be hit on the head by him.

22528. Then somebody blew a police whistle?—Yes.

22529. Who was that?—I do not know; I could not tell you.

22530. Whose whistle was it, do you know?—It was not mine; I could not get at it.

22531. But somebody blew a whistle?—Yes.

22532. Then did P.C. Filbee come up?—Yes.

22533. Then almost immediately afterwards P C. Ashford came up?—Yes.

22534. Then who took hold of Callaghan?—I got him myself and Filbee, and we took him through Sclater Street.

22535. And who took Williams?—Another constable.

22536. And did Williams go a different way?—Yes.

22537. Now tell us what happened when you were taking Callaghan. Where was it exactly that you arrested him?—In Bacon Street.

22538. And then you proceeded to take him to the station?—Yes.

22539. Did you have to go through Brick Lane, and then into Sclater Street?—Yes; through Brick Lane, and then into Sclater Street.

22540. While you were in Sclater Street were you struck?—Yes.

22541. Where were you struck?—Just past the King's Arms, about 30 yards. I said at the police court between 20 and 30 yards past the King's Arms.

22542. Whereabouts were you struck yourself?—Here. (Pointing to the top of left ear.)

22543. Was it a serious blow?—It was a nasty blow.

22544. Were you attended by the doctor for it?—Yes; and I was on the sick list six days.

22545. Who was it struck you that blow?—Harding.

22546. Did you know Harding?—Yes.

22547. Was there a considerable crowd round you when the blow was struck?—There was a crowd round us.

22548. How far was Harding from you when you first saw him?—Close by me.

22549. In the crowd?—Yes.

22550. Did he say anything as he struck you?—Yes.

22551. What did he say?—He said, "You are not going to take him." I was facing him then like this. (Describing.) I handed my prisoner over because I was exhausted at the time, and I handed him to P.C. 207.

22552. Who is that?—Ashford.

22553. You handed him over to Ashford?—I was partially on the ground, and we were all in a struggle together. He was partially dressed. He had not got his uniform on, so he said, "All right, Tom, I will take him," and he caught hold of his arm.

22554. Was that at the time you were struck?—That was the time when I turned round, and that is the time that I was struck.

22555. You have told us what Harding said to you. Did you say anything to Harding when he struck you?—No, I never said a word. I knew him too well to say anything.

22556. After the blow was struck did you see what became of Harding?—No, I did not, because I was in the crowd.

22557. You did not see what became of him?—He ran away. He turned and ran out and dodged in the crowd, and I did not see what became of him after that.

22558. And did you then proceed to the station?—Yes, closely behind the prisoner.

22559. Next day I think Callaghan and the other man were brought up before the Magistrate?—Quite right.

22560. And you gave evidence against them?—Yes.

22561. Did the Magistrate notice the condition of your ear?—Yes.

22562. Did he make any observation about it?—Yes, he said the officer seemed dazed.

22563. You seemed dazed?—Yes.

22564. At that time had you seen the doctor about it?—Yes, I saw the doctor the same night.

22565. Are you quite sure it was Harding who struck you the blow?—I am positive.

22566. (Earl Russell.) I understand that Filbee was the constable who was actually assisting you with Callaghan?—Yes, the first time.

22567. When you were in Sclater Street?—In Bacon Street. That was the first start of it.

22568. Was he not assisting you when you were taking him through Sclater Street?—Yes, he was one of them close behind.

22569. Not actually holding the prisoner, you mean?—No, he was not actually holding the prisoner then at the time.

22570. How many constables were there altogether in Sclater Street?—There were about five or six of us then in Sclater Street.

22571. A very considerable crowd had gathered round you by then?—Yes, and a very hostile crowd.

22572. A noisy crowd?—Yes.

22573. And hostile to the police?—Yes.

22574. How were they showing their hostility?—Pushing, shoving, and all sorts of ways.

22575. Closing round you and your prisoner and pushing?—That is right.

22576. They would not keep back?—They would not keep back.

22577. Were they shouting anything to you?—Saying all sorts of things.

22578. They were shouting?—Yes.

22579. What sort of things were they shouting?—Shouting "Let them have it—let them have it—go for them." That is the only thing I can say.

22580. You mean they were inciting each other to attack you. Is that what you mean?—That is right.

22581. Did you hear any shouting at all about the way the prisoner was being treated?—No, I did not hear that.

22582. No cries of "Shame"?—No, I did not hear that.

22583. And no cries of "Don't be so rough with the man"?—No, I never heard it.

22584. You remember passing the King's Arms, I suppose?—Yes.

22585. You know it well?—Yes.

22586. Who actually had their hands on Callaghan when you passed the King's Arms? Can you tell me that?—Myself.

22587. No other constable?—And No. 173 then at the time came up.

22588. You both had hold of Callaghan at that time?—Yes, that is right.

22589. Was Callaghan still violent then?—He was.

22590. He had given a good deal of trouble to arrest in the first place?—Yes, I should think he had.

22591. There was quite a violent struggle—he threw you down twice?—Yes, that is right.

22592. You say he was still very violent when you had him in Sclater Street?—That is right.

22593. Was he struggling and twisting?—He was struggling and twisting about. I was on my knee when 207 caught hold of him. I was down on the pavement.

22594. That is the time you told us about, when you were 15 yards past the King's Arms?—32 yards 2 feet. I have measured it since. I said before the Magistrate between 20 and 30 yards.

22595. I thought you told Mr. Bankes just now it was between 15 and 20?—No, between 20 and 30.

22596. (Chairman.) What you told Mr. Bankes was 30 yards?—Between 20 and 30.

22597. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He said 30 yards, and then he said "I said to the Magistrate between 20 and 30 yards," and now he has measured it it is 32 yards 2 feet.

(Witness.) Yes, that is so.

22598. (Earl Russell.) How did you recognise the exact spot when you went to measure it?—I knew the shop and I knew the place.

22599. You knew exactly what shop it was opposite?—Yes, but I could not exactly tell the distance.

22600. What shop is it?—Fowles. There are two shops. You have it on the map.

22601. Between No. 75 and No. 77—is that right?—Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) You said you held Callaghan with No. 173. Who is No. 173?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You do not seem to know them by their names. Will No. 173 stand up?

(Witness.) That is the man.

22602. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What is your name?

(Constable.) Thomas Deller.

22603. (Earl Russell.) Was it No. 173?—Yes.

22604. You say you were that side of the street, the same side as the King's Arms?—That is right.

22605. And actually on the pavement, not in the middle of the street?—I was on the pavement just at that spot.

22606. Besides those who were holding the prisoner what other constables were there in the street?—There was 164 and 486.

(Mr. Dickinson.) What are their names?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I explain how this comes about? We only called at the police court the three constables who could identify Harding. There were a number of other constables there engaged—I do not know their names at the moment, but I will get them for you.

(Witness.) There was No. 207.

22607. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What is his name?—Ashford. Then there was James Filbee—those are the two who witnessed it.

22608. Ashford and Filbee and yourself?—Yes—who knew Harding.

22609. And the others you have mentioned?—Yes.

22610. (Mr. Dickinson.) Filbee is 164, I understand?—Yes.

22611. (Earl Russell.) Any others?—There were other officers there, who assisted me to take him to the station.

22612. I want to know the names of all the others who were in Sclater Street during this struggle?—486, P.C. Hunt; 58 H R, Thomas Newens; 193, Frank Weller.

22613. Any others?—207—you have got that one—that is Ashford.

22614. That makes how many altogether that you have given us, including yourself?—Seven.

22615. Are you looking at a note you made at the time?—At the time.

22616. That is to say when you got to the police station?—Yes.

22617. When you passed the King's Arms with your prisoner you passed on the pavement right in front of the house—is that so?—Yes, right along the front.

22618. Actually along the side of the house?—Actually along the side of the house. That is quite right.

22619. Did you notice anybody at all in the King's Arms as you went by?—I did not notice. I had too much trouble with the other one.

22620. You were able to keep on the pavement all the time—you were not forced in the street at all?—I was not forced into the street—not then.

22621. Nor your prisoner?—No.

22622. You noticed nothing about the King's Arms as you went by?—No.

22623. You could not say whether anybody was standing on the step or not?—No, I could not.

22624. I suppose this procession was going along rather slowly?—It was going rather slowly.

22625. Owing to the man struggling?—Owing to the man struggling.

22626. And the other four constables who were not helping you to hold him were keeping back the crowd, I suppose?—Keeping the crowd off.

22627. Making it possible for you to get along at all?—That is it.

22628. These other four constables were not all close round you?—They had to keep close round me because of keeping the crowd away.

22629. Fairly close, but they were dispersing the crowd and keeping it back?—That is quite correct.

22630. So that some of them might have been as much as ten yards from you at various times when they were keeping the crowd back?—They might be three or four yards.

22631. Or even a little more if they were kept back by people?—Yes.

22632. You could not say exactly where the other four constables were, I suppose?—We were in the middle together.

22633. You know they were in the middle of the crowd helping you, but you were too busy with your prisoner to know exactly where they were?—Yes.

22634. Was your prisoner shouting as well as struggling?—Yes.

22635. A good deal?—Yes.

22636. So that really there was a great deal of noise and a great deal of confusion?—That is right.

22637. You had had a severe struggle when you first arrested him?—I had.

22638. You were pretty well tired out by that time?—Yes, I was.

22639. Had any member of the crowd assaulted you before you got there?—No.

22640. Only the prisoner?—Yes, and Williams. That was the first start, and then the other one came and hit me outside that house, as I have told you.

22641. And the crowd were only pushing round you. They had not struck you?—No, they had not struck me.

P.C. M. Cann.

6 Dec. 1906.

22642. Were they throwing things?—Doing anything, bustling up against us, shoving us over, and all that sort of thing, or trying to.

22643. But not striking you?—No, they did not strike me—only that one particular man.

22644. What sort of things were they throwing?—I noticed there was a bottle thrown, but that did not hurt anybody.

22645. They were throwing hard and dangerous things as well as others?—They would have been.

22646. But were they?—No, not more than that.

22647. You mean the bottle was the only one?—Yes.

22648. There was a good deal of throwing going on in the crowd?—Yes.

22649. Tell me when you first saw Harding that night in that street?—When he hit me.

22650. After he hit you or before?—When he hit me, when he struck the blow. I was like this, facing him. (Describing.)

22651. In which direction were you facing? Towards the King's Arms or away from it?—Towards the King's Arms.

22652. How did you come to be facing the opposite way from your prisoner?—I handed the prisoner Callaghan over and I turned round to the crowd like this—(describing)—and he came up and hit me with his right hand, like that.

22653. You mean at the moment that Harding struck you you were not holding the prisoner at all?—Not at the moment he struck me. I was standing up close.

22654. You had already handed him over?—I had already handed him over.

22655. To the other constable?—To the other constable. Harding came and faced me like this, and struck me a blow.

22656. You were standing up facing towards the King's Arms in order to keep the crowd back?—I was following behind. As I told you I was exhausted and was following behind, and then I got this blow.

22657. But you being exhausted is no reason for your walking backwards. If you were following the way the prisoner was going your back would be towards the King's Arms?—Don't you understand? After I handed the prisoner over to the other constable I turned round like this, and he came up and hit me here on the left ear.

22658. But when you say you turned round you mean you faced the King's Arms?—Yes. I faced the King's Arms then.

22659. At the time you faced the King's Arms you were not walking I suppose—you were standing still?—I was going along with the lot and I got the blow. I knew who had done it.

22660. You told me you handed your prisoner over to another constable?—Yes, that is right, and immediately after in a moment it was done.

22661. But after you had handed him over—not before?—After I handed him over—not before.

22662. Then when you handed him over is it correct to say that you stood up and faced towards the King's Arms?—Yes, I just turned my back like this. (Describing.)

22663. You turned your back to the prisoner?—Yes, to the prisoner.

22664. And your face towards the King's Arms?—Yes, towards Harding—and I got it.

22665. At that moment you say Harding came up and struck you?—Yes.

22666. And when he struck you you were facing the King's Arms?—Yes, I was facing the King's Arms then.

22667. Did he come from the direction you were facing?—It was all done in a moment. He was in the crowd.

22668. Did he approach you from behind from the direction of the King's Arms?—From the direction of the King's Arms.

22669. Did you see him at all before he struck the blow?—No, I did not—not that night.

22670. Did you not see him coming up to you before he struck the blow?—No, I did not see him, but of course when he struck me I knew the man in a moment.

22671. You did not see him at all after he struck you?—No, because he was facing me then. I know him, and know his voice as well.

22672. Although you were facing the direction he came in you did not see him beforehand?—No.

22673. At the time he struck you you had both hands free?—I had both hands free.

22674. And in addition to that there was a constable or two, I suppose, between you and the King's Arms keeping the crowd back?—They struggled with the prisoner.

22675. All the other six?—No, not all the other six, because they had to keep the crowd back to get the prisoner along.

22676. You told us the two were holding the prisoner after you handed him over?—There were two at the time.

22677. And yourself makes three; that leaves four other constables?—Yes.

22678. So that two at least of those, I suppose, were keeping back the crowd from pressing on the prisoner?—That is right. We had got enough to do with that lot.

22679. Were there not some constables between you and the King's Arms trying to keep the crowd back?—Yes.

22680. There were?—No; after we passed the King's Arms, when we got past there, when the assault was committed, we were getting the prisoner along, as I have told you before, and then he deliberately came up and struck me.

22681. You have said that very often, but I am not asking you about that. You are taking your prisoner towards the police station in a certain direction, are you not?—Yes.

22682. You are being followed and surrounded by a hostile crowd?—Yes.

22683. Some of the constables who were not holding the prisoner would be keeping back that hostile crowd, would they not?—Trying to.

22684. Then I say were there not at least two constables between you and the King's Arms trying to keep the crowd back?—We had got the prisoner then. Of course the whistle was blown, and we got more assistance after that, after passing the King's Arms. After we passed the King's Arms assistance arrived.

22685. After this blow was struck?—After the blow was struck.

22686. Do you mean to say the constables you have told me about were not there until after the blow was struck?—There were two who gave evidence that they saw him do it.

22687. I asked you particularly how many constables were there, and you gave me altogether the names of seven?—I did, but then they came up after.

22688. I asked you how many were there when you were passing the King's Arms?—There were three of us.

22689. When you passed the King's Arms you now say there were only three?—When we passed the King's Arms assistance came up.

22690. When you passed it?—When we passed it.

22691. Or after you passed it?—After we passed it, you may say that.

22692. Then how many constables were there there when you were passing the public-house—alongside the public-house?—There were three of them.

22693. Give me their numbers?—I have given them to you.

22694. Let me have them again. You yourself were one?—Yes, and No. 173.

22695. What is his name?—Deller; and then there was Filbee.

22696. That is No. 164?—Yes.

22697. Was 207 there when you were passing the King's Arms?—No, he came to my assistance then. No. 207 was the one I handed the prisoner over to. He got out of his bed and got up and ran out in response to the whistle.

22698. Was 207 there with you when you were passing the King's Arms?—No.

22699. Do you say he joined you after you passed the King's Arms?—Yes, just where I was assaulted—that is where he took hold of the prisoner, or just before. As soon as I handed him over I had the blow on the ear.

22700. You said just now that 207 came in response to a police whistle?—Yes, he heard the whistle.

22701. And he came in response to a police whistle for assistance?—Yes, it was blowing all over the place.

22702. Was that whistle blown before or after the blow was struck?—Before, or else he would not have been there.

22703. I thought you told me just now that these other constables came up after the blow was struck, because the whistle was blown. You say a whistle was blown before as well as after?—The whistle was blown by some person unknown at the first start in Bacon Street, and if you follow that right on, then afterwards when the crowd began to be hostile a whistle began to blow and 207 came out.

22704. Several whistles were blown?—Everybody has got whistles round there, I think.

22705. Were they being blown by the police or by the public?—By the police, at that time.

22706. Then you did not blow your whistle?—I could not. I never touched it.

22707. Do you know of any other constables there who had blown theirs?—I do not know that. I could not tell you that. I dare say they had been. I could not tell you the number.

22708. No. 207, you say, had joined you while you were passing the public-house, or before you passed the King's Arms?—After we passed the King's Arms.

22709. (Chairman.) What I have taken is that there were yourself and two other constables in charge of Callaghan as you passed the King's Arms?—That is right.

22710. There is no doubt about that?—There is no doubt about that.

22711. When did the other constables come up is what Lord Russell is asking?—They all came in a few seconds.

22712. (Earl Russell.) And the numbers of the two who were with you when you passed the King's Arms were No. 164 (Filbee) and 173 (Daller)?—That is right.

22713. Then as you were passing the King's Arms along the pavement there were only those three of you?—There were all three of us; it is only a few yards.

22714. But at the time you were actually passing the King's Arms there were no more than those three constables there?—That is all just then, as we were passing there.

22715. All the others were in Sclater Street in this crowd, keeping it back, just as you passed the King's Arms?—They were there a few seconds after that. They came from all directions.

22716. But at the time they were there?—No. They were there when I was assaulted, though.

22717. Where did 207 join you?—Just at that place where I was assaulted.

22718. Which direction did he come from?—He came from his home. He lives just there in Bethnal Green Road.

22719. So he came and met you as you were going along Sclater Street?—He was in his shirt sleeves.

22720. But he came from the opposite direction from what you had come from?—Yes.

22721. Can you tell me where the other constables came from, or when they joined you?—I could not tell you. One in Bethnal Green Road and the others from the beats round. I could not tell you exactly where they came from.

22722. With the struggling that was going on, did it take you a minute or two to get from the King's Arms to the place where you were struck?—Yes, it took a minute or two perhaps; I do not suppose as much as that, but through him throwing himself about it took some time to get there.

22723. Can you tell me what other constables besides 207 had joined you before Harding had struck the blow?—There were no other constables that I know of.

22724. Do you mean at the moment he struck the blow there were only the three you told us of and No. 207?—I could not tell you exactly, but I know the constables who were in it at the time. I know what I had done.

22725. After the time he struck you the blow you think there were only four there—the three you have mentioned and yourself?—There might have been another one.

22726. Did you see any other constable between you and the King's Arms keeping the crowd back?—We were only a few yards from there.

22727. Thirty yards?—Yes.

22728. Did you see the constables behind you in the direction you had come from, trying to keep the crowd off you?—There was Filbee there.

22729. I thought Filbee was holding the prisoner?—No.

22730. Not at that time?—No. 173 and 204 and myself were holding the prisoner when we passed there.

22731. Then at the time you were struck Filbee was not holding the prisoner?—No.

22732. He was behind you, keeping the crowd back, was he?—That is right; but Filbee was first with me with the prisoner.

22733. Then at that time Filbee was between you and the King's Arms, keeping the crowd back?—Yes.

22734. You were standing up facing the King's Arms, and you had handed your prisoner over?—Yes; just merely turned round.

22735. When Harding struck you the blow?—Yes.

22736. Before, or at the same moment that you saw him? You did not see him coming?—No; I did not see him coming before he struck me.

22737. You knew him perfectly well by sight?—Yes, and by his voice.

22738. What was the effect of the blow he struck you? Did it knock you down?—It stunned me. It did not exactly knock me down, because I went against the wall.

22739. It stunned you a bit?—Yes, and caught my ear, too. I shall have that mark for my life-time, I suppose.

22740. Was it before he struck you that he made the observation you have told us about? You said that he said, "You are not going to take him"?—Yes.

22741. Is that right?—Yes.

22742. Did you hear him say that before he struck you or at the same moment?—At the same moment. It was done in a moment—"You are not going to take him"—and I got it. I did not expect such a thing at the time.

22743. As a matter of fact, at the time he said that you were not holding the prisoner?—No, not then, because I had just at that moment handed him over. It was all done like lightning.

22744. Did you say anything at all to Harding when he struck you?—I did not say anything; I said "All right."

22745. You said, "All right"?—I said, "I know that man." I did know him. I was winded, and I could not speak.

22746. Did you say, "All right," or did you not say, "All right"?—I said, "I know that man."

22747. You said, "I know that man"?—Of course I knew him.

22748. You said so?—I did not say so then.

22749. That is what I asked you?—I said so after.

22750. Did you say nothing at all at the time when he struck you?—I could not say anything.

22751. But did you?—No.

22752. Not a word?—I never said anything.

22753. Not a word?—No.

22754. You did not say, "All right"?—I did not say, "All right."

22755. Tell me why you did not arrest him at once when he struck you?—I could not possibly arrest him. I had got enough work to do with the other.

P.C. M. Cann.

6 Dec. 1906.

22756. But you were not holding the other at that time?—No, but he dashed away in the crowd, and got away from me. I knew the man.

22757. What was the reason you did not arrest him, because he ran away so quick?—Because he ran away so quick in the crowd.

22758. Is that the reason?—That is the reason, and knowing the man.

22759. Why did you not call out to Filbee to arrest him?—He had got enough to do at the time.

22760. What with?—The prisoner. We had to have a relay a time or two.

22761. Filbee was busy with the prisoner at that time?—We handed him over one to the other, and took him along.

22762. Was Filbee holding the prisoner at that time, or was he not?—He was not. I think I have said that before.

22763. If Filbee was not holding the prisoner, but was standing where you told us just now, between you and the public-house, why did you not call out to Filbee to arrest him?—He could not then, because he dodged off.

22764. (Chairman.) The question put by Lord Russell to you is why did you not call out to Filbee, "Arrest that man"?—I could not do it, because he was gone in a moment. There were others as well in the crowd.

22765. (Earl Russell.) So you did not think it worth while?—No; because I knew him so well that I knew I could get a summons against him.

22766. You could get him afterwards?—Yes.

22767. You did not make any attempt to arrest him yourself?—No.

22768. You did not run after him?—No, it was useless then.

22769. Why was it useless?—Because I could not catch him. I knew him well enough. I knew the man so well that I did not trouble about going after him then.

22770. You thought it was not necessary to arrest him then because you knew him quite well?—That is right.

22771. When you gave evidence before the Magistrate, did you say, "The hostile crowd prevented me from arresting him"?—Of course, that was it.

22772. Did you say that?—That is what I said.

27773. And now you say you thought it was not worth while?—That meant that I could get him at any time. That is the meaning of that.

22774. Will you let me see those notes that you have in that notebook, that you say you made as soon as you got to the police station. (Book handed to learned Counsel.) This is where the entry begins, is it: "September 13th, 1906, 12.10"?—That is right.

22775. Is that the time you wrote it at the police station or the hour it happened?—12.10 is the time the charge was taken.

22776. Is that the time that you arrested these men or the time you wrote this note out—which does it mean?—I could not write that note at the time I arrested the man. The time was 11.50.

22777. You put a time down there 12.10. That means the time you made the note, does it, or the time the thing happened?—12.10 would be after the charge was in.

22778. That would be when you made the note?—Yes.

22779. "Age 23, Stephen Williams, 25, Chilton Street, flower seller; Charles Callaghan, age 18, name refused." Those are the two men who you had arrested?—Yes.

22780. The next thing is "Isaac Tiff, 37, Bacon Street"?—That is where the window was broken.

22781. "Window broken, value 1s. 6d." Is that right?—Yes.

22782. That was the origin of your arresting those two men?—That is right.

22783. The next thing is: "Witnesses, Frederick Smith against police; Edward Miller, 58, Hare Street; William Andrews." Did you make these notes about these three last names in the police station the same night?—The same night. I had to or else I should not have remembered.

22784. What did these three last names refer to—Smith, Miller, and Andrews?—They refer to this Tresadern or Harding.

22785. Soon after you got to the police station with the prisoner you sat down and wrote what I have read out?—Soon after.

22786. The same night, at any rate?—The same night. I think you have got the wrong lot there.

22786*. It is all on the one page.

22787. (Chairman.) Where is your police note book that is supplied to you?—This is my old one, and I have the new one here.

22788. The notes you hold in your right hand were taken out of the case that you have in your left hand?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) Let me have that book, and show me where you say the right note is.

(Chairman.) And let me have the other book, in the case. (Same handed.)

22789. (Earl Russell.) That is the page next to the one I was reading from?—That is it.

22790. You see these notes of the officers' names on page 40?—Yes, 173, 164, 486.

22791. You see that page is numbered 40?—Yes.

22792. Were those notes of the officers' names on page 40 made the same night?—They were.

22793. These notes on this page in this book?—Those are my notes.

22794. These very notes here were made the very same night?—Yes, to the best of my belief I believe they were.

22795. Do you say that what I have been reading out to you before was not made the same night?—Yes. I made out my report and everything the same night referring to Callaghan and the others, and about being assaulted. I was assaulted the same night. Of course, that all came in my report.

22796. Then you did make those first notes that I was reading to you the same night?—I don't quite follow the question.

(Chairman.) Show me the page.

(Earl Russell.) That is what I was reading out to you before. (Showing book to witness.) Did you make those notes also the same night? (No answer.)

22797. (Mr. Dickinson.) You said just now, "It all came in my report"?—Yes.

22798. What report are you referring to?—I am referring to Callaghan and the other man's report.

22799. You said, "It all comes in my report." I want to know what report you are referring to?—The report I had to make out when I got to the station.

22800. You made a report out at the station?—Yes.

22801. Have you got that?—No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not think he means a formal report.

(Earl Russell.) I must ask that the witness should not be interfered with while I am cross-examining. What I read out to the witness first is on the page previous to the page that has the number 40 printed on it.

22802. (Chairman.) This book was the book that you had in your case in use in September and October?—That is right, Sir.

22803. I see on page 39 an entry of August 23rd, and then I see an entry lower down on page 39, "25th July, 1906, £5"?—Yes, that is a note taken at the time when Tresadern got fined the £5.

22804. Arthur Tresadern?—Yes. I put that down as a note for myself.

22805. "Gibraltar Buildings, Bethnal Green, 25th July, 1906, £5 fine." Were you concerned at all in the arrest of Tresadern or the prosecution?—No, I was not, only I got that out of the book. I knew that by the officer who had Tresadern at that time.

22806. But what caused you to write it in this book?—So that if anything was to happen I should know; if anything was asked.

22807. Do I understand the entry was made on the 25th July?—No, that was after.

22808. When did you make the entry?—On the day after.

22809. The day after he had been convicted?—Yes.

22810. At the top of the page I find, "G.N.R., August 23rd"?—Yes. That is only a note I put down for my own self.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) These are not in consecutive order.

22811. (Chairman.) What I am calling your attention to is that the notes are not in chronological order?—No, I quite understand that; they are put down quick as you take them.

22812. If you have inserted notes in this book out of their chronological order it follows that you leave blanks and you do not fill up the book as you go along?—Yes. There was a blank there, and I put that down from my own memory.

22813. There is no entry at all between the entries of the 25th July and the entry of the 13th September?—No, that is quite correct, because there was a blank space there. I put that down from my own memory.

22814. The question is when you put it down and how you keep the book. If the book is to be of any value it should be kept regularly?—Yes. It is our note book.

22815. Then I come to the entry on the page opposite, page 40—apparently the number applies to the two pages—"September 13th, 1906; age 23, Stephen Williams, 25, Chilton Street; flower seller; Charles Callaghan, age 18, name refused"?—That is the note I took at the police station—"address refused" it should be.

22816. It says "name" here—that Callaghan's name was refused. Then, "Williams; Isaac Tiff, window broken, value 1s. 6d., 37, Bacon Street." Tiff is the person whose window was broken, I suppose?—Yes.

22817. Then we come to the witnesses, "Frederick Smith"—he was a witness for the police?—No, he was one of the other lot—on Harding's side.

22818. I am reading you the entries, and I am going to ask you directly how much of this was written at 12.10 or about 12.10 on the 13th. The entry reads thus: "Witnesses, Frederick Smith"; then in the line below, "Against police, Edward Miller."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That applies to the same man I think you will find.

(Chairman.) "58, Hare Street." Then "William Andrews," and then there is a line drawn through the "drews" and underneath "George Harding." Will you tell us how much of that entry was written on the 13th September. Take your time and look at it carefully. Do not turn over the pages like that, but look at the page.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Pardon me, he knows the way the book is kept, if you would not mind allowing him to look at it.

(Chairman.) Not at present.

(Witness.) "September 13th, 1906, Stephen Williams, Chilton Street." That is a note of the charge.

22819. Is that all you wrote then?—That is all. I only put their names.

22820. But there is Callaghan down as well?—But they are not mixed up with it. "Charles Callaghan" is the next.

22821. Just answer this question first and be careful please. Do you say that the whole of the writing on that page was made at about 12.10 on September 13th?—No, Sir.

22822. You are certain of that?—Yes, not on that page.

22823. Was any of the writing made on September 13th?—Yes, the same morning—12.10, and when I was assaulted it was before 12.

22824. You are quite right. I am not asking you anything about the incident now. I am asking you to tell me what part of that page was written at or about 12.10 on the 13th September?—This part.

22825. Read out what was written?—"September 13th, 1906, 12.—Stephen Williams, age 23, of 25, Chilton Street, Flower Seller; Charles Callaghan, age 18." He refused his name at first, but he gave it afterwards.

22826. Never mind what he did. Will you kindly read out the words on that page that you say were written at 12.10 or about 12.10?—Those are the words—"Isaac Tiff, window broken, 37, Bacon Street."

22827. Is that all that was written at that time?—Yes, that was all that was written at that time.

22828. When was the rest of the entry made?—Down at the bottom—George Harding.

22829. When did you write the name of George Harding down there?—The same night.

22830. You wrote "George Harding" the same night.—Yes.

22831. The word "witnesses" occurs, and some other names on the page. Harding is at the bottom of the page, is it not?—Yes, that is right. It is only put down in a hurry.

22832. When did you write those names in between?—I wrote them at the same time.

22833. The same night?—Yes.

22834. Just read them out. You wrote the word "witnesses" and what else—Frederick Smith, Edward Miller, and William Andrews. You say you wrote those on the 13th September, the same morning or the same night, call it which you like?—Really I could not tell you when I wrote that.

22835. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do not answer unless you are sure. If you do not know, tell the learned Chairman you do not know.

(Witness.) I do not know.

22836. (Chairman.) But you told me that you wrote "George Harding" that same night or morning. We will take it that you are not quite sure?—Not quite sure.

22837. What was the meaning of Andrews' and Miller's name being put there. What had they got to do with Callaghan?—They had got nothing to do with it.

22838. They were, in fact, called as witnesses, were they not, on the 26th?—At the police court.

22839. On the 26th?—Yes.

22840. In the case that you brought against Harding?—They came up on the 26th.

22841. They gave evidence in Harding's favour?—Yes, that is right.

22842. Will you explain to me how, if that entry was made on the 13th September, you came to put the names of Andrews and Miller in the book. You have got them all in the same page, and it is dated the 13th September, and you told me that Andrews and Miller had nothing on earth to do with the Callaghan case?—I did not know anything about Andrews and Miller.

22843. Can you explain why you had got Andrews' and Miller's names down there at all as witnesses?—I had them at the police court. They came up as witnesses for Harding.

22844. On the 26th September?—Yes.

22845. That entry is the 13th September?—Yes.

22846. How could their names come in the book at all in an entry dated the 13th September or referring to incidents occurring on the 13th September?—Really I could not aswer you that.

22847. (Mr. Whitmore.) Are you suffering from the effects of the last wound you had?—Yes.

22848. (Chairman.) Have you been unwell to-day?—I have, Sir. I feel very near dazed.

22849. Now?—Yes. It was on Saturday night that I got this blow.

22850. That book you have got there was taken in the usual way out of the case where it was opened at?—Yes.

22851. You handed me this case with a new book in it, and I see the entries began here in October?—Yes.

22852. That paper was in the book. I asked you not to take any of the papers out. Look at that paper and see if that does not also refer to the Tresadern case?—Yes, that is my old report.

P.C. M. Cann. 6 Dec. 1906.

22853. What do you mean by your old report?—A copy of the report which I had to make out on that night.

22854. When did you write out that account?—On September 21st.

22855. That is on the buff paper?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is not the report. Mr. Muskett asked for a statement of their evidence. It is not a report in the usual course.

(Chairman.) I do not know what it is in the least, but you shall have an opportunity of asking him about it in reply.

22856. You wrote the account on the buff paper when?—On the 21st.

22857. Have you made any entry in the other book since you wrote on the 13th September?—No, I have made no entry in that.

22858. Take the book out of your pocket please. That you must leave with us. Is there any entry relating to Callaghan's case, or to Tresadern's case besides the entry on the 13th September?—No, there is nothing there, but there are all particulars handed to the police.

22859. You mean that goes on at page 40. The more I look at these entries the less I understand them. I think I ought to tell you that?—You see it is put out rough.

22860. When did you make these entries?—At the same time—at my own police station.

22861. Just let me read another: "September 13th, 1906: Stephen Williams, 1 monts H. L."?—One month.

22862. "And Charles Callaghan 4 monts H. L. Magistrate—Mead, Esq. September 12th, mid-night. Whilst conveying the prisoner named Callaghan through Sclater Street a hostile crowd attempted to rescue the prisoner from custody. The defendant who was one of the crowd deliberately struck me on the left ear, saying at the time 'You do not f—— well take him,' and then ran away. I was seen by the Divisional Surgeon who stated I was suffering from lacerated ear, and was placed on sick list the following day for six days." Then follow the names of Filbee and Ashford. Did you make the entry that I have just read, and do you say you made that on the 13th September?—September 12th, that is the same night; that is the entry in the book.

22863. You wrote that entry at the police station just after the incident had occurred?—Yes.

22864. Now pass it back to me?—That would be on the 13th, then.

22865. I know. I am not on that at all. If that is so, what do you mean by using the words, "The defendant, who was one of the crowd, deliberately struck me"?—That was only the summons. That is only a copy of what I put down.

22866. But you have just told me that you wrote this account of being struck on the night of the incident?—No, I did not.

22867. September 12th?—That was after.

22868. Then why did you tell me you wrote it that same night?—(No answer.)

(Earl Russell.) The witness is not well, and if the witness does not feel equal to go on with the examination I should not like to press it, but I have not finished.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You had better finish it.

22869. (Chairman.) I think so. (To the Witness.) You hear what Lord Russell says—that if you feel too ill to go on he will not pursue the matter this morning. Are you well enough to go on, do you think?—Yes, I can go on and finish it.

22870. (Earl Russell.) You still cannot give any explanation of when the names of these witnesses, Smith, Miller, and Andrews, were written here?—Yes, they were written when I had their names at the police court.

22871. That was written at the police court, was it?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He did not say that. He said, "When I had their names at the police court."

22872. (Earl Russell.) When was it written?—That would be on the 26th.

22873. Was it written at the police court?—I put down the names when I got to know them as well as I could.

22874. Was it written at the police court?—Yes, when I got their names.

22875. Will you look carefully at the page opposite to page 40. Do you see the names of three witnesses connected by a bracket?—That is so.

22876. You say those three names were written at the police court?—At the police court. I did not know exactly whether they were coming.

22877. Before they were called?—No, not until after they were called. This is a copy of their names.

22878. You wrote it after you had given evidence, you mean?—Yes.

22879. Did you write those three names after they had given evidence at the police court?—Yes.

22880. After they had been into the witness box?—After they had been into the witness box.

22881. What did you mean when you said just now you did not know whether they were coming?—I did not.

22882. Was everything inside that bracket written at the same time?—Yes, I bracketed them all.

22883. Including the words, "Against the police"?—Yes.

22884. Was that written at the same time as the names?—Yes.

22885. Why is it in thicker pencil?—I do not know. It is just as I put it down; that is all.

22886. Just look at that one page carefully. You see at the very bottom of the page the name "George Harding"?—Yes. That is only a slip.

22887. What is only a slip?—That is.

22888. What do you mean?—I was thinking of George Harding then.

22889. (Chairman.) There is a George Harding, is there?—I believe so. I presumed it was the other one at the time.

22890. (Earl Russell.) Do you mean it is a slip in the Christian name? Is that what you mean?—That is right.

22891. When you wrote "George Harding" you meant Arthur Harding?—Yes.

22892. You told the Chairman you wrote that on the same night as you took your prisoner to the station Is that right?—Yes.

22893. Did you write that on the same night when he assaulted you in Sclater Street?—I might have done.

22894. Could you be sure about it? You told the Chairman you had?—No.

22895. Did you?—I could not say when I wrote that down. That was in the same case.

22896. Do you think you wrote it on the same night when he assaulted you in Sclater Street?—Very likely I did.

22897. Did you ever make any other written note of the name of the man who assaulted you in Sclater Street?—No.

22898. That is the only written note you made?—That is the only one, as I have told you, of assaulting me there.

22899. Is that the only note you made of it?—There was Williams, Callaghan, and on the way to the station there was Arthur Harding.

22900. That was the man you meant when you wrote "George Harding" in that book, was it?—Yes, it was nobody else.

22901. (Mr. Whitmore.) Do you know a man named George Harding?—Yes, I know a man by the name of Harding.

22902. (Chairman.) Do you know a man called George Harding is what the learned Commissioner asked you? Can you answer that question which Mr. Whitmore asked you?—No.

22903. Do you know a man called George Harding?—I do know a man of the name of George Harding.

22904. Where does he live?—I could not tell you.

22905. In London?—Yes.

22906. In your part of London?—Yes.

22907. (Earl Russell.) To what superior officer did you first mention that you had been assaulted by Tresadern or Harding in Sclater Street?—Inspector Wright.

22908. Who is that?—Inspector Wright.

22909. Is he the Inspector who took the charge against Callaghan?—Yes.

22910. When did you mention it to him?—The same night.

22911. While you were charging Callaghan?—Yes—not while charging him—after.

22912. Immediately after you had finished charging Callaghan?—Yes.

22913. Can you remember the words you said to him?—To whom?

22914. To Inspector Wright about this assault?—Yes.

22915. What was it you said to him?—I said to Inspector Wright I had to call the doctor, and the doctor had seen me, so Inspector Wright said, "Do you know the one who did it?" I said, "Yes, Arthur Harding; that is the one that did it."

22916. You told the Inspector that?—Yes.

22917. And you told the doctor that?—Yes.

22918. The divisional surgeon?—I do not know whether I told him his name.

22919. Was what you said that you had been assaulted by somebody in Sclater Street?—Yes, I had been assaulted.

22920. By somebody?—By Arthur Harding. I knew who it was.

22921. Did you mention the name to the Inspector?—Yes.

22922. In the presence of the divisional surgeon?—I dare say I did.

22923. I thought you told me just now that the surgeon asked the Inspector how you got the wound?—I do not think so.

22924. Did you tell the divisional surgeon how you had got it?—No.

22925. Did you tell him where you had got it?—I told him I was assaulted. That is all.

22926. In the course of arresting a prisoner, did you say?—Yes, of course it would naturally be that.

22927. Did you tell the divisional surgeon anything about your having been assaulted in Sclater Street?—No. I should not have wanted him if it had not been for this.

22928. Did you tell him you had been assaulted in Sclater Street?—I told him. That is the very place I tell you where I was assaulted.

22929. You told the divisional surgeon that?—I said "This is a little bit of Sclater Street."

22930. Did you tell him who had done it?—I do not know that I did or not. I could not answer whether I told him. I knew who had done it. That was all.

22931. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are asked whether you told the divisional surgeon. That is the only point?—I could not say.

22932. (Earl Russell.) Did Inspector Wright ask you to write a report upon the assault of Sclater Street?—Yes.

22933. When did you write it?—After the charge was taken.

22934. The same night?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) May I see that report?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am afraid I have not got it. I have made inquiries about it. At the same time that the charge was made somebody came to the station and complained of violence against Callaghan. Thereupon the Inspector asked these men to write reports, and they did write reports, or some of them did. The next day, when the case came before the Magistrate, no complaint was made of the way in which Callaghan had been treated, and therefore those reports were not kept. That is the reason why I have not got it. When this man said he had made a report I inquired of Inspector Wright, and that is the explanation. There are no existing reports.

22935. (Earl Russell.) You have heard the explanation about the report. You were asked to make a report as to whether Callaghan had been ill-treated?—A portion of it. Yes, I had to make a report of that.

22936. Was that a separate report to the report you made about the assault in Sclater Street?—It all amounts to the same—it all came in one report that I had got assaulted.

22937. Was that a report you were asked to make by the Inspector because it was said that Callaghan had been treated roughly?—Yes, a portion of it.

22938. In the same report you said you had been assaulted by Arthur Harding?—Yes.

22939. And you gave that report to the Inspector?—Yes.

22940. Did you make any other report about the assault in Sclater Street?—I cannot say.

(Chairman.) Where is the buff paper? You must leave that with us. I think you put it back in your other pocket. (The paper was handed to the learned Commissioner.)

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I look at it to see whether it agrees with my copy?

(Chairman.) Yes. (The buff paper was handed to the learned Counsel.) That is the original, from which, I expect, a proof was taken; at least it seems to me it is that kind of thing.

22941. (Earl Russell.) Did you see Subdivisional Inspector Hewison at any time about this?—No.

22942. Have you made a report?—Yes, I have made a report.

22943. But only the one you have told us of. You have made no second report?—No.

22944. Did you speak to any other superior officer about this injury in Sclater Street later?—Yes. Of course, I spoke to a lot of them; they all knew of it. But I mean officially?

(Chairman.) Are you going to call any of them to contradict this?

(Earl Russell.) The superior officers?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Earl Russell.) No.

(Chairman.) Then I do not quite follow the cross-examination.

(Earl Russell.) I have here the report of Subdivisional Inspector Hewison, from which it appears that it went before the Commissioner on some report of the assault in Sclater Street. I rather want to know, if the original report was lost and not sent to the Commissioner of Police, what information this was based on.

(Chairman.) It has been stated, and I have no doubt it is quite accurate, that a summons was applied for on September 14th. That is what Mr. Bankes told me.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, not applied for on the 14th—it was recommended on the 14th.

(Chairman.) Quite; I mean the initial step was taken on the 14th.

22945. (Earl Russell.) Is the George Harding you know a very bad character?—No.

22946. Never been in trouble?—No.

22947. Do you know a George Harding in that district who is a very bad character?—I do not know that. I know him by sight. That is all. I have not heard anything about him.

22948. Have you ever had any quarrel with Tresadern at all?—Had to shove him off from the corner times enough.

22949. He has been troublesome, has he?—Yes.

22950. How long have you known Harding or Tresadern?—For years.

22951. Well?—Yes, well—known him from a little boy upwards.

22952. Which name did you know him under?—Harding, and Arthur Tresadern as well.

22953. And I suppose you have often heard him called "Arthur"?—Yes.

22954. If you had known him for years as Arthur Harding, how came you to write down his name as

P.C. M. Cann.

6 Dec. 1906.

George Harding in your book?—That might have been a slip.

22955. That is all you can say?—Yes.

22956. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What is the George Harding, the man you know? Does he work at anything?—Yes. The George Harding that I know is a policeman.

22957. Do you know any other George Harding besides the policeman?—No.

22958. The only George Harding you know is a policeman?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) In answer to me he said that he knew nothing about him.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, he did not.

(Earl Russell.) He did.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No. You asked him if he was a bad character, and he said he knew nothing about him.

(Chairman.) He said something about his being troublesome, too.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, that was Arthur Harding. He said he had had to shift him off from the corner.

22959. Is the only George Harding you know a policeman?—Yes, that is so.

22960. Is he in your division?—He is a sergeant in the Y Division.

22961. Do you know any other George Harding except that man?—No, I was asked that question. Of course I know George Harding.

22962. Do you write all sorts of things down in your book that you want to remember?—I do.

22963. Do you rely on the notes in your book to help your memory very much?—Yes, to help my memory.

22964. So that you put things in the book which are not strictly police reports?—No.

22965. I have not had time to look at the book, but I see you write down in the book that Arthur Harding was convicted of assault on July 26th, 1906?—That is right.

22966. Were you engaged in that case?—No, I was not. That was given to me by another, in case it was asked about.

22967. In case you were asked, you wrote that down?—Yes.

22968. That is one of the things you put down in the book that you want to remember?—Yes; that is only casual.

22969. There are many things in there that seem to be casual—I mean not strictly police matters. Until Arthur Harding was brought up before the police magistrate on the 26th September, did you know whether he was going to call any witnesses or not?—I heard so; I did not know their names.

22970. Until they had actually been called. Did you know he was going to call Frederick Smith?—No.

22971. And what you wrote down in your book—"Witnesses against the police, Frederick Smith, Edward Miller, and William Andrews"—were the names of the persons whom you yourself heard called as witnesses?—That is right.

22972. And you wrote it down after you had heard them give their evidence?—That is right.

22973. Did you put that in that book in order that you could remember it if it was wanted?—For myself.

22974. That is what you would call casual, like the others?—That is it.

22975. Was there any particular reason why you put it on the same page that you put the other things?—No, no particular reason.

22976. There happened to be half a page empty, and you wrote it there. Is that it?—That is right.

22977. I have not had time to look at the book. You were asked why you did not arrest Harding at the time. Had you and the other officers who were there plenty to do with the prisoner and the crowd?—Yes.

22978. In addition to that, were you exhausted from the struggles you had had?—I was. The first was enough.

22979. So that if the man had run away, and if you had not known him, would you have been able to have arrested anybody out of the crowd, and to keep him that night?—No.

22980. Were the crowd very hostile?—Very hostile.

22981. Are you able to say exactly at what moment these other constables came up? We know the two that were with you when you were passing the King's Arms?—Yes.

22982. Others came up afterwards?—Yes; came up almost simultaneously.

22983. I think you say you have been 22 years in the force?—Yes.

22984. Have you been at this station the whole time?—No.

22985. Where have you been besides?—I first started in the S Division, and then I was in the X Division, and for 16 years in this division.

22986. I gather from your book that you are not a very good scholar?—No, I am not up to much.

22987. I mean as far as learning goes. Do you have to make notes in your book if you want to remember things?—Yes.

22988. Was it a mistake that you wrote George Harding instead of Arthur Harding?—Yes, it was.

22989. You knew this man's name to be Arthur Harding?—Yes.

22990. You said that you had known this man from a boy. Do you mean a boy going to school?—Yes, that is right.

22991. Have you the slightest doubt that this is the man that struck you the blow on that night?—I have not the slightest doubt, because I know him.

22992. Did you tell the Inspector that same night that he was the man?—That is it.

22993. (Chairman.) I have only a question or two to ask you. Where does the policeman, George Harding, live?—He was in the N Division.

22994. What part of London is that?—The other side.

22995. The other side of the river?—No; Islington and that way.

22996. When Mr. Whitmore asked you whether you knew a man called George Harding, you said you did. I then asked you where he lived, and you said you could not say. I asked you "Does he live in your part of London?" and you said "Yes"?—I do not know where he is now, or what station he is at.

22997. Then why did you tell me that he lived in your part of London if you did not know it?—(No answer.)

22998. You gave evidence on the 13th September against Callaghan, did you not?—Yes.

22999. Was anything said at the hearing according to your recollection about the assault on you. Callaghan and Williams were charged together, you remember?—Yes.

23000. And you were the first witness called?—Yes.

23001. Do you recollect whether in the course of your examination you were asked anything which led you to mention the assault on you?—No, only the breaking of the window. That was the first start.

23002. Naturally you told the story of Callaghan and Williams' arrest?—That is right.

23003. I am only asking the question in order to test your recollection. That case was heard on the 13th September?—Yes.

23004. You had been assaulted early on the morning of that day, or close on midnight?—It would be on the 12th when they assaulted me.

23005. On the 12th you had been assaulted?—Yes.

23006. And you were suffering from the effects of the assault?—Yes, I was kicked about.

23007. Do you remember whether the fact of your having been assaulted was mentioned in the police court on the 13th.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Will you add "by Harding," because he talks about Callaghan.

23008. (Chairman.) Do you remember whether it was mentioned at all by anybody?—Yes.

23009. Do you remember whether the magistrate asked you a question that led to its being mentioned?—The magistrate asked me about this—about the ear.

23010. About the knock on the ear?—He asked me. Then the magistrate said "Is he dazed?" I was knocked about like a football with the other two beforehand.

23011. That seems a matter on which we are all agreed—that you were treated disgracefully on this occasion?—I was.

23012. That seems common ground to us all. I am now asking whether you remember the magistrate asking you a question about it?—Whether I was assaulted?

23013. Yes, about it. He noticed your condition, and you said you were dazed?—Yes. Do you want me to give the evidence right through?

23014. No, I do not want you to give the evidence right through. I have told you what I am asking you for at this moment. I am asking to test your recollection. I will put it to you in another way if you like. Did you tell the magistrate that Arthur Harding had struck you?—Yes.

23015. You told him so?—Yes.

23016. Are you positive about that?—I think so. I told him it was not caused by those prisoners, but by Arthur Harding.

23017. (Mr. Whitmore.) The wound on your ear?—Yes.

23018. (Chairman.) Are you positive you mentioned Arthur Harding's name?—Yes, I did, I mentioned that.

23019. Are you positive you mentioned Arthur Harding's name—I mean to the best of your recollection?—Yes.

23020. Is not this what you said: "Someone else bashed me on the ear"?—Very likely I did say so.

23021. The Clerk to the Court took down the words, "Someone else bashed me on the ear." Is that what you said?—I gave the name.

23022. You gave his name?—Yes, because I knew who did it.

23023. It does not follow that you gave it because you knew his name. You still say you gave the name of Arthur Harding?—Yes.

23024. (Mr. Dickinson.) I just want to ask you another question about this book to see if you can help us a little bit. The learned Chairman has read out this note: "September 12th, midnight. Whilst conveying the prisoner named Callaghan through Sclater Street a hostile crowd attempted to rescue the prisoner from custody. The defendant, who was one of the crowd, deliberately struck me on the left ear, saying at the time, 'You do not f—— well take him,' and then ran away. I was seen by the Divisional Surgeon"?—That was only a short note.

23025. When you gave evidence in this case did you use that? You gave evidence before the magistrate at the police court?—No, I did not use that.

23026. Do not be in a hurry. You gave evidence against Arthur Harding?—Yes.

23027. And you told the magistrate at the police court that story that I have just read out?—Yes.

23028. I want to know whether you wrote that out in order to assist you to give that evidence?—I did that after. That was done after I had given evidence.

23029. Try and think about that. I want to know what you wrote all that out for?—That was for my own memory.

23030. To help you when?—At any other time—not at the present time, but at any time.

23031. You wrote that out to help your own memory?—Yes.

23032. You wrote out this account to help your own memory?—Yes.

23033. To help your own memory when you were doing what? What were you thinking you were going to do when you would want to help your own memory?—I do not know. You will see different things right through the book.

23034. We are trying to understand what this book is. When you gave evidence to the magistrate at the police court you told the story that is put down in pencil there almost accurately word for word?—A portion of it, yes.

23035. I am suggesting to you that that note which you made was in order to help your memory at the police court, was it or was it not?—Not to help me at the police court, because I had given my evidence at the police court. This is what I put down after.

23036. You are sure you put that down afterwards?—Yes.

23037. You are perfectly certain of that?—Yes.

23038. Then what object had you in putting it down?—To refresh my memory.

23039. The police court proceedings were all over, were they not?—Yes.

23040. Why did you want to put that down to refresh your memory after the proceedings at the police court?—After the witnesses. We did not know what was coming on. There were witnesses up there to give evidence.

23041. After the magistrate had dismissed the case there was no necessity to put anything down?—We always make a note of it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) From a Police point of view, the case having been dismissed, reports would be called for in the ordinary course, and therefore this man might have thought of that. It appears to be a copy of what he said.

(Chairman.) The note of the 13th September refers to Harding as a defendant.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) The note can hardly have been made on the 13th September. He clearly was not a defendant.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think it was after, probably. It seems to me to be a reproduction of what he said.

(Mr. Dickinson.) One is a reproduction of the other; either the police court proceedings are a reproduction of what he wrote down beforehand, or this is a reproduction of what he says he said.

23042. There is only one other thing in this book, and that is this. There are these words: "When charged he said it was done with the stick." Do you remember what that refers to?—It is nothing.

23043. Do not say it is nothing, because I know it is something. Can you remember what it referred to?—"When charged he said he was struck with a stick," that is Callaghan.

23044. You are not reading it properly. "When charged he said it was done with the stick"?—That is what Callaghan said.

23045. That what was done with the stick?—The cut on the head. That was explained.

23046. That was breaking the window, was it not?—No, it was not. They are only notes. That is all.

23047. I just want to ask you about the occurrence. You said that you turned round when you handed the prisoner over to Filbee towards the King's Arms?—Exactly, that is right.

23048. And that then Harding came to get at you and hit you?—Yes.

23049. The place at which this happened was some 30 yards beyond the King's Arms?—Yes, from the door of the place where I was assaulted was 30 yards down the street.

23050. It was a little way down the street?—Yes.

23051. When you turned towards the King's Arms you turned round backwards in the opposite direction to that in which you were going?—Yes, I turned round like that to the crowd that was following. (Illustrating.)

23052. Is where the occurrence happened a dark part of the street?—There is a lamp-post there.

23053. Where is the lamp-post?—About mid-way; it is not a very dark street; we have the electric light from the railway shining on the road.

23054. I suppose there is a bright light at the public-house?—Sometimes there is, but at that time of night they generally turn the lights down.

P.C. M. Cann. Dec. 1906.

23055. You are sure you could see well enough when you turned round to see that it was Harding?—Yes.

(Chairman.) He has not said that he saw Harding coming from the public-house, or that he came from the public-house.

(Mr. Dickinson.) No, but he said he came in that direction.

23056. He came against you between the public-house and you?—Yes.

23057. Therefore he was between you and the public-house?—Yes.

23058. The light was sufficiently on his face to enable you to see his face distinctly?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) This book is obviously a memorandum book. You will find there all sorts of words.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I think that book is quite satisfactory.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It says, for instance: "I paid the old man 2s., and he gave me 9d. change."

(Chairman.) That may be so, but I am not at all sure that a note book ought to be so treated.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is another matter altogether. The tradesmen are here now.

(Chairman.) Very well.

WILLIAM SOUTHEY, sworn.

W. Southey.

23059. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you a hosier, of 123, Brick Lane? Have you two separate shops?—Yes.

23060. Have you been in business there for some 25 years?—Yes. I have been connected with the business for 25 years.

23061. In Brick Lane?—Yes.

23062. Do you know Harding?—I know him well.

23063. How long have you known him?—Quite 10 years.

23064. During that time have you ever known him do any work?—Never.

23065. What have you seen him do?—Rob people.

23066. How does he spend his time?—Standing at my corner principally—at the corner shop—123, Brick Lane.

23067. Any others with him?—Yes.

23068. Have you ever seen Harding do anything?—I have seen him rob many people, and vans as well.

23069. On any occasion have you seen him accompanied by any other persons, whom you can identify?—Yes, the man who gave evidence yesterday.

23070. What was his name?—I forget his name.

23071. Is Andrews here?—Andrews—that is the one.

23072. What did you see Andrews do?—I saw them steal a box of tea off a van, and take it up a court with Dido. I called the attention of the police to the fact, and the police went and fetched the tea away, and took it to the police station. One Saturday night I had a stall outside our shop at 190, Brick Lane, and Harding, Dido, and someone else that I did not recognise (I do not know his name), came to the stall, and they tried to steal a watch from a man. I called the attention of the crowd at the stall that they must look after their watches and purses. They went away, and in a little while they came back and tried to set light to some paper under the stall.

23073. There was one occasion on which a gentleman entered your shop through the window?—Yes.

23074. Just tell us about that?—That was on a Saturday night. They assaulted a man outside the shop, and attempted to rob him. He was a Jew. There is a boy connected with Harding's gang, as we know them, who is a Jew, and when he saw they were maltreating a Jew, he stopped them, and he was thrown through my window, smashing the window to pieces.

23075. The Jew boy?—The Jew man. Harding was among the gang; the gang is known as Harding's gang, and he was there with these people when it was done.

23076. (Earl Russell.) Do you go in terror of this gang?—This gang.

23077. Yes?—They interfere with the tradesmen of Brick Lane to a terrible extent. They stand outside my shop sometimes 30 strong.

23078. Do you go in terror of them?—I do go in terror.

23079. Bodily fear?—Bodily fear, because they are a dangerous gang.

23080. Have they ever done you any personal harm?—They have threatened me.

23081. Have they ever done you any actual harm?—No, no bodily harm, but they have done me other harm.

23082. Have they done any harm to your shop?—Yes.

23083. What harm have they done to it?—Stood outside the shop and kept people from coming into it.

23084. In the way of violence. Have they damaged your property?—Yes; they threw a man through my window.

23085. I am coming to that directly. You have seen Harding, with Andrews and Dido, steal a case of tea?—Yes.

23086. You saw him with your own eyes?—Yes.

23087. You could have sworn that Harding stole a case of tea?—Yes, I could have proved it.

23088. How long ago was it?—I could not tell you the date ago.

23089. Less than a year?—Less than a year.

23090. You called the attention of the police to it?—Yes; I called the policeman's attention to it, and he took it to the station.

23091. Which policeman was it?—That I do not know. I did not take down his number. I know the tea was taken off a van by those three men.

23092. Did you tell the policeman you were prepared to prove in any court that Harding had stolen it?—I told him I knew who had taken the tea. Harding was there. The man who was driving the van was sitting and looking after the horses.

23093. You told the policeman you were prepared to swear to that elsewhere?—Yes.

23094 But nothing further happened?—No.

23095. What other things have you seen him actually steal?—I have seen Harding take watches from men. I knew Harding when he was a small boy.

23096. One thing at a time?—I knew Harding when he was a schoolboy.

23097. I was not asking you about that. A pickpocket, do you mean—take watches?—Yes, take anything.

23098. You have seen him take them?—Yes, many a time.

23099. Have you reported that to the police?—Not to the police. Is it my business to report these things to the police? A business man cannot be away from his business always.

23100. You think it is not your business?—Harding would take a watch from a man, and he would go home and change his clothes.

23101. I do not want all this hearsay. Have you ever seen him change his clothes?—Yes; I have seen him come out, having changed his clothes, after.

23102. After what?—After a robbery.

23103. You have not reported it?—It is not my business to report all those things. That is not my business.

23104. Did you tell the man whose watch he stole?—No, I did not.

23105. You let him thieve it?—Yes, of course. Do you think I want my head broken for telling the man or interfering with these people?

23106. I think you did report the tea?—I did report the tea to a policeman.

23107. Your head was not broken?—No, it was not.

23108. Has he stolen any goods from you ever?—No; he has never stolen anything from me that I know of.

23109. And although you have seen this constant thieving, you have never reported any case, except the tea, to the police?—I reported the tea.

23110. No other?—I have passed remarks about it many a time to the police, and said they have done it. Then it has to be proved, has it not?

23111. (Chairman.) The witness Southey had complained of Harding's conduct.

(Witness.) I have been to the police scores of times about Harding and his gang. I have been to Commercial Street Police Station scores of times to ask the police to protect me against the gang. He is the captain of the gang, and leads them.

(Chairman.) A case came before us, in which one Harding, or Tresadern, was known to have been convicted more than once, and was said by the police to be a well-known thief. We took up the case on the ground that that was no reason why the police should arrest him for doing something he had not done.

(Earl Russell.) I agree. We do not put him forward at all as a good character, and he does not put himself forward as such.

(Chairman.) You are cross-examining Southey, apparently, with a view of throwing discredit on his evidence.

(Earl Russell.) When one hears a very large, general statement made, I think one is entitled to get from him instances.

(Witness.) Considering I have known him for years, I can make a statement about it.

23112. (Earl Russell.) You have. With the exception of the case of the tea, you have never officially reported to the police any other case?—No, it is not my business.

23113. Never mind the reason. In the case of the tea there was a prosecution?—I think not. There ought to have been, though.

23114. What about the Jew boy. Was there simply a row outside?—Harding and his gang sit on my window, and if I go out and tell them to go away, I have some language not fit for me to state in this court.

23115. And the police do not help you?—The police do help me, but the magistrates do not. A man like Harding ought not to be at large. He is a danger to respectable people. That is what I have got to say, and I say it in front of Harding. If the police take Harding to the station, and there is a charge brought against Harding, and it is taken before the magistrate he does not get convicted: but that is not my business. I say Harding is a most dangerous character, and the gang he mixes with is as dangerous as he is. I have known Harding ever since he was a little boy. While Harding was doing 20 months we had no trouble.

23116. (Chairman.) You have been a ratepayer and householder for how long?—I have been for 15 years a ratepayer in Brick Lane, and I have been connected with 123, Brick Lane for 27 years, and not 25 years. I have known Harding ever since he was a litle boy. He was connected with a man named Brown.

23117. (Earl Russell.) You have known him as a customer of yours for some time?—That does not matter. I do not thank him to come into my shop.

23118. You have sold goods to him?—I have. Can I say to a man when he comes into my shop, "I will not have your money." The door is open for anyone to come in and spend money.

23119. You surely do not know how all your customers earn their living, do you?—I know how Harding earns his. W. Southey. 6 Dec. 1906.

23120. From your own knowledge, or from hearsay?—From my own knowledge, or I should not come here to make the statement.

23121. By thieving?—By thieving.

23122. Which you do not report?—Why should I report it?

23123. (Chairman.) I gather from your statement that there is a good deal of disorder in this street?—There is a gang of lads and young men that hang about the corners in Brick Lane, and my corner unfortunately is a very convenient corner for these young men because they can see four ways. They are like a regiment of soldiers: they throw out scouts in every directions, and they use dumb motions; they do not talk to each other, but they use dumb motions. If they were going to rob a man and they saw it was convenient to take his watch they would use their fingers, their head, and movements of their body. Harding is the captain of that gang, and has been for many, many years. And not only that, but the big boys get goods off a van, they put them in convenient places, and then they get small boys that have not left school to go with a barrow and take the parcels or the boxes that they have stolen away, and they are taken in different directions, mostly down Cygnet Street, or down Hare Street, or the first turning on the left—I forget the name of the street for the moment. They go that way.

23124. I gather from your statement that the maintenance of order in that part of London is very difficult?—It is very difficult, and it is very difficult for us tradesmen to carry on business as we should. Brick Lane, of course, has got a very bad name, but it is men of Harding's class that give the neighbourhood a bad name. A respectable man is in danger in walking through the street.

23125. The police constables have a very difficult task, have they not?—They have a very difficult task.

23126. You have frequent opportunities of observing the way in which they do their duty?—Considering these stand outside my shop door I hear all their conversation, or most of their conversation, and sometimes I hear other things that they do not expect we do hear; but they talk outside the shop, and I have been to the Commercial Street police station scores of times to complain of these men.

23127. What judgment have you formed of the general conduct of the police in the maintenance of order in the streets in your neighbourhood?—I have nothing whatever to say against the police. They do all they can do, but when the police come they have their buttons and their uniform on, and they come down the street, and when these men see them coming they go away, and as soon as they are gone they come back again.

23128. You have never observed any instance of a police constable treating a man more roughly than he ought to do?—Many years ago I have, but for 15 years I have not. The police are conducted differently to my way of thinking now to what they were 15 or 20 years ago.

23129. (Mr. Dickinson.) You mentioned something about Harding having 20 months?—While Harding was doing 20 months it was a paradise. We had no trouble, and we did not have the gang hanging about our shops.

HENRY JAMES GELLENDER, sworn.

23130. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you carry on business now as a leather seller at 191, Vallance Road, Bethnal Green?—Yes.

23131. Up to last March were you the manager of Mr. Hochfield at 162, Bethnal Green Road?—Yes.

23132. What business does he carry on?—He is in the leather trade.

23133. Have you known Harding for some years?—I have known him for a matter of five or six years.

23134. Have you ever known him do any work?—He has never done a day's work to my knowledge.

23135. How does he occupy himself?—By hanging and loitering about with intent at robbery. H. J. Gellender.

23136. Is he alone or does he have others with him?—Others with him, sometimes five or six in number.

23137. Have you ever seen him do anything wrong?—Yes, I have seen him make repeated snatches at watches, and get them off and go down by the side of the place I was managing.

23138. Is there a gang in that neighbourhood?—Oh, yes, the place is infested with thieves, which is detrimental to the neighbourhood.

H. J. Gellender.
6 Dec. 1906.

23139. Has the gang got any name?—The gang is headed by Harding and his clique—that is how they are known in the neighbourhood.

23140. (Earl Russell.) It is not at your present address that you knew Harding, but your previous address?—Yes.

23141. Is this the man you mean (pointing to Tresadern)?—Yes, that is Harding.

23142. Were you in terror of him yourself?—Yes, I remember on one particular occasion looking out of the door, and I was asked if I wanted anything—I don't know what it meant, I am sure.

23143. Was anything ever done to you in the way of violence?—No, I never gave them any trouble if I could possibly help it.

23144. Or in the way of damage to your goods or your shop?—Not to the shop as far as I was concerned. I had two burglaries, but I could not charge him with that.

23145. You say you have actually seen him yourself steal watches?—Yes.

23146. Did you report that to the police?—Being a servant, it placed me in an awkward position. I should be away from my business a good many hours during the course of the day. The cry of "Stop him" is a common cry at the corner of Chilton Street, it being such a run to Gibraltar Walk and Gibraltar Gardens, where he lives, and I should be away from my business some time, and my services would not be required.

23147. You mean that your answer is no—you did not report to the police?—No.

23148. Did you ever report any robbery by him to the police?—No.

23149. Are you quite sure that you have known Harding more than two years altogether?—I have known Harding a matter of five or six years, as I told you in the first instance.

23150. You mean in this neighbourhood?—No; I have been getting my living in Bethnal Green for about five years, and in the East End of London 20 years.

23151. Where did you come across him five years ago?—34 to 36, Bethnal Green Road.

23152. You came across him there?—Yes.

23153. (Chairman.) Have you a house of business of your own now?—Yes, at Vallance Road.

23154. And you have known this part of London for 20 years?—Yes.

23155. Did you hear what Mr. Southy said about it?—Yes, and I can corroborate what Mr. Southy said in every instance.

23156. Have you observed any case in which the police have arrested a man in the neighbourhood?—Yes. I remember one particular day when Harding came along reading the paper, and a constable took him to the station, but what followed I could not say.

23157. But, besides Harding, have you known anybody else arrested?—Yes, as I remarked, now there is a gang of five or six of them.

23158. Have you observed the way in which the police-constables have discharged their duty?—Satisfactory in every instance as far as I am concerned.

23159. Have you observed the way in which they have discharged their duty?—Yes.

23160. In your opinion the police were discharging their duties properly?—Exactly.

23161. Not using any undue violence in taking prisoners to the station?—None whatever.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have some more gentlemen of the same class.

(Chairman.) I do not think it is necessary to call them. Are they witnesses who have been summoned by the Commission.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, they have come voluntarily. I have got a gentleman here, a publican, Mr. Rayner, who can tell you about the subscriptions being got up—I believe Harding said something about that—but I do not know whether you think it material.

(Earl Russell.) I should rather like Mr. Rayner to be called.

(Chairman.) Then I think perhaps you might call him.

Mr. Frank Rayner, sworn.

Mr. F. Rayner.

23162. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you licensee of the Old Crown public-house, 182, Brick Lane?—Yes.

23163. Have you been there about 18 months?—Yes.

23164. During that time have you known Harding?—Yes.

23165. Have you ever known him to do a day's work?—No.

23166. What does he do according to your observation?—The only thing I have seen him do is simply to loiter about the corners of the streets with a few other lads, probably sometimes 18 or 20 of them, and he generally sets the younger ones to do the robbery while he is watching on and giving warning of the police. I have also seen him kick a man's head in outside our house.

23167. Have you made any complaint to the police?—I have been compelled to do so. I have had three prosecutions of him—at least, not of him, but his gang—Callaghan, Cooper, and I cannot now think of the third name. At any rate, three of them were prosecuted and sent to imprisonment from Old Street Police Court.

23168. You mentioned Callaghan. Do you know Callaghan as a friend of Harding's?—Yes. He is, I believe, in prison at the present time.

23169. I think you can tell us something about the subscriptions that are got up?—That is the usual thing.

23170. Just explain to the Commission what you mean by the usual thing?—As soon as any thieves "fall," as they call it—that is, get into trouble—they simply terrorise the neighbourhood with a paper for something to help him pay the fine, and if you don't give it to them there is probably a row created over it. I was in court yesterday, when it was stated that I was supposed to have given Harding 6d., which I never gave him. I have been stopped in the street many times and asked for 6d., and I have given it, for the simple reason that I have been afraid to go by them otherwise.

23171. Do people give money to these subscriptions voluntarily?—No, it is forced out of them.

23172. (Earl Russell.) As a man who keeps a public-house, you have a good deal of reason to fear getting into trouble, I suppose. It is easy to get into trouble in your business, is it not?—Yes.

23173. You say people are terrorised into giving subscriptions?—Yes.

23174. People in other trades?—Every trade.

23175. But in the particular case of Harding you were not terrorised?—He is as bad as the others. He is known as the king of the thieves.

23176. But, although king of the thieves, you have not given 6d. to him?—No.

23177. You may have given 6d. to other people?—I may have done, and may have given it on his behalf not knowing it was for him.

23178. You said you were in court yesterday, when it was stated you subscribed 6d. to pay his fine. You say you did not do that?—To the best of my knowledge.

23179. You have subscribed in other cases?—Yes, to other people.

23180. Have you not been perfectly friendly with Harding?—No.

23181. Have you ever ordered him out of your house?—No, because he does not come in, and when he does come in he is barred. He has been in once or twice a week.

23182. When he does come in he is—what?—He is barred; that means he is not served.

23183. He is turned out?—No. He knows he is not served. The consequence is when he does come in he sees me and walks away.

Mr. F. Rayner

6 Dec. 1906.

23184. He walks out?—Certainly he does. I have had no complaint with him personally.

23185. Has he hardly ever been in your house?—I should think he might have been in half a dozen times in the course of the time I have been there.

23186. Where is it you have seen so much of him?—Directly opposite my door all day long.

23187. In the street?—Yes.

23188. How often have you seen him with Callaghan?—They are always together. Callaghan and him meet and are seen together one five minutes, and with somebody else an hour afterwards. They disperse and give the nod, and as soon as a policeman comes along off they go.

23189. Have you seen him with Callaghan yourself more than once?—Yes, scores of times.

23190. You are sure?—Certainly.

23191. Out in the street?—Yes.

23192. You have time to watch these people in the street?—Certainly I have. I have nothing else to do—I wish I had.

23193. You have not spoken to him in a friendly way?—What do you mean? I don't gather your meaning. I speak to anyone and everybody. It behoves me in my business to do so, and it behoves me to be careful who I speak to.

23194. Then you consider Callaghan a bad character?—I do.

23195. Has he not been working for you quite lately?—No, certainly not.

23196. Not within these last few months?—No. I am not in the habit of employing thieves. I have my till to study.

23197. Has he been doing jobs between you and Mr. Weatherwick?—No, he has never done a job for me in his life.

23198. Has he been doing anything between you and Mr. Weatherwick?—Nothing for me at all. I know nothing about Mr. Weatherwick's business. I would not engage a well-known thief, that is a certainty.

23199. Have you observed the police arresting anybody in the neighbourhood?—I have on several occasions, and I consider the police have done their duty as well as they possibly can. The only thing is, I think, there are not sufficient police on the corner there. It is a very dangerous corner. There are four turnings, and owing to the by-ways and the passages that they get into, it is a matter of impossibility for the number of police who are down there to do it, and if they do handle them there are so many of them that they trip them up and kick them, and the general remark is, "Don't give the bastard any length," and as I say, they will trip the police up, kick them, and do anything with them.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I understand you do not want, Sir, to hear any more of these gentlemen, but there are several here, and they wish me to say they have come here voluntarily, and their evidence is available if you desire to hear it.

(Chairman.) We will take their names.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) One we have actually got here is Mr. Williams.

(Chairman.) He was here yesterday.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Mr. Williams is the fourth who we sent for, and there were two or three more here yesterday.

(Mr. T. J. Ward.) There are 15 of us altogether.

(Chairman.) They are all householders and ratepayers.

(Mr. T. J. Ward.) Yes, Sir.

(Chairman.) They are men of substance and known in the neighbourhood.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I understand they are all tradesmen or persons who hold licences in the neighbourhood.

P.C. John Filbee, 164 H, sworn.

P.C. J. Filbee.

23200. (Mr. Muir.) You are P.C. 164 of the H Division?—Yes.

23201. On the night of the 12th September were you on duty in Hare Street, Bethnal Green?—Yes.

23202. Did you hear the sound of a police whistle?—Yes.

23203. Did you go in the direction from which it came?—Yes.

23204. Did you get through Kerbela Street into Bacon Street?—Yes.

23205. Did you see a crowd of people around P.C. Cann and the man Callaghan?—Yes.

23206. Were they struggling together on the ground?—Yes.

23207. Did you assist Cann in taking Callaghan to the station?—Yes.

23208. When you got to the corner of Cygnet Street and Sclater Street, that is where the King's Arms public-house is situated, how did the prisoner Callaghan behave?—Violently. He seemed likely to escape.

23209. What did you do upon that?—I blew my whistle.

23210. Did anybody come to your assistance?—P.C. Ashford, 207 H.

23211. What did Ashford do? Was he in uniform?—No, he came out of his lodgings which were situated near, and took hold of Callaghan's arm, and 47 HR released his hold of him.

23212. What condition was Cann in at that time?—He was nearly played out on account of the crowd and the treatment we had in getting the prisoner from Bacon Street.

23213. Did you see what happened at that time you are speaking of?—Yes.

23214. What happened?—When we were passing the public-house, the King's Arms, I saw Harding and four or five others come out of the side door of the King's Arms public-house and bound across the road.

23215. Which side is that in?—The door in Cygnet Street. I saw them bound across the road. 173 H had hold of Callaghan's arm, and I was immediately behind them.

23216. 173 H is P.C. Deller?—Yes.

23217. You were immediately behind the prisoner and Daller?—Yes. I saw Harding strike Cann on the ear with his fist.

23218. How long have you known Harding?—About fourteen months.

23219. Could you see him well enough to identify him?—Yes.

23220. After he had struck Cann on the ear what became of him?—He disappeared among the crowd. The crowd opened for him to go through and closed up again.

23221. Did you go on, with the other constables who arrived, to the station with Callaghan?—Yes, I went to the station.

23222. Did you make any statement to your superior officer with regard to the assault by Harding?—I described how the assault took place to Inspector Wright.

23223. When did you do that for the first time?—When we were in the station.

23224. That same night?—Yes.

23225. Did you name the person who had committed the assault?—Yes.

23226. (Earl Russell.) You were with these two prisoners at the beginning or nearly the beginning of the struggle?—I was not there with the two prisoners. I was there with one—Callaghan. Williams had been taken.

23227. By the time you had got into Bacon Street Williams had already gone?—Yes.

23228. Then there came along from Bacon Street you and Cann. Was there any other policeman at that time?—No. 173 joined us just previous to our reaching the King's Arms public-house.

P.C. J. Filbee.
6 Dec. 1906.

23229. What about the four other constables. Where did they join you?—They came up in response to the whistle. I blew my whistle, and it was in response to the whistle being blown after the assault took place—between the place where the assault took place and the archway at the corner of Sclater Street and Bethnal Green Road.

23230. You mean after the assault committed by Harding you blew your whistle?—No, before. When the prisoner became violent.

23231. Then they came up before the assault by Harding?—No, only 207—Ashford.

23232. Were there only four of you altogether?—207, 173, myself, and Cann.

23233. Four altogether?—When the assault took place.

23234. The other three came up afterwards?—They came up after the assault took place.

23235. Were you struggling down the middle of the street?—We were on the pathway near the side on which the public-house is situated.

23236. Right up against the King's Arms?—We passed the King's Arms on the pavement.

23237. Right close to it?—Yes.

23238. A very big crowd, was it not?—A large crowd.

23239. Very noisy?—Yes.

23240. Very hostile?—Yes.

23241. Shouting things?—Yes, that always is so.

23242. Throwing things?—I do not say anything about throwing. I never saw any throwing.

23243. You did not see the bottle that P.C. Cann spoke about?—No.

23244. You did not see anything thrown at all?—No.

23245. Nothing hit you?—No.

23246. When you actually passed the King's Arms do you agree that you took a minute or two to struggle along with your prisoner from the King's Arms up to Nos. 75 and 77?—Oh, yes.

23247. It was rather slow getting along with that crowd?—Not exactly slow.

23248. But not exactly quick?—No.

23249. When you actually passed the King's Arms, were there any people standing in the doorway?—No, there were not.

23250. No one in the King's Arms looking on?—No. As we passed the King's Arms, the turning of Cygnet Street, with the prisoner, Harding, with three or four others, came bounding out of the side door, which was situated three or four yards down from the door on the corner.

23251. I know you say that, but what I asked you was whether, when you passed the King's Arms, there was nobody standing on the doorstep looking on at it?—Not standing on the doorstep. The crowd were all moving with us.

23252. But none of the people in the King's Arms came out to look at you as you actually passed?—As we were passing they came out of the side door.

23253. After you had passed a little way?—We were on a level with Cygnet Street.

23254. There is a corner door to the King's Arms, is there not?—Yes.

23255. That is not the door you mean when you say the side door?—No, not that door.

23256. When you passed that corner door, had none of the people in the public-house come out to see what was the matter?—I could not say.

23257. Did you not see anybody standing on the doorstep looking at you?—No, I did not.

23258. There was a terrible noise going on as you went by?—Yes, there was, and that is how I suppose they happened to know something was going on outside.

23259. But none of them came out until after you got past?—When we were on a level with the public-house and the street.

23260. Before you had crossed Cygnet Street?—Before we had crossed Cygnet Street—as we were crossing Cygnet Street.

23261. It was as you were crossing Cygnet Street that you saw Harding, with these others, bound out from the side door?—Yes.

23262. At the time you saw him come out, you had not yet got through Cygnet Street?—No.

23263. Where did he run to?—He crossed Cygnet Street on a level with us, and came up to us.

23264. Where did he catch you up?—Before we crossed the road. At that time I was behind 173 and Cann with the prisoner—immediately behind them.

23265. Were you holding the prisoner?—No, not at that time.

23266. Who had hold of him?—173 and 47 HR.

23267. That is Cann and Daller?—Yes.

23268. You were a yard or two behind?—No, not a yard or two.

23269. Not as much as that?—It might have been 2 ft.

23270. Following up as close as you could?—Yes.

23271. Then he bounded across the road and caught you up before you had finished crossing Cygnet Street?—Yes.

23272. What did he do then?—He commenced jostling them and the others with the crowd.

23273. Did he jostle you?—Yes.

23274. He interfered with you in the execution of your duty?—He did.

23275. You did not try to arrest him then?—What was the use of taking another one of them?

23276. As a fact you did not?—No.

23277. What did he do next?—He continued the jostling, and another movement was made by the crowd to our left. I moved more to my left to deal with the crowd there. He edged up further.

23278. You moved out into the street a bit?—On to the edge of the pavement.

23279. A little more out towards the street in order to keep the crowd back from that quarter?—Yes.

23280. He got past you?—Yes.

23281. Was he between you and the door?—He was near the shop shutters, and I was on the extreme edge of the kerb.

23282. That was just after you had finished crossing Cygnet Street?—Yes.

23283. You were getting along the pavement?—Yes.

23284. Where did he go to then?—At that time P.C. 207 came up, and took Callaghan's arm from Cann.

23285. And then after that the prisoner was held by Cann and by Daller?—No, when Ashford came up he was held by Ashford and Daller. Cann released his hold of him.

23286. As Ashford and Daller held him, Cann released his hold?—Yes.

23287. That was after you had got 10 yards or so beyond the opening of Cygnet Street?—He went on the ground then and started struggling.

23288. The prisoner did?—Yes.

23289. And Cann was then free from the prisoner and facing back towards you?—I was on a level with Cann then. Cann turned round then to deal with the crowd, and caught the blow from Harding.

23290. You heard Cann give evidence this morning?—Yes.

23291. You agree he was facing towards the King's Arms when he let go of the prisoner?—Immediately he turned round he got a bang in the ear.

23292. As he turned round he met Harding?—Yes, face to face.

23293. And you saw Harding give him a blow on the ear?—Yes.

23294. How far were you from Cann when that happened?—He was on part of the pavement, and I was on the kerb.

23295. 3 ft.?—3 yards, about.

23296. Do you mean the width of the pavement?—Yes.

23297. Is the pavement 9 ft. wide there?—It may be 6 ft.

23298. Did he call out anything to you when he was struck?—I never caught it in the melee that was on then.

23299. And after Harding had struck Cann he went away?—Yes.

23300. Is that all you saw Harding do? Have you told us everything that happened up to the time he ran away?—Only his attempt with the others to rescue the prisoner.

23301. Harding's attempt?—Yes.

23302. When did he make that?—As he came bounding out of the pub., they all made a dive.

23303. That was while you were still at the level of Cygnet Street?—Yes, as we got on to the other side.

23304. That was what you call the jostling?—Yes. They were calling out, "You don't want to take him," or words to that effect.

23305. The whole crowd was calling out that?—Not the whole crowd, a good many of them.

23306. Was Harding doing anything more than nudging and jostling you?—No, only when he dived to get the prisoner away.

23307. He dived?—Made a rush like, in company with these others.

23308. Dived under you?—Rushed by me.

23309. Did he dive under the constables who had hold of the prisoner?—No, he never got past them.

23310. He pushed against them?—Yes.

23311. Did he start dragging the prisoner, or did he not get as far as the prisoner?—He got as far as the prisoner.

23312. Then the prisoner was the other side of the constables?—In the centre of Deller and Ashford.

23313. So that while Cann still had hold of the prisoner he got up to the prisoner?—He was on a level with me then.

23314. I think you told me that Cann let go the prisoner and handed him over to Ashford and turned round and at that moment was struck a blow?—Yes.

23315. I want to know whether before that, and while Cann was still holding the prisoner, Harding got hold of the prisoner or tried to get him away, or did anything of that sort?—He made the attempt with the crowd to practically rescue the prisoner—he and three or four others, I do not know who they were, rushed out of the public-house, and with the remainder of the crowd or part of the crowd attempted to rescue the prisoner.

23316. When you say to rescue the prisoner, do you mean Harding actually laid hands upon him and tried to drag him away?—He laid hands upon him.

23317. Before he struck the blow?—In the struggle we did our best to get them apart, and get the prisoner in front, and I was immediately behind the prisoner and the crowd behind me.

23318. That was at a time when you were only 2 feet behind the prisoner?—Yes, I kept within that distance.

23319. Was it while you were still within about 2 ft. of the prisoner that Harding laid hold of the prisoner?—Two feet behind, but I had moved to the left.

23320. But still you were within a yard of the prisoner?—About a yard or one or two yards.

23321. While you were still in that position did Harding lay hold of the prisoner and try to drag him away?—Yes.

23322. Why did you not arrest him at once?—We could not. We had enough to do to deal with the prisoner.

23323. Did you make a mental note of what he had done—that he had tried to rescue the prisoner?—Yes.

23324. You would have punished him for that afterwards—you would have had him up for that?—It is generally the rule from what I can see of it round there that an attempt is always made to rescue.

23325. You do not mean that you do not try to punish the people who do it?—It does not seem any good.

23326. What made him let go of the prisoner when he had hold of him. What did he take hold of the prisoner by?—By his arm here. (Describing.)

23327. And tried to pull him away?—Yes.

23328. Do you know what made him let go—did you see what made him let go?—I was behind and pushing them out of the way.

23329. Did you hear Harding say anything while he was doing all that?—I could not say; I do not know.

23330. Was anybody in the crowd shouting out about the way the prisoner was being handled?—They were making little exclamations.

23331. The prisoner was quite a small man, was not he?—A thick set fellow, well built.

23332. About 5 ft. 7 in.?—Yes, about that, but well built.

23333. Where did Harding come from. You were watching him all the time up to the time the blow was struck, were you?—No, I do not say I kept my eyes on him continually.

23334. Do you know when he let go of the prisoner?—Yes.

23335. When did he let go of him?—When I started shoving him out of the way.

23336. You pushed him out of the way?—Yes.

23337. Did you manage to get him out of the way again by pushing him out of the way?—He went to the side to my right.

23338. Between you and the shutters?—Yes.

23339. Did you hear him say anything when he struck Cann?—I may have heard him, but I do not know. There was a continual shouting going on there.

23340. Did you hear Harding or any of his friends cry out at that time "Don't kill the man"?—No, I did not.

23341. You heard no expression of that kind?—No.

23342. Did you hear anyone reply—a police constable or anybody else—"We will take you for this," or "We will get you for this," or anything like that?—No, I did not.

23343. Nothing of the kind?—No.

23344. Did you hear nothing said at all when Harding struck P.-C. Cann?—No, I do not know that I did.

23345. Nor when he was struggling with the prisoner trying to get him away?—No.

23346. Is this a correct report of what you said at the police court: "He hit P.-C. 47 on the left ear with his first, saying 'You don't f——g well take him'"?—He may have said that, but I don't remember it now. This occurred on September 12th, and I did not think anything was coming up and dismissed it from my mind. I have not been thinking of it.

23347. You cannot say now whether he said it or not?—No.

23348. Did you make any note when you got into the police station of what had happened?—No.

23349. Not in your note book?—No.

23350. You reported it verbally to Inspector Wright? My version of the affair, what I knew about it because I was not the principal officer concerned in the case. It did not fall to me to make any report or anything of that.

23351. You did not sign the charge sheet?—No.

23352. (Chairman.) To whom did you give your version?—I think to the Inspector on duty, Inspector Wright—what I knew of the affair.

23353. (Earl Russell.) You understood you would have to give evidence against Callaghan at the police court, or might have to?—Yes.

23354. Did you make no note in your note book about Callaghan at all?—No, I did not.

23355. Nor any note about Harding?—No.

23356. You made no note of any part of this occurrence in your book?—No, I did not.

23357. Did you write a report of it?—I did on that night, describing Callaghan's arrest and his being taken to the station.

23358. Anything about Harding?—I described in it the assault on P.C. Cann, 47 H.R., by Harding.

23359. Did you say in that report it was by Harding?—Yes—"By a man known to me of the name of Harding."

P.C. J. Filbee.
6 Dec. 1906.

23360. You made no other written report?—No.

23361. But you gave evidence against Harding on the 26th?—Yes.

23362. Is it not a fact that there was such a crowd and such a confusion and such a struggle that you really could not be very sure what was happening. You kept on pushing them back, and they kept closing up all the time? Is not that the fact?—I was certain of the assault and the identity of the man who committed it.

23363. Perfectly certain at the time?—Certain.

23364. But you did not say anything?—We expected trouble, and by that gang.

23365. You expected Harding to be the person to assault you?—Not exactly Harding, but we expected to meet his gang.

23366. And probably the leader?—Very probably.

23367. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are asked why you did not arrest Harding at the time. Are you familiar with the Regulation which deals with such cases when a man's residence is known?—Yes, when a man is known.

23368. It is Regulation No. 35 at page 216 of the White Book: "Where the residence of a person is known it can rarely be a proper step for the police to take him into custody during the excitement of an affray or disturbance, and when resistance by others as well as by the person himself may be caused by the attempt to take into custody. This does not apply to those cases in which it is necessary to take persons into custody in order to put an end to a disturbance or to prevent acts of violence being committed."

(Earl Russell.) That does not apply to attempts to rescue.

23369. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had you plenty to do without taking anybody else into custody?—We had quite sufficient.

23370. (Chairman.) You used before the magistrate the words "Attempted to rescue or tried to rescue." Can you recollect in detail exactly what Harding did in endeavouring to rescue the prisoner?—Not exactly in detail. I know he placed his hand on the man's shoulder as he rushed out of this public-house.

23371. To do that had he to pass either Ashford or Daller?—No, he had to pass me.

23372. And he did pass you?—Yes.

23373. Did he pass Cann as well?—No, they were on a level. We were all boxed up in a heap.

23374. But Cann was on a level with you?—Yes, on my right.

23375. That is to say on your right when you were standing looking towards the prisoner?—Yes, I was immediately behind the prisoner.

23376. And on your right was Cann?—Yes.

23377. When the man who you say was Harding put his hand upon the prisoner's arm did he get between?—He was in between Cann and myself. P.C.'s 207 and 173 were about two feet in advance of us in the centre of us.

23378. Then this man, whether it was Harding or not, came between you and Cann and he got up to the prisoner near enough to seize him by the arm?—Yes.

23379. Then the struggle continued, I presume?—Yes. When that attempt was made to rescue I started pushing and shoving the crowd, and got the crowd away.

23380. You pushed forward a little?—Yes, I pushed the crowd away, and they separated; some went to the left and some went to the right. Harding moved to his right and got against the shop shutters.

23381. Was it then when he got to the shop shutters that he turned and hit the other constable?—Yes.

23382. Mr. Cluer seems to have asked you a question towards the end of your evidence: "By the magistrate: P.C. 47 H.R. had the prisoner in custody, and defendant tried to rescue him." That you have told us to-day. Then: "At the time of the assault he handed his prisoner over." Did you use those words?—I do not know. I may have done. I could not say for certain.

23383. "The defendant tried to part P.C. 47 and his prisoner. He got in between them." Did you give that account before the magistrate?—That is what I might have been describing—his attempt to rescue.

23384. What you meant the magistrate to understand was what you have tried to explain to us, that he put his hand on his arm?—Yes.

23385. When he did that Harding was between P.C. Cann and the prisoner?—Yes, and then when we put him away he moved to his right, and Cann turned round and he caught the bang on the ear.

23386. Was it a very violent blow?—A violent blow. The blood started.

23387. You have said you know Harding well?—I have been in the police 15 months, and I have known him since I have been there. I have had him pointed out and others of the gang that infest that neighbourhood.

23388. Do you think he is strong enough to hit so violent a blow on a man's ear to make it bleed?—Yes. He is stronger than you think.

23389. You are certain that it was Harding who struck this violent blow?—I am certain.

P.C. Edwin Ashford (207 H.), sworn.

P.C. E. Ashford.

23390. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) On the night in question I think you were off duty and in bed?—Yes.

23391. And at your lodgings, 52, Huntingdon Villas, Bethnal Green?—Yes.

23392. How far is that from Sclater Street?—About 350 yards.

23393. As you were in bed did you hear the police whistle going?—I did.

23394. And upon that I think you got up and you partially dressed yourself and ran out without being completely dressed?—Yes.

23395. In order to render assistance?—Yes.

23396. Was the sound proceeding from the direction of Sclater Street?—That is right.

23397. Did you make your way there as fast as you could?—I did.

23398. Did you see a crowd and a man in custody?—Yes.

23399. At what point did you come up to the crowd?—Facing the prisoner.

23400. Facing the prisoner; but whereabouts was the crowd? Were they in Sclater Street?—Yes.

23401. Had they reached as far as the King's Arms public-house then?—This side of the King's Arms public-house about 20 yards, I should say.

23402. Had they passed the public-house?—Yes.

23403. You think they had got about 20 yards past when you got up to them?—Towards the station.

23404. When you got up to them, what did you do?—Caught hold of the prisoner Callaghan, who was struggling on the ground.

23405. He was on the ground then?—Yes.

23406. Who had hold of him?—P.C. Cann had hold of him, but seeing he was exhausted I caught hold of the prisoner by his left arm.

23407. Had anyone else got hold of him besides Cann?—P.C. Deller 173.

23408. Did you notice Cann's condition?—Yes, he was very exhausted.

23409. Did you catch hold of Callaghan and take the place of Cann?—I did.

(Chairman.) Perhaps he had better tell his own story.

23410. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Go on in your own way and tell us what happened after that?—When I caught hold of the prisoner Callaghan to release Cann, who was exhausted, Harding, who was in front of the crowd following up at the back of the prisoner, as Cann turned round struck Cann on the left ear, and then escaped through the crowd. I assisted with the prisoner as far as Willes Street Arch in Bethnal Green Road, when he was handed over to Constable Weller, 193, and I then followed to the station behind.

23411. Had you known Harding for some time?—For about six years.

23412. Are you sure that the man who struck Cann was Harding?—Quite positive.

23413. (Earl Russell.) I understand immediately you took hold of the prisoner, or when you first came up, he was already on the ground struggling?—Struggling on the ground.

23414. And you saw that Constable Cann was exhausted?—Yes.

23415. And you ran to the man on the ground to help to hold him down?—I caught hold of the prisoner Callaghan.

23416. Although you were busy with Callaghan struggling on the ground, that did not prevent your seeing what happened between Cann and Harding?—No. I saw Harding as quick as I got hold of the prisoner, and as Cann turned round and faced Harding, Harding struck him on the left ear.

23417. You were not watching the struggle personally?—I had got hold of the prisoner.

23418. But were not looking at him?—Not exactly looking at him.

23419. You were looking the other way, in fact?—Yes. He was coming behind me.

23420. But you had got your face towards the place Harding came from?—I had then.

23421. And you had the struggling prisoner on the ground?—Yes.

23422. Cann was standing up to his full height?—Cann got up to his feet.

23423. You were not looking at your prisoner, but you saw the blow given to Cann?—I saw the blow given to Cann by Harding, who was one of the foremost in the crowd.

23424. Did you hear anything said either by Harding or the constable?—No.

23425. You did not hear either of them say anything?—I think Harding said "You are not going to take him," or something to that effect, but I could not be sure.

23426. You would not like to be certain of it?—I would not like to be certain of it.

23427. You did not hear Cann call out that he knew him, or "All right," or anything of that sort?—No.

23428. The crowd were all shouting, and there was a great deal of row, was there not?—Yes.

23429. They were very noisy?—Yes.

23430. And very troublesome?—Pushing.

23431. The majority of them?—Yes.

23432. Not only Harding and his lot, but a large crowd besides?—Not only that, because there generally is when there is an arrest there, especially if he is one of a gang like that.

23433. You gave evidence at the police court against Harding?—I did.

23434. Did you hear Cann give evidence at the police court?—No.

23435. Were you out of court?—Yes.

23436. Which hand was the blow struck with?—I was under the impression, at the time I gave evidence at the police court, that Harding struck Cann with his left hand, but I am not positive.

23437. Do you still think that?—I would not say so.

23438. You said you saw no attempt to rescue the prisoner?—No.

23439. Did you notice Constable Filbee?—I think Filbee was close behind.

23440. After you turned round to go on to the station?—After we had proceeded towards the station.

23441. After the assault?—Yes.

23442. Did you notice P.C. Filbee at the time of the assault?—No, I cannot say that I did.

23443. You said at the police court, according to the note: "I released P.C. 47 and took Callaghan's arm. The defendant came up and hit P.C. 47 on the left ear and then ran away"?—Yes.

23444. He said "You are not f——g well going to take him"?—Something to that effect.

23445. You are more sure of it now?—I would not say positively, but I know he said something to that effect, something about taking him, but I would not like to pledge myself to the exact words.

23446. But you gave the exact words at the police court?—Yes, I believe I did, or something to that effect.

23447. You were cross-examined by Harding, were you not—or did he have a solicitor?—I was cross-examined by the defendant.

23448. By Harding himself?—Yes.

23449. At the time that Cann was struck, you told us Cann was standing erect?—I said at the time I went to Cann when Cann was struggling with the prisoner, who was on the ground. When I got hold of the prisoner and released Cann, Cann rose to his feet. Then was the time that Harding struck him.

23450. After Cann had let go of his prisoner and risen to his feet?—Yes.

23451. Did you say at the police court, in answer to Harding: "You hit P.C. 47"—that is Cann—"as he had hold of his prisoner"?—No.

23452. "Then he handed him over to me"?—No.

23453. That is a mistake of the clerk's?—Yes.

23454. Did you make a note in your note book of this?—No, I had no note book with me.

23455. You were in your shirt sleeves?—Yes.

23456. Did you make any note when you got to the station?—No.

23457. Did you make any report when you got to the station?—I made a report out after the charge was taken.

23458. You made no second report?—No.

23459. You reported to Inspector Wright, I suppose?—Yes.

23460. Did you make any verbal statement to Inspector Wright about what had happened?—He asked me what I saw about the assault upon Cann, and I told him I saw a man whom I knew to be Harding strike him in the ear and escape through the crowd.

23461. You told Inspector Wright who the man was that night?—Yes.

23462. And that you were quite sure of him?—Quite positive.

23463. Do you know whether any note was taken by Inspector Wright? Did you see him write down what you told him?—No, I did not.

23464. So far as you know he did not take any written note of it then?—Not that I know of. I could not say.

23465. (Chairman.) You had retired to rest on this occasion?—Yes.

23466. Had you been in bed long?—I had been in bed about half an hour.

23467. Then you heard the police whistle?—Yes.

23468. You got up and partially dressed yourself?—Yes

23469. Was it your duty to do that?—Yes.

23470. Though you were off duty in one sense, yet it was your duty as being a police-constable, when you hear a whistle, to go out and render assistance?—Yes.

23471. How long did it take you to get to this Bacon Street, where you found the prisoner and the police?—About three minutes, I should say.

23472. And to dress?—Say five minutes in all.

23473. You think it was about five minutes in all before you reached the place where you saw Callaghan struggling on the ground?—Yes.

23474. Was there a large crowd round?—Yes a very large crowd.

23475. How did you manage to get through the crowd?—By pushing.

23476. Did you say, "I am a police-constable," or anything of that kind?—No. They generally recognise you, as a rule, pushing through.

23477. Then it was not a crowd of strangers who were in the street?—No.

23478. Strangers to the locality?—No, not all strangers.

P.C. E. Ashford.

6 Dec. 1906.

23479. There may have been some?—There may have been some.

23480. But did you recognise a great many faces that you knew?—Well, yes.

23481. You speak rather doubtfully?—I cannot say that I knew any by any name, but their faces were familiar to me.

23482. At any rate, you went through in an authoritative kind of way, pushing them aside, and made your way to the prisoner and the police-constable?—Yes.

23483. You are not prepared to say you recognised many people in the crowd?—No, I am not.

23484. How long have you known Harding?—About six years.

23485. Had you ever come across him at all in the way of your duty?—I have seen him a great many times, but, of course, generally there is no occasion to speak to him.

23486. You have not been engaged in any case in which he has been concerned?—No, never.

23487. Ever talked to him?—No.

23488. You do not think you could be mistaken as to the identity of the man?—No; he was pointed out to me six years ago the 8th October last. Once you see a face, it is not very often you forget it.

23489. It was a violent blow, I gather?—Yes, it was a violent blow.

23490. We knew pretty well from what happened that it was a violent blow?—Yes.

23491. In what attitude was the man when he struck him?—He seemed to draw back his hand, and he struck him deliberately like that (illustrating).

23492. It was a very hurried affair, and a blow might be given that might not in the least have been violent, even when all the struggling was going on; but to produce such an effect on a man's ear, as it did in this case, it must have been a blow delivered with full force?—Yes, with a full length of the arm.

23493. With the full length of the arm and the weight of the body?—Yes.

23494. And, therefore, deliberately done?—Yes.

23495. Do you think the young man over there is the one?—That is the one.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Do you agree with what the last witness said, that he is a more powerful man than he looks?—Yes, I should say he is. He does not look strong, but he is stronger than he looks.

(Chairman.) (To Harding.) Stand up Harding. Your height is about 5ft. 7in.?—(Harding.) 5ft. 8in.

23496. (Chairman.) (To the Witness.) You heard what the last witness said, that he is more powerful than he looks?—Yes.

23497. You are still of opinion that that was the man?—Yes.

23498. (Mr. Dickinson.) I do not quite understand some of your answers. You said you knew Harding six years ago, and then he was pointed out to you?—Six years ago the 8th October.

23499. (Chairman.) Then you noticed his face?—Then I noticed his face.

23500. (Mr. Dickinson.) He was pointed out to you six years ago?—Yes.

23501. Why was he pointed out to you?—He was well known to be a thief, and belonging to a gang of thieves.

23502. You have seen him since?—I have seen him since several times.

23503. (Chairman.) He was a boy then?—He was about 14 then. He was not quite as stalwart as he is now.

23504. (Mr. Dickinson.) When did you see him last before September 12th?—I saw him in September in Bethnal Green Road before the assault.

23505. (Chairman.) How long have you been in the force?—Six years and two months.

23506. And all the time has he been there?—All the time he has been there.

P.C. Thomas Deller (H 173), sworn.

P.C. T. Deller.

23507. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Were you on duty on this night in question?—Yes.

23508. What was the first you heard or saw of this?—I heard a whistle blown.

23509. Whereabouts were you when you heard a whistle blown?—In Hare Street.

23510. Did you make your way in the direction of the whistling?—Yes.

23511. At what point did you come up to the crowd and the prisoner?—I met him just before I got to the King's Arms.

23512. That is in Sclater Street?—Yes.

23513. When you got up to them, what did you do?—I released 164 H and took hold of Callaghan.

23514. You released Filbee and took hold of Callaghan?—Yes.

23515. Did you then walk, you holding the prisoner on one side and Cann holding him on the other?—Yes.

23516. We know that Callaghan fell down?—Yes.

23517. And that this last witness released Cann?—Yes.

23518. Did you see any blows struck at all?—No, I witnessed no assault.

23519. But you went on with the prisoner to the station, did you?—Yes.

23520. As a matter of fact, I think you did see Harding that night?—Yes.

23521. Where was it you saw him?—About between 20 or 30 yards from the King's Arms.

23522. Was that before you came to the King's Arms or after you had passed it?—When I had Callaghan in custody and spoke to Harding.

23523. What did he say when you saw him?—He came up to me and said, "Let him go; I will take him home." I said, "You will not; he is in our hands now. He is going to the station"; and I said, "You get out of it."

23524. Was that before you took hold of Callaghan?—When I had hold of Callaghan.

23525. Was Callaghan very violent?—Yes, all the way to the station.

23526. Did you have as much as you could do to hold him?—Yes.

23527. When the last witness, Ashford, took Cann's place, did Cann fall behind you?—Yes.

23528. You did not see anything that happened to him when he was behind you?—No.

23529. (Earl Russell.) I understand you had hold of the prisoner Callaghan just before you came to the King's Arms?—Yes.

23530. And 47 H had him the other side, I think?—Yes.

23531. That is, Cann?—Yes.

23532. Were you coming along the pavement when you were opposite the King's Arms?—I was on the pavement sometimes and sometimes in the road.

23533. You did not pass quite in front of the King's Arms?—No, but along by the pavement, the kerb.

23534. You passed down the road?—I was not always in the road. Sometimes I was on the ground.

23535. Can you tell me just at that time how you were conducting Callaghan. Had you got him on one side and Cann on the other?—Yes.

23536. Each by one arm?—Yes.

23537. When the man was walking and not throwing himself down, that is the way you were holding him?—Yes.

23538. Did you notice anybody at all on the steps of the King's Arms as you passed by?—No.

23539. Were you too busy?—I was too busy.

23540. On which side were you walking—on the side the King's Arms is, or on the other side?—On the side the King's Arms is.

23541. Where was it you noticed Harding?—Between 20 and 30 yards from the King's Arms, coming towards the station.

23542. After you had passed the King's Arms?—Yes.

23543. And after you had crossed Cygnet Street, I think?—Yes, by Cygnet Street.

23544. After you had crossed?—Yes.

23545. He came up behind you, did he?—Harding came up to the side of me and asked me to release the prisoner from custody. Callaghan had thrown himself to the ground then.

23546. While he was on the ground?—Yes. Harding wanted me to release him and to take him home. I said: "He is in our hands now; he is going to the station."

23547. This conversation I understand from you was quite friendly. Harding did not use any violent language?—He wanted me to release the prisoner.

23548. I quite understand that, but what he said to you, as you told us just now, was, "Let me take him home. You let him go and let me take him home"?—Yes. I said: "He is not going home; he is going to the station."

23549. There was nothing violent on either side?—The prisoner was very violent.

23550. But as between Harding and you?—No, there was nothing violent.

23551. He asked you that quite quietly?—Yes. Another remark he passed soon after that.

23552. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What was that?—He said if he had his b—— shooter there he would shift some of them.

23553. (Earl Russell.) Where was Cann standing?—Cann was along with me with Callaghan.

23554. How far was Cann from you when you had this conversation with him?—Callaghan was on the ground. Cann was standing over him, and I was holding the prisoner.

23555. Within a yard of you?—Yes, quite close.

23556. Did Harding speak in a whisper?—It was not exactly a whisper; it was loud enough for me to hear it.

23557. Not loud enough for Cann to hear it?—Cann heard nothing about it that I know of.

23558. Did he speak so gently that a man a yard away could not hear him?—No. Cann was struggling with the prisoner.

23559. You were also struggling with the prisoner, were you not?—I was holding his arms.

23560. Up to the time when the prisoner threw himself down beyond Cygnet Street he walked all right from the King's Arms; he had not thrown himself down between the King's Arms and the place you are speaking of beyond Cygnet Street?—No; he only threw himself down in Cygnet Street.

23561. Just at that time the three of you were walking together—a constable on each side and Callaghan in the middle?—Yes, and 164 H was behind.

23562. Did you see Harding take hold of the prisoner's arm and pull to try to get him away?—Yes.

23563. I thought you told us the first time you saw him was when he had this conversation with you?—Harding came to me when I had the prisoner Callaghan, and wanted me to let the prisoner go so as to take him away.

23564. I understand that. Did Harding become violent and pull at the prisoner then?—Not with me he did not.

23565. You never saw him take hold of the prisoner?—No.

23566. You never saw him take the prisoner's arm and try to pull him away?—No, I never noticed it.

23567. When the prisoner was walking between you and Cann could Harding possibly have come and tried to pull him away without your noticing it?—The crowd were all over the place.

23568. If he had laid his hand on the prisoner's arm and pulled it you must have noticed it?—Yes, but you cannot always be looking at the prisoner with these people. You are looking after your head sometimes.

23569. When Ashford came up and released Cann from holding the prisoner were you still struggling with the prisoner on the ground?—No. We were then coming down Sclater Street towards the station.

23570. Do you mean that immediately Ashford released Cann you walked on with the prisoner?—We got as far as opposite the urinal.

23571. You got the prisoner up again?—Yes.

23572. As soon as ever 207 H took hold of him?—Yes.

23573. What was the last thing you said? You said you heard Harding say something about a shooter?—The remark he made was: "If he had his b—— shooter there he would shift some of them."

23574. Did he say it to you?—Yes.

23575. He said it to you?—Yes, that was the remark he passed.

23576. After speaking in that quiet way he then became extremely violent and threatening?—Yes.

23577. When did you first mention to anybody that he had used that language?—I have not said it to anybody.

23578. Never said it before to-day? Never mentioned it to Inspector Wright?—No.

23579. It was a serious threat to shoot the police, was it not?—Yes. I never said anything to anybody, but that was the phrase he used.

23580. You never mentioned it until this moment?—No.

23581. Did you make any notes of this occurrence when you got to the police-station?—No, only a report.

23582. That was all? A report as to the treatment of Callaghan?—Yes.

23583. You did, as a matter of fact, know nothing about the assault by Harding?—No.

23584. And you know nothing about the attempted rescue by Harding?—No, it might have been done in the crowd, but I did not know.

23585. The only conversation you had with him was, in the first instance, when he was quite quiet, and when you say he used this terrible threat?—Not perhaps quiet, but he was near enough for me to hear it. He was right alongside of me.

23586. You did not hear him say anything to Cann—No.

23587. Nor Cann say anything to him?—No.

23588. Do you know Harding well?—I have known him for the last eighteen months past.

23589. Have you ever had occasion to arrest Harding for any trouble?—No.

23590. You have never seen him upon any other occasion doing anything he should not do?—I have seen him. I have moved him about.

23591. But you have not seen him engaged in crime?—No.

23592. Did you hear any conversation among the other constables at the station about the assault in Sclater Street?—I heard Cann say he was struck by Harding.

23593. And you say that Harding came and spoke to you and used a threat?—I told him he came and asked me to release the prisoner, but I never mentioned about the shooting.

23594. Who did you tell that to?—Only in conversation.

23595. You did not tell it to Inspector Wright?—No.

23596. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Have you ever made a statement before to-day about what took place?—Only in the report.

23597. Did you make a report?—Yes.

23598. And that had reference to Callaghan's case?—Yes, Callaghan and Williams.

23599. But you made no report about this assault upon Cann?—No.

23600. When were you first asked to come here?—Yesterday.

P.C. T. Deller.

6 Dec. 1906.

23601. You have not given a written statement to anybody as to what you could say?—No.

(Chairman.) I understand that you were on your beat in Bethnal Green Road.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Hare Street.

23602. (Chairman.) Is that so?—In Hare Street I was. My beat went towards Bethnal Green Road.

23603. When you were summoned by the police whistle where were you when you first heard it?—In Hare Street.

23604. Is your recollection accurate as to that? There is not much point in it, except that it does affect the accuracy of your recollection of the transaction. It was the hearing of the police whistle that called your attention to something going on in Sclater Street?—Yes.

23605. When you first heard the whistle, where were you?—In Hare Street.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He said Hare Street in chief to me.

23606. (Chairman.) I am asking the question because, as I understand, you are Constable Daller who gave evidence against Callaghan, did you not, on the 12th September?—Yes.

23607. "I was in the Bethnal Green Road, and heard a whistle." That is in the note of the clerk?—My memory must have made a mistake. I was in Hare Street when I heard the whistle blown.

23608. If the clerk took down "in Bethnal Green Road," either he made a mistake or you made a mistake?—Yes.

23609. Which do you think it was?—I may have made a mistake.

23610. Do you think you made a mistake at the police-court?—Yes.

23611. You were speaking then within a few hours of the time when the incident had taken place?—The whistle was frequently blown. I may have made a mistake.

23612. Harding says that he did not strike this blow. It is not contended that a blow was not struck by somebody in the crowd at Police Constable Cann?—I know nothing about the assault. I never witnessed any assault at all.

23613. No; but you are coming to give some of the details which may have an important bearing upon the question which we have to decide. That is why I am asking these questions. Have you any explanation to offer of having said, when you were before the police magistrate, that you were in Bethnal Green Road when the whistles blew?—(No answer.)

23614. (Mr. Whitmore.) How near is Hare Street to Bethnal Green Road?—I could not say exactly—200 yards perhaps, or more.

(Chairman.) Either he may have been in Bethnal Green Road or he may have been in the other road and heard the whistles blown.

23615-16. I only put that to you not as necessarily suggesting that you are intentionally deceiving us, but I am only putting it to you to test your accuracy. You told us one street to-day, and you apparently said it was another street before the police magistrate. Have you any definite recollection where you were when you heard the whistles?—I was in Hare Street, as far as I can remember.

23617. Your memory having been refreshed by being examined here to-day, you are certain now you were in Hare Street?—In Hare Street.

23618. How far was that from the place where you found the prisoner Callaghan in custody?—That I could not exactly say.

23619. Was it 100 yards?—It was 300 or 400 yards from where I was.

23620. Did you run to get there?—Yes.

23621. There was a good deal of noise then?—Yes.

23622. When you got into Sclater Street, what did you see first of all?—There was a large crowd, and I got in between the crowd.

23623. Were you running?—Yes.

23624. Even when you got to the crowd?—I had to ease to get through the crowd.

23625. You pushed your way through the crowd?—Yes.

23626. When you arrived through the crowd near enough to see the prisoner and the other constables, what was the attitude in which you found them respectively?—Callaghan was on the ground.

23627. Was any one of the constables on the ground?—Yes; he was kneeling down alongside of him.

23628. Which constable was kneeling?—Cann.

23629. What did you do then?—I got hold of Callaghan. By the King's Arms he threw himself down again.

23630. When you came up and found him on the ground, was he by the King's Arms?—Just by the King's Arms.

23631. That is to say, on the Bethnal Green Road side of the King's Arms?—Yes.

23632. That is nearer the police station?—No; this way from the station. He threw himself to the ground when he got on the other side, nearer to the station.

23633. When you first joined in this transaction they had not passed the King's Arms?—No.

23634. Were you thrown down as well?—Yes, I was on the ground.

23635. Were you hurt at all in any way?—I was kicked on the shoulder, but I never saw who kicked me.

23636. You did not know who kicked you?—No.

23637. As I understand, you had got hold of Callaghan before you passed the King's Arms?—Yes, before we passed the King's Arms.

23638. Did Police-constable Cann let go his hold?—After we got by the King's Arms.

23639. How far from the King's Arms?—About 20 or 30 yards when he threw himself to the ground again.

23640. He threw himself to the ground a second time?—Yes, towards the station.

23641. It was after he had thrown himself down on the ground that Cann was relieved?—Yes.

23642. Do you remember Ashford coming up?—Yes.

23643. You knew him, of course?—Yes.

23644. On which side of Callaghan were you then standing or walking?—On the right-hand side, on the same side as the King's Arms.

23645. Had Cann been holding the left arm of Callaghan?—Yes.

23646. You noticed that Ashford took the place of Cann?—Yes.

23647. At that moment was the prisoner on his legs or still on the ground?—He was struggling on the ground then.

23648. How long was it before you got him on his feet and made a move on?—A matter of a minute or two.

23649. As long as a minute or two?—About a minute.

23650. From what you say I gather that you joined Cann and the others before you got to the King's Arms, and that you had been holding the prisoner while you were passing the King's Arms?—Yes, I had hold of the prisoner.

23651. You told us you met Harding. Where was it you first saw Harding?—About 20 or 30 yards from the King's Arms, going towards the station.

23652. Then it was close by where Cann was relieved?—Yes.

23653. Was it before or after Callaghan had thrown himself down a second time that you saw Harding?—Harding came and spoke to me when Callaghan threw himself to the ground a second time.

23654. Harding spoke to you twice?—No.

23655. It was when Callaghan had thrown himself on the ground a second time that Harding spoke to you?—Yes.

23656. Was Harding excited at all?—No, he seemed quite quiet. He was only saying he would take the prisoner home if I would let him. I told him to go away, out.

23657. He said he would take the prisoner home if

I would release him?—I said, "You go away. I am going to take him to the station. He is in our hands now."

23658. Then, according to your view, if you had released the prisoner, nothing more would have been heard of the matter, and he would have looked after him?—Yes.

23659. Was the prisoner on his legs when this conversation took place?—No, he was on the ground then.

23660. Did you hear what Constable Filbee said today about his bounding out of the public-house by a side door, and coming into the crowd?—I never saw anything of that.

23661. He was asking you in a peaceable or quiet way to let the man go?—Yes. From the direction they came they might have come from the King's Arms.

23662. Does it not strike you that the conduct of Harding, peaceable man as he was, is rather inconsistent with the account given by Filbee? What is your view of it? You are positive that Harding was speaking quietly and pleasantly to you, as I understand it, with a view to getting you to let off his friend, Callaghan, if he could?—Yes.

23663. It was equally positively stated by Filbee that he bounded out of the public-house, got through the crowd, and struck Cann?—Yes, I saw nothing of that.
